Ques. 19. What became of the paper?—Ans. I was going to New Orleans the year before the war broke out, some one stole my carpet-sack, and stole the papers with fifty dollars.

Ques. 20. Did you vote after you got papers?—Ans. I came out into Iowa; I came fourteen years ago; voted here ever since.

Ques. 21. How old were you when you came to the United States?—Ans. Eighteen.

Ques. 22. You had several tickets the day of the election or only one?—Ans. Well, I cannot tell whether two or three.

Ques. 23. You had more than one?—Ans. Yes, sir; more than one.

Ques. 24. Do you know which one you voted?—Ans. I can't read or write; I cannot tell which one I voted.

Ques. 25. You don't know whether you voted Republican or Democrat?—Ans. No, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 26. Did you have State and county tickets, or all one ticket?—Ans. I can't tell one from the other.

Ques. 27. Which party do you vote for?—Ans. Sometimes for one, sometimes for another. I voted for Jef. Tolbert here, also a man who used to peddle pumps—Mr. Williams, I voted for him.

Ques. 28. Did you scratch out names and put on other names on that ticket?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't.

Ques. 30. Who scratched them for you?—Ans. One of these little boys.

Ques. 31. They scratched out Jef. Tolbert, and scratched out Wilson's name, and put on Williams?—Ans. I cannot tell that.

Ques. 32. How do you know that you voted for G. W. Williams last fall?—Ans. That is what they said; I can't read or write.

Ques. 33. The name under that was scratched out; how many more scratches on that ticket?—Ans. That is two.

Ques. 34. That is two that was on the straight ticket, G. W. Wilson for recorder, and Williams?—Ans. Yes, sir; I suppose so.

Ques. 35. In what year did you come to the United States?—Ans. I can't tell you; I was eighteen years old; you will know what year it was now.

Ques. 36. How am I to know your age now?—Ans. I will be 49 the 10th of next month.

Ques. 37. Now, what year did you take out these papers in New York?—Ans. I was twenty-one I guess, but I forget.

Ques. 38. Do you remember when you lived in New York State?—Ans. No, sir; I don't remember.

Ques. 39. How long had you been in the United States before you took out your papers?—Ans. I cannot tell.

Ques. 40. Do you think you had been there one year?—Ans. Yes, sir; more than that.

Ques. 41. Are you sure you were there two years?—Ans. I think that it must have been.

Ques. 42. Are you positive you were there three years?—Ans. No, sir; I could not be positive about it at all.

Ques. 43. You don't know how long you were in America before you took out your papers?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 44. You are positive you were eighteen when you came to America?—Ans. Yes, sir; I am.

Cross-examination:

JOB FARLEY, being produced and sworn, testifies as follows, John Hughes, jr., giving the oath, the twenty-fourth day of April, 1883 (T. Brown appearing for the contestant; A. H. Simpson appearing for the contestee):

(The contestant objects to the testimony of this witness as incompetent and immaterial.)
Ques. 1. Where do you live, and what is your age and name?—Ans. 55 years of age in June.

Ques. 2. Did you vote at the general election held on the 7th of Nov., 1882, in Washington Township, last fall?—Ans. I did.

Ques. 3. What ticket did you vote?—Ans. I generally vote the Democratic ticket.

Ques. 4. Have you your naturalization papers?—Ans. I have not.

Ques. 5. Where did you get them?—Ans. In Marengo.

Ques. 6. Who did you get them from?—Ans. I cannot tell the judge's name, because that was a very early day. I think that the court was held down here in the schoolhouse.

Ques. 7. Was it the county judge?—Ans. I cannot say that now, it was so long ago.

Ques. 8. Where are your papers?—Ans. I got burned out here two or three years ago; they got destroyed by the fire.

Ques. 9. Do you know the name of the judge?—Ans. No, sir; I can't. I can tell you who fetched me over; I lived at Millersburg; Thomas Dedmore fetched me over; Mr. Murphy attended to getting my papers; I was 9 years when I came, in 1840, in Illinois; that the country was new, and a foreigner coming in there and having been there for one year could vote; I was about ten years old then; I staid there and became of age and voted there; after I came out here I voted several times in Millersburg. When this question of hog law came up, some of them tried to kick me out, because they knew that I was going to oppose it, but I proved my right to vote and I voted. Mr. Dedmore afterwards said, "Farley, there is a good deal of dispute about your vote, and they want me to go over to Marengo, and get your papers; come and go; it won't cost you a cent," and I came over and got my papers.

Ques. 10. What kind of a paper was that?—Ans. They had a jury, I think, but my memory is failing me and I can't recollect.

Ques. 11. The judge made out papers for you?—Ans. Yes, sir; he gave them to me.

Ques. 12. You say that the judge gave them to you?—Ans. I cannot say that the judge made them out, but I got the papers there at the time.

Ques. 13. You are sure that you can say that you got them there?—Ans. I got them there at the court, but I tell you that my recollection is so I would not pretend to say positively.

Ques. 14. Did the judge that you got them from live in the county here?—Ans. I have the impression that it was Judge Wallace, I could not say positively.

Ques. 15. It was the one-armed man?—Ans. Yes, sir; if my recollection serves me right, it was Judge Wallace.

Ques. 16. You voted the Democratic ticket last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 17. You voted for Frederick for Congress?—Ans. I cannot recollect that, I voted the straight Democratic ticket, I know that.

Ques. 18. Did your father come to the United States with you?—Ans. Yes. sir.

Ques. 19. Did your father vote?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 20. Was he a naturalized citizen?—Ans. Yes, sir; according to the law then when he came over he took out first papers, but never lived to get the second papers.

Ques. 21. Your father voted in Illinois?—Ans. Yes, sir. I was only eight years old when I left England.

Ques. 22. You got out papers in the court?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 23. Do you know positively that Judge Wallace held the court?—Ans. No, sir, not positively.

Ques. 24. Did they have a jury, grand jury, and clerk?—Ans. Yes, sir, I think there was.

Ques. 25. It was a grand jury, and court was in session.—Ans. Yes, sir, court was in session.

Ques. 26. You say that Murphy came with you?—Ans. No, sir; he attended to getting my papers.

Ques. 27. Was that the lawyer that used to be here?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 28. The same man that is now in Davenport running for Congressman?—Ans. Heard that he was in Davenport.

Ques. 29. Jerry Murphy?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 30. He took you to the court-house and got your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 31. There was a jury and grand jury?—Ans. I think so.

Ques. 31. Was there a trial going on?—Ans. Yes, sir, regular court.

Ques. 32. Were there a good many lawyers there?—Ans. Yes, sir, a good many.

Ques. 33. Don't you remember that it was a district court?—Ans. No, sir, I can't remember that.

Ques. 34. Did your papers have the seal of the district court on them?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 35. Do you know what was written on that seal?—Ans. No, sir, I don't.

Ques. 36. It had the seal of the court?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 37. Was it signed by a clerk?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 38. Did you have witnesses?—Ans. Well, I can't tell you that.

Ques. 39. This man that brought you over, what was his name?—Ans. Thos. Dedmore; I haven't heard of his death, and he was a close neighbor of mine there then.

Ques. 40. Can you tell what year that was in that you got your papers?—Ans. I can tell what year I came to Ill. We came to Ill. in the fall of 1840, then we came to Iowa in 1854. I was quite a stranger in those days, never been in town but a few times.

Ques. 41. Do you remember anybody else was present when you got your naturalization papers?—Ans. There was lots of people present then I was acquainted with, I cannot name them now.

Ques. 42. And went there with you?—Ans. All that I can recollect was that my father and Dedmore, and some five or six more.

Ques. 43. How long has your father been dead?—Ans. He died right at the close of the war.

Redirect.

Ques. 44. You have told us that Walter was the judge, and that he lived here at the time?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 45. One-armed man?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 46. He lived here?—Ans. Yes, sir; on the farm right out here.

Ques. 47. He was the judge in this county?—Ans. Yes, sir; I think so.

Recross-examination:

Ques. 48. Was he the judge that held the court at that time?—Ans. I don't know positively, I have an idea that he was the judge then; I cannot say positively because my memory fails me now.

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. Amana Township.

Ques. 2. What section do you live in?—Ans. Section 36 I guess.

Ques. 3. How far is that from Marengo? How old are you?—Ans. I was born in 1837; I guess I am 45 years old.

Ques. 4. Did you vote at the general election last fall in Nov. 7, in Amana Township?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 5. Who did you vote for for representative in that district?—Ans. Democratic ticket.

Ques. 6. Are you a native-born citizen?—Ans. I got into this country in the year 1854.

Ques. 7. Where were you born?—Ans. In 1837, in Germany.

Ques. 8. You were about eighteen years of age?—Ans. Yes, sir; about that.

Ques. 9. Have you your naturalization papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir; I have.

Ques. 10. Will you produce them?

(Witness produces papers in court.)

Ques. 11. Are these all the naturalization papers you have had?—Ans. I guess I had another one, I guess that is the second one; the first I took out when I was about one year here; I came in 1856; that is the second paper.

(The paper presented is signed by A. J. Morrison, county clerk.)

Ques. 12. You stated you voted the straight Democratic ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 13. I want to ask you another question, have you a number of sons living in this county?—A. No, sir; I have not.

(In this paper, though administered by William H. Wallace, of said county, is certified to by A. J. Morrison, county clerk. Paper dated September 15th, 1860. Seal of the county of Iowa.)

Cross-examination:

This paper is in regular form of an ordinary naturalization record, showing the witness to have been sworn by the county judge, under the seal of A. J. Morrison, county clerk:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Iowa, Iowa County:

To all whom these presence may come, greeting:

Whereas at the county court held at Marengo, in the county of Iowa aforesaid, on the 15th of September, 1860, one Henry Maas, late of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, came in the said court and made application to be made a citizen of the United States of America, and having complied with all the requirements of law in such cases, and took the oath to support the Constitution of the United States of America and to renounce all allegiance and fidelity to every prince and potentate, state and sovereignty whatever, and particularly to the Grand Duke of Oldenburg, being administered to him in open court, before the honorable William H. Wallace, judge of the county court of said county, and said Henry Maas be therefore declared an enrolled citizen of the United States.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal of said court at Marengo, in said county, this 15th day of September, A. D. 1860.

{ SEAL OF THE COUNTY } { OF IOWA, IOWA. }

A. J. MORRISON,
County Clerk.

Cross-examination continued:

Ques. 14. How long have you voted?—Ans. Ever since I took out my papers.

Ques. 15. What ticket have you usually voted?—Ans. Generally the Democratic ticket.

Ques. 16. You have lived here in the county all the time?—Ans. Yes, sir; all the while since that time.

MICHAEL FLANAGAN, being produced and sworn before me, John Hughes, jr., a notary public for Iowa County, on this 24th day of April, 1883 (T. Brown appearing for the contestant, A. H. Simpson appearing for the contestee), testifies as follows:

Ques. 1. You may state your age and where you now reside.—Ans. I reside now in Pilot Township, Iowa County, Iowa.

Ques. 2. What is your age?—Ans. Fifty-four years old pretty soon.

Ques. 3. Did you vote at the general election in Nov. last fall; if so, where?
(Contestant objects as immaterial.)

Ans. No, sir; I don't think that I did. I was not at home.

Ques. 4. You didn't vote last fall at the general election in Marengo Township?—Ans. No, sir; I don't think that I did. I was working on the extra gang, and we could not come home very well. We were talking of coming, and then we didn't come. Well, I guess may be now we did come.

Ques. 5. You did vote?—Ans. Yes, sir; I believe I did come up.

Ques. 6. Who did you vote for as Representative in Congress for the 5th district of Iowa?—Ans. I don't know now.

Ques. 7. What are your politics, Mr. Flanagan?—Ans. I have changed them around considerable. Sometimes I vote Democratic ticket, sometimes Republican, sometimes Greenback.

Ques. 8. Do you know for a fact who you voted for for Representative in the 5th district last fall?—Ans. No, sir; I don't know now.

Ques. 9. Did you at the time?—Ans. I might have known at the time.

Ques. 10. Do you know who you got your ticket from?—Ans. No, sir; I don't remember.

Ques. 11. Have you been counseled by Brown in Marengo as to what you should answer and as to what you should not answer in this cross-examination in Marengo?—Ans. No, sir; only this that I mustn't criminate myself on something.

Ques. 12. Have you your naturalization papers with you?—A. No, sir; I have not.

Ques. 13. Were you subpœned to bring them?—Ans. Yes, sir; and I could not find them.

Ques. 14. Where did you take out your naturalization papers?—Ans. I took them out in the court-house here.

Ques. 15. Is that the first papers?—Ans. I think that Tom Murphy got them put for me; when I got first papers, he said not to bother about anything.

Ques. 16. You think you got your first and second papers here; which do you think?—Ans. The record will show it, I think.

Ques. 17. You didn't have the papers?—Ans. No, sir; I couldn't find them.

Ques. 18. Do you know what became of them?—Ans. I will tell you how it was I could not find them to-day; my wife wasn't there; I don't know what she did with them; I never looked at them from the time I got them until to-day.

Ques. 19. You didn't find them to-day, did you?—Ans. No, sir; I could not find them.

Ques. 20. Don't know positively that you voted for the Hon. B. T. Frederick?

(Contestant objects as leading.)

Ans. I might have, as you speak of it; it might come to my memory, but I would not swear who I voted for: I came very near forgetting altogether that I came; I would not swear that I voted for either, but the boss and I were coming up, and he said it would not be worth while.

Ques. 21. If you voted at the general election, did you or did you not vote for B. T. Frederick?—Ans. I don't know; I could not tell you.

Ques. 22. What was your intentions?—Ans. Really I don't know; I didn't pay much attention to it; I wanted to come home to see my family, that is the most I cared for.

Ques. 23. Did you look at your ticket?—Ans. I may have looked at the ticket, but I didn't have my glasses.

Ques. 24. What intentions did you have?—Ans. I intended to come home to see my family, then I thought about voting.

Ques. 25. What is your best impression as to who you voted for for Representative in the 5th district?—Ans. I don't know, I could not say about that; I didn't think that the election was causing any trouble until, I think, that it was about last June election that was bothering the people, and never thought about that in the world.

BROWN. It was then at the June election that you voted?—Ans. Yes, sir; but I think that I voted at the fall election, too, but I would not swear that I did or not.

A. H. SIMPSON:

Ques. 27. Were you acquainted with the Hon. B. T. Frederick or James Wilson?—Ans. No, sir; not with either person.

Ques. 28. Did you electioneer for either party prior to the election?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't know which was the best man; I didn't take any part in that, and we were where we didn't pay much attention to it.

Ques. 29. What is your custom to vote, Democratic or Republican ticket?—Ans. Are you a Republican?

Ques. 30. Yes, sir.—Ans. Well, I voted for you.

Ques. 31. Well, I mean the State ticket?—Ans. I could not tell you.

Ques. 32. You don't know whether you voted for Wilson, Frederick, or Platner?—Ans. No, sir; if you should keep me here until morning I could not tell any more than I have told you.

Ques. 33. You positively say you don't know whether you voted for Frederick, Wilson, or Platner?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't pay one bit of attention; I might at the time; I could not swear whether I voted for either one now; I could not swear whether I voted at the polls after coming up or not.

STATE OF IOWA,
Iowa County, ss:

JOHN WALLICK, being produced and sworn before me, D. H. Wilson, a notary public for Iowa county, on this 24th day of April, 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing for contestant, A. H. Simpson appearing for contestee):

Ques. 1. Where do you reside?—Ans. In Victor, Iowa.

Ques. 2. What is your age?—Ans. Well, I am 21 any way.

Ques. 3. Well, give it as soon as you can.—Ans. I will be 47 next birthday.

Ques. 4. How long have you resided in Hartford Township?—Ans. Eighteen years.

Ques. 5. What business do you follow there?—Ans. Dealing in stock generally.

Ques. 6. Traveling over the township extensively?—Ans. Well pretty much all the time.

Ques. 7. Are you pretty well acquainted with most of the settlers there?—Ans. Yes, sir.

(Contestant objects as immaterial.)

Ques. 8. I will ask you if, in your traveling over the county, you have had a chance of becoming acquainted with the people of Hartford Township?—Ans. Yes, sir. I had business with nearly all of them.

Ques. 9. You may state whether you are acquainted with one Henry Mohr.—Ans. Yes, sir, very well.

Ques. 10. You may state whether you were present at the polls on Nov. 7th, 1882, in Hartford Township.—Ans. Yes, sir, I was there. I was there to vote, and around there considerable that day.

Ques. 11. Have you been particularly acquainted with Henry Mohr?—Ans. Ever since he has been in the State.

Ques. 12. Do you know where his residence was at that time, or anything about that?

(Objection.)
Ans. Well, he had been to Dakota all summer, and had taken up a homestead and done breaking there.
Ques. 13. I will ask you further whether you are acquainted with W. P. Barker?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 14. I will ask you whether the answer you have given in regard to Mr. Mohr will apply to Mr. Barker?
(Same objection.)
Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 15. You may give your means of becoming acquainted with Hon. W. P. Barker, late resident of that township.—Ans. I got acquainted with him 7 or 8 years ago. He used to live in Deep River Township, Poweshiek County.
Ques. 16. Do you know that he took a homestead in Dakota prior to November 7th, 1882; that is to say, prior to the election?—Ans. Well, I wont be positive that he did, but he took it up some time last fall. I would not give dates.
Ques. 17. Do you know how John Genzly voted at the fall election; whether he voted in Hartford Township?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 18. Where did he vote?—Ans. In Hartford Township.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 19. Were you in Dakota last fall?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 20. You were not?—Ans. No, sir; that is a good ways from home.
Ques. 21. Were you in the State or Territory of Dakota at all?—Ans. No, sir; never.
Ques. 22. How do you know that Henry Mohr took up a homestead there?—Ans. I simply know by the papers that I got from there.
Ques. 23. Have you got the papers?—Ans. No, sir; I have not.
(Contestee objects to this testimony and asks that it be struck out as not the best evidence.)
Ques. 24. Now did Henry Mohr have a family?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 25. Where does his family live?—Ans. In Victor.
Ques. 26. Last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 27. How much of a family did he have?—Ans. Well, now you have me there.
Ques. 28. Did he have a wife?—Ans. All the way from a wife to 3, 5, or 6 children.
Ques. 29. How long did they live in Victor?—Ans. Some 7 years; should judge 7 or 8 years.
Ques. 30. Did you know at the time he took a homestead in Dakota, from your own knowledge?—Ans. Some time in the latter part of April, I should think.
Ques. 31. How do you know that? I asked if you know that from your own knowledge?—Ans. Yes, sir; that is when he took up timber claims.
Ques. 32. Were you there?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't have to be.
Ques. 33. Well, I am asking the best of your own knowledge; what knowledge have you that that paper was issued by any land agent there?—Ans. Just as much as though the paper was sent to me.
Ques. 34. Do you know the name of the land agent?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 35. Ever in Dakota?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 36. Did you know of your own knowledge that it was issued by any land agent in the United States?—Ans. I presume that it was.
Ques. 37. I ask it if you know it of your own knowledge?—Ans. I told you.
Ques. 38. I asked you if know it of your own knowledge; do you know that it was signed by any land officer in the United States?—Ans. It had a seal to it.
Ques. 39. You haven't that paper?—Ans. I have confidence enough in a man to know when anything of the man is right.
Ques. 40. Do you know that it was issued to the man that had it, of your own knowledge?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 41. You do know, that is hearsay; do you know of your own knowledge that it was issued to him?—Ans. To the best of my knowledge I do.
Ques. 42. Have you any knowledge different on that subject?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 43. State what knowledge you have, and if that paper was issued by any land agent in Dakota. State what knowledge you have on that subject.—Ans. My knowledge is just as good.
Ques. 44. Well, state the facts constituting that knowledge.—Ans. My best knowledge is of the acknowledgment of those papers; we have confidence enough in man to know that when the notarial seal of the land officer's seal is on, we know it is certainly correct.
Ques. 45. Do you know what is that seal?—Ans. I did know, but I have forgotten.
Ques. 46. Will you state what you know about what is on that seal?—Ans. You get Mr. Tool, he can tell you.
Ques. 47. Do you know that there is such a land officer in Dakota as signed that paper, of your own knowledge?—Ans. No; if I did that I could have remembered the papers. I can produce the papers.

Ques. 48. Will you answer my question whether you know of your own knowledge that that paper is an agent's paper?—Ans. I presume so.

Ques. 49. I want your knowledge.—Ans. That is the best of my knowledge.

Ques. 50. What is your knowledge; what does your knowledge consist of; what knowledge have you on that subject?—Ans. Good, common sense.

Ques. 51. Will you state what you know of that paper being an agent paper.—Ans. I told you.

Ques. 52. I want you to state what facts you have of your own knowledge.—Ans. I told you to the best of my knowledge.

Ques. 53. That isn't it; what do you know of it?--Ans. If I should have thought of it, I could have brought them with me.

D. Ans. Did you see this man sign any paper?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't have to.

Ques. 55. Do you know that the paper is genuine because you know his handwriting?—A. No, sir; I told you all I know.

Ques. 56. Do you know the handwriting of the man that signed that paper?—Ans. No, sir, I don't; I didn't have to know it; I have enough confidence in a man for that.

Ques. 57. Now, I will ask you as to W. P. Barker. Where is his family?—Ans. In Victor.

Ques. 58. Where now?—Ans. Living in Victor; that is the family are; the men are in Dakota.

Ques. 59. How long have they lived in Victor?—Ans. Ten or eleven years.

Ques. 60. Do you know that W. P. Barker ever went to Dakota in his life?—Ans. Yes, sir, I do.

Ques. 61. Of your own knowledge?—Ans. I can prove that.

Ques. 62. Well, do you know it of your own knowledge?—Ans. Yes, sir; I have got letters right from him.

Ques. 63. It is that of having letters from him that you know of your own knowledge of his being there?—Ans. Yes, sir; I know it from a good many that have been there, too.

Ques. 64. Is not your own knowledge exclusively hearsay?—Ans. Well, when you come right down, I can swear that he was there.

Ques. 65. Did you see him there?—Ans. No, sir; I run my chance; I am willing to run my chance.

Ques. 66. You are willing to do that?—Ans. Yes, sir; I am willing to do that.

Ques. 67. Have you ever been a witness before in court?—Ans. No, sir; hardly ever.

Ques. 68. Do you know any of the oath?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 69. Did you tell the truth, and do you know the oath?—Ans. Yes, sir; I did.

Ques. 70. How long has Barker's family lived in this county?—Ans. I can't exactly give the date; it must be from nine to eleven years.

Ques. 71. Did he live there last fall at the election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 72. Has he a wife?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 73. And they kept house?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 74. Now, T. B. Barker; did he have any family?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 75. Where did he live?—Ans. Right there in town.

Ques. 76. In the town where he voted?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 77. Family all live there?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 78. How long did they live there?—Ans. About the same length of time; they are twin brothers and always stick together.

Ques. 79. State if you saw T. P. Barker's ticket before he voted.—Ans. He showed me a ticket; whether he voted that ticket I don't know.

Ques. 80. Do you know, of your own knowledge, whether he voted the Democratic ticket?—Ans. I presume he did, by the way that he worked for it.

Ques. 81. Did you see the ticket in the box?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 82. Now, as to W. P. Barker, would you know what ticket he voted?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 83. Did you see his ticket?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 84. Do you know who was on it for Representative for Congress?—Ans. No, sir, that I don't.

Ques. 85. Do you know who was on T. P Barker's ticket for Representative for Congress?—Ans. No, sir; he showed me a straight Democratic ticket, and said that he was going to vote that, and swore that he was going to vote it.

Ques. 86. Did you see the ticket that Henry Mohr had?—Ans. No, sir, I didn't have to see it, he never voted anything else.

Ques. 87. Do you know what ticket he voted last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 88. How do you know?—Ans. Because he never voted anything else.

Ques. 89. Don't they frequently change?—Ans. No, sir, from Republican to Democrat.

Ques. 90. You swear they don't change the other way?—Ans. No, sir, I don't swear that; don't misunderstand me because you are sharper than I am, for God's sake.

Ques. 91. Did you know that this man didn't mean to secure this homestead, then go back to prove up their claim?

(Objection.)

Ques. 92. Do you know what they did in Dakota?—Ans. They did some breaking.

Ques. 93. Did you see them breaking?—Ans. The man I was working for was up, staying with them, and saw it broke.

Ques. 94. Another man told you so?—Ans. No, sir; I swear point blank that that is correct; I will stick to it.

Ques. 95. Do you swear of your own knowledge that they broke a furrow in Dakota?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 96. How do you know it?—Ans. Because I have confidence in man a little.

Ques. 97. Well, you have a damn little to-day. Do you know, sir, when they proved up their claims?—Ans. Well, I don't know that; along in the latter part of April or May.

Ques. 98. How do you know that?—Ans. From the papers I saw.

Ques. 99. What papers did you see?—Ans. I saw three papers proving up, also some tree claims being sold; if I had thought of it I could have three papers here.

Ques. 100. You didn't see they had any breaking in that claim?—Ans. No, sir; but men I have confidence in told me that they had.

Ques. 101. Do you know anything about in any other than what other men have told you?—Ans. Yes, sir; I believe that they broke some farm claims.

Ques. 102. Do you know from your own knowledge that they broke for anybody?—Ans. No, sir; only from hearsay.

Ques. 103. Are not all your statements save three, going to Dakota and as to their taking claims, hearsay?—Ans. In part.

Ques. 104. Do you know anything of the facts except what you have from others, that you have testified to to-day, others who have seen some papers reporting to be issued by land officers in Dakota?—Ans. I know it by good men and they are just as good men as you have.

Ques. 105. Is what you have testified to knowledge you have acquired from good men?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 106. You have no personal knowledge of your own about it?—Ans. I will give you the men's names if you want to know them.

Ques. 107. You have no personal knowledge of it. Did you see Henry Mohr vote?—Ans. I don't recollect whether I saw him put in his ticket; it is not usual for men to go and display their vote, you understand that.

Ques. 108. Then you don't know that he voted at all?—Ans. Yes, sir; I do.

Ques. 109. How do you know that?—Ans. I know that he did.

Ques. 110. Well, say how.—Ans. I saw him go up to the window and vote and hand in a piece of paper rolled up.

Ques. 111. You don't know what was on that paper?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 112. No name?--Ans. Well, I remember devilish well what was on it.

Ques. 113. You never saw that particular paper?—Ans. Well, one just like it.

Ques. 114. Did you see it in his hands?—Ans. Probably I saw a hundred in his hands.

Ques. 115. Who was on there for clerk of the supreme court?—Ans. I don't know; I never voted that ticket, and I had no business with it.

Ques. 116. Who was on there for judge of the supreme court?

(Contestee objects as immaterial.)

Ques. 117. Name any State officers whose names were on that ticket you saw.—Ans. I have not put any attention on that having been called up.

Ques. 118. Who was on there for any of the county offices, you saw and recognized the name that was on the ticket that Henry Mohr voted?—Ans. Quite a number of them; Judge Morrison official.

Ques. 119. Is he a Republican?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 200. Did you see that on the ticket that Henry Mohr voted?—Ans. No, sir, I didn't; I saw it on tickets brought from the same channel.

Ques. 201. You saw it on tickets that men peddled at the election?—Ans. Yes, sir; I guess it is all correct, too; I guess there is no doubt about that.

Ques. 202. Where have you been living during the year commencing the first of March, 1882, up to this time?—Ans. I have been living in the town of Victor.

Ques. 203. Have you been out of Iowa during that time?—Ans. Yes, sir; a number of times to Chicago and back shipping stock.

Ques. 204. Have you been north in any of the Northern States, the States north of Iowa?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 205. Or west?—Ans. No, sir; never in a State north of Iowa; I believe, yes, sir, once in Wisconsin twenty-five years ago.

Ques. 206. Can you give me the name of the commissioner of the land office that signed any of the papers you have testified to?—Ans. I can if I had just thought of that matter; I could have remembered that if I had expected to be called in here.

Ques. 207. Are you acquainted with any of the land officers in Dakota?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 208. You voted Republican ticket, didn't you?—Ans. Yes, sir; you can bet on that every time.

Ques. 209. You have been connected in looking up testimony for Mr. Wilson up there?—Ans. No, sir; I have all I can do to attend to my own business, let alone the politician line.

Ques. 210. You don't take any interest in politics?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 211. How old a man is Barker?—Ans. About forty, a little over.

Ques. 212. How long have you known them?—Ans. About seventeen years.

Ques. 213. Have you known them all the while as citizens of Iowa County?—Ans. No, sir; only as citizens of Iowa County; ten or eleven years, along in that neighborhood.

Ques. 214. Have you been, say for 10 or 11 years?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 215. How long have you known Mohr?—Ans. He must have lived there some eighteen years.

Ques. 216. How old a man is he?—Ans. 35 or 36 years old, but I am like the Arkansas traveler; a man asked how long he lived there. Well, says he, pointing to some rocks, they were here when I came, and that is about the way with Barker; he was there when I came.

Ques. 217. Were you there when either of these men started for Dakota?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 218. What did they take with them?—Ans. They took some teams and plows. They were breaking plows.

Ques. 219. Did they have any property at home?—Ans. Mr. Mohr has property there yet.

Ques. 220. The Barkers had property, didn't they?—Ans. No, sir; they didn't have any.

Ques. 221. Didn't they have any household goods?—Ans. No, sir; I mean real estate. They left chattels.

Ques. 222. Mr. Mohr had a farm there, didn't he?—A. No, sir.

Ques. 223. What did he have?—Ans. Some town lots.

Ques. 224. He has seven?—Ans. Blacksmith shop, also saloon building, also hotel he had there is torn down.

Ques. 225. Mr. Barker lived in his house there?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 226. Do you know whether they owned or rented them?—Ans. No, sir; they didn't own them; they were sometimes short of rents and had to get another place.

Ques. 227. When was that?—Ans. That is since I knew them.

Ques. 228. Always been short; never paid any rent?—Ans. Yes, sir; and once in a while got hard up.

Ques. 229. You did not come to answer about that?—Ans. I don't have to answer that what is told me.

Ques. 230. That is hearsay?—Ans. Yes, sir.

(Objection by contestee, as it is not proper cross-examination.)

Ques. 231. Then this is hearsay, is it? You didn't know of your own knowledge that they were ever short, did you?—Ans. I have never known them to be long.

Ques. 232. You know as little about this rent business as you do about their getting homsteads up there?—Ans. I guess when we come down, you know more about it than I do.

Ques. 233. The families of neither of these three families have moved away yet?—Ans. No, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 234. Was Henry Mohr and Barker around the polls peddling Democratic tickets on the 7th of November at that election?—Ans. Yes, sir; they were.

Recross-examination:

Ques. 235. They peddled to everybody miscellaneously?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 236. What part of Dakota did they go to?—Ans. Iroquois.

ROGER CARRALL, being produced and duly sworn before me, Mr. Wilson, a notary public for this county, on this 24th day of April, 1883 (T. Brown appearing for the contestant, A. H. Simpson appearing for the contestee), testifies as follows:

Ques. 1. Give your place of residence and age?—Ans. I live here in this town; I am 57 or 58 years of age, don't exactly know which.

Ques. 2. What township do you live in?—Ans. Lennox Township.
Ques. 3. Are you an American-born citizen?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 4. Did you vote at the general election November 7th, 1882, in Lennox Township, Iowa County?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 5. What ticket did you vote?—Ans. I don't know; have you any tickets here?
Ques. 6. No, sir; did you vote for the Democratic or Republican Representative in Congress from the 5th district?—Ans. I think that I voted the Democratic ticket.
Ques. 7. Have you your naturalization papers with you, Mr. Carroll?—Ans. Yes, sir; I believe I have.
Ques. 8. You were subpœnaed to produce them; please do so.
(Witness produces papers in court.)
Ans. I lost the old one I had and I went down to New York last fall and went to the clerk of the court and he gave me this one.
Ques. 9. Are these all the papers you have?—Ans. Yes, sir; these are all I have or ask.
Ques. 10. What did you say your name was?—Ans. They used to call me Rhody, and the Yankees called me Rhoney; they called me Rhodie by name. I generally sign my name Roger, then Rhodie and Rhoderick, all the same name; that was about what they called me where I was born.

Ques. 11.
Be it remembered that at the county court, held at the court-house, in the town of Malone, in and for the county of Franklin, on the 24th day of October, in the year 1857, personally appeared in open court before the judge and jury, Roney Carroll, an alien, and produces a copy of his original report and declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States, of which the following is an abstract: Alien's report: Rhoney Carroll; place of birth, Ireland; age, 30; nation of allegiance, British. Emigrated from Ireland in the year 1848; came to the United States in the year 1848; is a resident of Franklin County; and having proved to the satisfaction of the court by the oath to William G. New, that he has in all respects conformed to the things required of him by an act of Congress to entitle him to become a naturalized citizen, and having taken the oaths required by an act of Congress, is hereby made a citizen of the United States.

By George W. Dustin, clerk of the Franklin County court. Do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy from the records of the said court in the matter of Rhoney Carrol. Given under my hand and seal of said county the 12th of October, 1882.

G. W. DUSTIN.

[Franklin County seal.]

Cross-examination:

Ques. 12. Are you the Rhoney Carroll to whom this paper was issued?—Ans. Yes, sir; that is my name; when I was a boy they put it that way; I generally write my name Roger now. They used to call it a girl's name among the Yankees. I changed it to Roger; it is all the same name.

Redirect:

Ques. 13. What name did you give to the clerk?—Ans. I think it was Roger, but the clerk made a mistake, being a Yankee.
Ques. 14. What name was given to the board of trustees at the board of election?—Ans. Roger; that is the way I sign my name now.
Ques. 15. How many miles do you live from Marengo?—Ans. About 15.

Ques. 29. How long after getting first papers did you get second papers?—Ans. It was five or six years, or a year more or less; I never kept any record of that at all.

Ques. 30. Did you have your second papers when you went into the service of the United States as a soldier?—Ans. I had one; I am not sure; I think so.

Ques. 31. Then you were four years in the service?—Ans. Yes, sir; but went home. I went home after being out three years; I went home on a furlough.

Ques. 32. When did you get the second papers then?—Ans. It may be a year or two, or it may be three.

Ques. 33. After you came home from the service?—Ans. Yes, sir; it was between the times.

Ques. 34. During the time you were in the service, or did you vote as they all voted in 1862?—Ans. Yes, sir; I voted at the Presidential election.

Ques. 35. Did you have your second papers at that time?—Ans. I am not sure.

Ques. 36. Was it after that then you got them?—Ans. I guess it was before that; I am not sure.

Ques. 37. You are not very positive that you had more than one set of papers?—Ans. Yes, sir; because I had full papers; I drove on 4th avenue for nearly two years; I would not be allowed to drive on street cars unless I nad papers; I would be fined.

Ques. 38. Then you must have had full papers before you went into the service.—Ans. Yes, sir; I did, I guess.

Ques. 39. What year did you go into the service?—Ans. I cannot tell.

Ques. 40. Could you come pretty near it?—Ans. I guess I could; I went in 1828 or '29.

Ques. 41. You say you think the mayor gave you papers?—Ans. His name was signed; I don't know that he was at the office at that time or doing other business.

Ques. 42. He had charge of running street cars at that time; issuing licenses to drivers?—Ans. No, sir; I got my papers previous to this.

Ques. 43. I am speaking at the time that Mayor Gunter issued this license to drivers. Do you know about that, or did the State recorder do that?—Ans. The State recorder used to do that sometimes.

Ques. 44. Now state to me; you say you got two sets of papers; state the difference between the two sets of papers; do you remember what was stated in either one of them?—Ans. I cannot remember; we went down and took out our papers.

Ques. 45. You got them so as to be driver to street cars?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 46. Was it so you could vote?—Ans. Yes, sir; so as to vote.

Ques. 47. You commenced voting at that time?—Ans. Yes, sir; I voted up to this time.

Ques. 48. That was before you were in the service?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 49. You don't remember now when you came to the United States?—Ans. It may be 28 or 29 years ago.

Ques. 50. At what age were you when you arrived in the United States?—Ans. I suppose 28 or 30 years.

Ques. 51. How old are you now?—Ans. I may be upwards of 50.

Yues. 52. Will you swear positively here that there was a seal on those second papers, and that they were signed by that Mayor Gunter, that there was a seal on there?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 53. And that these were your second naturalization papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 12. Did you remember voting for President?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 13. The last time Garfield and Hancock were running for office, which one did you vote for?—Ans. The same as I did the last one; I put two tickets in my pocket and threw one of them in.

Ques. 14. You never know who you do vote for?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 15. You fix it so you don't know?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 16. You put two tickets in your pocket, one of which you vote?—Ans. Two of each kind and shake them up in my pocket, take one and put it in.

Ques. 17. Well, we have had a good many fusses, but this is certainly the most interesting. You had no preference last fall for Congressman; didn't care whether you voted for Frederick or Wilson?—Ans. It didn't make any difference to me.

Ques. 18. Did you talk to anybody about this thing?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 19. You are sure of that?—Ans. I am sure of that.

Ques. 20. How do you know that the tickets that you had in your pockets were tickets of two kinds?—Ans. I looked at them first.

Ques. 21. You can read?—Ans. Yes, sir; as well as any of them.

Ques. 22. Are you positive that you did not vote two tickets last fall?—Ans. I am sure of that.

Ques. 23. How do you know that?—Ans. Because I had three left when I came home.

Ques. 24. How did you know that you had three left?—Ans. I looked at them in my pocket.

Ques. 25. What kind of tickets were they?—Ans. I didn't look at them; they were doubled up. I threw them in the stove.

Ques. 26. Did you vote in June on the amendment?—Ans. No, sir. A man gave me a ticket at the polls; I didn't look at it; I just put it in.

Ques. 27. You don't know how you voted on that subject?—Ans. No, sir; I don't know that either.

Ques. 28. When there are parties holding caucuses and conventions, what side do you sympathize with?—Ans. I don't go at all then.

Ques. 29. Under oath, you state you don't know what ticket you voted last fall?—Ans. No, sir; I don't know whether Democratic or Republican; I am not sure.

Ques. 30. What do you think about it?—Ans. I can't tell.

Ques. 31. Give us your impression.—Ans. I can't tell anything about it.

Ques. 32. Give us your best judgment, supposing you were going to guess about it.—Ans. I can't guess about it.

Ques. 33. You have some respect for your standing in your neighborhood?—Ans. Yes, sir; I hope so.

Ques. 34. You are a pretty smart, intelligent man.—Ans. No, sir; not very.

Ques. 35. Every lineament of your face shows that you are intelligent; you know what the sanctity of the oath is?—Ans. An oath, yes, sir; I guess I do.

Ques. 36. You are to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.—Ans. Yes, sir; the whole truth.

Ques. 37. Now, then, you say that you never know who you vote for?—Ans. I do not. No, sir; I do not.

Ques. 38. Where were you born?—Ans. In Prussia.
Ques. 39. That is well settled, is it?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 40. Ever naturalized?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 41. Where?—Ans. In Davenport.
Ques. 42. How long had you been in this country before you were naturalized?—Ans. The first papers after 3 years; then I run on a steamboat for 3 years as pastry cook; then 3 years in the Leclaire House; then a man came after me to go and get my second papers; I went with him to the court-house and got the papers that were taken from me at Rochester. I claimed some land there, and they took my papers and were to send them to me in 14 days, and they didn't do it.
Ques. 43. How did you remember these facts so well?—Ans. I can remember the time that I went to school in the old country.
Ques. 44. But you never remember how you vote?—Ans. I don't want to.
Ques. 45. You have no papers now?—Ans. No, sir; I have no papers now; they took them from me in Rochester, Minn.

JOHN MONAGHAN, being produced and sworn, before E. H. Wilson, on this 25th day of Ap., 1883 (H. A. Simpson appearing on the part of the contestee and T. Brown on the part of the contestant), testifies as follows:

Ques. 1. You are living in Grant Township, Iowa County, Iowa?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 2. Voted there last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. How is your name spelled?—Ans. Two ways.
Ques. 4. What ticket did you vote?—Ans. I don't know; sometimes one way, sometimes another Ques. 5. How did you vote last fall?—Ans. I can't tell exactly. (Objection, immaterial.) I never keep track of it.
Ques. 6 You know what you intended to do last fall? We will get through with you in a few minutes if you will answer one or two questions. Were you subpœnaed here?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 7. Have you papers?—Ans. My father has them.
Ques. 8. What age were you when you came to the United States?—Ans. Ten or 12 years old.
Ques. 9. Where did your father get his papers?—Ans. In America.
Ques 10. Who did you get them from?—Ans. I can't tell you exactly.
Ques. 11. Did you ever see them? –Ans. No, sir; but I have heard him say that he had them.
Ques. 12. Who did he get them from?—Ans. Jerry Grove got them for him. (Witness says, are they not as good as any other?)
Ques. 13. Do you know what judge was sitting in the court at the time that your father got his papers?—Ans. No, sir; I never saw them; I only heard him say that he got them and voted.
Ques. 14. Where is your father now?—Ans. In Cook County.
Ques. 15. If your father ever got any papers to your knowledge it wasn't in Iowa County?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 16. You never saw them?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 17. What ticket did you vote last fall?—Ans. I generally vote the Democratic ticket—sometimes the other.
Ques. 18. You voted last fall in the November election; did you vote the Democratic ticket?—Ans. I cannot tell you whether I did or not.
Ques. 19. You can read?—Ans. Not to amount to anything.
Ques. 20. You can read names on the ticket?—Ans. Some of them I can.
Ques. 21. Did you read your ticket last fall?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 22. Who gave it to you?—Ans. So many had tickets around there that I did not keep track of them.
Ques. 23. Who was the man you got your ticket of when you voted?—Ans. I can't tell you that.
Ques. 24. Was it your intention to vote the Democratic or Republican ticket last fall? You must have had a definite intention to do something. Give us your best impression as to what you did last fall.
(Objection, incompetent, asking the witness' opinion.)
Ans. I have said that I vote sometimes one way sometimes another.
Ques. 25. Which way did you vote last fall?—Ans. I cannot tell you that.
Ques. 26. Do you know whether you voted for Frederick or Wilson last fall?—Ans. I can't tell you that, sir.

Ques. 27. Which of them do you think you voted for?—Ans. I don't know that. If I could tell you that would be all right.

Ques. 28. You won't say or give any impression how you voted or how you generally vote?—Ans. I didn't pay much attention. I just took the vote and put it in.

Ques. 29. You have a choice?—Ans. Sometimes I have, sometimes I have not.

Ques. 30. Did you have any choice last fall?—Ans. Not a great deal.

Ques. 31. You had no choice last fall?—Ans. Only a little.

Ques. 32. What was it for, the Democratic or Republican ticket?

(Contestant objects to the question as leading.)

Ans. I guess a little. I mean that way.

Ques. 33. Which way?—Ans. Voted Democratic.

Ques. 34. Your impression is that you voted the Democratic ticket?—Ans. I can't tell you for certain.

Ques. 35. Don't you think you did? I want to get your judgement about it.

W. J. KOSLANSKY, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn Co., on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

(Contestant objects to the testimony of this witness for the reason that no notice has been given to the taking of his testimony or the residence of the witness.)

Ques. 1. Where do you reside?—Ans. At Cedar Rapids.

Ques. 2. Of what country are you a native?—Ans. Austria.

Ques. 3. Have you ever been naturalized as a citizen of the United States?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Have you your papers?—Ans. No, sir; I have not got my papers; I don't need any papers really, but I got them all the same.

Ques. 5. Where were you naturalized, and before whom?—Ans. In this county.

Ques. 6. Do you remember whether it was before Judge Elliot, of Marion?—Ans. I don't recollect; it was 15 or 16 years ago.

Ques. 7. Where are your papers?—Ans. I cannot say. I have never taken any care of them, because I don't need them.

Ques. 3. You cannot find them then?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 9. Now, did you vote at the last November election?—Ans. No, sir; I was not at home.

Ques. 10. You didn't vote?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 11. You say you were not here?—Ans. No, sir; I wasn't here that day.

Ques. 12. Then you didn't vote?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 13. You didn't vote in the first ward in the city of Cedar Rapids at the election held last November, for the office of Congressman from the 5th Congressional district?—Ans. No, sir; I wasn't at home.

PHILLIP SEITZ, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn Co., on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

(Contestant objects on the same ground as before stated.)

Ques. 1. Mr. Seitz, of what country are you?—Ans. From Baden.

Ques. 2. Have you ever been naturalized as a citizen of the United States of America; and, if so, have you your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir; here they are.

(Witness produces papers.)

Ques. 3. Then you say you have been naturalized and have your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Are these your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

(Copy introduced in evidence by contestee.)

STATE OF IOWA,
Linn County:

Be it remembered that on the 16th day of May, A. D. 1861, Phillip Seitz, late of the Grand Duchy of Baden, now of Linn Co., in the State of Iowa, appeared in the county court of Iowa, county of Linn, being a court of record, having a law jurisdiction and a seal and clerk, and applied to the said court to be admitted to become a citizen of the United States of America, according to law, the said Phillip Seitz having thereupon brought to the court such witnesses and taking such oaths and making such declarations as are required by law, thereupon it was considered by the said court that the said Phillip Seitz be admitted, and he was accordingly admitted by the said court to become a citizen of the United States of America. In testimony whereof the seal of said court is hereunto affixed the 16th day of May, A. D. 1861.

Ques. 5. Did you vote at the election held in this county on the 7th day of November, 1882?

(Contestant objects as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

Ans. No, sir; I don't believe I did; I wasn't here; I live 2 miles out, I wasn't here; I never lost an election, except that; I have voted for 20 years.

Ques. 6. Now, did you say here that you didn't vote at the general election held on the 7th day of last November?—Ans. Yes, sir.

JOHN DREFAHL, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn County, on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

(Same objection as before stated.)

Ques. 1. Where were you born?—Ans. In Germany.

Ques. 2. Are you a naturalized citizen of the United States?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Where and when did you receive your papers, and have you got them with you?—Ans. I received them in 1883 in Merryville, two or three years ago.

Ques. 4. You don't mean '83; don't you mean '63?—Ans. Yes, sir; I mean '63.

Ques. 5. Have you your papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir; but it is not necessary for me to show them, I never show them to anybody else.

(Contestant objects to the same for the reason that it is not shown that the witness is an illegal voter.)

(Papers are produced by the witness.)

(Mills says papers produced are similar to those produced by the witness just preceding, and these papers being the same in form as that introduced in the testimony of Phillip Seitz, issued Oct. 9, 1868, signed by Daniel Lothan, county judge and ex-officio clerk.

Contestant objects to the same as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and not the best evidence.)

Ques. 6. On November last, 1882, where did you reside?—Ans. In Fayette Township.

Ques. 7. Did you vote at the November election?—Ans. I voted for Frederick, he is my man.

Ques. 8. Well, this question was did you vote at the general election held November the 7th, 1882, in Fayette Township?—Ans. Yes, sir; in Palo.

Ques. 9. For whom did you vote for Representative in Congress from the fifth Congressional district?—Ans. I voted for Frederick.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 10. How long have you been a voter?—Ans. Since twenty years ago.
Ques. 11. Have you ever had your right to vote questioned before?—Ans. No, sir; ever since I had my papers I voted.
Ques. 12. Have you served on juries or grand juries in this county?—Ans. No, sir; I never did anything of this kind before.
Ques. 13. Well, have you served on the juries in this county?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 14. Never been on the jury?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 15. In any case?—Ans. Yes, sir; on the jury case in Marion I have been a witness but not a juryman.
Ques. 16. How many years have you been in Iowa?—Ans. 20 years.
Ques. 17. What attorney was with you when you obtained your papers?—Ans. In Marion?
Ques. 18. Yes, sir.—Ans. I don't know; I think that it was Judge Lothan.
Ques. 19. Are your certain you voted for Frederick for the office of Representative in Congress?—Ans. Yes, sir, I did.

Redirect:

Ques. 20. You are certain Lothan was the judge then and there?—Ans. Yes, sir, I know that.

JAMES BIRD, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn Co., on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testified as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

Ques. 1. Where do you reside?—Ans. Rapids Township.
Ques. 2. I will ask you this question: Did you vote at the general election held November the 7th, 1882, for the office of Representative in Congress?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. Are you a native-born citizen?—Ans. No, sir, I am not.
Ques. 4. When and where were you naturalized, and have you your papers with you?—Ans. I haven't my papers with me; I was naturalized in 1866 or '7, I won't be sure which.
Ques. 5. Where are your papers?—Ans. I suppose they are at home; I don't at liberty to look half a bushel of old documents. I can give you my witness, with no doubt of that it's simply a question of law demanding by whom you were naturalized.
(Contestant objects as incompetent, immaterial, and not the best evidence. Then you will have to go and find your papers.)
Ques. 6. State by whom you were naturalized.—Ans. Judge Dumont, of Marion.
Ques. 7. He was judge of the county court, wasn't he?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 8. Then you are not sure that you were naturalized by Judge Dumont, judge of the probate court of Marion?
(Same objection as before.)
Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 9. Now, for whom did you vote for for office of Congressman?—A. I voted for Frederick.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 10. How long have you been a voter?—Ans. For the last 15 or 16 years.
Ques. 11. Have you ever had your right to vote questioned since you got your papers?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 12. And have voted different tickets every year?—Ans. Yes, sir.

MICHAEL FLAHERTY, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn Co., on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant and M. P. Mills appearing on the par tof contestee):

Ques. 1. What township do you live in?—Ans. Fairfax Township.
Ques. 2. Where did you live in November last?—Ans. Same place.
Ques. 3. Did you vote at the election held November 7th, 1882, in Fairfax?—Ans. Yes, sir; I did.

Ques. 4. Are you a naturalized citizen of the United States, and, if so, have you papers, and produce them?—Ans. Yes, sir, I have, but I need not produce them.

Ques. 5. You mentioned you are a citizen and you have papers?—Ans. Yes, sir; I wasn't of age when my father got his papers.

(Papers produced is in form like the one in the testimony of John Flaherty, issued the 18th day of March, 1868, signed by A. B. Dumont, county judge and ex-officio clerk of the county court of Linn Co., Iowa, with county seal attached.

Contestant objects to the same as incompetent, irrelevant, and not the best evidence.)

Ques. 6. For whom did you vote for the office of Congressman 5th Congressional district?—Ans. If I understand the law, I put it in as a secret; I don't think any one can compel me by law to tell who I voted for; I think a man can vote for whom he pleases.

Ques. 7. What ticket did you vote last November at the general election?—Ans. I won't answer unless I am compelled to; not that I have any objections, but I want to see whether I am compelled by law to do it.

Ques. 8. Well, I would answer the question if I was in your place; I have no interest in this matter, but anybody will tell you to answer. Brown says if your father was a naturalized citizen of the United States, and you came to the United States as a minor, you are not obliged to answer the question.—Ans. I merely got these papers; we had a little dispute; I got them just to satisfy myself.

Ques. 9. That is all right. Mr. Flaherty, you can just answer who you voted for?—Ans. I refuse to do that.

Ques. 10. I will ask you what your general politics are, Democrat or Republican?—Ans. It would be an honest man and best man; I sometimes find them in both parties, especially in the Republican party.

Ques. 11. That is what I supposed; which party did you consider most honest last fall?—Ans. I didn't make up my mind to that; it was just the same all the time.

Ques. 12. Did you vote for any Democrats last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir; I did some scratching to mine as the rest of them.

Ques. 13. Did you vote for any Republican last fall?—Ans. I believe I did, but I can't name them.

Ques. 14. Did you vote for James Wilson?—Ans. I won't answer that whether I voted for him or the other man.

Ques. 15. Then you won't answer whether you voted for James Wilson, Republican candidate for Congress?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 16. Did you vote for David Platner, the Greenback candidate for Congress?—Ans. I refuse to answer that, as I stated it was a secret.

Ques. 17. Well, never mind that now; I will ask you again if you didn't vote for Benj. Frederick for Congress?—Ans. I refuse to answer that.

Ques. 18. Did you vote a ticket with Frederick's name on for Congress?—Ans. I refuse to answer that.

Ques. 19. Did you vote a Democratic ticket last fall?—Ans. I refuse to answer that.

Ques. 20. Did you vote at all?--Ans. I did.

Ques. 21. Now, Mr. Flaherty, this is all I have to ask you now; you may stay here.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 22. How old were you when you came to the United States?—Ans. Well, sir, as near as I can judge, I was 12 years old when I crossed that pond, and that is the trouble in this——

Ques. 23. Did you live with your father in the United States?—Ans. Yes, sir; I lived in this State since '55.

Ques. 24. Was your father a naturalized citizen of the United States?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 25. Was he naturalized before you were of age?—A. Yes, sir.

Ques. 26. Was he a voter?—Ans. Yes, sir.

JAMES HEDGE, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, a notary public for Linn County, on this 26th day of April, A. D. 1883, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant and M. P. Mills appearing on the part of contestee):

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. Fairfax.

Ques. 2. Where did you reside in November 7th, 1882?—Ans. At Fairfax.

Ques. 3. Did you vote at the general election held on that day?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Are you a naturalized citizen of the United States, and, if so, have you your papers? If you have, please present them to the commissioner.

(Contestee objects to the question on the ground that it is incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant to the issue; therefore no longer in the answer of any witness voting in Fairfax illegally.)

Ques. 5. Have you your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir; here they are.

(Witness produces papers.

Same notes in evidence by contestee; papers show that he was a native of Ireland; same issued on the 24th of August, 1868, by A. B. Dumont, county judge and ex-officio clerk of the county court of Linn County, Iowa, with the seal of the county court of Linn County, Iowa, and the stamp attached.

(Contestant objects to the evidence as incompetent, and not the best evidence.)

Ques. 5. These are the original naturalization papers that you have?—Ans. Yes, sir. Are they not sufficient?

(Brown, contestee, claims that these papers are not good for anything, and that such witnesses cannot vote legally.

Contestee says that I want it noted in the evidence that the words of the contestant's attorney, Mr. Brown, be put in evidence in full.)

Ques. 6. I believe you stated that you voted at the November election?—Ans. Yes, sir; certainly.

Ques. 7. Now, for whom did you vote for the office of Congressman?—Ans. I always vote the Democratic ticket.

Ques. 8. I know; that is the way to talk it.—Ans. No, sir; there is no use lying about it.

Ques. 9. You need not be ashamed of it.—Ans. Yes, sir; I always did.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 19. You don't know whose names were on the tickets for Congressman?—Ans. I paid no attention to it at all.

Ques. 20. There were a good many split tickets?—Ans. Yes, sir, there were. I never pay any attention to the names at all.

Redirect:

Ques. 21. Did you see Mr. Wilson's name on any Democratic tickets that day?—Ans. I paid no attention to it.

Ques. 22. Then you didn't say any such thing, did you?—Ans. I can't tell; I supposed he wouldn't be there, would he?

Ques. 23. No, sir.

(Contestant objects to this evidence as incompetent, and not the best evidence.)

Ques. 1. Where did you reside in November, 1882?—Ans. In the city of Cedar Rapids.

Ques. 2. Did you vote at the general election, 1882?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Have you ever been naturalized as a citizen of the United States, and, if so, have you your papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Please produce them, Mr. Anssieker.

(Papers produced in court. Copy introduced in evidence by contestee. Papers show the witness to be late of Germany; naturalized by the county court, 6th of February, 1867. Signed by Johnson Elliot, county judge, and ex-officio clerk of the county court, Linn County, Iowa, with the seal of the county court, Iowa, and stamp attached.

Contestant objects to the evidence of the papers just introduced for the reason that it is incompetent, not the best evidence.)

Ques. 5. You stated you voted in the November election, 1882?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 6. For whom did you vote for member of Congress?

(Objection, incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial.)

Ans. For Frederick.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 7. How long have you been a voter?—Ans. Since 1867.

Ques. 8. Did you know you voted for Frederick for Congressman?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 9. Have you been in the habit of voting since 1867?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Did you vote at the general electien held in that township in November, 1882?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Are you a citizen of the United States; and, if so, have you naturalization papers, and if you have, please produce them?

(Contestant objects, incompetent, immaterial.)

(Witness produces papers, naturalization of witness, which are produced; says that he is late of the Grand Duchy of Baden, and were issued on the 8th of October, 1867, by Johnson Elliot, county judge and ex-officio clerk, county court of Linn County, Iowa, with the seal of the county court of Linn County, and stamp attached.

(Contestant objects to the same as incompetent and not the best evidence—hearsay.)

Ques. 5. These are the original papers you have had before?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 6. For whom did you vote for Representative in Congress?—Ans. That is something I can not swear to. I sometimes look for the State officers. I voted the Democratic ticket last fall, but whether Mr. Wilson or the other one was on I cannot tell; I cannot swear to it.

Ques. 7. You intended to vote for Frederick, Democratic nominee?—Ans. Well, I don't know; my mind was not made up at all about it. Well, really, I didn't care about the State officers; I just looked for such men as I knew in the county and township offices.

Ques. 8. You voted the Democratic ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 9. You didn't make any erasures on it or anything of that kind?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 10. You voted a straight Democratic ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 11. The straight Democratic ticket in your township had Frederick's name on for Congress?—Ans. I could not tell.

Ques. 12. You don't know that?—Ans. No, sir; I don't know that.

Ques. 13. Were there any Democratic tickets in your township with either one of the other candidates on for Congress?—Ans. I don't know for sure.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 14. How long have you been in the United States?—Ans. I came over in 1856.

Ques. 15. How old were you then?—Ans. Sixteen years old.

Ques. 16. Did your parents come with you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 17. Was your father naturalized and a voter in this State?—Ans. Not to my knowledge.

Ques. 18. You don't know as to that? Did you live with your father after he came here?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 19. You don't know whether he was naturalized or not?—Ans. I cannot tell, because he was not very long in this country before he died.

Ques. 20. How long was he here?—Ans. About 3 years.

Ques. 21. Do you know whether he made application to become a citizen before he died?—Ans. That is more than I can tell.

Ques. 22. You do not know whether he filed his declaration asking to be a citizen or not?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 23. Where did he live then?—Ans. In the State of Pennsylvania.

Ques. 24. What county?—Ans. Erie.

Ques. 25. How long have you voted?—Ans. Since 1867.

Ques. 26. Any Republican's name on that ticket for township officers you know of?—Ans. There were township officers.

Ques. 27. Republican township officers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 28. You do not know who were there with other Republican officers on the State ticket?—Ans. I could not tell Ques. 29. You cannot say who were on for Congress?—Ans. I cannot swear to that.

(Contestant objects that the testimony is not the best evidence.)

Ques. 1. Where did you reside in Nov., '82?—Ans. In Otter Creek Township.

Ques. 2. Did you vote there at the general election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Are you a naturalized citizen of the U. S., and if so, have you your papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. Please produce them.

(Contestant objects; incompetent, immaterial.)

Witness not obliged to produce papers.

Witness produces his papers.

A copy introduced in evidence by contestee showing that the witness was late of Baden, and that the papers were issued by Johnson Elliott, county judge, and ex officio clerk of State court with seal attached.

(Contestant objects that the same is incompetent and not best evidence; also that the paper on its face does not purport to be issued by the county court; but that it purports to be issued by county court having common law jurisdiction.)

Ques. 5. Did you vote at the Nov. election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 6. For whom did you vote, Frederick or Wilson?—Ans. I voted the straigh' Democraticticket.

Ques. 7. Including Frederick for Congress?—Ans. Yes, sir.

STATE OF IOWA,
Linn County, ss:

Be it remembered that on the 9th day of Oct., in the year of our Lord 1865, J. H. Wehrend, late of Holstein, Denmark, now of Linn County, in the State of Iowa, appeared in the county court of Iowa, within and for the county of Linn, being a court of record, having common-law jurisdiction, and a seal and clerk, and applied to the said court to be admitted to become a citizen of the U. S. of America, according to law, and the J. H. Wahrend, having thereupon produced to the court such evidence and taken such oath, and made such declarations and renunciations as are required by law, thereupon it was ordered by the said court that the said J. H. Wehrend be admitted, and he was accordingly admitted, by the said court to become a citizen of the U. S. of America.

In testimony whereof the seal of said court is hereunto affixed this 9th day of Oct., A. D. 1865.

[Seal of the county court of Linn County, Iowa.] JOHNSTON ELLIOT,
County Judge, and Clerk of the County Court of the said County of Linn.

Recross-examination:

Q. 17. Can you tell for whom you voted for judge of the supreme court?—A. No, sir; I cannot tell.
Q. 18. Can you tell the names of any at all?—A. I did not pay attention how that was. I took a Democratic ticket.
Q. 19. You did not know the names of the men on the ticket, did you?—A. No, sir; I could not swear to that.
Q. 20. You cannot swear to any of the names on the State ticket?—A. I know that Frederick's name was on it.
Q. 21. Do you know whether he was on there for Congressman, or simply the State ticket?—A. No, sir; I could not say.
Q. 22. You would not say if he was on?—A. No, sir.

Q. 3. Have you papers in your possession showing you to be a naturalized citizen?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 4. Please show them to the commissioner?

(Witness produces papers in court.)

Q. 5. I will ask you if you had your papers when you came into this room?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. You have mislaid them if you can't find them now?—A. Yes, sir; I just showed them to you; I can't find them.

Q. 7. I will ask you if your naturalization papers were signed by Judge Johnson Elliot, county judge of Linn Co.?

(Contestant objects. Incompetent, irrelevent, immaterial, and not the best evidence.)

Q. 8. Is that the only paper of naturalization you had?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 9. Is that the one that J. Elliot, county judge of Linn Co., issued you then?—A. In '66 I got second paper; then I voted.

Q. 10. That was your last paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. You know Judge Elliot, of probate court?—A. Well, I don't know; I can't think of it now; I know the judge was an old man; maybe he is dead now.

Q. 12. He is the same judge that naturalized these other witnesses that have been in here?

(Objection; incompetent, immaterial and not the best evidence.)

A. Oh, yes, sir; it was the same man.

Q. 14. In the same court, was it?—A. Yes, sir; at the same time I got my papers.

Q. 15. Did you vote at the general election held last Nov. for Congressman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. For whom did you vote for Congressman?—A. I voted a Democratic ticket.

Q. 17. Including Frederick for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Q. 18. Did you read the ticket you voted?—A. Of course.

Q. 19. Well, sir, who was on for sec. of state?—A. Well, I can't tell you the whole of it.

Q. 20. Can you tell any of it?—A. I came down here, I saw it was for Frederick.

Q. 21. Did you have your papers when you came here 5 minutes ago?—A. I got second papers in '66.

Q. 22. Did you have your papers in your hands 10 minutes ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 23. Did you give it to Mills?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 24. After that you couldn't find it, could you?—A. Maybe I can find them; that is not a fair question. I can get another in Marion.

Q. 25. Did you know you didn't get your papers in the district court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 26. Did you know you didn't get them in the district court?—A. I got it in the regular court.

Q. 27. What court?—A. In Marion.

Q. 28. What court was it, district?—A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. 29. Was it district, circuit, or court of record?—A. All I know it was a court; it doesn't matter.

Q. 30. Was there a judge and clerk?—A. Yes, sir; and a good many others.

Q. 31. Did you have witnesses?—A. Of course.

Q. 32. Did you take the oath of allegiance?—A. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Q. 33. I handed you back your paper, didn't I?—A. Yes, sir; of course, but I can't find my papers.

Q. 34. Are you not under the impresion that Frederick had it?—A. I just stuck it some place.

Q. 35. When you find it you will bring it back here?—A. Yes, sir; of course I will.

(Objection; testimony of the witness not best evidence.)

Ques. 1. Where did you live Nov. last; Cedar Rapids Township; did you vote at the last general election held in Nov.; are you a naturalized citizen of the United States, and if so, have you your papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 2. Present your papers to the commissioner.

(Witness produces papers. Papers presented to the commissioner showing that they were issued to Michael Menz Feb. 26, '68, of the county court of Iowa for Linn County, being a court having a common law and seal and clerk. Signed: A. B. Dumont, county judge, and ex-officio clerk of said court. Seal of county court attached.)

Ques. 3. For whom did you vote for Congressman?—Ans. I voted for Mr. Frederick.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 4. Did you read your ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 5. Have you had your vote questioned before?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 6. You supposed you were a legal voter?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 7. Did you know that this proceeding to disfranchise you means that your papers are not to be good; do you know that the court could not naturalize a man; do you know that your papers are not good?—Ans. I think that the seal of the county is on the papers.

Ques. 8. You supposed it was good?—Ans. Yes, sir; I paid a price for it, too.

Ques. 9. Have you ever voted the Republican ticket?—Ans. No, sir; not straight.

Ques. 10. You have voted for some Republicans, have not you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 11. Who was with you; who told you your paper was good?—Ans. Nobody told me; I was never asked for it.

Ques. 12. Did Willials ever tell you it was a good paper?—Ans. He did not say whether it was good or whether it was not good.

Ques. 13. What did he say; has he talked with you before you went on the stand?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 14. Asked you to show papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 15. Asked how you voted?—Ans. No, sir; he didn't ask me that.

Ques. 16. What did he tell you about the paper being good?—Ans. I don't recollect whether he said the papers were good or not good.

Ques. 17. Were you asked to show papers before you were subpœnaed?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 18. Did the officer that subpœnaed you call for your papers?—Ans. No, sir; he asked me to bring them.

Ques. 19. Is it on your subpœna to bring papers?—Ans. No, sir; he just told me that.

Ques. 20. Did they have a court there where you were naturalized?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 21. Was there a judge?—Ans. I don't know that there was; it was so long ago I have forgotten.

Ques. 22. Any clerk?—Ans. I guess so.

Ques. 23. You don't know whether judge or clerk?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 24. Who swore you and swore your witness?—Ans. I guess Mr. Dumont did.

Ques. 25. Who told you to go before him and get your papers?—Ans. That is the only place to go at that time; that is all I know about it.

Ques. 26. Who told you to go there?—Ans. Nobody told me; that is the only place for a man to go when he wants papers, in the court-room of the clerk.

Ques. 27. Did not anybody advise you that the county had power to issue these papers?—Ans. No, sir; nobody gave me any advice.

Ques. 28. Nobody told you that the county judge had right to issue them?—Ans. I don't know anything about that.

Ques. 29. Were you sworn the oath of allegiance?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 30. How old were you when you came to America?—Ans. 28.

Ques. 31. You have been here ever since?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 32. How old are you now?—Ans. 50.

Q. 40. Can you read English?—A. No, sir.
Q. 41. Then you did not read your ticket; was your ticket printed in English?—A. I did not have any ticket.
Q. 42. Did you read the one you voted?
Q. 43. At the last election, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 44. What, did you have a ticket?—A. Ask that man there; I do not understand you.
Q. 45. You say you read your ticket; did you?
(Mr. Frederick here demands that an interpreter be sworn for the purpose of obtaining the testimony of this witness.)

(E. H. Meyers sworn by Mills as interpreter.)
Q. 46. Can you read the English language?—A. No, sir; I cannot.
Q. 47. Did you read the ticket you voted last fall?—A. He did.
Q. 48. Was it printed in English or German?—A. It was printed in English.
Q. 49. What name did he read on it for the office of sec'y of State?—A. He says that he has forgotten it, but if the name should be mentioned he would know it.
Q. 50. Who was on for the office of judge of the supreme court?—A. He says that he has forgotten the name, but that it was for a Democratic candidate; he says, the same as before, that if the name were mentioned he could tell.
Q. 51. What was written on the head of the ticket?—A. He says it was a Democratic ticket.
Q. 52. Was John Hull on for sec'y of state?—A. He says that he did not examine the ticket close enough so as to be able to tell now.
Q. 53. Whose name was on there for dist. clerk?—A. He says that it was Johnsen, but the first name he has forgotten.
Q. 54. Who was there for judge of dist. court? Was Judge Griffin's name on for judge?—A. He says that he cannot remember distinctly.
Q. 55. Who was on there for clerk of the supreme court?—A. He said that the notice served on him was for him to appear, and he requested that it should be given back to him.
Q. 56. Who was the other for clerk of the supreme court? Was the name of Mr. Pray there?—A. He says that he can not remember.
Q. 57. Who was the other for Republican?—A. He says this—that he voted the Democratic ticket.
(Objection to the interpreter.)
Q. 58. You must answer the question.—A. He said that he would need the ticket to remind him of the names.
Q. 59. Who did he vote for for office of Representative in Congress in this dist.?—A. He says he could point out the name if that paper were handed to him.
(Contestant objects to the paper being handed to the witness.)
Q. 60. Ask the witness whether he voted for David Platner for Representative in Congress.
(Mills presents witness with the paper contrary to the objections of the contestant.)
(Paper withdrawn from witness.)
Q. 61. Ask the witness if he voted for David Platner.—A. Is that the Democratic candidate?
MILLS. No, sir; it is not.
(Contestant objects to the same having been said by Mills.)
Q. 62. For whom did the witness vote for member of Congress in this dist.?
(Witness requests to see the paper.)
MILLS. Tell the witness I will show it to him after a while.
Q. 63. Ask him who the candidate for Congress was for the 5th dist.? Ask him if he remembers who the Republican candidate was?—A. He says he did not have any Republican ticket, and did not know.

Q. 65. Who did you get your ticket of?—A. He says he does not know the name of the man.

Q. 66. Ask him if he read his ticket, or what part of it did he read.—A. He says he did not read the whole ticket.

Q. 67. Did he read any of it?—A. He says that the ticket was handed to him; he put it into the ballot-box, and that finished it.

Q. 68. Ask him if he read one single name on the ticket he voted?—A. He says that he did not read any of the names.

Q. 69. Ask him if he read any part of it, or knows any words that were on it.

INTERPRETER. I did ask him that.

Q. 70. Now ask him how he knew what ticket he voted, how does he know what ticket he voted?—A. He says that he read at the head of the ticket, Democratic ticket, and that that is the ticket he voted.

Q. 71. 14 that all he knows of the ticket?—A. He says that he took a Democratic ticket and voted it, and did not pay any further attention to matters.

Ques. 72. Who did you vote for, for township and county officers?—A. He says that he cannot read English, scarcely any; that he did not pay much attention to the county ticket, and voted the ticket without paying any particular attention to it, as to the names set forth.

Redirect:

(Mills presents witness with a paper which is a copy of subpœna.)

Q. 73. Ask the witness now to point to the name of the man for whom he voted.

(Contestee objects, for the reason that Mr. Mills hands witness a paper on which the names of Wilson and Frederick are both printed, and asks the question pointing to the name of Frederick.)

MILLS. I want the record to show that I did not point to any such name at all.

FREDERICK. You say you did not put your pencil right on my name?

MILLS. Yes, sir; of course I did; and on Wilson's name also.

Q. 74. Now tell the witness to look at that paper and point out the name, if he can, of the man for whom he voted as Representative in Congress.

(Witness examines the paper.)

Question propounded to the witness.

A. He says that he cannot see that.

Q. 75. Ask him if he ever saw the name of Frederick before. [Pointing to the name of Frederick.]—A. He says that I took that kind of a ticket; Democratic ticket.

Q. 76. Ask the witness if he did not know that Frederick's name was on the Democratic ticket for Congress.

(Objection—leading.)

A. He says that he don't know.

Q. 77. Ask him if he scratched anything off of the ticket, or if he voted the whole ticket.—A. He says that he did not strike out anything, nothing except supervisor.

($1.95 paid as fee.)

Q. 15. Ask him if he took it off from a pile of Democratic tickets.—A. He says that he cannot tell that.

Q. 16. Ask him if he means to be understood that he went to the voting place and took a ticket without looking at it, and voted.

(Contestant objects to the question as leading, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. He says that he did look at the ticket, but he cannot tell what the ticket was any more.

Q. 17. Ask him if he did not vote for Hamilton Preston, Democratic candidate for dist. att'y.

(Contestant objects; irrelevant and immaterial, also leading.)

A. He says that he don't know.

Q. 18. Ask him if he voted for township officers.—A. He says that he thinks he did.

Q. 19. Ask him for whom he voted as township officers.—A. He remembers of voting for assessor and clerk.

Q. 20. Who were they?—A. He remembers for assessor and for clerk.

Q. Ask him if they were candidates on the Democratic ticket.—A. He says he thinks they were, but he could not say for certain.

Q. 22. He voted the whole ticket that their name was on?—A. He says that he did.

Q. 23. Now ask him if he does not remember that that ticket was headed Democratic.—A. He says that he cannot say for certain.

Q. 24. Could he tell the ticket that was headed Democratic ticket?—A. He says that he can.

Q. 25. Ask him again if that ticket that he voted for his friends, the township officers, was a Democratic ticket.

(Contestant objects for the reason that it is incompetent, immaterial, and has already been answered.)

A. He says that he cannot tell for certain.

Q. 26. Tell him to give his best recollection.—A. He says he cannot tell whether it was a straight Democratic ticket or not.

Q. 27. Ask him if he intended when he voted to vote the Democratic ticket, when he voted for his friends for assessor and township clerk?

(Contestant objects—immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent).

A. He says that he did.

Q. 28. Ask him if he voted as he intended.—A. He says that he voted as he intended.

Cross-examination:

Q. 29. Ask him if he knows whether his ticket was a straight ticket or not.—A. He says that he cannot tell that.

Q. 30. Ask him if he knows whether or not it was a Democratic ticket or not?—A. He says he cannot tell that.

JOHN MEEHAN, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public of Linn County, on this 26th day of Apr., 1883 (M. P. Mills appearing on the part of the contestee and T. Brown on the part of the contestant), testifies as follows:

(Contestant objects to the testimony of this witness, for the reason that it is not shown that proper notice has been given of the residence of the witness.)

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. Rapids Township.
Ques. 2. Did you vote at the election held Nov. 7th, 1882?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. Now, what country are you a native of?—Ans. Of Ireland.
Ques. 4. You may state to the commissioner whether or not you were naturalized; and, if so, where?—Ans. I got my second papers in Linn County.
Ques. 5. Have you got them with you?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 6. Where are they?—Ans. I don't know whether I can find them or not.
Ques. 7. Don't you know who it was before; whether it was Judge Dumont, Judge Eliot, or Judge L———?—A. Well, I can't tell.
Ques. 8. Have you any recollection on that point?—Ans. Well, I don't know; I think that it was Dumont.
Ques. 9. Wasn't it Judge Eliot or Daniel L———?—A. It may have been L———; I don't know.
Ques. 10. Did you have witnesses there?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 11. You took the oath of allegiance?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 12. Since that time you have voted?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 13. You have voted in good faith, relying on the validity of your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 14. Did the papers purport to be issued from the court of record?—Ans. Yes, sir, Ques. 15. Are they formal?—Ans. Yes, sir; I suppose so.
Ques. 16. Where are they now?—A. As to that, I can't answer that question; I may have them with the rest of my papers; perhaps it would take a good while to find them.
Ques. 17. How many years ago was it that you got your papers; that is, last papers?—Ans. I think that it was in '66 or '68; I can't tell positive.
Ques. 18. Where did you get first papers?—Ans. In Minn.

Ques. 19. Did you have witnesses there?—Ans. I don't remember whether or not.

Ques. 20. You didn't need second papers if you came here when you were 12 years old, do you?—Ans. Well, I got my first papers in Minn., about 30 years ago, at St. Paul.

Ques. 21. Was that before a court?—Ans. Yes, sir; and I have mislaid them by some way or other. I didn't like to be challenged at the polls, so I have got some of my Cedar Rapids friends to go there and get them a second time.

Ques. 22. Now, didn't you vote under your first papers?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't.

Ques. 23. Was it because you mislaid them?—Ans. I didn't think that I was entitled to.

Ques. 24. Didn't you tell the court that you came into the U. S. when you were only 12 years old?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 25. You had witnesses there proving how long you had been in the U. S.?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 26. In Minnesota?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't suppose it was required to have witnesses for first papers.

Ques. 27. You didn't need to. But state if you had anybody to prove how long you had been in the U. S. when you got those papers.—Ans. I was a young boy at that time. It wasn't supposed that I should have first papers out.

Ques. 28. Was that before the court up there in Minnesota?—Ans. It was before the court or the clerk of the court, I can't say now. I was a young man, perhaps under age. I can't say whether I was 21 or not.

Ques. 29. Did you take the oath at that time?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 30. You renounced all allegiance to any other prince, potentate, State or sovereignty?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 31. In due form?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 32. Parties were in with you to get papers, and you know that you were in the U. S. some time?—Ans. Yes, sir; some parties were with me.

Ques. 33. They were naturalized at the same time?—Ans. I suppose so.

Ques. 34. You were these parties when the judge asked you how long you had been in America?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 35. And you took out your papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 36. How old are you now?—Ans. 49, the 29th of next June.

Ques. 2 Did you reside in Marion Township, this county, on the 7th of Nov., '82?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Did you vote at the general election held on that day?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. In what country were you born?—Ans. Eastern part of France.

Ques. 5. Have you naturalization papers? and if so, present them to the commissioner of inspection.

(Witness produces papers. Papers show that Frederick Ray, Dec. 31st, 1867, by the Linn County court having common law and jurisdiction, with the seal, signed by Johnson Eliot, sole judge and ex-officio clerk. Seal of county attached.)

(Objection to the paper. Not best evidence; immaterial. No notice of his production having been given.)

Ques. 6. What ticket did you vote last fall, Democratic or Republican?—Ans. I vote the Democratic ticket all the time.

Ques. 7. Including Frederick for Congress?—Ans. I took straight Democratic ticket. I am a Democrat. I will die a Democrat. A person has a right to vote for what ever party he pleases, and it isn't anybody's business.

Ques. 8. Where did you first reside in the U. S.?—Ans. In Ohio.

Ques. 9. How long did you live there?—Ans. 2 years.

Ques. 10. Where did you emigrate next?—Ans. To Dubuque.

Ques. 11. How long did you live in Dubuque?—Ans. 9 years.

Ques. 12. How long since you left Dubuque?—Ans. 18 years ago in this month.

Ques. 13. How long since you first voted?—Ans. I got my paper in 1867; I didn't vote here that year; I voted in '68 for the first time.

Ques. 14. Do you know who you voted for for sec. of state last fall?—Ans. I want you to understand that I vote Democratic ticket. I can't remember every name on my ticket.

Ques. 15. Did you read your ticket?—Ans. Of course.

Ques. 16. You read it? How much of it did you read?—Ans. I read it maybe 2 or 3 times; but from that time it is too long; I am too old to remember; I can't tell now which names I voted.

Ques. 17. Ever served on juries in this county?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 18. Ever been elected or put in office?—Ans. No, sir; I don't want any office.

Ques. 19. You say that you live in Marion Township?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 20. How long have you lived there?—Ans. Since 18 years ago.

Ques. 21. What business do you follow?—Ans. Farming all the time. Doing nothing now.

Ques. 22. Who was with you when you went to get your papers?—Ans. Mr. Eliot.

Ques. 23. Where did you first apply for papers?—Ans. First, from Mr. Eliot; also, second, from Mr. Eliot.

Ques. 24. Who is Mr. Eliot?—Ans. He was judge at that time.

Ques. 25. How old were you when you came to the U. S.?—Ans. 35 years old.

Ques. 26. How old are you now?—Ans. 63.

Ques. 27. You can't mention any names on the ticket you voted, can you?—Ans. Well, I looked first time for Democrats, and looked all through.

Ques. 28. Do you know whether you voted for William H———?—Ans. Well, I don't know; I guess I voted for Frederick.

Ques. 29. Do you know who you voted for for sec. of state? Did you vote for John A. Hull?—Ans. I don't know that now; I knew the men, but I voted the Democratic ticket; I put on some Republican men, but the others, I don't know them.

Ques. 30. You don't know any of the State or Congressional officers?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 31. You didn't examine the tickets except as to township officers?—Ans. I look among the township officers, and looked for a good man. I didn't care whether it was Democrat or Republican.

Ques. 32. You didn't read your ticket except as to township officers?—Ans. Yes, sir; that is it.

Ques. 33. Can you swear to any of the names on the State ticket?—Ans. No, sir; I can't swear that.

Ques. 34. You can't swear to any ticket except as to township officers?—Ans. That is all; yes, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 35. You simply know that you vote the Democratic ticket, and when you go the polls to vote you get a straight Democratic ticket and vote it?

(Objection as leading.)

Ans. Yes, sir; except in township offices.

Ques. 36. Your brothers are Democrats?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 37. Did you ever vote for a Republican—any township Republican?—Ans. Yes, sir; I have.

Ques. 38. Did you vote for a Republican last fall?—Yes, sir; I did.

Ques. 34. How many Republican names were on that ticket that you know of?—Ans. 2 that I know of; for justice of the peace, one.

Ques. 35. There might have been more Republicans that you didn't know of?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 36. How do you know that that was a straight Democratic ticket, if there were Republicans on it?—Ans. I put 2 Republicans on myself.

Ques. 37. Who else did you put on besides these two?—Ans. Because I knew two men that suited me.

Ques. 38. You didn't put any names on for State officers?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 39. You didn't pay any attention to State ticket?—Ans. No, sir; except these two township officers.

Ques. 40. You didn't read that part of the ticket at all?—Ans. No, sir; I don't remember the names on it.

Ques. 41. Now, is not the reason that it is straight Democratic ticket, because it read Democratic ticket on top?—Ans. Yes, sir; that is the reason. I saw Democratic ticket on top.

Ques. 42. (Redirect.) You never knew the Democratic ticket to lie? If it says Democratic ticket on top, it is generally Democratic ticket?—Ans. If I wanted Democratic ticket I could get it.

Ques. 30. Who was there peddling tickets that day?—Ans. Mr. Rowe gave out tickets.
Ques. 31. Did John Garry peddle tickets?—Ans. I expect so.
Ques. 32. Did Mr. Rowe give him a ticket?—Ans. I don't know; what is the name?
Ques. 33. Joseph Lawrence.—Ans. I don't know a man by that name; I was thinking of another man.
Ques. 34. This man Joseph Lawrence was a little, short man that worked for T—— on his farm; do you know who I mean?—Ans. Yes, sir; I know who you mean.
Ques. 35. Did you see him at the election?—Ans. I saw a man who was said to be working there.
Ques. 36. Did you understand his name to be Joseph Lawrence?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 37. What did you understand his name to be?—Ans. I don't know.
Ques. 38. Well, did you give that little fellow a ticket that day?—Ans. Yes, sir; I gave him one.
Ques. 39. What kind did you give him?—Ans. I don't know; but I am sure I had both kinds.
Ques. 40. What kind do you think?—Ans. Democratic ticket.
Ques. 41. Are you Democratic?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 42. If he were willing to vote the Democratic, you gave him that?—Ans. He was outside.
Ques. 43. You remember having part of the State ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir; I remember that little short man that was there; I don't want to say that man was Joseph Lawrence.
Ques. 44. You gave him a Democratic ticket?—Ans. I suppose that it was a Democratic ticket.
Ques. 45. That was at the polls?—Ans. No, sir; on the street.

Ques. 46. He was going towards the polls?—Ans. He was going that way.
Ques. 47. He took the ticket you gave him, did he?—Ans. Yes, sir; he took it.

Ques. 1. Where did you reside Nov., '82?—Ans. In Fairfax Township.
Ques. 2. Are you acquainted with Henry F——?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. Do Joseph Lawrence?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 4. Is he the man working for Henry F—— Nov. last?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 5. Did you see at the polls?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 6. I will ask you if you know what time this man came into Linn Co.?
(Objection: Incompetent, irrelevant.)
Ans. He said to me——
(Objection: Hearsay.)
Ans. Well, he said to me that he came from Solon to Fairfax Township, Linn Co., 26th last Oct.
Ques. 7. Now, I believe you said there that Solon is in Johnson Co.?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 8. You may state whether or not you ever heard Mr. Lawrence or any other person say how he voted.
(Objection by contestant as hearsay and immaterial, incompetent.)
Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 9. Now, you may state whether you heard Mr. Lawrence or any other person say how he voted?—Ans. No, sir; I never Lawrence say, but I have heard others say.
Ques. 10. State who and what they said?—Ans. Henry F—— said——
(Objection: Hearsay.)
said to me that Lawrence told him that he voted the straight Democratic ticket.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 11. You had a conversation with Henry F——; when was it?—Ans. I think on or about the 14th of Feb.
Ques. 12. How long was that after the election?—Ans. Some considerable time; election was in Nov.
Ques. 13. How long did Mr. Lawrence say that he had lived in Solon?—Ans. Well, he didn't state to me how long he had lived in Solon.
Ques. 14. You don't know but what he had lived for some time in Linn Co., and lived a short time in Johnson Co.?—Ans. The question was asked in my presence only. He came to Linn Co., and the reply was made that he came from Solon in Oct.
Ques. 15. Was the question asked when he came to Linn Co., Fairfax Township?—Ans. No, sir; they say there that he was asked the question, "When did you come here?" He said, "The 26th of October."
Ques. 16. What business did this man follow?—Ans. He was employed on a farm.
Ques. 17. Do you know where his parents resided?—Ans. No, sir; I don't know that he had any.
Ques. 18. You don't know that he ever had any?—Ans. I suppose he had.
Ques. 19. Where is that man now?—A. I don't know; he has left the country as far as I know.
Ques. 20. Do you know where he worked last summer?—Ans. Only what he said himself.
Ques. 21. You don't know how long he had been in Solon?—Ans. No, sir; only so far as reported as by himself.
Ques. 22. Did you challenge his vote at the election?—Ans. It was challenged, but I didn't challenge it.

Ques. 23. Did he swear it in?—Ans. He didn't.
Ques. 24. Was it received?—Ans. Yes, sir; the question came up that he had not been here long enough.
Ques. 25. You don't know that he did vote at the Nov. election?—Ans. The records would show whether or not he did.
Ques. 26. You have no knowledge of your own as to what his politics are?—Ans. I know that he was working for the Democratic and I was working for the Republicans. The Democrats said that he had just been naturalized, no matter where he had resided; the judges were persuaded that that was correct law and good law. When I came the question was asked of me, and I said that he wasn't, but he had voted.
Ques. 27. How do you know that he had voted?—Ans. From the fact that there was a good deal of talk about it.
Ques. 28. You don't know whether he swore in his vote or not?—Ans. I know by repetition that he didn't.
Ques. 29. You were not present?—Ans. No, sir; not then.
Ques. 30. You didn't see him swear his vote in?—Ans. No, sir; if I had been present he would not have voted.
Ques. 31. You were judge of the election?—Ans. No. sir.
Ques. 32. Ho long were you acquainted with the man?—Ans. Only a casual acquaintance.
Ques. 33. How could you have kept him from voting?—Ans. By challenging his vote.
Ques. 34. Suppose he would have sworn it in?—Ans. I don't think he would have sworn in what was false.
Ques. 35. Do you think that he would have voted illegally; do you think that he was not a straight man?—Ans. Yes, sir; as others are.
Ques. 36. Is it not usual for a man not a voter to offer to vote?—Ans. Very often people vote ignorantly, not knowing that they are legal voters.
Ques. 37. You don't know whether this man ever resided out of Linn Co.?—Ans. Only from what he iuformed me.
Ques. 38. He didn't inform you except when he came to Fairfax?—Ans. That is all.
Ques. 39. He didn't inform you where he was born; where he had lived, and where he had spent his life?—Ans. He didn't inform me.
Ques. 40. Did you know that he was born in Bohemia?—Ans. No, sir; only from his language.
Ques. 41. Now, are there a great many born in this country who have the dialect of the Bohemians?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 42. Are there a great many Bohemians in this country?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 43. Do their children have the same dialect?—Ans. To some extent, I suppose.
Ques. 44. You were born in this country?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 45. Where you born?—Ans. In Scotland.
Ques. 46. How long have you been in the United States?—Ans. About 45 years.
Ques. 47. Before what court was you naturalized?—Ans. Before no court.
Ques. 48. Never naturalized?—Ans. No, sir; not personally.
Ques. 49. Now I will ask you if you voted at the Nov. election, 1882?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 50. Who did you vote for?—Ans. For the Republican candidates.
Ques. 51. Did you vote for James Wilson for Representative?—Ans. Yes, sir.

W. B. MCELROY, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn Co., on this 26th day of April, 1883, testifies as follows (M. P. Mills appearing on the part of the contestee, and T. Brown on the part of contestant):

(Objection; contestant objects to the testimony of the witness, for the reason that proper notice was not given of his residence.)

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. In Fairfax.
Ques. 2. Do you know Joseph Lawrence?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. Is he the same party that worked for Henry F——?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 4. Did you ever have any conversation with this Lawrence about the time he came to live in Linn Co.? If so, state it.—Ans. I have known the man ever since the 14th or 16th of Feb., but I had no conversation with him at all.
Ques. 5. Tell it in your own language.
(Contestant objects; hearsay.)
Ans. I saw him at Henry F——'s sale; I went to him for the purpose of finding out how long he had been in this county. It had been reported that he had been here but a short time. I said to him, "How long have you been in this county?" He said that he came the 26th day of Oct. I said "Not that long;" I struck up an argument. He said that he was never in Linn Co. until the 26th of Oct. He came from Solon to Linn Co.

Ques. 6. Did you know from him or from any person what ticket he voted on election-day?

(Contestant objects; hearsay, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

Ans. I couldn't say what ticket he voted.

Ques. 7. Did you hear it from him or from some one else?—Ans. Henry F—— came to me and said that he told him that he voted the straight Democratic ticket.

Ques. 8. At Fairfax, in this county?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 9. Where is this man Lawrence?—Ans. I understood by the constable that he had left the country, and could not be found.

Ques. 10. Where is Henry F——?—Ans. In Philadelphia.

Ques. 11. What are Henry F——'s politics?—Ans. Republican.

Ques. 12. And you are Republican?—Ans. Of course I am, sir.

Ques. 13. All you know about this man voting is what Henry F—— told you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 14. Did Henry F—— say he saw him vote?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 15. You don't know that Henry F—— saw you vote?—Ans. I think not.

Ques. 16. All you know about it is what Henry F—— told you?—Ans. That is all.

Ques. 17. You don't know but what Henry F—— made that objection to get a vote for Wilson?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 18. You don't know anything about this man except what you have heard?—Ans. Except what he stated to me.

Ques. 19. You only heard what he said, long after the election?—Ans. Yes, sir; it was in Feb.

Ques. 20. He told you then when he came to Linn Co.; where did he say he had been residing?—Ans. He said that he came to Solon; that he had never been to Linn County until the 26th of Oct.

Ques. 21. Did you ask him that question for the purpose of drawing how he had voted?—Ans. No, sir; we were not trying to find out how long he had been here.

Ques. 22. Did you attend the election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 23. Did you see that man there? Did you know all the hands in Henry F.'s employ?—Ans. I know some of them; this is the only hand he had then.

Ques. 24. Did you know that he hired men?—Ans. Not from that time.

Ques. 25. How often had you been at his place to see how many men he had?—Ans. I could not tell that. I go to Fairfax 2 or 3 times a week; sometimes not for a week or two.

Ques. 26. Had you been on F.'s place before that time to know how many men he had employed?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 27. Did you know how many men he had employed before that time?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 28. You don't know but what he had 3 or 4 men?—Ans. No, sir; that is the only man that I saw there.

Ques. 29. Did you see all the men that he had employed?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 30. What business does he follow?—Ans. Farm.

Ques. 31. Did you go over his farm?—Ans. I had to go around part of it to get to Fairfax.

Ques. 32. Were you ever there during the fall of '82 at the time that he was taking dinner?

Ques. 33. You don't know what men he employed before election?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 34. He may have had 3 or 4 men before election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. Now of what country are you a native of?—A. Of Bohemia.

Q. 4. Have you been naturalized; and if so, have you your papers with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 5. Present them to the commissioner for his inspection, please.
(Contestant objects. Incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial; also not the best evidence.)
(Papers presented show witness to the naturalization Dec. 7, '67, in the Linn County court, having common law jurisdiction, and a clerk and seal. Johnston Elliot, County judge and ex-officio clerk of State court, with the seal of the county court attached.)
Q. 6. What ticket did you vote last fall, Democratic or Republican?
(Contestant objects; improper.)
A. Democratic ticket.
Q. 7. Including Frederick, Democratic nominee for Congress?—A. That is something I never took notice of; I cannot tell.
Q. 8. Did you vote Democratic ticket, or deposit at the polls?—A. I cannot tell about that now.
Q. 9. It was Democratic ticket, was it, you voted?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 10. Did you alter it in any way?—A. No sir.
Q. 11. You voted a State Democratic ticket yourself?—A. I do not recollect.
Q. 12. You voted a straight Democratic, didn't you?—A. I cannot tell.
Q. 13. What is your best opinion?—A. Well, that is pretty hard to tell.
Q. 14. Was the name of a Republican on that ticket to your knowledge?—A. I guess not.
Q. 15. Then you voted the straight Democratic ticket, didn't you?—A. I am not sure; I do not know.
Q. 16. You didn't put any Republican names on the ticket, did you?—A. No. sir.
(Objection; leading.)
Q. 17. You intended to vote the Democratic ticket, did you?—A. I guess I did.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 4. Have you got your naturalization papers with you?—Ans. Yes, sir, I have.

Ques. 5. Please present them to the commissioner.

(Papers show that the witness was naturalized by the county court, on the 23rd of Oct., '68, and county court of Linn County, Iowa, being a common court of common law jurisdiction, having a seal of the county court attached.)

Ques. 6. What ticket did you vote last fall?—Ans. I always vote the straight Democratic ticket.

Ques. 7. Including Frederick for Congress?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 8. You have a discharge from the Army, have you?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 9. Please present it to the commissioner that he may take it down?—Ans. I did show it to him once.

Ques. 10. Produce it again.

(An honorable discharge from the U. S. Volunteer service in regular form, showing that he served 3 years, discharge dated 17 of Oct, '65.)

L. TURNER, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn County, on this 27th day of April, 1883, and examined before me, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

(Contestant objects to the testimony of this witness for the reason that proper notice of his residence was not given.)

Q. 1. You have been engaged in serving subpœnas in this county, have you?—A. Yes, sir.

(Also further objection that there is no pretension of this kind at all. Attorney for contestant refuses to appear in the taking of the testimony of the witness.)

Q. 2. Did you serve a subpœna on Joseph Conenen, of Marion, to appear here?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. In that subpœna did you read to him to bring his naturalization papers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 4. He was present when that was done?—A. I don't recollect; there were several there when I served the notice on him.

Q. 5. Where was it?—A. In his saloon.

Q. 6. What, if anything, did he do or say?—A. He wanted to know what it was for, &c.; also what they wanted him to bring naturalization papers for. I told him I didn't know, but that they did anyway; there would have been a local question about it. That, I said, that is all right; he went to the drawer and got them; he said that they had taken him through to the old country, and he knew they were right; in a few minutes afterwards Little and others came in, and Little tried to explain it to me that the papers were taken out before some court; that it was legal, because it was a court of record. They staid a few minutes after this talk, when the attorney left. He says: "We are left, these papers don't amount to anything; all I wish to know for whom he voted for Congress." Then Dahmes came along; they brought him in to act as interpreter. He was a little deaf, and he says: "Did you vote for Frederick?" "I did," says he, "and I am not afraid to have folks know it." Says he: "Mr. Dahmes is a straight Democrat, and he voted for Frederick."

Q. 7. Now I will ask you if you went after him again on Saturday?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. 8. Did you get him?—A. No, sir.

Q. 9. What did he do?—A. I could not subpœna him on the run.

Q. 10. He started to run away from you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. You could not catch him?—A. Yes, sir; I could call him back.

Q. 12. You went to get him?—A. Yes, sir.

C. S. GREEN, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, on this 27th day of Apr., 1883 (M. P. Mills appearing on the part of the contestee, and T. Brown on the part of the contestant), testifies as follows:

Ques. 1. Were you a resident and were you present at the Nov. election in Washington Township, held on the 7th Nov., 1883?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 2. Do you know George Pool?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. Did he vote at the State election?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 4. State, if you know, how he voted; whether from your personal knowledge or whether he told you how he voted, if he told you.

(Objection; incompetent, irrelevant, and hearsay.)

Ans. He told me that he voted for Mr. Frederick.

Ques. 5. Where was that?—Ans. At Center Point.

Ques. 6. Washington Township, this county.—Ans. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 7. Who is this George Pool?—Ans. He is out west now.

Ques. 7. You don't know anything more of him? He is not here?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 8. Do you know how many George Pool's there are in this county?—Ans. I don't know of any other one.

Ques. 9. You don't know but there is a dozen?—Ans. I don't know but there is.

Ques. 10. You didn't see his ticket?—Ans. No, sir; not until it was folded up.

Ques. 11. You don't know what names were on the ticket?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 12. You don't know what he testified to from what he told you?—Ans. It looks as if ———.

Ques. 13. Well, I ask you if you know any other way from what he told you?—Ans. I thought I knew how he voted.

Ques. 14. Do you know anything of it except what he told you?—Ans. No, sir; only what he told me.

Ques. 15. That is just exactly what I want to get.

H. A. SUTHERLAND, being produced and sworn before M. P. Mills, notary public for Linn County, on this 27th day of April, 1883, and examined before me, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and M. P. Mills on the part of contestee):

(Contestant objects to the testimony of this witness for the reason that proper notice of his residence was not given.)

Q. 1. Where did you reside in Nov. 7th, 1882?—A. At Marion.

Q. 2. Did you hold any office at that time; and if so, what?—A. I was township clerk in Marion Township.

Q. 3. I will ask you if you were present at the general election held on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. 4. Now you may state to the commissioner whether or not there was any considerable number of Republican ballots cast at that election with the name of B. T. Frederick on for Cougress?—A. If I can recollect right there were 4 tickets, as near as I can recollect, and straight Republican, Greenback ticket, and split tickets; Republican, except the name of B. T. Frederick was on for Congress.

Q. 5. Can you form any estimate with Frederick's name on for Congress?

(Contestant objects, not being the best evidence; tickets and the returns being the best evidence, which are required by law to be preserved.)

A. I should think, though of course I have no means of knowing except from the average majority of the township; I think that the average Republican majority of Marion Township was about 250, and Wilson had a majority of 33 in the township.

Q. 6. Then, according to that Mr. Frederick has some where in the neighborhood of 200 tickets?

(Objection; improper, suggestive.)

A. I cannot say whether they were smuggled, or how they were got in, but I know they were there; I know that.

Q. 7. About how many?—A. Probably 150, or 175 straight Republican tickets with Frederick's name on?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Q. 8. You have a pretty intelligen people up there, haven't you?—A. Yes, sir; they were considered so.

Q. 9. Over half of them could read and write?—A. I should think there is a very small number there in that township who are not able to read their ballot.

Q. 10. You don't think that a majority of your voters don't know who were on for Congress on the Republican ticket, do you?—A. Well, I hardly presume.

Q. 11. You think nearly all of them could tell; don't you think that Mr. Wilson's were extremely unpopular that threw him back so much?—A. I don't know that.

Q. 12. The returns of the election seem to indicate that, don't they?—A. They didn't to my mind indicate any unpopularity at all.

Q. 13. What was it the likely question?—A. I think that it had something to do with it.

Q. 14. You think that the question of prohibition had something to do with it?—A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. 15. You think that these men on account of that question, on account of that political issue, did not care to support Mr. Wilson?—A. I don't know whether it was Mr. Wilson, or whether they were sour over the result of the June election.

Q. 16. Was it because they desired to vote for a man that was opposed to prohibition?—A. Possibly; yes, sir.

Q. 17. And there would be enough of that class of men in the Republican party that would make considerable difference in the majority, if they made a point against a man on that account?—A. Possibly it might have had considerable effect; I have considered the matter; I have not considered the matter in that light very much; I suppose it had its influence.

Q. 18. As a Republican, you charge that change of your majority for Representative to that influence, don't you?—A. As I stated before, I think that it had some influence; as to how much, I am not prepared to say.

Q. 19. You didn't go around among the voters and discuss that?—A. No, sir.

Q. 20. It is pretty well known there were tickets there with Frederick's name on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 21. The morning of the election, it was known then the tickets were properly distributed all day?—A. I suppose so, I was in doors.

Q. 22. They were not distributed by Republicans?—A. I cannot say as to that.

Q. 23. Are you not satisfied that Republicans distributed these tickets?—A. No, to my personal knowledge.

Q. 24. I mean men recognized as leading men in the Republican party were working for Frederick?—A. I hear that made before; whether it was true or false, I don't know.

Q. 25. Don't you know that Carter Thompson, of that township, sympathizes with Frederick?—A. No, sir, I don't know that most likely, if he is to be believed, and I think that he is.

(Julius Morlart sworn by Mills as an interpreter.)

(Contestant objects to the testimony of the witness, for the reason that a proper notice was not given of the residence of the witness.)

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. In Cedar Rapids.

Ques. 2. Where did you vote last November election?—Ans. In this township.

Ques. 3. In what country were you born?—Ans. Old country, in Germany.

Ques. 4. Were you ever naturalized in this country, ever made a citizen with papers? Ask the witness when and where he got his naturalization papers?—Ans. He said that he got his first papers in the city of New York.

[Witness produces another paper in court.]

Ques. 6. You may now present your papers to the commissioner.

[Witness produces papers which show that the witness was naturalized Oct. 28th, 1868, by a county court of Linn Co., a court purporting to have common law jurisdiction and a clerk and seal. Signed by A. B. Dumont, county judge and ex officio, with the seal of the county court attached.]

Ques. 7. You may ask the witness now if he voted at the general election last November?—Ans. He said that he voted.

Ques. 8. Now ask him what ticket he votes, Democratic or Greenback?—Ans. Greenback.

Ques. 9. Ask him where he voted it?—Ans. Here in this hall or building.

Ques. 10. Ask him what ward he lived in?—Ans. On the south side of the corporation.

Ques. 11. Ask him for whom he voted for Congress?—Ans. He cannot tell.

Ques. 12. Ask him if anybody has spoken to him about what he was to testify to when he was subpœnaed here?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 13. Ask him if he did not vote a Democratic ticket last fall?—Ans. He says yes.

Ques. 14. Ask him if he voted that Democratic ticket straight, or scratched any names on it.—Ans. He says that he didn't scratch it any.

Ques. 15. Then did he vote the full Democratic ticket?—Ans. He says that he doesn't know.

Ques. 16. Ask him if he didn't generally vote the Democratic ticket?

(Contestant objects, leading and suggestive, also asking an opinion of the witness.)

Ans. He says that as a general thing he votes the Democratic ticket.

Ques. 17. Did he vote the Democratic ticket last fall?—Ans. I guess he doesn't understand the two questions thoroughly. He says that he doesn't know.

Ques. 18. Don't he know what is generally meant by the Democratic ticket, when it is written on top Democratic ticket?—Ans. He says that if he could see the ticket he could tell.

Ques. 19. Ask him if he saw the ticket that he voted last fall.—Ans. He says that he saw the ticket, but couldn't tell whether it was the Democratic ticket.

Ques. 20. Ask him if the words "Democratic ticket" were not on the heading of the ticket that he voted.

(Objection, leading.)

Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 21. Ask him if he voted that straight Democratic ticket.—Ans. He says that he doesn't know for certain.

Ques. 22. Ask him this: if he didn't come to the polls and take up a straight Democratic ticket and vote that ticket.

Q. 28. How long have you been in the United States?—A. 18 years.

Redirect:

Q. 29. You didn't get but one paper, did you?—A. No, sir; that is all.

Q. 30. When did you get it; last winter—last Feb.?—A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. 31. You got it about the last January term of court here, didn't you?—A. I believe that was when it was.

Q. 32. It was last winter was it, since last Nov.?—A. I cannot tell now.

Q. 33. Was it January 17th?—A. I believe it was, but I cannot tell.

Q. 34. You never had but one paper?—A. I guess I have had as many as 10 of them.

Q. 35. You got them here in the court-house?—A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination:

Q. 36. You say you don't know who you voted for?—A. No, sir; I cannot swear who I voted for; I was too old to learn to read when I came to this country.

Q. 37. Can you swear whether your ticket was absolutely Democratic or not?—A. That is the trouble with me, I can hardly read. Somebody gave it to me; everybody knows me in this town.

Redirect:

Q. 38. Who gave it to you?—A. I cannot tell that; everybody knows me; I have been so long here.

Recross-examination:

Q. 39. You can't say whether it was a Democratic or Republican ticket?—A. No, sir; 6 or 7 were there at the court-house.

Redirect:

Q. 40. Did you ever vote Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I believe I did.

Q. 41. When was it?—A. 4 years ago.

Q. 42. You are with the Democrats now; that is your party isn't it?—A. I believe most of them go that way.

Q. 43. You understood that you were voting for Frederick last fall?—A. I went by the court-house; they said you vote that ticket, I said all right, I will do so.

Q. 44. Who said so?—A. 6 or 7 came; one said you vote that ticket; I took one and voted it.

Q. 45. Was it Robinson?—A. I cannot say whether it was him or not.

Q. 46. You know Robinson?—A. Yes, sir; everybody knows me.

Q. 47. Didn't Robinson give you a ticket?—A. I cannot remember it now.

Q. 48. You supposed you were voting Democratic ticket?—A. I don't know who gave it to me.

Q. 49. Didn't you suppose you were voting Democratic ticket?—A. At that time may be I did.

Q. 50. And the man that gave it to you, was he a Democrat?—A. Well, I don't know.

Q. 51. He was peddling tickets, wasn't he?—A. I don't know whether it was Frederick's man or not.

Q. 52. Didn't Frederick speak to you about the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. 53. Didn't you intend to vote for Frederick; didn't you suppose you were voting for him at the time?—A. I cannot say about that.

Q. 54. That was what you intended to do was it?

(Objection, leading.)

(Contestant objects on the ground that the question is leading and suggestive.)

Ans. He said that he didn't know the difference between the two tickets, Democratic and Republican.

Ques. 1. Ask him if he would know the ticket headed Democratic ticket if he should see it.—Ans. He says that he can't tell for certain.

Ques. 2. Can he read?—Ans. He says a little, not very much.

Ques. 3. Could he read the words Democratic ticket if he see it on a ticket?—Ans. He says that he could.

Ques. 4. Were the words "Democratic ticket" on the ticket that he voted?—Ans. He says that he don't know.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 5. Ask the witness if he voted the Greenback ticket.—Ans. He says that he voted Greenback ticket.

Q. 1. Where were you born?—A. In Ireland.
Q. 2. Do you remember the date, or about the time that you got your papers in Linn County?—A. The first I ever got was in Ohio.
Q. 3. Well, I mean those you got here. Do you remember the date of the papers you got in this county?—A. No, sir.
Q. 4. You took out your first papers in this county, didn't you?—A. Yes, sir; when I first came here.
Q. 5. These are the first you have in this county?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 6. Since you took out these first papers have you ever taken out any other papers?—A. No, sir; not in this county.
Q. 7. Did you vote at the general election held last November?
BROWN. You are not obliged to state how you voted. Contestee must first prove that you are not a naturalized citizen before you are obliged to state.
Q. 8. Well, did you vote at the last election held in Nov. 7th, 1882, in this township?—A. Well, I don't remember that I did.
Q. 9. What ward do you live in?—A. In the 3rd ward.
Q. 10. As a matter of fact, don't you know that the poll-books of the 3rd ward shows you voted at the general election held in Nov., 1882?—A. I don't know whether they do or not.
Q. 11. Do you say now you didn't vote?—A. No, sir; I didn't say that I didn't vote.
Q. 12. Well, did you vote?—A. Well, sir, I didn't say, because I didn't think it was any man's business whether I voted for one man or for another man.
Q. 13. Well, will you answer the question or not?
BROWN. Witness is not obliged to tell.
A. I won't answer it.
Q. 14. Now, I want to ask you whether you voted at the general election held in this township on the 7th of Nov., 1882, whether you voted the Democratic ticket.
(Contestant objects; incompetent, immaterial, it not being particular whether he voted at all.)
A. I won't answer that; a man can vote any ticket he wants to, without telling his neighbors.
Q. 15. Do you refuse now to answer the other questions asked you in this contest?—A. I don't know anything about this contest; it doesn't interest me.
Q. 16. Do you refuse to answer the question?—A. Yes, sir; I do.

Cross-examination:

Q. 17. Did you get your citizens' papers in Iowa?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 18. Properly naturalized before the court?—A. Yes, sir; in Sandusky, Ohio.
Q. 19. Do you remember whereabouts you got them; in what court?—A. At Sandusky.
Q. 20. Did you get them in court?—A. Well, sir; I think so; I got them during the war.
Q. 21. You got two sets of papers there, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 22. Did you lose these papers?—A. In Illinois or Michigan.
Q. 23. Did you have; for you got papers?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. 24. You have only refused to answer this question, as to whom you voted for?—A. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Q. 25. Now, I want to ask you whether Frederick or Davenport have been talking to you about it—about what you are going to testify to to-day on the stand? Do you know Frederick?—A. No, sir.

Q. 26. Well, I refer to that gentleman sitting right there.—A. I don't believe I ever saw him.

Q. 27. Were you talking with them to-day?—A. I don't know that I have to tell you everybody that I talk to during the day.

Q. 28. Do you refuse to answer that question?—A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. 29. Now, I want to ask you if Frederick or Davenport, his attorney acting in this case, didn't he tell you at the bottom of the stairs that you were not obliged to answer this question?—A. I refuse to answer that question; but I do not take any interest in the case at all.

Q. 30. Didn't Frederick and Davenport also tell you at the foot of the stairs here, that if you refused to answer that question——do you refuse to answer that?—A. Yes, sir; I refuse to answer anything on the case.

Q. 31. Did Frederick pay you any money down in front of the city hall, where you are now sitting, to-day?—A. Well; I wish that he would.

Q. 32. Well; you may answer the question, or refuse to.—A. Well; I know I got no money from any man.

Q. 33. Now, what did he tell you at the foot of the stairs?—A. Well; I told you I refused to answer that question whether I have been talking or not to any man.

Q. 34. Did you say you were not talking to Frederick or Davenport down there?—A. Well; that is just what you have been asking me about.

Q. 35. Did you say you were not talking to them?—A. I refuse to answer that.

Q. 36. Has anybody been to see you about coming here to testify in this contest?—A. I came right here from work.

Q. 37. Do you refuse to answer that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 38. You were subpœnaed to come here and testify?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 39. You came here for the purpose of testifying, did you?—A. Testifying to what?

Q. 40. Whatever you know.—A. I don't know anything.

Q. 41. That is the question.—A. These; I don't know anything regarding this case.

Q. 42. Did you come here in obedience to that subpœna to testify?—A. Well, I am not a politician, anyway.

Q. 43. Well, did you come here in obedience to that subpœna served upon you for the purpose of testifying in this case?—A. Well, I had to come as long as I was subpœnaed to come here.

Q. 44. Well, did you come in obedience to that subpœna for the purpose of testifying in this case?—A. Well, I can't answer that any better than I did; I said I had to come here, as long as I was subpœnaed.

Ques. 1. What township do you live in?—Ans. Marion Township.
Ques. 2. Did you hold any office by election, by appointment, or otherwise?—Ans. By appointment.
Ques. 3. What office is that?—Ans. Deputy sheriff.
Ques. 4. Have you in your office the records formerly kept by the judge of Linn County?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 5. Have you examined these records to-day?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 6. Have you the memoranda of your examination?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 7. State to the reporter if John Mehan was naturalized before the county judge of Linn County; and if so, at what date?
(Objected to as not being best evidence; that the records must speak for themselves; that the examination would only be shown by the records, because it does not appear that John Mehan is the same John Mehan that testified; because it is irrelevant and immaterial.)
Ques. 8. Answer the question; have you examined this record to-day?—Ans. Yes, sir; I have examined it.
Ques. 9. State when John Mehan was naturalized.
(Objected to as not being best evidence; that the records must speak for themselves; that the examination is not sufficient, but would only be shown by the records, because it does not appear that John Mehan is the same John Mehan that testified; because it is irrelevant, immaterial).
Ans. John Mehan obtained same papers in '68, November 2, in the county court, as shown by the court records.
Ques. 10. I would ask you have you examined them as to John Coenen?
(Objected to as not being best evidence; that the records must speak for themselves; that the examination is not sufficient, but would only be shown by the records, because it does not appear that John Mehan is the same John Mehan that testified; because it is irrelevant immaterial.)
Ans. Yes, sir; John Coenen obtained his 2d papers October 22, '68.
Ques. 11. Have you made the same examination as to Jackson Gillmore?—Ans. Yes, sir.
(Contestant objects, as not being best evidence; that the records must speak for themselves; that the examination is not sufficient, but would only be shown by the records, because it does not appear that John Mehan is the same John Mehan that testified; because it is irrelevant, immaterial.)

Ques. 13. Did you make the same examination as to Mike Flaherty 2d March, '68, and the papers you have spoken of were all issued by the county court of Linn County?—Ans. Yes, sir; as shown by our records.
Ques. 14. Was this shown by the probate court record kept by him?
(Objected to because the records are the best evidence.)
Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 15. You have the care and custody of these records in your office?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination:

Ques. 16. Did you know John Mehan?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 17. Were you present when he was naturalized?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 18. Do you know whether John Mehan was the same John Mehan that was naturalized?—Ans, No, sir, I don't.
Ques. 19. By what law do you hold the naturalization papers except by the probate records?—Ans. By the State law, I suppose.
Ques. 20. Do you know of any other law by which you are custodian of any of the court records? Are you bound by any law?
(Mills says you needn't answer that.)
Ques. 21. Do you claim that you can hold any records except the probate records?—

Ans. Why, I suppose I do; under the laws of the State of Iowa that was the extent of all the county records.

Ques. 22. Have you any authority by which you can have any records except the probate records?—Ans. I can't do it.

Ques. 23. Will you take the advice of any counsel, or the counsel of the other side, and let them point it out?—Ans. The counsel on the other side refuses to do so.

Ques. 24. What advice does the counsel give you?—Ans. None.

Ques. 25. What did he say to you?—Ans. He said not to answer any question.

Ques. 26. Do you know of any authority by which you are the custodian of any records except the records of the probate court?—Ans. Personally I don't; no, sir.

Ques. 27. What book do you find the records in?—Ans. In the county court records of Linn County.

Ques. 28. Is there more than one book of naturalization there?—Ans. There is only one in the county court that I can find.

Ques. 29. Have you got your book here?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 30. What did it have on the back of it?—Ans. To my best recollection it is "County court record of Linn County."

Ques. 30. Is that signed and certified to by anybody?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 31. Have you anything to identify it that it is the county court record?—Ans. Only by the book itself.

Ques. 32. Simply marked what?—Ans. "A county court record."

Ques. 33. Does it not say "The record of the county court of Linn Co.?"—Ans. It says "The county court record," to the best of my recollection.

Ques. 34. Do you know Joseph Coemen?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 35. Do you know that he is the same person here referred to?—Ans. No, sir; I don't.

Ques. 36. Do you know Jackson Gillman?—Ans. No, sir; I don't.

Ques. 37. You don't know what Jackson Gillman that refers to?—Ans. No, sir; I don't.

Ques. 38. You don't know but what there might be half a dozen names of that name in the county?—Ans. I don't know, though there might be.

Ques. 39. Is there any naturalization papers issued by the circuit or district court?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 40. How many of the books have you examined for naturalization papers?—Ans. 7 or 8 books.

Ques. 41. Have you examined the naturalization papers of the district and circuit to-day?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 42. Did they contain the naturalization papers of a great many men?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 43. Can you remember the names of all the men that are on record?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 44. Do you know there is no name of Joseph Coeman on that record?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 45. Do you know there is no name of Joseph Coeman on these records?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 46. Do you know there is no name of John Meeham on these records?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 47. Is not the name of John Meeham spoken of the same as it reads here?—Ans. I don't know.

Ques. 48. What kind of a name?—Ans. I don't think I saw the name.

Ques. 49. Is not the spelling of English names sometimes different?—Ans. Yes, sir; I think so.

Ques. 50. Are not proper names differently spelled?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 51. You do not mean that the name of John Meeham is not there?—Ans. I don't find that in the district court.

Ques. 52. Are there a great many naturalization records that are not indexed?—Ans. I don't know.

Ques. 53. John Meeham may be on some of these records?—Ans. He may be; I don't know.

Ques. 54. Ten years prior where did the district court keep their naturalization papers?—Ans. In the district court, I suppose.

Ques. 55. Did you examine the county court record to see whether the district court, ten years prior to '68, kept their naturalization in the book of the records of the county court?—Ans. I examined the district and circuit court records and the county court records.

Ques. 56. Did you examine them ten years prior to '69?—Ans. I don't think I examined anything preceding '69.

Redirect:

Ques. 57. Is the book called the "county court record" kept in your office?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination:

Ques. 58. You don't know but there are other books kept in the auditor's office?—Ans. I don't think there are.

Ques. 59. You don't think there are any books in his office?—Ans. I don't think he has any.

Ques. 60. He doesn't have the county office records?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 61. All of the county offices?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 62. Does not the law make the auditor custodian of all the books except the county court records?—Ans. I don't know.

Deposition of witnesses produced before me, —— ——, a notary public and commissioner agreed upon to take testimony, and duly sworn before a notary public for Linn County, Iowa, on this 7th day of April, 1883, at Ely, in pursuance of the notice hereunto attached, in a proceeding pending before the House of Representatives of the United States of America, in a contested election for the office of Representative in Congress, in which proceeding Benj. T. Frederick is contestant and James Wilson contestee; Brown & Carney for contestant and M. P. Mills for contestee.

The following testimony was taken before me:

STATE OF IOWA,
Linn County, ss:

FRANK MISHAK, being produced and sworn before —— ——, notary public for Linn County, on this 7th day of April, 1883, and examined before me, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and W. H. Cone on the part of contestee):

(By interpreter D——.)

Q. 1. What is your age?—A. 58 years.
Q. 2. Where does he live?—A. In Johnson County, Iowa.
Q. 3. What township?—A. In Monroe Township first; now in Jefferson Township.
Q. 4. What is his business?—A. His business—he just lives at home.
Q. 5. Ask him if he voted at the election in Jefferson Township 7th of Nov., 1882?—A. Yes, sir; he voted, and has voted for 20 years.
Q. 6. What ticket did he vote?
BROWN. He need not tell unless he wants to.
(Contestee objects to the counsel instructing the witness to that effect.)
A. He says that he voted several kinds.
Q. 7. What ticket did you vote in Nov., 1882?
BROWN. You need not answer that unless you wish to.
A. Yes, sir; he says he voted.
Q. 8. What ticket did he vote?—A. He says that he doesn't have to tell.
Q. 9. Tell him he must answer; otherwise he will be subject to penalty.
BROWN. Inform him otherwise.
Q. 10. Ask him where he was born; what place, and in what country.—A. In Bohemia.
Q. 11. When did he come to the United States?—A. In 1856.
Q. 12. Ask him if he has citizen's papers.—A. Yes, sir; he has.
Q. 13. Tell him to show these papers to the commissioner.—A. He says that he wants his pay; he only received 75 cents.
Q. 14. How far do you live from here?—A. 5 miles and a half.
(Witness produces papers.)
Q. 15. Where did you obtain these papers?—A. At the court-house.
Q. 16. Where; what town?—A. Iowa City.
Q. 17. Ask him if this is his naturalization paper?—A. He says it is.
(The same certificate introduced in evidence the same as those introduced in Iowa City, issued on the 12th of October, 1863, by the county court of Johnson County, Iowa, George W. McCleary, Frank Mishak, a native of Bohemia, became a citizen of the United States, by applying to the Johnson County district court to be admitted as a citizen, and took the oath that he had renounced all allegiance to Frances Joseph, Emperor of Austria; that it appeared to this county court Joseph Hedletchker, signed George W. McCleary, county judge, 12th of October, 1863, 5-cent revenue stamp on it, with the seal of Johnson County, Iowa.)
Q. 18. Ask him what ticket he voted at the November election?
(Brown says that he must not answer it.)
(Wilson says that his paper has been proven illegal hence he must answer the question.)

Q. 19. Ask him if he voted Democratic ticket in Nov., 1882, in Jefferson Township?—A. He says that he doesn't have to answer it.

Q. 20. Tell him he must answer the question?

(Commissioner informs the witness that the attorneys claim this paper is not good, and that if he doesn't answer the question he is subject to punishment for contempt.)

A. He said that nobody asked him how he voted; he asked nobody how they voted, and that it will not be necessary to answer it.

Q. 21. Ask him if any one told him not to testify?—A. He says that he will never ask anybody, and he didn't want anybody to ask him.

Q. 22. Ask him whether or not anybody told him not to answer the questions?—A. No, sir; he says no one told him.

Q. 23. Ask him who he talked with since he came to town this morning?—A. Nobody.

Q. 24. Ask him what party he belongs to?—A. He says that he voted Republican ticket; Democrat ticket, and all kinds.

Q. 25. Ask him what ticket he voted last fall?—A. He says that he will not say.

Q. 26. Ask the witness if he refuses to answer the questions because Mr. Brown, counsel on the other side, instructed him not to?

(BROWN. I said that it was a personal privilege of his, and that he can do as he likes about it.)

Q. 27. Ask him if he absolutely refuses to answer how he voted last fall?—A. No, sir; he says that he will not answer.

Q. 28. Why does he refuse to answer?—A. Because he says that he never asks anybody how he voted.

Q. 29. Ask him if he doesn't recognize the right of the court to inquire after the truth?—A. He says that he doesn't do anything against the law.

Q. 30. Ask him if he has been sworn to testify to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, before the notary public of Linn County, Iowa?—A. He says that he has answered all the questions that have been propounded to him.

Q. 31. Ask him if he has answered all the questions that have been propounded to him?—A. He says that nobody asked him whether he voted Republican or Democratic ticket.

Q. 32. Did you vote the Democratic or Republican ticket?—A. He says that he will not answer.

Q. 33. Ask him, if when he refuses to answer whether he voted Democratic ticket or not, whether he is testifying to the truth?—A. He says that he don't think you have any right to make him answer that question.

Q. 34. Tell the witness in case he still refuses to answer the question as to whether or not he voted Democratic ticket in Nov. 1882, he must go to Washington City at his own expense.

BROWN. Tell him there is no such law as that at all; that they can't take him to Washington at his own expense, and that Mr. Frederick will see him through with it.

Q. 35. Now, do you still refuse to answer the question?—A. He says that he has not voted the Democratic or Republican ticket, but a mixed ticket.

Q. 36. When did he vote the mixed ticket?—A. He says at last fall election he did.

Q. 37. What ticket did you use, Democratic or Republican?—A. A Democratic ticket, but that Republicans were forcing this on him.

Q. 38. What Republicans?—A. Graham, and some others.

Q. 39. Ask him if he scratched the Congressman off of the Democratic ticket?—A. He says no, that he didn't scratch it off.

Q. 40. Ask him again if he scratched it off, whether he scratched off B. T. Frederick from his ticket?—A. He says that he didn't know, that he can't read English.

Q. 41. Ask him if the name at the head of the ticket was marked off?—A. He says that he doesn't remember.

Q. 42. Ask him if he marked any off?—A. He says that he struck off one.

Q. 43. Ask him what one that was?—A. He says that it was a big man in the city.

Cross-examination.

Q. 44. Did you know that Mr. Wilson's name was on the ticket at all?—A. He says that he doesn't know anything about it.

COPY OF THE NATURALIZATION PAPERS.

U. S. OF AMERICA,
State Iowa, Johnson County, ss :

Certificate of naturalization.

Be it remembered that the term of the county court [contestant objects as not properly certified to], holden in and for the said county and State of Iowa, on the 7th day of Oct., in the year of our Lord, 1861, was before the honorable Judge McCleary, sole presiding judge and ex-officio clerk of said court, one John Hoher, of a native Berlin, at present a resident of this State, brought in open court and makes application to be admitted to become a citizen of the U. S., and it appearing to the satisfaction of the court, that he had declared and agreed before the Johnson County court, a court of record having common law jurisdiction, and issing a seal, two years at least before his admission, that he had declared his intention to become a citizen of the U. S., and to renounce all allegiance to any foreign prince, state, or sovereignty whatsoever, and particularly to Maxmillian, King of Germany, of whom he was heretofore a subject, and said applicant having declared upon oath, before the court, that he will support the Constitution of the U. S., and that he does absolutely abjure all allegiance to any foreign prince, state, or sovereignty, whatsoever, and particularly to Maxmillian, King of Germany, to whom he was a subject. The court being satisfied by the testimony of Mr. Charles Schicher, that said applicant has resided in the U. S. 5 years next Apr. preceding his admission, without being during said 5 years out of the Territory of the U. S., and within this State at least 1 year; and it further appearing to the satisfaction of this court, that during said time he has behaved as a man of good moral character; attached to the principles of the Constitution of the U. S., and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same: Therefore the court admitted the said applicant to become a citizen of the U. S.

In testimony whereof I, George W. McCleary, county judge and ex-officio clerk of the aforesaid county, have hereto affixed my hand and seal in said county, State of Iowa, on the 7th day of Oct., 1861.

[The seal of Johnson County, Iowa.] GEORGE McCLEARY, County Judge.

Ques. 20. Were you sworn to renounce all allegiance to Maxmillian; you took the oath of allegiance to the U. S., and to become a good citizen of the U. S., did you not?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 21 That was done in court?—Ans. I got it in the court-house.

Ques. 22. You got it before the judge when he was holding court?—Ans. I said there was no court.

Ques. 23. How did you know there was no court?—Ans. I was in the court-house and that man that made out my papers was in his office.

Ques. 24. You didn't know whether that was the court?—Ans. It was in the court-house.

Ques. 25. Did he naturalize anybody else there?—Ans. There was nobody else there except that other man.

Ques. 26. That other man was sworn, was he not?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 27. He testified?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 28. You say that you voted a Democratic ticket?—Ans. Yes, sir.

JAMES BARRY, being produced and sworn before Milton Remley, notary public for Johnson, on this 1st day of May, '83, testifies as follows (Milton Remley appearing on the part of contestee, and T. Brown on the part of contestant):

Ques. 1. Where do you live?—Ans. In Oxford Township.
Ques. 2. Did you vote in the Nov. election, 82?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 3. What ticket did you vote?—Ans. Well, I don't know whether that is a fair question to be put to me.
Ques. 4. For whom did you vote for Congress?—Ans. I don't think they have any business to ask me any such question, and I don't think that I shall answer it.
Ques. 5. The law provides a penalty if you refuse to answer it.—Ans. Well, if the law provides a penalty, I will go to jail first.
Ques. 6. Where were you born?—Ans. In Ireland.
Ques. 7. Where were you naturalized?—Ans. I got my first papers in New Haven, and my second in Iowa City.
Ques. 8. In what court?—Ans. Some of these courts, I don't know which.
Ques. 9. Have you your papers with you?—Ans. No, sir; I lost them; I lost them years ago.
Ques. 10. Can you remember in what court you were naturalized in before?—Ans. I don't know, but Farry was a prominent man, everybody knew him, and he staid in the court house while I got my papers.
Ques. 11. Can you tell what court that was?—Ans. I can't tell whether it was Co., circuit, or district court; I can't tell which.
Ques. 12. Now answer my question. Was it the Co. court that you were naturalized in?—Ans. I don't know.
Ques. 13. Before what judge?—Ans. I don't know.
Ques. 14. Did you know Judge McCleary?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 15. Where was it you were naturalized?—Ans. I believe in the old court house; probably they were at work on the new court-house.

Ques. 16. Who was present?—Ans. Myself.
Ques. 17. Who else?—Ans. I don't know.
Ques. 18. Where did the judge sit?—Ans. I think the judge sat in a chair, in the upper part of the room.
Ques. 19. By a table?—Ans. Yes, sir; I think it was. I know I got my papers. I brought them up here and presented them to the judges of election, and they said they said they were good, and I have been voting ever since.
Ques. 20. Where did the judge, sit on a raised platform?—Ans. I don't know; it was so long ago.
Ques. 21. Was the sheriff present?—Ans. If he was I didn't know him; he was a stranger.
Ques. 22. You didn't see any jury?—Ans. No, sir; there was no jury there.
Ques. 23. Was it in the county judge's office?—Ans. I can't tell whether it was in the court-room or office; it was in the court-house, though.
Ques. 24. Did you vote the Democratic ticket last fall?—Ans. I told you that wasn't anybody's business. Sometimes I vote the Democratic ticket, and sometimes some other ticket.
Ques. 25. Who did you vote for for Congress?—Ans. I don't think it is anybody's business, as long as I vote.
Ques. 26. Do you refuse to tell who you voted for for Congress last fall?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 27. Has anyone seen you about refusing to answer?—Ans. No, sir; they have not.
Ques. 28. Did Mr. Frederick see you?—Ans. I don't think that I ever saw him.
Ques. 29. Did Mr. Brown?—Ans. I didn't see him before.
Ques. 30. Did anybody see you, telling you you need not answer?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 31. Did anybody see you yesterday?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't know who was to be here.
Ques. 32. Why do you refuse to answer?—Ans. Because I think it is my business to refuse to answer.
Ques. 33. Have you taken any counsel about it?—Ans. I didn't think I would have to.
Ques. 34. No one has told you not to answer?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 35. Did anyone tell you you didn't have to answer?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 36. The law of the U. S. requires that you should tell the truth, the whole truth, and you have taken the oath to do that, and I would rather give you one of my cows rather than to prosecute you; don't you think that you had better tell?—Ans. No, sir; you can keep your cow.
Ques. 37. Don't you think you had better answer?—Ans. I don't think I had.
Ques. 38. Don't you think we are law-abiding citizens?——Ans. Yes, sir; so am I.
Ques. 39. If you voted for Wilson, say it out, and there will be no offense; if you voted for Platner, say it out.—Ans. I had been reading the papers, and I voted for an honest man.
Ques. 40. Who did you think was the honest man; was it Platner, the Greenback candidate?—Ans. That is nobody's business.
Ques. 41. Did you vote for Wilson, the Republican candidate?—Ans. That's nobody's business, either.
Ques. 42. If you voted for Frederick you need not be ashamed to say so.—Ans. That is all right.
Ques. 43. To what party do you belong?—Ans. To the white party, because I don't think I belong to the "nigger party."
Ques. 44. Do you belong to the Democratic party?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 45. And you voted that ticket?—Ans. That is nobody's business.

Ques. 5. Did you vote at the last election in Nov., '82?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 6. Who did you vote for?—Ans. I keep that to myself.

Ques. 7. What candidate for Congress did you vote for?—Ans. That is no use to explain.

(Brown objects as a needless question.)

(Remley objects to the objection.)

(Brown—Not shown that that man is a voter.)

Ques. 8. What ticket did you vote?—Ans. You asked me that before; that is my own business.

Ques. 9. Do you refuse to state what ticket you voted?—Ans. I keep that to myself.

Ques. 10. Did you vote for Frederick for Congress?

(BROWN. Objected to as a privileged question until it is shown that he has a right to vote.

(Remley objects to the objection, as instructing the witness.)

Ques. 11. Now will you answer the question whether you voted for Frederick or not?—Ans. I don't know.

Ques. 12. Did you vote the Democratic, Republican, or Greenback ticket?

(Objection, as it is a privileged question.)

Ans. I think a man can do as he pleases when he goes to the polls.

Ques. 13. Yes, sir; but he has to tell what he knows on the witness stand?—Ans. I believe there is no need of stating who I voted for.

Ques. 14. You are not showing how you voted?—Ans. Not a bit of it.

Ques. 15. But it doesn't do you any harm?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 16. Has anybody talked to you about this matter before?—Ans. No, sir; I go right ahead anyway.

Ques. 17. Has any one been to see you?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 18. Can you tell whether Frederick's name was on your ticket or not?—Ans. I don't know whether it was or not; I cannot tell.

Certificate of naturalization.

Be it remembered, that at a term of the county court holden in and for said county, on the 22nd day of Oct., 1860, was presentthe honorable G. W. McCleary, sole presiding judge and ex-officio of the said court, Thomas O'Rouke, a native of Ireland, and at present residing in the said State, appeared in open court and made application to become a citizen of the U. S. And it appearing to the satisfaction of the court that he has declared, on oath, before the Albany County court, of N. Y., a court of record, having common law and jurisdiction, and using a seal, two years at least before he declared that it was his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the U. S., and to renounce all allegiance to any State whatever, and particularly to the Queen of Great Britain, of whom he was heretofore a subject, the said applicant having declared, upon oath, that he would support the Constitution of the U. S., and renounce all allegiance to every foreign prince, and particularly to the Queen of Great Britain, of whom he was a subject, the court being satisfied by the testimony of Eldon O'Rouke that said applicant had resided for a term of 5 years, and during that time he had not been out of the territory of the U. S., and within this State one year at least. And it having appeared to the satisfaction of this court that during this time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the U. S., and well-disposed to the good order and happiness of the same, thereupon the court admitted said applicant to become a citizen of the U. S.

In testimony whereof I, S. Bachelor, have hereunto set my hand, and affixed the seal, in Iowa City, this 27th day of October, 1860.

S. BACHELOR, Clerk,

JOSEPH SCHONBORN, being produced and sworn before Milton Remley, a notary public for Johnson County, on this 1st day of May, 1883, and examined before me, testifies as follows (T. Brown appearing on the part of contestant, and Milton Remley on the part of contestee):

Q. 1. Where do you live; what county, township, and State?—A. Oxford, Johnson County, Iowa.

Q. 2. Where were you born?—A. In Hungaria.

Q. 3. Did you vote at the last election?—A. I have voted for 21 years.

Q. 4. Did you vote at last November election, 1882?—A. Well, I have voted 21 years, every year; that is, at all the fall elections; school elections, besides.

Q. 5. Did you vote for candidate for Congress at last election?

(Objection; privileged question.)

(Objection to the objection.)

A. I voted for all them on the ticket.

Q. 6. What ticket did you vote?

(Objection.)

A. To my best knowledge I could not tell since, I am a Democrat; I generally split the ticket.

Q. 7. Did you vote the Democratic ticket last fall?—A. Part of the way.

Q. 8. What blank did you use; the Democratic blank?—A. I don't recollect which.

Q. 9. I understood you to say you voted the Democratic ticket?—A. Part of it.

Q. 10. Was the name of Frederick on the ticket, or Wilson?—A. On the ticket I voted? I could not tell.

Q. 11. What is your best recollection?—A. I could not tell, whether for Frederick or Wilson.

Q. 12. Have you any recollection on the subject at all?—A. Well, I don't know what you mean.

Q. 13. Have you any impression about it?—A. If I did I would say it.

Q. 14. Do you know who you intended to vote for?—A. It is this way with me; I never climb a hill until I get there; I make my mind when I get there to do as I think best.

Q. 15. Can't you tell us who gave you the ticket, when you got at the polls?—A. I don't recollect; I know both parties gave me tickets, but I don't know which one.

Q. 16. You had both tickets, Democratic and Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 17. Can you tell what ticket you voted?—A. No, sir; I could not tell.

Q. 18. You are a Democrat, are you?—A. Partly; yes, sir.

Q. 19. Were there any scratches on the ticket you voted; anything written on it, or was it all printed?—A. To my knowledge, it was all printed.

Q. 20. On the ticket you voted, was there any printing scratched off, and anything written in?—A. Yes, sir; there was some scratching, some printing.

Q. 21. Was that on the county ticket or State ticket?—A. I don't recollect on which.

Q. 22. Was the name scratched?—A. That I don't recollect; I think the whole name was scratched, if I am right.

Q. 23. What names were scratched? I mean the name of the first man that was on the ticket?—A. I don't recollect.

Q. 24. Can you say whether it was a Democratic ticket or not? What did you see at the top of the ticket?—A. I could not say; I had both.

Q. 25. Well, the one you cast?—A. I don't recollect.

Q. 26. Don't you recollect what was on the top of the ticket you voted? What ticket had you intended to vote; the one that had Democratic or Republican on the top?—A. I don't make up my mind what I shall vote like some persons; when I get to the voting place I soon have my mind made up.

Q. 27. Can you recollect whether the ticket you voted was Democratic or Republican?—A. I don't recollect; no, sir.

Q. 28. Do you know which one you intended to vote?

(Objection, as having been asked 5 or 6 times.)

A. Well, to tell the truth of that, sometimes I vote the best, and vote for Frederick, and sometimes for Wilson, and sometime before I voted I could not tell.

Q. 29. Do you mean you didn't recollect, or don't want to tell?—A. Did you ever find me out a liar?

Q. 30. No, sir; the question is whether you remember or don't want to tell?—A. I don't remember; you know my business; I may not. Some of them said it was best for some to go, and some for another to go.

Q. 31. Did you deposit the ticket yourself the way you wanted to vote?—A. I generally do my own handwriting.

Q. 32. Did you last fall?—A. I think I did.

Q. 33. Have you said that you did not know who you got your ticket of?—A. No, sir; I don't. I got it of different persons.

Q. 34. Which ticket did you fix?—A. I had both.

Q 35. But you didn't vote both; which one did you fix?—A. I don't know; I dont recollect.

Q. 36. Did any one see your ticket?—A. Not to my knowledge. I think it is a secret, not anybody's business; therefore I didn't show my ticket to everybody.

Q. 37. How long were you at the polls?—A. That I don't know.

Q. 38. What time did you get there?—A. I don't recollect.

Q. 39. Who was with you?—A. 5 or 6.

Q. 40. How long have you been in the United States?—A. 26 years.

Q. 41. How old are you?—A. 57.

Q. 42. Have you got a family?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 43. What time do you remember it was; afternoon or the evening?—A. Afternoon, I think.

Q. 44. How long were you there? You are a business man, and therefore didn't stay very long?—A. I went alone.

Q. 45. Then you had a Democratic ticket and a Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. 46. And you took one of them and fixed it to suit yourself; and, when you were voting it, you were under the impression that it was a Democratic, or Republican ticket?—A. Well, I didn't know.

Q. 47. What ticket do you usually vote?—A. I voted for Wilson the first time, sure.

Q. 48. 10 years ago?—A. I don't remember how long ago.

Q. 49. Now you are a Democrat, but didn't vote straight?—A. Yes, sir; I am a Democrat; but I didn't have to vote straight ticket. I generally vote the Democratic ticket.

Q. 50. You don't remember personally who was on for supreme judge, or anything of the other gentlemen's names that were on the ticket?—A. I don't know that I do.

Q. 51. Do you know what men you voted for?—A. Just what men I think is best.

Q. 52. Were they men that you know?—A. I don't know Frederick.

Q. 53. Then, when you vote the straight ticket, you first find out who the men are?—A. Just as my knowledge tells me.

Q. 54. At one time you vote the straight Republican ticket, and, when you vote the Democratic ticket, you fix it to suit you? Do you remember of scratching Frederick's name off?—A. I have no recollection of scratching off any name.

Q. 55. Were there printed mixed tickets at your election?—A. I don't remember.

Q. 56. You had to write them, didn't you?—A. If necessary I did; yes, sir.

Q. 57. You say you have no recollection of scratching out Frederick?—A. No, sir.

Q. 58. But you have been supporting the Democratic party and voting their ticket? You put such names on the ticket that you vote?—A. Yes, sir; I put such names as I want on the ticket I vote.

Q. 59. You have given us to understand you are a Democrat?—A. I am more a Democrat than I am a Republican.

Q. 60. But you put on the Republican names that suit you?—A. I may do so.

Q. 61. Did you do that last fall?—A. I suppose so.

Q. 62. When you voted your ticket last fall, you have no recollection of scratching out Frederick's name?—A. I have no recollection about him; I don't know whether I voted for Frederick or Wilson.

Q. 63. If Frederick's name was printed on that ticket, you voted for him?—A. I don't know which ticket I voted.

Q. 64. You know you belong to the Democratic party, and you know you voted; at least you are a Democrat?—A. I didn't say I voted the Democratic ticket; I scratched those names that didn't suit me.

Q. 65. But you have to take some ticket to do that?—A. I had to take one or the other to do that.

Q. 66. Where were you naturalized?—A. In Iowa City.

(Witness produces papers in court.)

Q. 67. You have been talking with Mr. Brown?—A. I am acquainted with Mr. Brown.

(Certificate of naturalization, Iowa City, Joseph Schonborn, by G. W. McCleary, county judge, on the 25th day of Sept., 1863, with the seal of Johnson County, Iowa, stating that he announces all allegiance to Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria.)

Cross-examination:

Q. 68. You don't remember scratching Mr. Wilson's name off, do you?—A. I have no recollection.

Q. 69. You have voted for one or the other?—A. Yes, sir.

Ques. 5. When did you come to Iowa?—Ans. I have been here 13 years last spring.
Ques. 6. Have you got your papers with you?—Ans. I haven't got them. I came here and my family was in N. Y. State, and they mislaid them.
Ques. 7. Is there any other John Scanlon?—Ans. No, sir; there is not.
Ques. 8. Do you know of any John Scanlon?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 9. How many papers did you get?—Ans. I got two.
Ques. 10. And they were lost in N. Y.?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 11. Before what court did you get them?—Ans. In the city of Hudson.
Ques. 12. Was it a police court?—A. It was like it is in Iowa City.
Ques. 13. Did they have judge and clerk?—Ans. I had to get my name filed and had to get a lawyer that knew me; his name is Snyder, and he swore that he had known me for years.
Ques. 14. Was there a jury?—Ans. I don't know.
Ques. 15. Did the judge sign the papers himself?—Ans. No, sir; he didn't; every citizen had to go there to the court-house, and he took their names down and swore them. I didn't go before the judge at all, but I had to have a citizen with me that knew me for 5 years.
Ques. 16. That is where you got your last papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 17. Now the last time that you got your papers was in court?—Ans. No, sir.
Ques. 18. Was it before the judge and clerk?—Ans. Just before the clerk.
Ques. 19. You were not sworn before the judge the last time?—Ans. No, sir; he said that I wouldn't need to be sworn but once before him. It was 2 years before I got my second papers.
Ques. 20. Did the clerk give you a certificate?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 21. The last time you gave up your first papers?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't. Every man should have two papers, and then he can be a citizen.
Ques. 22. Now, then, how old were you when you came here?—Ans. 21 years of age.
Ques. 23. How long had you been here when you got first papers?—Ans. I can't give you the date; but the first fall that I voted was when Lincoln and George B. McClellan were running for Pres. That was the first time that I went to the polls to vote.
Ques. 24. When did you come to this country?—Ans. In '52. I was here a good many years before I applied for my papers.
Ques. 25. Did you vote at the last election?—Ans. Yes, sir; I did.
Ques. 26. What ticket?—Ans. Democratic.
Ques. 27. The straight Democratic ticket?—Ans. The straight Democratic ticket.
Ques. 28. Did you vote for the Democratic nominee for Congress?—Ans. I did.

Ques. 32. Was there two years between the papers?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 33. Didn't you get a lawyer the last time to get your papers?—Ans. No, sir; they said that I would have to have a citizen that would swear that I had been here 5 years.
Ques. 34. He swore that he had known you?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 35. And you took the oath of allegiance?—Ans. I did.
Ques. 36. Where was that?—Ans. In the court-house in N. Y.

Redirect:

Ques. 37. You say that you got the paper before the judge?—Ans. Yes, sir; excuse me, it was the mayor.
Ques. 38. You got your second papers from the mayor?—Ans. No, sir; I didn't. I had to go before the mayor with man, and the last time I had one of the citizens with me.
Ques. 39. Before whom did you go last time?—Ans. The clerk of the court.
Ques. 40. Was there any judge there?—Ans. No, sir; not that I know of, but I know there was a clerk, and he gave me my papers.

Ques. 41. The clerk was the one that examined you?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 42. He examined your witnesses?—Ans. Yes, sir; and swore them.

Recross-examination:

Ques. 43. It was in open court?—Ans. Yes, sir; in one of the best court-houses that I ever knew.

Redirect:

Ques. 44. You say that it was in open court and that there was no judge there?—Ans. I don't know; there might have been.
Ques. 45. What do you mean by the open court?—Ans. Where they try cases.
Ques. 46. You mean to say that the court-house was open?—Ans. The doors were open when I went in, and they asked me a dozen questions.
Ques. 47. Did yon say that there was a judge there?—Ans. I said that it was court-house like you have here in Iowa City.
Ques. 48. Were they trying cases when you were there?—Ans. They might have been, for all I know, in a different part of the house.
Ques. 49. You were only in the clerk's office?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 50. You didn't go into the court-room?—Ans. I don't know, but it was a court-house.

Recross-examination:

Ques. 51. You took a citizen with you and he was sworn?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 52. Were there any other parties there?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 53. And you understood that there was a court going on?—Ans. Yes, sir; I know it was a court-house in the city of Hudson.
Ques. 54. Was it where people get naturalized?—Ans. Yes, sir; you can't get naturalized in any other part of the city.
Ques. 55. And you understood that it was at court that they naturalized men, and that there might have been a judge there?—Ans. There might have been.
Ques. 56. Was your papers certified to by the supreme court, or by the county court?—Ans. County court.
Ques. 57. County court in the State of N. Y.?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 58. Court held at the county seat?—Ans. Yes, sir.
Ques. 59. Did they have a seal on?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 60. Was it the clerk that asked you questions and examined you men?—Ans. I couldn't tell you if I tried whether it was the clerk or the lawyer, but it was the man that done business there.

STEPHEN BRADLEY, Iowa City, Iowa, recalled on the part of contestee, testifies as follows:

Ques. 1. Did you say this is the record of the Johnson county court?—Ans. Yes, sir; it is.

Ques. 2. Where did you find it?—Ans. It is a record of naturalization.

Ques. 3. How do you know this is the record of Johnson county court?—Ans. By reading it.

Ques. 4. Please look at page 200; what does it say?—Ans. It says "district court."

Ques. 5. Did you say this the record of the Johnson county court?—Ans. That page I saw was county court.

Ques. 6. Do you know anything more about it than that?—Ans. Only what it says.

Ques. 7. Have you looked through this book?—Ans. Not especially: I have hunted for it. There have been parts in connection. I have helped them look up names.

Ques. 8. Do you know that Haddock referred to in that record was the same called Judge Haddock, or might there have been some other Judge Haddock?—Ans. I don't know of any other William J. Haddock.

Ques. 9. Do you say that there might have been some other?—Ans. I wouldn't say positive.

Ques. 10. Is his age given here?—Ans. Yes, sir; the record gives it as coming under age to this country.

Ques. 11. Do you know anything about when he came to this country?—Ans. If there was any in this county, I don't know of any.

Ques. 12. You don't say that there wasn't?—Ans. No, sir; I never knew of any other William J. Haddock.

Ques. 13. You don't swear that Judge Haddock is the one referred to in this record?—Ans. No, sir; I swear this is the record of naturalization of William J. Haddock.

Ques. 14. Do you know anything about it, except what parties say?—Ans. I swear that that is the record.

Ques. 15. Well, do you know anything about it?—Ans. I wouldn't be supposed to know anything about it.

Ques. 16. Is this naturalization record among the records of Johnson County court, or is it the record of district and circuit court?—Ans. It is used for both purposes. The first 45 pages were used for the county court papers; the balance was used for the district court.

Ques. 17. You are not clerk of the county court?—Ans. There is no county court in existence now that I know of.

Ques. 18. I will ask you whether you can turn to the naturalization of Pat. Quilin of the county court?—Ans. Yes, sir; I have it here.

Be it remembered that at the term of the county court, holden in and for said county on the 15th day of Sept., A. D. 1859, was present the Hon. George W. McClary, sole presiding judge of said county, also the sheriff of said county, S. Bacheler, clerk of said court, when the following, among other proceedings was had, to wit:

Patrick Quinlin, a native of Ireland, and at present residing within said State, appears in open court and makes application to be admitted in to become a citizen of the U. S., and it appearing to the satisfaction of the court that he did declare on oath before the supreme court of the State of Mass. and court of record having common law jurisdiction and using the seal two years at least before his admission, that it was bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the U. S., renounce forever all allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whatsoever, and particularly Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, of whom he was before a subject. The said applicant having declared on oath before this court that he will support the Constitution of the U. S., and that he doth absolutely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whatsoever, and particularly Queen Victoria, whom he was heretofore a subject.

The court being satisfied that he has resided within the U. S. for the term of 5 years next preceding his admission without being at any time within the said 5 years out of the Territory of the U. S., and within this State one year at least; and it further appearing to the satisfaction of said court by the testimony of ——— O'Brien, that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States; well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same, thereupon the court admitted the said applicant to become a citizen of the United States and ordered the proceedings aforesaid to be entered upon the record which was accordingly done by the clerk of this court.

In testimony whereof I, S. Bacheler, clerk of the court aforesaid, have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said court at my office in Iowa City, in said county the 16th day of September, A. D. 1859.

S. BACHELER, Clerk.

Ques. 19. Now, then, turn to the same book, page 235; the record of whose naturalization do you find there?—Ans. George Morris.

Ques. 20. Is the record the same except the change of the dates, name and at the last?—Ans. The same is admitted, with the exception of the name and date.

Ques. 21. What is the date of that record?—Ans. Aug. 21, 1860.

Ques. 22. Now turn to page 190 of the same book. What do you find there?—Ans. I find the name of James Barry, March 5th, '60, record in the same form as that date introduced in evidence.

Ques. 23. Now turn to page 307 in the same book. What do you find there?—Ans. Thomas Rourk, October 22, '60 (same entered in evidence, record being in same form as that already introduced).

Ques. 24. Now you may turn to what you would call book "O," page 62.—Ans. I find the naturalization paper of——

Ques. 25. You may read it entire.

(Copy introduced in evidence.)

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Iowa, Johnson County, ss:

Be it remembered that at the term of the county court holden in and for said county, in the State of Iowa, on the 4th day of April, A. D. '62, was present the Hon. George W. McCleary, sole presiding judge, ex officio clerk of said court, when the following, among other proceedings, was had, to wit: Christian Luther, a native of Prussia, and at present residing within said State, appeared in open court and makes application to be admitted to become a citizen of the United States, and it appearing to the satisfaction of the court that he had declared on oath, before the court of Johnson County, court of record having common-law jurisdiction and using the seal, two years at least before his admission, that it was bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the U. S. and to renounce forever all allegiance to every foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whatsoever, and particularly to Frederick William, King of Germany, to whom he was heretofore a subject; and said applicant, having declared on oath before this court that he will support the Constitution of the U. S., and that he doth absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance, fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate, state sovereignty whatsoever, and particularly to William Frederick, King of Prussia, of whom he was a subject. The court being satisfied by the testimony of John —— that said applicant had resided in the U. S. for the term of 5 years next previous to his admission without being at any time during said 5 years out of the territory of the U. S., and within said State at least; and it further appearing to the satisfaction of this court that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character and attached to the principles of the Constitution of the U. S., and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; thereupon the court admits said applicant to become a citizen of the U. S., and ordered the proceedings aforesaid to be entered of record, which was accordingly done by the clerk of said court.

Ques. 24. Now turn to page 44; what does it say?—Ans. Naturalization record of John Horner.

Ans. Book shows that John Horner has received his papers in the Johnson County court, dated October 8th, '61.

Ques. 25. Turn to page 113?—Ans. It shows the naturalization of Joseph Schonborn, a native of Hungary, dated Sept. 1st, 1863.

(Contestant objects for the reason that it is not shown that this is the witness who testified. Same record introduced into evidence.)

Ques. 26. Now turn to page 241?—Ans. It shows the naturalization record of Pat. Sloan.

Ques. 27. Of what country was he a native of?—Ans. Ireland.

Ques. 28. What is the date of it?—Ans. 9th of Oct. '63.

Ques. 29. Who is the man that appeared as witness?—Ans. T. Conner.

(The same introduced into evidence.)

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

Ques. 30. Turn to page 234?—Ans. Albert Snyder, dated Oct. 9th, '63; native of Baden,

(Same introduced into evidence.)

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

Contestee introduced into evidence the naturalization record of Chas. Grabun, Sept. 26, 1868.

Ans. There is no page given in the book; he is a native of Hanover.

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

(Naturalization record of Patrick Fitzgerald, a native of Ireland, dated Oct. 10th, 1868, introduced into evidence.)

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

(Naturalization record of Patrick Mahoney, a native of Ireland, dated Oct. 9th, '63, introduced into evidence.)

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

Naturalization record of Joseph Hurdluchka found in the record book, No. 2, page 25, dated Nov. 3rd, '70, a native of Bohemian, introduced into evidence.

(Contestant objects from the same reason as before. The record is not the same form as that of Pat. Quinlin.)

Record book O, showing naturalization record of Dennis Downey, a native of Ireland, Sept. 29th, '63, introduced into evidence.

(Contestant objects the same as before.)

Ques. 31. Now, as to that name Joseph H—— Ans. It is spelled here Hurdlutchka.

(Witness examines the records.)

Ans. I cannot find the name spelled otherwise. I find the books of the county court, showing the naturalization of Jerry Mahoney, jr., also Pat. Mahoney. I don't know the naturalization record of Charles Tomasch. I find the record here of C. Tomasch, pronounced Thomas.

Ques. 32. How do you spell Tomasch?—Ans. I spell it T-h-o-m-a-s. I would not say positive that this is the right name. This man is not Tomasch the Bohee.

This record, which is found on page 220 of book 1, is introduced in evidence.

(Contestant objects as immaterial, irrelevant; not referring to the same witness that was examined.)

Ques. 33. Did you find the record of the naturalization of C. Tomasch?—Ans. No, sir.

Ques. 34. Did you look for Joseph Prusha?—Ans. No, sir; I never looked for that.

Cross-examination of Bradley by Brown:

Ques. 1. Are there books of naturalization outside of these you have referred to on direct examination?—Ans. Yes, sir; there are books of naturalization not numbered, called naturalization papers.

Ques. 2. Don't you frequently find several of the same name naturalized?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 3. How many Jerry Maloneys are there naturalized in your records?—Ans. I have only found one; I know of two, but one is dead.

Ques. 4. One is deceased, is he?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Ques. 5. What Jerry Maloney did this book have reference to that you have examined.—Ans. I think it is the one that is dead.

Ques. 6. How many Thos. Berrys do you know?—Ans. Two living and one dead.

Ques. 7. What Thos. Berry of whom you examined record of naturalization?—Ans. I have reason to believe that it is the Thos. Berry that is dead from the fact that it was his brother-in-law who was his witness.

(Contestee objects to the answer for the reason that it is simply an opinion.)

Ques. 8. Do you know Patrick Slovan?—Ans. Yes, sir; I know two of them.

Ques. 9. How many Pat. Slovan have taken out papers?—Ans. Only one.

Ques. 10. Do you know that these men whose records you have searched to-day are the same ones whose names that were given you by the parties?—Ans. I don't positive that they are the same.

Ques. 11. Do you know that they are also men of the same name naturalized in these books?—Ans. Yes, sir; I know men of the same name in these books.

Ques. 12. How can you tell they are the same men we have been inquiring for?—Ans. I can't tell positively, I suppose.

Ques. 13. Now you have their record not in index?—A. We have naturalization papers. I can see that they are indexed. Their index is to be found in the old index of the old court papers.

Ques. 14. There are a good many men naturalized in the old court records that haven't been present here at all?—Ans. No, sir; not present here.

Ques. 15. They string over a good many books, don't they?—Ans. Yes, sir, quite a number.

Ques. 16. It would take a good while to go over these records?—Ans. Yes, sir, quite a while.

Ques. 17. You find all the names that these present have asked you in this books?—Ans. No, sir; not all of them.

Ques. 18. They may appear on other books than those you have examined, may they not?

(Contestee objects—leading.)

Ques. 19. Do they appear on other books in this county besides what you have produced here?—Ans. Yes, sir.

Redirect:

Ques. 20. Will you examine the records that you found numbered here, and find out whether or not the names of Charles Tomask, Joseph Hurdluchka, Joseph Prusha appear on these records. Please go to your office, examine them, and report the result of your examination.

(Contestee admits that a certain W. S. Haddock, who has been referred to here, was one of the attorneys for James Wilson, the contestee, in Johnson County, in this proceding. It is agreed between the parties that the commissioner shall here answer the report of Bradley in regard to the other names given him at any time when he might be able to make a report of the same.)

Mr. STEPHEN BRADLEY, the witness, on the 4th day of July, A. D. '83, made the following report to the commissioner: Having examined other records in my office referred to in the question, I make answer that no record whatever, of the naturalization of the parties named in the question are to be found in any of these records.

STATE OF IOWA,
Johnson County, ss:

I, Eldon Moran, a notary public for Johnson County and commissioner agreed upon to take testimony in this cause, in pursuance of the annexed agreement attached to the testimony of J. L. Adams, whose testimony was taken Feb. 22, 1883, do truly certify that on the 1st day of May, 1883, in pursuance of the notice hereunto annexed, I took the depositions of the following witnesses: John Hohrer, Chris. Luther, John Mead, George Norris, Patrick Sullivan, James Barry, John Mahony, John Spillane, John Hannon, Patrick Quinlan, Chris. Luther, sen., John Shanahan, Peter Rohret, Adam Rohret, M. Leibold, John Mahony (recalled), Wentzel Hummer, Dennis Kief, John Mahony (recalled), Jerry Mahony, sen., Dennis Downey, Patrick Mahony, sen., Patrick Mahony, jr., Thomas Rourke, Joseph Schonborn, John Scanlon, John Delaney, J. S. Hartman, Lewis Doty, James Barry (recalled), Henry Hedliska, Joe Tomash, Charlie Grabin, Patrick Fitzgerald, Michael Maher, Chris. Luther, jr. (recalled), whose testimony is set forth in the following manner: Each witness was first by me duly sworn, or caused to be sworn, in my presence, as provided by law, and when sworn the questions were propounded to him by the respective parties: Benj. T. Frederick, contestant, and James Wilson, contestee, by their respective attorneys, and the question by me read to the witness, who answered the same, and his answer by me in the language of the witness, taken down under each question propounded, and reduced to writing till the deposition was completed.

I further certify that when the testimony was taken of each witness I carefully read the same over to the witness, who corrected the same, and each correction noted, and said testimony was then signed by the witness and sworn to by him before me.

I further certify that T. Brown & Carney appeared as counsel for the contestant, Benj. T. Frederick, and Milton Remley and J. W. Cone for the contestee, James Wilson.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and seal hereunto, notarially, this 1st day of May, 1883.

[SEAL.]

ELDON MORAN,
Notary Public for Johnson County, Iowa, and Commissioner agreed upon to take testimony.

The said depositions to be used as evidence at the hearing and in the trial of the above-entitled cause and contest, by and for the said contestor.

The taking of said testimony will be adjourned from day to day until the same is completed.

Dated this the 26th day of September, 1883.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

I acknowledge service of the above and foregoing notice.

STANTON J. PEELLE.

Contested election for a seat in the Forty-eighth Congress from the seventh Congressional district of Indiana.

vs.
STANTON J. PEELLE.

Whereas in this case it would be inconvenient for the said Stanton J. Peelle, the contestee, to attend to the taking of testimony until after the adjournment of the present session of Congress, he being a member thereof, and he having requested a postponement of the taking of testimony in this case, the said William E. English, the contestor, and the said Stanton J. Peelle, the contestee, have mutually agreed, and do hereby mutually agree, that the time for taking the testimony in this case shall be postponed to the first day of next September, when the said contestor shall take his evidence within forty days from that date, and the said contestee his evidence in the next forty days thereafter, and the said contestor his evidence in rebuttal in the next ten days thereafter, so that the whole shall be taken within ninety days from said first day of next September instead of within ninety days from the time of serving the answer of the contestee, as provided by the act of Congress, each of said parties hereby waivng the taking of evidence within said last-mentioned period, and agreeing that no objection shall be made or advantage taken because of not taking evidence within that period, and hereby agreeing that the same may be taken within ninety days from said first of September, 1883, in the same manner and shall have the same effect as if the same had been taken within ninety days from the time of service of said contestee's answer.

Witness our hands this 20th day of January, 1883.

STANTON J. PEELLE.
WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

Seventh Congressional district of Indiana.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH, CONTESTANT,
vs.
STANTON J. PEELLE, CONTESTEE.

It is mutually agreed by and between the contestant and the contestee above named that for the mutual convenience of both parties the time for the taking of testimony in said case shall be ninety days from the 10th day of September, 1883, and that the said contestant shall have until October 20, 1883, within which to take his testimony-in-chief, and the said contestee shall have forty days from said October 20, 1883, within which to take his testimony, or so much thereof as he may require; provided that if the said contestee consumes less time than forty days in taking his testimony, then and in that case the said contestant hereby agrees to commence at once to take testimony in rebuttal, consuming the ten days allowed him by law therefor, so as not to take time beyond the assembling of the Forty-eighth Congress; and it is further mutually agreed that the depositions to be taken shall be taken before notaries public.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.
STANTON J. PEELLE.

SEPTEMBER 24, 1883.

Mr. PEELE. I move to suppress the notice of contest in this case for the reason that the same does not specify particularly the grounds upon which the contestor relies in the contest, and for the further reason that the same is too general in its terms to advise me upon what he relies, and for the further reason that said notice was not legally served in time, and for the further reason because said notice is insufficient in law to constitute a cause of contest.

WILLIAM R. MYERS, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. William R. Myers; my age is 47 years; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. At present I am secretary of the State of Indiana.

Q. When were you elected?—A. At the November election, 1882.

Q. What counties, if you know, compose this seventh Congressional district?—A. The counties of Marion, Hancock, and Shelby.

Q. Did you ever represent any of this district in Congress?—A. I represented the counties of Shelby and Hancock in the Forty-sixth Congress.

Q. Under the old apportionment?—A. Yes, sir; under the old apportionment.

Q. Look at the document I hand you and state what it is.—A. It is a certificate showing the vote for Congress in the year 1882, when Mr. English and Mr. Peelle were the respective candidates for Congress in this seventh district.

Q. That is taken based upon the records in your office as secretary of state?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. We offer this certificate in evidence as a part of the deposition of the witness, and ask that the same be marked and identified and filed with his evidence; and the same is so done and marked Exhibit A.

Mr. PEELLE. To which I object as incompetent.

W. R. MYERS.

EXHIBIT A.—Deposition of WM. R. MYERS.—P. C., H., N. P.

STATE OF INDIANA,
Office of the Secretary of State, ss:

I, W. R. Myers, secretary of state of the State of Indiana, do hereby certify that at the general election held in the counties of Hancock, Shelby, and Marion, State of Indiana, on Tuesday, the seventh day of November, A. D. 1882, the following votes were cast and given for the following-named persons, respectively, for the office of Representative in Congress for the seventh Congressional district, Indiana, as shown by the returns made to my office by the clerks of said counties:

Shelby County, Indiana.—William E. English received twenty-nine hundred and thirty-five (2,935) votes; Stanton J. Peelle received twenty-eight hundred and seventeen (2,817) votes; Robert W. Medkirk received seventy-nine (79) votes.

Hancock County, Indiana.—William E. English received twenty-one hundred and twenty-nine (2,129) votes; Stanton J. Peelle received sixteen hundred and ninety-four (1,694) votes; Robert W. Medkirk received sixty-six (66) votes.

Marion County, Indiana.—William E. English received twelve thousand three hundred (12,300) votes; Stanton J. Peelle received twelve thousand nine hundred and forty (12,940) votes; Robert W. Medkirk received three hundred and ninety (390) votes.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State of Indiana, at the city of Indianapolis, this 20th day of September, A. D. 1883.

[SEAL.] W. R. MYERS,
Secretary of State.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit A to the deposition of W. R. Myers.

DAVID TURPIE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. My name is David Turpie; age, 53; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. Fifty-one years.

Q. Have you held any official positions in this State; if so, what?—A. I was a member of the commission on the revision of the laws.

Q. Any other office?—A. Well, yes; I was circuit judge.

Q. Wasn't you United States Senator for a while?—A. Yes, if that is State office; and I was a member of the legislature several times and speaker of the house of representatives.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. I was in the city of Indianapolis at that time and attended the election.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election?—A. I acted as one of the judges of that election at the second precinct of the 12th ward in this city.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress from this the seventh Congressional district on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets at that election?—A. William E. English was the Democratic candidate, Stanton J. Peelle was the Republican candidate, and I do not recollect who the National candidate was.

Q. Mr. Medkirk, was it not?—A. I do not know.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election in the city of Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir; I saw it as it was voted at our polls.

Q. Did that Republican ticket have any distinguishing marks or embellishments except the names of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted?—A. Yes, it had a distinguishing mark.

Mr. PEELLE. I object to that.

The WITNESS (continuing). The embellishment——

Mr. PEELLE. I object both to the question and the answer.

Q. Describe what it was.

Mr. PEELLE. To that I object. The ticket is the best evidence.

A. It was a semicircular curve under the word "ticket," in the phrase "Republican ticket" at the head of the ticket, with two dots or dashes above it.

Mr. WILSON. With reference to the objection made, I will say that we will offer that ticket in evidence before we get through.

Q. Was this embellishment engraved?—A. I think it was engraved.

Q. Did the material on which the ticket was printed designate it?

Mr. PEELLE. I object to that.

A. The material upon which the ticket was printed designated it from other tickets voted at that poll.

Q. Was it plain white paper.

Mr. PEELLE. I object to that as a mere matter of opinion, and incompetent.

A. I think not.

Q. When lightly folded would it remain folded, or spring open?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. It would not remain folded as ordinary white paper remains folded. Its tendency was to spring open.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside this ticket, and, thus folded, said tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would this ticket be likely to spring open and separate, so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. Yes, there would be a likelihood of its doing so.

Q. Could you, by sight, distinguish said ticket folded, with the name inside, from one printed on plain white paper?—A. Yes.

Q. Could you distinguish it when folded, with the name inside, by touching it?—A. Yes; perhaps more readily than by sight.

Q. Did you ever know of such material to be used for tickets before at any election?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. No: I never knew of such material being used before at any election.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the Democratic ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names of the candidates inside?—A. Yes; when the Republican ticket was printed upon the material which I have spoken of, I could distinguish it. The material was a substance somewhat resembling white paper, but it was thicker, heavier, denser, smoother, more elastic and springy than ordinary white paper, and therefore could be distinguished from it.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the National ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes. There were very few National tickets voted at our poll. Such as I noticed were upon ordinary plain white paper.

Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket voted at that election from the National ticket, both tickets being folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to.)

A. No; I could not distinguish the Democratic ticket from the National ticket.

Q. Why not?—A. They were both printed on plain white paper.

(Answer objected to as incompetent.)

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from any ticket of like length and width that was either plain white paper, writing paper, or book paper, said ticket being separately folded, as tickets usually are when voted?

(Objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.)

A. I think I could distinguish it from plain white paper very readily. Some book paper is not white paper, and some writing paper is not plain white paper, but I do not think this ticket was printed upon book paper, or writing paper, or plain white paper of any kind—the Republican ticket spoken of.

Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell by these tickets, when folded with the names of the candidates upon the inside, whether the person voting was voting a Republican ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I speak for myself as one of the officers; I could distinguish it by handling it or by sight—if I looked at it or felt it—from any ticket, either National or Democratic, printed upon plain white paper.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls tell these Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector, and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded, with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I think persons looking on with any care at the tickets as they were voted could have distinguished the Republican ticket at the polls where I was from any other ticket which was printed upon plain white paper.

Q. How many Republican tickets of this character were voted for Peelle, if you know?—A. The whole Republican vote at our ward—between five and six hundred—was voted upon tickets of this character, except, perhaps, in two or three instances in which the voters had especially prepared tickets printed upon plain white paper, by pasting or writing Republican names.

(Question and answer objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the returns themselves are the best evidence of the number of votes cast.)

Cross-examination by STANTON J. PEELLE:

Q. State how long you have resided in this city.—A. Since July, 1873.

Q. State your politics.—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. How long have you been a Democrat?—A. Ever since I have been a voter.

Q. Were you ever connected with any newspaper establishment or paper house?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are you a judge of the different qualities of paper, as an expert?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. You never had any experience in handling or dealing in paper of various kinds?—A. I have never had any experience in dealing; I have handled a great deal of it.

Q. What you have said with reference to paper is a mere matter of opinion with you?—A. No, I do not think it is; I think what I have said with reference to the difference between the material upon which the Republican ticket was printed, and upon which the Democratic and National tickets were printed, is not a matter of opinion, but a matter of fact.

Q. You gave it as a matter of opinion when you spoke about the quality of paper, didn't you?—A. No, I do not give it as a matter of opinion when I say that this paper differed from ordinary white paper, and give the qualities in which it does differ; I did not give it as a matter of opinion that this paper was denser, thicker, heavier, more springy and more elastic than ordinary white paper.

Q. When you used the words that it was not plain white paper, is not that a mere matter of opinion, not being an expert in the business?—A. No, sir; I do not think it is.

Q. Then, what knowledge have you as a paper dealer or an expert in handling paper?—A. I have no knowledge as an expert; the only knowledge I testified to is that from observation, from sight and feeling.

Q. You spoke about there being a semicircle at the head of this ticket?—A. No, sir; not at the head; it was under the word "ticket," in the phrase "Republican ticket" at the head of the ticket.

Q. I will ask you if that circle you refer to is not a part of the letter "R?"—A. It was a semicircular curve. Not a semicircle. No, sir. It was not a part of the letter "R" or any other letter in the phrase "Republican Ticket."

Q. You say a curve was on the ticket independent of the letter "R?"—A. Yes, sir; a semicircular curve, with two dashes above it.

Q. And that, you say, is independent of the letter "R?"—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to look at this ticket (Mr. Peelle handed the witness a ticket) and state if that is the kind of a ticket you have reference to in your examination-in-chief.—A. That is the kind of a ticket. I do not know whether it is identical with the ticket voted at the polls where I presided or not. It resembles it; the material upon which it is printed resembles it.

Q. State if it is not the same kind of a heading that you have been describing on the tickets that were actually voted where you were an officer and judge.—A. Yes, sir; it resembles them.

Q. If there is any difference between that ticket and the one voted at the polls, state what it is.—A. I could not say that unless I saw some of the tickets which were actually voted there.

Q. You state that that curve you spoke of is not a part of the letter "R?"—A. I do most distinctly state that the curve on this ticket and the curve on the tickets voted at our polls were not part of the letter "R," or not connected with it, and no part of any other letter.

Q. And that you say, notwithstanding you look at the head of this ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody at the second precinct, in the 12th ward, who voted at that election, who distinguished this from any other ticket voted?—A. I know of one gentleman. That is myself.

Q. Do you know of any other?—A. I do not know of any other. I have never heard of any other person speak of distinguishing or not distinguishing them.

Q. You do not know of another one who voted at that precinct that distinguished this from any other ticket?—A. I do not know of any one who spoke of distinguishing it. There may have been three hundred who distinguished it. There were about three hundred Democratic voters in the precinct. I do not know of any one who spoke of distinguishing it.

Q. State, if you know, of any one having voted one of these tickets at that precinct who had tickets folded and inclosed within the ticket.—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state, if you know, any one who was misled in voting in consequence of the ticket that was voted for Mr. Peelle at that precinct.—A. No; I do not know of any one who was misled.

Q. State if you know of any one who objected to this ticket for any reason as destroying the secrecy of the ballot at that precinct.—A. No. I could not give the name of any one who did so. I have heard a good deal of comment upon the ticket by outsiders on the election day, and a great deal afterwards as to its character—comment in the way of objections.

Q. You know of no one who objected to it as destroying the secrecy of the ballot?—A. No. I do not recollect any one having objected to it on the election day. Afterwards it was objected to very much, and some of the objectors put it upon that ground.

Q. State if you know of any one who voted this ticket that would have voted differently had it been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on.—A. No; I do not know that I do. I do not think of any one now.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. During the day of the election, and during the hours that the voting was going on, where were you?—A. I was in a small room at the engine-house, in which votes were received through an open window.

Q. You were acting as one of the judges?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that room?—A. Yes, sir. I was a member of the election board, and staid in that room all the time. There was no adjournment from the time the polls opened until they were closed.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State whether or not during that day any one complained to the board about the character of the ticket voted for Mr. Peelle.—A. No one complained to the board about the character of the ticket.

Q. How many Democrats did you say voted that day—about how many?—A. I should think between two and three hundred; very nearly three hundred.

DAVID TURPIE.

ROBERT W. MEDKIRK, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Robert W. Medkirk; age, 38; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. About sixteen years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir; I was here, and attended.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress from this seventh Congressional district on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets at that election?—A. Stanton J. Peelle upon the Republican ticket, William E. English upon the Democratic ticket, and myself on the National ticket.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election in the city of Indianapolis?—A. I did; at some of the precincts.

Q. Did that Republican ticket have any distinguishing marks or other embellishments except the names of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

Mr. WILSON. In connection with the objection, and before the answer is made, we say that we will introduce the ticket referred to.

A. Yes, sir; I think it had.

Q. Describe what it was.—A. Well, the ticket voted in the precinct that I live in, the second ward, was printed on heavy paper.

Q. I ask you as to distinguishing marks on the inside of the ticket?—A. My recollection now of the distinguishing mark in that, was a scroll surrounding the words "Republican ticket" at the head of the ticket.

Q. Do you know whether this embellishment that you refer to was engraved?—A. No, sir; I could not say.

Q. Did the material on which the ticket was printed designate it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it plain white paper?

(Objected to.)

A. No, sir; it was a heavy paper, rather in the nature of card-board, and it was not plain white.

Q. When lightly folded would it remain folded, or spring open?—A. When folded as it ordinarily was in voting it would, after it was dropped out of the hand, spring apart.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside this ticket, and, thus folded, said tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would this ticket be likely to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes, sir, it would.

Q. Could you, by sight, distinguish this ticket folded with the names inside from one printed on plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, assuming that it was not printed on plain white paper.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish it, when folded with the names inside, by touching it?—A. Yes, sir; I could. I am speaking now of my precinct, in my ward.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used before for tickets?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I never saw election tickets printed on paper of that material before.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket, voted for Stanton J. Peelle, from the Democratic ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket, voted for Stanton J. Peelle, from the National ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

Mr. WILSON. We propose to introduce hereafter the Democratic and National tickets.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How?—A. Well, the National and Democratic tickets were both printed on plain white paper—on paper that was ordinarily used at elections, and that I have been accustomed to see. There was no difference between them at all; that is, if they were folded up with the names of the candidates inside, and the party to which the candidates belonged. After they were folded I could not tell any difference between the National ticket and the Democratic ticket, but as between the Republican tickets and those tickets I could, from the fact, as I have stated, that the Republican ticket was printed on heavy paper, that was called card-board—that seemed to be the name that was used for it—and its color was not, to my eye, plain white; and, from the general character of it, I could distinguish the tickets very readily; that is, after seeing one of each party.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from any ticket of like length and width that was either plain white paper, writing paper, or book paper, said ticket being separately folded, as tickets usually are when voted?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Well, I think I could.

Q. Could the inspector or any other election officer tell by these tickets, when folded with the name of the candidate on the inside, whether or not the person voting it was voting the Republican ticket?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant for the reason that he cannot tell what the election board would do under such circumstances.)

A. Well, sir; from the tickets that were voted at my precinct in the second ward, the inspector or judges could tell by handling or seeing the ticket very readily the Republican tickets voted there from the other tickets.

Q. You mean handling and seeing, or handling or seeing?—A. Handling and seeing both.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls tell these Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many Republican tickets of this character were voted for Peelle, if you know?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know how many were voted at your precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were most of the tickets voted at your precinct Democratic or Republican tickets?—A. Mostly Republican.

Q. Quite a large majority Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the Republican tickets voted there of the character you have described?

(Objected to.)

A. Oh, yes, sir; the tickets that I have described were the tickets that were voted there by Republicans at that election.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you see any of them voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any of them after they were voted?—A. After they were in the box?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Q. Then you do not know the kind of tickets that were in the box?—A. Yes, sir; I know the kind pretty well that were in the box.

Q. You did not see them, though?—A. I could not say. I expect that I saw some, probably; well, no, I would not say that I saw them actually go in the box—dropped in. I saw them put in the hands of the inspector.

Q. You know they were the same kind of tickets you have described?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever engaged in newspaper work or book work?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are you an expert in judging paper of different quality?—A. No, sir.

Q. You give this, then, as your opinion simply as to the quality of the paper, not knowing as an expert?—A. Well, I could not say that it was an opinion, because it was my judgment upon seeing and handling the papers.

Q. What is the difference between your judgment and opinion of the matter?—A. I might not be an expert in the matter, and still have a judgment upon the color and character of the ticket, and might not be able to tell what it was made of.

Q. Is not all that you know about it simply that it was on a little heavier paper than the Democratic and National tickets were printed on?—A. No, sir; that is not all.

Q. What else do you know?—A. In the first place when I went to the polls that morning, I had not been there five minutes——

Q. I am asking if it is not the fact that all you know about it is, that the ticket was a little heavier than the other?—A. If I understand your question, I think I was answering it right.

Q. Is it not a fact that that is the only difference that you are able to discern, not being an expert, simply that it was on heavier paper?—A. No; that is not the only way.

Q. What other difference about the ticket was there?—A. I say, under your question, as soon as I arrived at the polls, it was the common conversation that that ticket was not like the other tickets.

Q. I am not asking you what other people said; I ask you what you know about it?—A. You asked me how I knew; that is one way.

Q. Do you know it from other people?—A. From myself, and there were other people called my attention to the ticket.

Q. You did not notice the ticket until your attention was called to it?—A. Yes, sir; as soon as I saw one.

Q. Is not all that you know about the ticket, not being an expert, simply that it was a heavier quality than the Democratic or National ticket?—A. That is the way I told it was different, because the color was not as clear, and because it was heavier, and as soon as I saw the inside of it; it was distinguished at the top by this scroll-work about the name.

Q. I am not speaking about the marks on the ticket; I am speaking about the quality of the paper. The paper was simply heavier than the Democratic or National tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not that all?—A. In the paper itself?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; my recollection of it is that the color was not the same.

Q. I am speaking about the heft of the paper. Is not the only difference between the Democratic ticket and the National ticket and the Republican ticket, that the Republican ticket was heavier than the other?—A. In weight of the ticket? Yes, sir.

Q. Then it was on paper?—A. It was some character of paper.

Q. Was it white paper?—A. I think not.

Q. What color was it?—A. It was very nearly white paper, but my recollection of it now from what was used in our ward, it had a cream tinge to it—a light tinge that made it not as white as the Democratic and National ticket.

Q. I will ask you to take the ticket I now hand you, and state whether that is the ticket, or a similar ticket, to those voted in the precinct you spoke of. [Mr. Peelle handed the witness a ticket.]

Mr. WILSON. I object to that question unless the ticket is offered in evidence. If Mr. Peelle proposes to follow that up by making the ticket an exhibit, I will withdraw the objection; but if not, I will object to the question.

A. Well, the ticket itself is, I think, a similar ticket to the one that was used there.

Q. What is the color of this ticket?—A. Well, I think the color of this is about the color of the ticket used there, but my impression is—it might be a color blindness—but there is a little tinge to this ticket.

Q. You can state the color of this ticket?—A. It is very nearly plain white. It is not exactly plain white.

Mr. WILSON. Do you offer that in evidence?

Mr. PEELLE. No, sir.

Q. You spoke about a scroll being on the ticket there. I will ask you if that scroll you spoke of was not a part of the tail of the "R"?—A. No, sir. My recollection is, and I am only stating from my recollection, of course, of that matter, is that it was a scroll clear around the name "Republican ticket."

Q. All the way round "Republican ticket"?—A. Yes, sir. That is my recollection now, not seeing the ticket since then, and when I saw the ticket, the scroll presented itself to the eye first, and you could see the name inside the scroll. Of course, I may be mistaken about that, but that is my recollection about the head of the ticket.

Q. Do you know of any of those tickets having been voted that had another one folded within it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one that was misled in consequence of the quality of this ticket, or the distinguishing mark you refer to—that was misled in voting?—A. I cannot say about that. Do I know of any one that was misled about voting?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not know any one.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently had the ticket been printed upon the same character of paper as the Democratic and National ticket had been printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one that complained to the board at your precinct about the character of this ticket?—A. Not to the board; I do not.

Q. State your politics now.—A. I am a National.

Q. Properly known as the Greenback candidate for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

ROBT. W. MEDKIRK.

The further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned till Tuesday, October 2d, at 10 o'clock a. m.

TUESDAY, Oct. 2nd—10 a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

W. O. DEVAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILLON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name and age.—A. W. O. DeVay; I am 33 years old.
Q. Do you reside in this city?—A. I do.
Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Since 1876.
Q. What is your business?—A. The paper business.
Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—About ten years.
Q. You say you are in the paper business; what do you mean by that; what is the character of your business?—A. My business is making and handling every variety of paper; manufacturing and selling.
Q. Are you in the wholesale business?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you retail?—A. To some extent; not very largely.
Q. You are in the wholesale paper business?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you a branch house of any company?—A. The same capital that owns and controls the Cleveland Paper Co. owns and controls the house I am connected with—"The Indiana Paper Company."
Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election November 7th, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. If you were at any precinct where voting was done, where was it?—A. I do not know what the precinct is; it is the 17th ward, right opposite to my place of business on Maryland st.
Q. Did you see the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I hand you this ticket; was that the Republican ticket that was used and voted at that election?—A. To the best of my recollection, it was.

Mr. WILSON. We offer that ticket in evidence as a part of the deposition of this witness, and ask that the same be identified by the notary.

The ticket was identified by the notary as Exhibit B to the deposition of W. O. DeVay, and will be found attached to this deposition.

The WITNESS. It was a ticket similar to that.

Q. Who was the candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket at that election?—A. Mr. English.
Q. Who on the Republican ticket?—A. Mr. Peelle.
Q. Was there any figure, embellishment, or distinguishing mark at the head of said Republican ticket, or elsewhere, to designate it?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. I could have told the ticket from any of the others I saw there at the polls that day.
Q. Was any part of the ticket engraved?—A. Not being an expert——

(Objected to as incompetent, as the ticket shows for itself.)

The WITNESS. (Continuing.) My impression is that the head of the ticket is an engraved heading; but, not being an expert in printing—from my knowledge of it I would say that it was an engraved head printed on the ticket.

Mr. TAYLOR. You said you had not had any experience.

The WITNESS. I am not a competent judge. I am not a critical judge enough to tell whether it is a printed head or an engraved head, but my judgment is, it is an engraved head.

Q. You are not an expert in engraving?—A. No, sir.
Q. Is that ticket on plain white paper?

(Objected to as incompetent; that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. No, sir; it is not.
Q. Is it plain white writing paper?

(Objected to as incompetent; that the ticket will show for itself; also, as being leading.)

A. No, sir.
Q. Is the ticket plain white book paper?

(Objected to for the same reasons.)

A. No, sir.
Q. What is the material on which this ticket, that you have made an exhibit, is printed?

(Objected to as incompetent; that the ticket can show for itself.)

A. The ticket is printed on what is termed and designated as plate-paper in our business.
Q. Is that a kind of material known in the trade as either print, writing, or book paper?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you buy it or sell it as either print, writing, or book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. If a man would come to your store and ask to buy plain white paper, would you show him such material as this ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you call the material on which this ticket is printed, plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading, and that the ticket shows for itself.)

A. We call that "plain white plate." That is what we call it if we were designating it. We would say "white plate." That is the way we would bill it, and the way we would charge it; and the way we have done ever since I have been in the business.

Q. Is that what the manufacturers would call it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it called in the printed catalogue issued by the principal dealers in such goods?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Plate paper.

Q. What is it called in your invoice bills and books?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Plate paper.

Q. Did you sell any such plate to William B. Burford, of this city, before the Congressional election?

(Objected to as immaterial and irrelevant.)

A. Our house has sold Mr. Burford and the house of Braden & Burford plate paper for years.

Q. In making the entry of the sale on your books did you call it writing paper, print paper, book paper, plain white paper, or plate?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. We called it plate paper.

Q. What is such material generally sold for?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Lithographing. It is very seldom used for any other purpose.

Q. Does Mr. Burford do a lithographing business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you ever sell such material as plain white writing, plain white print, or plain white book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading.)

A. We sell it, but we do not have it called for in that way. It is designated by the quality, print, book, or writing.

Q. Do you ever call it plain white paper at all?—A. No, sir; we do not. Everybody is supposed to know, for it is a different color from white. We designate the color by saying "blue," "pink," "green," etc. In every order we get we suppose white is meant unless it is designated otherwise.

Q. Do you ever sell it as either writing paper, print paper, or book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. If a man comes into our house and wants a ream or ten reams of print paper he gives us the size and weight. He says, "I want ten reams 25 by 38." If he wants book paper, he says, "I want book paper," such a size and weight. It is designated by "print" or "newspaper."

Q. Would you furnish him this material?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have this "lithographic plate," such as the Republican ticket is printed on, for sale at the time of said election?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. We had plate paper, and have had ever since we have had a house.

Q. Of that quality and weight?—A. To the best of my knowledge, we have had.

Q. Does a mill that makes print paper ever make this lithograph paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir; they cannot make it.

Q. Does a mill that makes writing paper ever make this lithograph paper?—A. They can make it, but will not.

Q. Is this "lithograph plate" manufactured or sold for general use or for a limited and specific use; if so, what?—A. It is made for a specific use—that of lithographing or engraving on, and it is very rare that it is ever put to any other use but lithographing. It is made specifically for lithographing purposes.

Q. In your long experience did you ever know it to be used for election tickets before?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading.)

A. No, sir; I never did.

Q. Is lithograph plate, such as this Republican ticket is printed on, made in the same way as either writing paper or print paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading.)

A. It is made in the same manner that writing paper is made, but out of entirely different stock. You might say it is made in the same manner that print is made, but on entirely different stock.

Q. Has it the same number of sheets to the ream?—A. A ream of writing, or of print?

Q. Of either.—A. No, sir; it is put up different amounts per ream.

Q. Explain the difference.—A. Writing paper is put up, unless specially ordered, 480 sheets to the ream and 24 sheets to the quire. A ream of print paper is 480 sheets to the ream and a ream of lithograph plate is put up 500 sheets to the ream. It is so known and listed.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white print paper, size of sheets 25 by 38, say (objected to as immaterial); and what was it worth per ream at the time of said election?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. A ream of print paper, standard size and weight, 25 by 38, would be 30 pounds to the ream; and the price at that time, as near as I can recollect, was from $1.80 to $1.95 per ream.

Q. Is 25 by 38 a standard?—A. That is one of the standard sizes. That is the basis.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white book paper of the same size?—A. A ream of 25 by 38 book paper would be from 45 to 50 pounds; standard used in this State is 45 pounds to the ream, 25 by 38.

Q. What was it worth per ream at the time of the election?—A. Plain white book, a year ago, was worth not over $4 for 50-pound reams, and not to exceed $3.60 for 45-pound.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of lithograph plate, such as this Republican ticket is printed on, of the same sized sheets, namely, 25 by 38?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. A ream of that paper would weigh 100 pounds to the ream, 25 by 38. The lowest market price there has ever been on that has been ten cents a pound, which would make it $10. That is the price we have sold it at. That is the lowest market price I have ever known of it. I presume that that paper at that time cost more money.

Q. Please repeat the relative weight of plain white print paper, plain white book paper, and this plate, the same sized sheets—all of standard dimensions.

A. The plain white or print paper would be 30 pounds to the ream, 25 by 38, giving the same basis of size; book paper from 45 to 50, making 15 to 20 pounds difference; plate would be 100 pounds, which makes 50 pounds more.

Q. I do not know as I understood exactly what you said as to the price of this plate paper at the time of this election.—A. I could not say, from the fact that I would have to refer to our books and see what we were selling it at; but I know it was higher. My recollection is we were getting twelve cents a pound for our plate paper at that time or about that time, but what we were getting I would not say positively. I say now that we are getting ten cents a pound, and it is the lowest price we ever sold it at.

Q. At twelve cents a pound it would be $12 a ream?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you think that a fair price for it at that time?—A. Yes, sir, I do; I could tell by referring to our books at that time just what we got.

Q. If one of your customers should buy for election tickets this lithograph plate at $10 or $12 per ream, when he could get good plain white book paper at $3.60 to $4 per ream, and plain white print paper at $1.80 to $1.95 per ream, would you not think he was either very ignorant or had some design in it?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and as seeking an opinion rather than a fact.)

A. I would think there was something wrong. I would not think a man of good reason would buy that kind of paper and pay that price for it when the other would do in that article, whether he wanted to use it for elections or not.

Q. Would it be any more difficult to counterfeit a ticket on lithograph plate than on plain white, print paper or book paper?—A. Well, I do not think it would. It would depend a good deal on what kind of a counterfeit you wanted to make. In printing it would not. It would be easier to counterfeit heavier paper, because print and book paper, being lighter, would show any design quicker than plate paper, from the fact that plate paper is so exceedingly heavy.

Q. When one of these Republican tickets was lightly folded would it remain folded or spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. The plate ticket, do you mean?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. You cannot fold it; it would not stay folded tight like a print ticket.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside this ticket, and thus folded said tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would this ticket be likely to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading.)

A. In my opinion it would, from the fact that it will not stay folded.
Q. Did you see the Democratic ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see the National ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you distinguish this Republican ticket when folded with the name inside from those tickets, or either of them, by sight or touch?
(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence as to the character of the National or Democratic tickets, or whether they were of heavy or lighter paper.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the Democratic ticket voted at said election, said tickets being folded separately with the names inside; and, if so, how?
(Objected to as immaterial and leading, there being no evidence as to the character of the Democratic ticket, and whether it was on heavier or lighter paper.)
A. If Stanton J. Peelle's name was on the ticket, as it is here, I could tell it every time. If you want to know why, I will very soon show you. Take that ticket in your hand and you cannot hold it like print or like book paper without doubling it up in that way [illustrating]; and if a man goes up to the polls you could tell every time. But you take a print paper or a light paper and it will not stand out; and that is the reason why. You cannot pull that ticket down unless you press it, and then you cannot keep it down. That ticket will spring back in spite of you.
Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the National ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names inside; and, if so, how?
(Objected to as immaterial and leading, for the reason that there is no evidence as to the character of the National ticket, whether it was on heavier or lighter paper.)
A. I could.
Q. Could you do it by sight?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you do it by touch?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from any ticket of like length and width that was either on plain white print paper, or writing paper, or book paper?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I could have if it was the same weight and size of the Democratic and National tickets.
(Answer objected to, for the reason that there is no evidence to show that the Democratic and National tickets were of the same size as the Republican ticket.)
Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket voted at that election from the National ticket voted at that election, the tickets being separately folded with the names of the candidates inside?
(Objected to, for the same reason.)
A. No, sir; I do not think I could. I know I could not.
Q. I understood you to say that you saw the tickets voted at that election for the respective candidates.—A. I did.
Q. I show you this ticket headed "Democratic ticket." Is that the ticket voted and used at that election by the Democratic party?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I show you another ticket printed at the head "National ticket," and ask you if that was the ticket that was voted at that election by the National party?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON. We offer those two tickets in evidence as a part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and ask that the same be identified and marked as exhibits by the notary.
(The tickets were marked as follows: The Democratic ticket was marked Exhibit C to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, and the National ticket was marked Exhibit D to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, and they will both be found attached to this deposition.)
Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell by these plate tickets, even when folded with the names of the candidates on the inside, whether or not the person voting at said election was voting the Republican ticket?
(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that this witness cannot tell what the election board would do under such circumstances.)
Mr. WILSON: We offer him as an expert.
A. My idea is if a man wanted to know and was interested to know, he could—seeing it from my stand-point. I know I could.
Q. Could persons looking on at the polls at said election tell these Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector and when the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded with the names inside?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I can tell what I know. I could tell what the politics were standing looking on, and did do it.

Q. Do you know whether other persons there identified tickets looking on, or not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You know they did?—A. Yes, sir. Mr. Dean, of Woodford, Dean & Co., called my attention to it down at the polls, and he was challenging at the time, and I had my attention called further to it from the fact that handbills were posted up at the election places notifying and warning the people of such tickets being voted.

Mr. PEELE: That these tickets were being voted [indicating]?—The WITNESS. Yes, sir; I think so. I am not positive, but I think that was done.

Q. I will ask you how long you have been in this paper business, handling and selling paper?—A. Ten years.

Q. You have been constantly engaged in it?—A. Yes, sir; nothing else. It has been my business the best part of my life.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Are you a Democrat?—A. I am.

Q. Is that Republican ticket that you made part of your evidence—is it on paper?—A. It is plate paper.

Q. Is it card-board, or is it bristol-board, or is it paper?—A. It is plate paper.

Q. What is the color of that ticket?—A. It is white.

Q. Is it plain white, or tinted?—A. It is plain white.

Q. Had you any bet on Mr. English in this election?—A. No, sir; I did not.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you vote at that election?—A. No, sir; I did not.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit D to the deposition of W. O. De Vay.

WILLIAM B. BURFORD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State you name and age.—Answer. William B. Burford; age, 36.

Q. You reside in the city of Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have your resided there?—A. Since 1867.

Q. What is your business?—A. Lithographer, blank-book manufacturer, printer, and stationer.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. Since 1861.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election on November 7, 1882; and, if you were, did you attend any precinct where voting was done?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend any precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets voted at that election?—A. I did.

Q. Here are three tickets which have been made exhibits as a part of the evidence of Mr. De Vay, and I show you the one that is headed "Republican ticket." Did you see that ticket voted at that election?—A. I saw a ticket similar to this. I could not say that this is the identical ticket.

Q. So far as you know, was it similar in all particulars?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you now the ticket that is headed "Democratic ticket." Did you see that voted at that election?—A. I make the same answer to this that I did to the other.

Q. One similar to it in all respects?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I show you the one headed "National ticket," and ask you the same question as to that.—A. Yes, sir; this appears to be the same.

Q. The same answer to that question as to the others?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress on the Democratic and Republican tickets at that election?—A. Mr. Peelle and Mr. English.

Q. Mr. English on the Democratic ticket, and Mr. Peelle on the Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any figure, embellishment, or distinguishing mark at the head of this Republican ticket or elsewhere to designate it?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. There was.

Q. Was the ticket, or any part of the Republican ticket offered here, engraved?—A. I think the head was engraved.

Q. Is the material on which that ticket is printed plain white print paper?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. It is what I know to be plate paper.

Q. Is it on plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It is not.

Q. Is it on plain white book paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It is not.

Q. Is that material on which the Republican ticket is printed known in the trade as either print, writing, or book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It is not.

Q. Do you buy it or see it as either print, writing, or book paper?—A. I do not.

Q. If a man would come to your store and ask to buy plain white paper, would you show him such material as this Republican ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I would not.

Q. Do you call the material upon which this Republican ticket is printed plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. The question does not go far enough. It is plain white paper, but it does not go far enough to make an answer.

Q. Let us hear an explanation of what you mean.—A. This paper is evidently plain white, but the question does not say what kind of plain white paper. A man might have several kinds. He might have plain white writing paper, plain white book paper, plain white news paper or print paper, and plain white plate paper—any one of those four.

Q. Is that plain white plate paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is it called at the manufactory where it is made?
(Objected to as incompetent.)
A. Plate paper.
Q. Do you know what it is called in the catalogue issued by the principal dealers?
(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)
A. Plate paper.
Q. What do you call it in your bills of invoice and on your books?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. Plate paper.
Q. Did you sell any of this plate paper to the Journal Publishing Company before the said election?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I did.
Q. In making the entry of the sale on your book did you call it writing paper, print paper, book paper, plain white paper, or plate?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. It was charged and billed as plate paper.
Q. What is such material generally sold for?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. It is principally used for lithographic work.
Q. And it is generally sold for that?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you make an entry as to the weight of this paper that you sold to the Journal Company?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I did.
Q. What was that weight?—A. One hundred pounds.
Q. What was the number of sheets you sold, and what was the price?—A. Six hundred and twenty-five sheets, and the price was $18.20, if I remember correctly.
Q. Eighteen dollars and twenty cents for what?—A. Six hundred and twenty-five sheets.
Q. Do you do a lithographing business?—A. I do.
Q. Do you ever sell such material as this Republican ticket is printed on as plain white writing paper, or as plain white print paper, or as plain white book paper?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I do not.
Q. Do you ever sell it as plain white paper at all, or do you sell it as plate paper?
(Objected to as leading and immaterial.)
A. We sell it as plate paper.
A. Does a mill that makes print paper ever make this lithographic plate or this plate paper?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. I think not.
Q. In your long experience did you ever know plate paper to be used for election tickets before?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. Never.
Q. What is the weight, if you know, of a ream of plain white print paper, size of sheets 25 by 38, and what is it worth per ream, or what was it worth per ream at the time of said election?
(Objected to as incompetent.)
A. The standard weight is 30 pounds; worth about $2 per ream.
Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white book paper of the same size?
(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)
A. The standard is 45 pounds.
Q. Do you recollect what it was worth at the time of the election?—A. Worth about $3.80, according to the quality. I will qualify that a little. Book paper might run from $3.80 to $4.50.
Q. What is the weight of a ream of plate paper such as this Republican ticket that you have looked at is printed upon?—A. You mean of a relative size?
Q. Yes, sir; 25 by 38.
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. About 100 pounds.
Q. What was it worth per ream at the time of the election, if you know?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. About $14 or $14.50. That would depend upon how much profit a man wanted to make.

Q. If one of your customers should buy for election tickets this plate paper at $14 to $14.50 per ream, and he could get good plain white book paper at the price you have named per ream, and plain white print paper at the price you have named per ream, would not you think that he was either ignorant or had some design in it?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant, and because it seeks the opinion of the witness rather than the fact.)

A. If I knew he was going to use it for tickets I should infer that he either had a design or wanted to make a pretty big bill against the central committee. One of the two.

Q. Would it be any more difficult to counterfeit a ticket on this plate paper than on plain white print paper?—A. It would not be if you could get the paper.

Q. When one of these Republican tickets was lightly folded, would it remain folded or spring open?

(Objected to for the reason that it assumes that the ticket was lightly folded when voted.)

A. It would spring open if the folds had not been creased.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside this ticket and thus folded, said tickets were dropped in the ballot-box, would this ticket be likely to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent and leading, because it assumes that there were tickets folded inside.)

A. You say "thus folded?"

Q. Folded as you say, lightly folded.—A. It would spring open.

Q. Would not tickets so folded and made upon the material that this Republican ticket is made be more apt to spring open than tickets made of the material upon which the Democratic and National tickets are made of and voted?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It would.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket when folded with the names inside, either by sight or touch?—A. I could.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the Democratic ticket voted at said election, said tickets being separately folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. If I could get a chance to see each of them I could.

Q. Could you distinguish it by the touch?—A. Yes, sir; by the feeling. You said "sight" in your question.

Q. Could you distinguish them by sight if you could get to see them?—A. I could if I could see the end of the tickets, but I could not to see the back of the ticket. If a man would take a ticket up and hold it between his hand in that shape [illustrating], and let me see the back, I would have my doubts about whether I could do it or not; unless I would judge from the stiffness of it.

Q. Could you distinguish this Republican ticket from the National ticket?—A. I could.

Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell by these plate tickets when folded with the names inside whether or not the person voting it at said election was voting the Republican ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading, and because the witness cannot tell what the election board would know or think.)

A. I believe I could.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls tell the same?

(Objected to for the reason that the witness cannot tell what the populace would say.)

A. That I cannot answer. It would depend upon what they were looking at, I suppose.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe, in politics?—A. I am, sir.

Q. If I remember rightly you had no bet on the last election at all as to the result between Mr. English and myself?—A. No, sir; I never bet on elections.

Q. I will hand you the Democratic and National tickets, which have been introduced as a part of the evidence of Mr. De Vay; and I will ask you to state if there is any difference between the kind of paper that these two tickets are printed on?—A. Well, I think there is a slight difference.

Q. I will ask you to state what that difference is.—A. One is a little better grade of book paper than the other.

Q. Are they both printed on what is known as book paper?—A. They are.

Q. Is it plain white paper?—A. It is.

Q. I now hand you the Democratic and Republican tickets identified before, and ask you to state the difference between those two tickets.—A. One is printed on book paper and the other is printed on plate paper.

Q. Are they not both printed on plain white paper?—A. They are; so far as white goes, if you do not qualify.

Q. The only difference being one is what is known as "book" and the other is what is known as "plate paper"?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated something about the heading of that ticket.—A. I said it was engraved; I believe it to be.

Q. Do you know whether it is engraved or not; can you answer whether or not it is?—A. So far as my judgment goes it is engraved.

Q. If it should be printed you would be mistaken.—A. It has got to be printed after it is engraved; the original has to be engraved first before you can print; it is not worked from type; there is no type can be set in that shape.

Q. You say you sold some paper of this kind to the Indianapolis Journal Company?—A. I did.

Q. When?—A. The day before the election.

Q. Is that the same kind of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the paper you sold them used in printing tickets?—A. That I could not say.

Q. Did the Indianapolis Journal Publishing Company return you any paper of that kind?—A. Not that I know of. They may have done so quite a while afterwards, but not at the time. They did not return that paper.

Q. I will ask you if the Indianapolis Journal Publishing Company did not borrow some paper of you just before the election?—A. That I could not state. We are not in the habit of borrowing or loaning paper. We sell each other paper and bill it to each other. The paper that I sold them was sold to them and billed to them and charged to them.

Q. You say you sold them 625 sheets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The day before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know whether 625 sheets were returned to you afterwards or not?—A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. You cannot say whether these tickets are printed on the same paper you sold them or not.—A. The identical paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; I cannot. I did not stand over the press and see it done.

Q. I hand you what purports to be the Democratic ticket voted in Hancock County at the last election. Will you please examine that paper, and state what kind of paper it is, or what difference, if any, there is between that and the Republican ticket voted in this city?—A. I call that an extra heavy "book."

Q. What is "plate paper" used for?—A. Principally for lithographic work.

Q. Can you not lithograph on the kind of paper you now have in your hand?—A. I can.

Q. I will ask you if you cannot lithograph on that kind of paper equally as well as you can on this kind of paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I cannot.

Q. What is the difference?—A. The difference in the thickness of the paper.

Q. I understood you to say you could not distinguish this Republican ticket from either the Democratic or National ticket unless you could see the edges of the tickets.—A. That was my answer.

Q. I will ask you to state to the notary whether or not you can distinguish the Democratic and National ticket, which I now hand you and which has been made part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay, by feeling them?—A. Having examined the tickets just recently, at this time I could.

Q. State if the Democratic ticket is not smoother paper than the National ticket?—A. I think not, so far as the finish is concerned. It is lighter.

Q. What is lighter?—A. The National ticket is lighter than the Democratic.

Q. Is not the Democratic ticket a finer finish than the National ticket?—A. Not that I can feel.

Q. Look at it and see if you do not discern a finer finish on the Democratic ticket than on the National ticket?—A. I see a whiter paper.

Q. State if it is not as difficult to detect the Republican ticket by feeling from the Democratic ticket, and the National ticket, as it is to detect the Democratic ticket from the National ticket by feeling?—A. It is not.

Q. What is the difference?—A. In the thickness of the paper.

Q. I am not speaking of the thickness of the paper. I am speaking about the feeling of the surface of the paper.—A. No, sir. It is not quite so difficult.

Q. What is the difference?—A. The difference is that the plate paper is a little finer finish than either of those, and smoother.

Q. Is there any finer finish on the Republican ticket than on the Democratic ticket that you hold in your hand?—A. Yes, sir; I think there is.

Q. What is the difference in the finish?—A. They come through the calender——

Q. (Interrupting.) Do not they both pass through the same calender?—A. Yes, sir; but the plate paper passes through oftener.

Q. Is not that for the purpose of making it more compact, more than for the purpose of putting a fine finish on it?—A. No, sir; it is not. It is for putting additional finish on it.

Q. I will ask you to state when the Republican ticket is folded with a crease, as tickets usually are when voted, if it is not just as liable to remain folded as the Democratic ticket similarly folded?—A. Not quite so much so. Although creased, there is more or less elasticity in this paper that would open it to a certain extent. You can test it yourself.

Q. I will ask you to state now if the only difference in the spring of the tickets is not in consequence of the heft of the ticket alone.—A. I think it is.

Q. Then there is no particular quality in the paper to make it spring, other than its weight?—A. I think not.

Q. It is not bristol-board?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is not card-board?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the color is plain white?—A. Plate paper; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody that was misled in voting in consequence of that ticket?—A. How do you mean?

Q. Voted differently from what they would if the ticket had been printed on the same quality of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on.—A. Was misled by it?

Q. Yes, sir. Did anybody vote differently in consequence of this Republican ticket being printed on this kind of paper, that you know of?—A. I know of one instance.

Q. What was the instance? Explain it.—A. It was this way: It was a colored man. I was at the polls asking him to vote the Democratic ticket, and he agreed to do so and he picked the ticket up and went up to the polls and returned, saying that they knew he was going to vote the Democratic ticket and he would not do it.

Q. That is the only instance, is it?—A. That is the only one I have any knowledge of.

Q. You do not know of anybody that was misled, or voted differently from what he would have voted, other than that?—A. No, sir.

Q. And that is what he told you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the name of the colored man?—A. I know the man when I see him. I do not know his name.

Q. Do you know where he stops?—A. He was working around. I don't know where he lives.

Q. Have you seen him since?—A. I saw him once, and only once.

Q. Do you know where he was living at that time?—A. I do not.

Q. You cannot give his name?—A. I cannot.

Q. What precinct was that in?—A. It was in the fifth ward; I do not know which precinct it was.

Q. On what streets?—A. On the corner of First and Illinois.

Q. Have you made any examination of the folding of these different tickets, as to the spring there is in them?—A. I have not.

Q. You have not tested it at all?—A. No, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understood you to say that the Democratic and National tickets shown you were both printed on book paper.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that it was plain white paper.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked if you could distinguish the difference here, on an inspection, between the Democratic and National tickets. Could you tell the difference, looking on at the election, between the Democratic and National ticket, as voted on that day?—A. I could not.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if this Republican ticket was not printed on plain white paper. Is it not true that, in that sense, card-board is plain white paper?—A. Certainly.

WM. B. BURFORD.

JOHN CARLON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name and age?—Answer. John Carlon. My age is 44.

Q. Do you reside in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Nineteen years.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printing and binding.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. I have been in the printing business about 24 or 25 years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election on November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at any voting precinct upon that day?—A. Yes; I was in the eleventh ward, at one of the precincts there—east of Meridian street. I forget the number of the precinct.

Q. Did you see the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets voted at that election?—A. I did.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress on the Democratic and Republican tickets?—A. Mr. English on the Democratic, and Mr. Peelle on the Republican.

Q. You say you saw those tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show the ticket that is made a part of the testimony of Mr. DeVay and marked Exhibit B, headed Republican Ticket. Is that the Republican ticket that was voted that day?—A. I judge so.

Q. Was there, and is there, any figure, embellishment, or distinguishing mark at the head of that Republican ticket, or elsewhere, to designate it?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. It has an engraved head.

Q. I will show you also the ticket marked Exhibit C, which was made a part of the deposition of Mr. DeVay this morning, and ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at that same election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Also the ticket marked Exhibit D, to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, headed National Ticket. Is that the ticket that was used and voted by the Nationals on that day?—A. I judge so.

Q. Was the Republican ticket, voted on that day, on plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading and incompetent.)

A. It was on plain white plate paper.

Q. Was it on plain white writing paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was it upon white book paper?—A. No, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I want it understood that I am objecting all the time to each of these questions as incompetent and for the reason that the ticket must speak for itself.

Q. Was it plain white print paper?

(Objected to for the same reasons.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What do you say was the material on which that Republican ticket was printed?—A. It is called "lithograph plate" paper.

Q. Is that a kind of material known in the trade as either print, writing, or book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you buy it or sell it as either print, writing, or book paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. If a man would come to your store and ask to buy plain white paper, would you show him such material as that upon which the Republican ticket was printed?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. No. I would not.

Q. Do you know what that material is called, that material upon which the Republican ticket was printed, by the manufacturers of it?—A. It is called lithograph plate paper.

Q. What is it called in the printed catalogue issued by the principal dealers in such goods?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It is called plate paper.

Q. What do you call it in your invoice bills and books?—A. Plate.

Q. Does a mill that makes print paper ever make this lithograph plate?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I think not, sir.

Q. Is this lithograph plate manufactured and sold for general use, or for a limited and specific use?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It is generally sold for lithograph work.

Q. In your long experience did you ever know lithographic plate to be used for election tickets?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir. I never did before.

Q. Do you sell paper?—A. No; that is, not for trade. Of course we sell it to customers when we print books and such as that.

Q. Is lithograph plate, such as the Republican ticket is printed on, made in the same way as either writing paper or print paper, if you know?

(Objected to.)

A. I do not really know.

Q. I understood you to say that you were in the printing business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it be any more difficult to counterfeit a ticket on lithograph plate than on plain white print paper?—A. I do not know that it would.

Q. When one of said tickets was lightly folded would it remain folded, or would it be liable to spring open?

(Objected to.)

A. It would be liable to spring open, except it was creased very thoroughly, and even then it would probably spring open.

Q. If another ticket were folded inside this ticket, and thus folded said tickets were dropped in the ballot-box, would this ticket be likely to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I do not know; I never tried it; I cannot say. The probability is it would spring open and give a chance for the inside one to drop out; I never tried it.

Q. Could you distinguish the said Republican ticket when folded with the names inside by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you do it by touch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, both tickets being folded separately with the names inside?—A. I could.

Mr. PEELLE: I object all the way through to all these questions and answers as immaterial and incompetent.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket voted for Mr. Peelle from the National ticket voted at the same election, both being folded?—A. I could: yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish said Republican ticket voted for Mr. Peelle from any ticket of like length and width, that was either on plain white print paper, writing paper, or book paper of the same thickness?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I could.

Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket voted at that election from the National ticket voted at that election, the tickets being folded?—A. No; I think not.

Q. Could the inspector, and other election officers, tell by these plate tickets, even when folded with the names of the candidates on the inside, whether or not the person voting at said election was voting the Republican ticket?—A. I should think he could.

Q. Could a person looking on at the polls at that election tell the Republican ticket when the voters handed them to the inspector and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, supposing the tickets were carefully folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, because the witness cannot tell what other people could have seen.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white print paper, size of sheets being 25 by 38 inches?—A. About 30 pounds to the ream is the average size.

Q. Do you know what was the value of that paper per ream, plain white print paper, at the time of the election referred to?—A. About $2.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white book paper of the same size?—A. About 50.

Q. What was it worth per ream at the time of the election?—A. Fifty-pound was worth about $4 a ream.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of lithograph plate, such as that upon which the Republican ticket was printed upon, 25 by 38 inches?—A. That I do not know. I have used very little of it since we have gotten out of the lithographing business. We have had no use for it in our business.

Q. Do you know what the price of such paper is, generally, in the market?—A. Generally from 12 to 14 cents a pound.

Q. This ticket that I have shown you, this Republican ticket which is made an exhibit, was that the ticket which was voted at your precinct by the Republicans?—A. I should think it was, sir, or one just like it.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. How long have you been a Democrat?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Born that way?—A. Born that way; yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. I did after election day. The day after the election I bet one-half a box of cigars.

Q. Did you bet on Mr. English?—A. I did.

Q. Before the returns came in?—A. Yes, sir; before they came in.

Q. Is there any difference between this Democratic and National ticket that you have been talking about in the paper?—A. Yes, sir; there is a little difference.

Q. What is the difference?—A. The Democratic ticket is on a little bit better paper than the National ticket.

Q. What kind of paper is that?—A. That is book paper.

Q. Plain white paper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now take the Republican ticket and say what is the difference between that and the Democratic ticket.—A. The difference is, one is book paper and the other is plate paper.

Q. The Republican ticket is plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; plain white plate paper.

Q. And the other is plain white book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Still they are both plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; one is "plate," and the other is "book."

Q. Still they are both plain white paper. Is not this plate paper equally as plain white paper as the book paper is plain white paper?—A. No, sir; if a man would ask me for plain white paper I would never show him lithograph.

Q. What would you show him?—A. Book paper.

Q. You say that plate paper is not plain white paper?—A. It is plain white lithograph paper.

Q. It is paper, is it not?—A. I suppose it is.

Q. What is the color of it?—A. White.

Q. Is it not plain white?—A. It is plain white lithograph.

Q. Is it not plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If it is paper, and its color is plain white, is it not plain white paper?—A. If a man would come in and ask me for plain white paper——

Q. I am not asking you about that. You say it is paper, and you say it is plain white in color. I ask you if that don't make plain white paper?—A. I suppose you would call it that, but nobody would ever inquire for it in that way.

Q. You would call it plain white paper as much as you would the Democratic ticket, that is book paper, plain white?—A. That is plain white paper.

Q. You would not designate that as plain white book paper?—A. You would call it plain white book paper.

Q. The only difference is that one is plain white book paper and the other is plain white plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; there is a difference in the thickness, and in the grade, and in the quality.

Q. Are there different qualities of book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Democratic ticket is heavier than the National?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Very nearly as much difference in the weight of those two as between the Republican and Democratic?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Did you ever have any experience in manufacturing paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever deal in paper as a dealer in paper?—A. No, sir; we buy a great deal.

Q. All you know about paper is as you use it in your book publishing and binding business.—A. Yes, sir; we buy a great deal of paper.

Q. You said you could distinguish the tickets by sight and by touch.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you distinguish it by sight?—A. If I get near enough I can tell by the thickness of the paper and the quality of the paper.

Q. You can distinguish the Republican from the Democratic ticket because it is on a little heavier paper?—A. A good deal heavier paper.

Q. And no other way?—A. That is about all.

Q. And that is the same difference you could tell in any paper; because of its thickness and quality?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell the difference between the National and Democratic tickets?—A. Not without I examined them beforehand.

Q. Are they the same color?—A. They are not exactly the same color; one is a little whiter than the other.

Q. You could tell those tickets by the color, couldn't you, readily?—A. If I examined them before.

Q. You see the difference between the color there of the two tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the Republican and Democratic tickets—is there any difference in the color of those two tickets?—A. Very little difference.

Q. Less than there is between the other two?—A. About the same difference.

Q. You say there is no more difference between the Democratic and Republican tickets in color than there is between the Democratic and National tickets in color. Look again.—A. Yes; there is a little more difference in color.

Q. Then you could more readily distinguish the Democratic from the National by sight than you could the Republican from the Democratic by sight.—A. No, sir. Sometimes all the paper is not of the same color. Without I saw the inside of the Democratic and National tickets I could not say which was which.

Q. You could not tell one from the other?—A. I could tell the Republican on account of its thickness.

Q. Could you more readily distinguish the Democratic ticket from the National ticket than you could the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by the color?—A. Yes, sir; provided I looked inside and saw what the ticket was.

Q. I am speaking about the color of the ticket; the outside of the ticket that shows when the ballot is folded. Could you tell the difference between that Republican and Democratic ticket in any other way unless you could see the edge of the ticket and see which was the heaviest?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Then there are different qualities of what you call plain white print paper.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could tell the difference between heavy print paper and light print paper the same way if you could see the edges?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that is a lithograph there, the heading?—A. No, sir; I did not say any such thing.

Q. You say it is engraved?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know it is engraved?—A. I know it is engraved because there is no type made like that. The original one is engraved. I suppose this is an electrotype or stereotype of the engraving.

Q. The reason you say it is engraved is because there is no type of that kind.—A. No, sir.

Q. There is not anything in the head that makes you think it is engraved?—A. Yes, sir; that embellishing mark, that flourish down there, is not in type.

Q. That is the reason you tell it?—A. Yes, sir. About the same reason that if your picture was on there you could not print it from type.

Q. The only reason you say this is an engraving is because there is no such type printed?—A. My reason is there was a flourish on it.

Q. Why?—A. Because that was engraved.

Q. How do you know it was engraved?—A. Because it never was printed from type. Because there is no such type made.

Q. Then it is your opinion that there is no type made like that?—A. No, sir. That has nothing to do with it. My opinion is that this is an engraving.

Q. Is there any other way by which you can tell an engraved ticket from a printed ticket of that kind?—A. Certainly.

Q. How do you tell it?—A. From the looks.

Q. Is not the only thing in the looks that you know there is no such type?—A. No, sir.

Q. If you can tell any other reasons I wish you would tell them.—A. I just explained it.

Q. You said it was because you knew there was no such type.—A. That was one reason, and another reason was that that ticket was engraved. Anybody that would see it would know it was engraved.

Q. How do you know it was engraved outside of the fact that you know there was no such type, if you can tell an engraving from a printing except from the fact of your knowlege of the different type?—A. I know from my knowledge of engraving that that ticket was engraved.

Q. You know it was engraved?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell us why?—A. From the appearance of the head.

Q. What is there in the appearance?—A. I have just explained that once. It is in these flourishes and the general appearance of the head of the ticket.

Q. If that were printed, how different would it be?—A. This is printed.

Q. I thought you said it was engraved?—A. Certainly, the head must be engraved, but it was printed from that.

Q. What difference would there be between that if it had been originally printed from type?—A. The difference is in the appearance.

Q. What is there in the appearance?—A. I have just explained that.

Q. I have not heard it.—A. I told you it was on account of the flourishes that are on there.

Q. What difference is there in those flourishes from what there would be if they had been printed that way from type?—A. It could not be printed from type, because there is no such type made. That is one reason, and another reason is that I am positive it was engraved.

Q. You said this ticket would spring open if it were folded lightly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would not the Democratic ticket do the same thing?—A. No, sir; not exactly.

Q. Suppose you take the Democratic and Republican tickets when they were folded with the crease like that. [Illustrating.] Is there any more danger of that ticket springing than the Democratic ticket similarly folded?—A. Yes, sir; I think there is. Except you fold it that way. [Illustrating.] Then it would hold its place.

Q. I will ask you if the only difference in the spring of these tickets is not in consequence of the quality of the paper?—A. In the thickness and quality?

Q. In the thickness and quality, I mean.—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Are you engaged in the printing business?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. About 24 or 25 years.
Q. Do you do much printing?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you do any engraving?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you have it done?—A. Sometimes.
Q. Do you ever do any lithographing?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Yourself?—A. I have it done in our establishment.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if this was not plain white, and if it was not paper? Is it not what you call cardboard paper in one sense?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. Outside of experts, the majority of people would call that ticket cardboard.

Q. That Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You answer as an expert?

(Objected to.)

A. Well, I do not know about that.

Q. I will ask you whether or not that material upon which that Republican ticket is printed has not an ascertained meaning and an ascertained name in your business?—A. Yes, sir,

Q. Is it called in that business, as it is technically named, plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. Plate paper.

Q. I will ask you what you call plain white paper in your business?

(Objected to.)

A. Book paper or writing paper.

Q. That is what you mean by plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Re cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That is what you mean by plain white paper, book paper, writing paper, and print paper?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN CAILON.

JOHN C. SHOEMAKER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English.

Question. Please state your name, age, and residence.—Answer. John C. Shoemaker; age, 57; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. All my life.

Q. Have you held any official position; if so, what?—A. I was county treasurer and county auditor; served in both branches of the legislature, and auditor of State.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election held November 7, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend at any precinct on that day?—A. I was at several of the precincts during the day.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress in this seventh Congressional district on the Democratic ticket, and on the Republican ticket, and on the National or Greenback ticket?—A. Mr. English was the Democratic candidate, Mr. Peelle the Republican, and Mr. Medkirk was the National candidate.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election in the city of Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket which has been made an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, Exhibit B, and ask you whether or not that is the ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it was a ticket similar to that.

Q. You saw the National ticket and the Democratic ticket voted at that same election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit D, headed National ticket, which has been made an exhibit to Mr. De Vay's deposition, and ask you if that is the National ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. I ask you the same question as to Exhibit C of Mr. De Vay's testimony, headed Democratic ticket?—A. I should say it was.

Q. I will ask you now whether the Republican ticket voted at that election had any distinguishing mark or other embellishment except the name of the candidates and the offices for which they were running?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent; that the ticket is the best evidence.)

A. The heading I regarded as a distinguishing mark.

Q. Can you describe what that distinguishing mark or embellishment was or is?—A. I do not know hardly what you want by the question.

Q. Wherein does it differ from ordinary type used in printing?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. The other tickets are plain type, and the Republican ticket has a figure in the head; and, in my judgment, an engraved head.

Q. You say that that is an engraved head?—A. That would be my judgment. That is printed from an engraving.

Q. Does the material upon which the ticket is printed designate it?—A. Oh, yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Do you call that plain white paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Well, if a person was to ask me for plain white paper, I should not think of presenting him with that.

(Answer objected to as not responsive to the question.)

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded or spring open?—A. Spring open.

Q. If another ticket were placed inside of that Republican ticket and then folded, and the tickets thus folded together dropped into the ballot-box, would the tickets be liable to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent and leading, and as assuming that tickets were folded one within another as indicated by the question.)

A. Yes, sir; I think they would.

Q. Could you, by sight, distinguish that Republican ticket when folded with the names inside from one printed on what you understand to be plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and leading.)

A. Yes, sir. Under certain conditions I could, and under certain other conditions I could not. Standing near a poll and seeing them used I could. I could not do it at a great distance or under unfavorable circumstances, but under anything like favorable circumstances I could tell them apart.

Q. Could you by touching it or handling it?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. Could you by sight when you got a chance to see it plainly folded?—A. Why, I could if it was folded in the ordinary way like tickets are folded around the polls. I could tell it from the other every time under anything like favorable conditions, mainly from its bulk; and if it is in order I could give the reason.

Q. At the polls, looking on and interested in the election and trying to ascertain what parties the voters belonged to, could you tell what ticket was being voted or what party the voter belonged to if he was voting this ticket?—A. Yes, sir. Standing at the poll, as near as from me to Mr. English, and seeing tickets handed in, I do not think I would miss it once in twenty times.

Q. That distance between you and Mr. English is about four feet.—A. Yes, sir; as near as an ordinary challenger would stand. My method of telling it would be mainly from its bulk. The ticket is considerably more than twice as bulky as either of these other tickets; and tickets as they are folded ordinarily about elections are folded into eight folds—eight times, presenting eight thicknesses. That would make this ticket from eight to ten times thicker than the other ticket, because each piece of it is more than as thick again, and when they are brought together it makes the whole of it from eight to ten times thicker. That is the way I have noticed them—by their clumsy, bulky character. A voter going to the polls, if he held one end, as they ordinarily do, the other end would spring open and show the thickness. I watched them vote, and I think I could tell them every time. I did not do it from the color, because I don't think anybody, unless it was a very close observer and had sharp eyes, could do that. To a person feeling them there cannot be any question about that, because of the stiff, harsh character of them. In taking hold of them there is more resistance than there is in the other, and you can tell by the thickness.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used for tickets at any election?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. Never before, that I remember of.

Q. Could you distingush the Democratic ticket voted at that election from the National ticket, both being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

A. I don't think I could. I did not try. I don't hardly think I could, because there is very little difference in the color. I would not attempt to distinguish any of them by color. The way I distinguish them is from their bulky, clumsy character more than anything else.

Q. What is your business now?—A. Publishing a newspaper, and jobbing, and stationery, and a general printing business; general printing and stationery business.

Q. You handle and buy paper?—A. I do not do a great deal of it personally.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. I have been connected with it for eight or ten years, but I have been now engaged in it for five or six years, to the best of my recollection.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You are manager of the Indianapolis Sentinel, are you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The leading Democratic paper in this State?—A. I don't know about it being the leading paper. It is a Democratic paper.

Q. So regarded by the Democratic party, is it not?—A. I shall not say that.

Q. It is the leading Democratic paper published in the city of Indianapolis?—A. I suppose it is so regarded.

Q. The columns of that paper were pretty liberally used in the last election for the advancement of Mr. English for Congress?—A. Reasonably so, I guess.

Q. Was it not more so for him than any other candidate on the Democratic ticket?—A. That is probably so.

Q. Had you any bet on the result of that Congressional election?—A. I believe I will decline to answer that question.

Q. I will ask you to take the National ticket and the Democratic ticket that you have been talking about and state the difference between those two tickets—I mean the quality of the paper and the weight.—A. Well, I should think they were both book paper. It is a very close question with me whether the National ticket is or not. The Democratic ticket clearly is. I guess they both probably would be regarded as book paper.

Q. Is not that Democratic ticket much heavier than the National ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it is some heavier. I should think it would be five to six pounds or six to eight to the ream. That is a mere guess.

Q. Can you distinguish the Democratic ticket from the National ticket by the feeling of it?—A. With a little practice I think I could.

Q. Cannot you now, without practice?—A. Yes, I can now.

Q. Don't you feel that the Democratic ticket is a little smoother and more compact?—A. I would distinguish it more from the thickness of it than the other.

Q. Is it not a fact that the Democratic ticket is a little smoother and more compact?—A. I don't think it is.

Q. Is there not a finer finish on the Democratic ticket than on the National ticket?—A. I would not like to say that there was. I think the chief difference in the paper is in the weight.

Q. Do you say that with reference to the Republican ticket, Democratic and National tickets?—A. I think the chief difference is in the weight. I am not a paper maker.

Q. Can you distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket by feeling, without reference to its thickness, in the finish? Can you tell?—A. On the finish alone, without any reference to thickness, I am not prepared to say that I could.

Q. Then I understand you, the only way you can distinguish the Republican ticket from any of the other tickets is because the Republican ticket is on a little heavier paper than the other?—A. I don't want to say it is a little heavier. It is more than twice as heavy—it is merely because it is heavier stuff and unyielding. I should think it was three times as heavy as this National ticket and more than twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket.

Q. You say the head of the Republican ticket is engraved?—A. That is my judgment. I am not an engraver. If that is type I never saw anything like that in type.

Q. Do you say that the words "Democratic Ticket" are plain type on that Democratic ticket?—A. They are type.

Q. You said a while ago that it was plain type. I want to call your attention to that especially.—A. It is not as plain as some other type. I do not believe it would be regarded as fancy type.

Q. I ask you whether that would be regarded as plain type, that "Democratic Ticket"?—A. I don't know that I know where the dividing line is between plain type and that that is regarded as not plain. It is type. I don't know that I know where the dividing line comes in between plain and ornamental type.

Q. I will now exhibit to you what purports to be the Democratic ticket voted in Hancock County: what are the words "Democratic Ticket" at the head of that ticket? What type is that?—A. Undoubtedly plain type.

Q. If that is plain type then that on the Democratic ticket cannot be plain type?—A. It is not the same character. There might be different shades and different varieties. I don't know whether that would be classed by type-makers as plain type or not. I am not skilled enough in the business to say. It is ordinary type that is used in such business. There is no doubt about that.

Q. I understand you to say that this Republican ticket is about twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket, and about three times as heavy as the National ticket?—A. I did not say it was three times as heavy. It was somewhere between twice and three times as heavy, I should think.

Q. About twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket?—A. That would be my judgment of it—twice as thick.

Q. As thick again, or twice as thick?—A. Yes, sir. I formed my conclusion from my knowledge of the weight per ream of the different papers—taking them as being about the same size.

Q. Your judgment is that the Republican ticket is about twice as thick, or as thick again. Which do you mean?—A. About twice as thick. About twice as heavy.

Q. Will you explain how it is that this ticket folded will be eight or ten times as large as the other?—A. Because there are eight folds there.

Q. There are in both of them?—A. Yes, sir. Only one fold is twice as thick as the other, and if you put eight together it will be eight times.

Q. If the Republican ticket is twice as thick as the Democratic ticket, how can it be any more possibly than twice as big when it is folded than the Democratic ticket?—A. Because there are eight folds in each, and each one of the folds is twice as thick as the other. I think I understand myself about this. If one thickness of that is double the other, eight thicknesses will be eight times as much.

Q. Fold them close together and press them in your finger and look, and tell the notary whether or not the Republican ticket is twice as large as the Democratic ticket when folded.

[The witness did as requested.]

A. Well, it is possible that I am mistaken about that. I could not say. I know this; that it is the difference in thickness between the two tickets that enabled me to tell the difference, and that enables everybody to tell.

Q. How much more bulky is the Republican ticket than the Democratic ticket as you have it folded together? Eight times?—A. I guess it is twice as heavy.

Q. You know of none of these tickets having been folded with others inside of them when they were voted, do you?—A. No, sir; not of my own knowledge.

JNO. C. SHOEMAKER.

The further taking of these depositions was, by agreement of both parties, adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, October 3, at 9.30 a. m.

WEDNESDAY, October 3, 1883—9.30 a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

FRANKLIN LANDERS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Franklin Landers; age, 58; residence, 402 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. I have resided here 58 years.

Q. Have you held any official positions?—A. I was senator of the district composed of Morgan and Johnson Counties at one time—elected in 1860. I was elected to Congress from this district in 1874.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. I was, and I attended the election.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity on that day?—A. I was judge of the second voting precinct, in the sixth ward.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress from this, the Seventh Congressional, district on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets at that election?—A. Mr. Peelle was the Republican candidate, and Mr. English was the Democratic candidate, and I have forgotten about the National.

Q. Was it Mr. Medkirk?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. You mean by Mr. English, William E. English?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Republican tickets voted for Mr. Peelle for Congress at that election in the city of Indianapolis?—A. I did.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked "Exhibit B to the deposition of W. O.

De Vay," headed "Republican Ticket"; is that the ticket that was voted by the Republicans at that election?—A. I think this is the ticket that was voted at our precinct.

Q. I call your attention also to the ticket marked "Exhibit C to the deposition of W. O. De Vay," headed "Democratic Ticket"; was that the same ticket voted at your precinct?—A. My recollection is that it was.

Q. Also, I call your attention to the ticket marked "Exhibit D to the deposition of W. O. De Vay," headed "National Ticket." Do you recollect whether that is the ticket voted by the Nationals?—A. I do not think there were many votes of that kind there.

Q. You do not recollect whether you saw that ticket?—A. I do not. I do not believe there was a vote there. There might have been a few of those votes cast. I disremember about it.

Q. Can you describe the appearance of that Republican ticket voted for Mr. Peelle that is shown you just now; and if it has got any distinguishing features you can say so?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Its head would seem to distinguish it.

Q. When lightly folded, would it remain folded, or be liable to spring open?—A. Well, it could not be folded as close as the other tickets could.

Q. If two of these tickets were folded together and held between the finger and thumb and put in the ballot-box would they be likely to spring apart and make two tickets?—A. They could not be held very close together. I think they would be likely to separate.

Q. Does the material, the thickness of the paper on which the ticket is printed, designate it?—A. It could be distinguished by the appearance. In counting these tickets, we were generally able to distinguish them by the bulk.

Q. By sight could you distinguish those tickets with the names folded inside?—A. From the bulk; yes.

Q. Is that plain white paper?

(Objected to.)

A. I do not know that I could answer that question. I am not very familiar with the different kinds of paper.

Q. Could you distinguish that ticket from the Democratic ticket when folded, with the name inside, by touching it?—A. Well, of course it has a different feeling, because it is much thicker.

Q. By touching it or handling it?—A. In counting the tickets we were able to distinguish them by the bulk of the paper.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used for tickets before, at any election?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I do not know that I ever did.

Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell by these tickets when folded with the names of the candidates on the inside—that is, the Democratic and Republican—whether or not the persons voting it were voting a Republican ticket?

(Objected to as leading; that the witness cannot answer for the rest of the board, &c.)

A. When I was on the board I thought I understood how the vote went by the appearance of the ticket.

Q. Do you think persons looking on at the polls could tell these Republican tickets when the voters would hand them to the inspector and the inspector place them in the ballot-box, with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, and for the reason that the witness cannot tell what other people could do.)

Q. Could the challengers, for instance, tell those tickets?

(Objected to.)

A. The challengers would have the same opportunity of distinguishing this ticket that the judges would have. If we could distinguish it they could distinguish it.

Q. You say you were an officer at your precinct?—A. I was a judge there, sir.

Q. Could you, as judge, distinguish this ticket in counting them and handling them?—A. I have stated that, I think, several times—that I could.

Q. You say you are not familiar with paper?—A. Of different qualities and of the names of certain kinds of paper, I am not.

Q. In the popular sense, do you understand that to be plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial as to what the popular opinion is.)

A. Well, it is white. I think it is a little thicker than white paper is generally understood to be, but as to that I am not posted.

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot destroyed or impaired at that election in the city of Indianapolis by the use of said Republican tickets?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and for the reason that the witness cannot answer the question except as to his own precinct.)

A. I don't know that I could answer that. There were other changes.

Q. You mean interlineations?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I am speaking of the ticket voted straight: would the character of the ticket impair or destroy the secrecy of the ballot at your precinct?—A. Well, if there were no changes on the ticket and no scratches or interlinement, to some extent it was.

Q, How many tickets of that character were voted for Mr. Peelle, if you know, at your precinct?—A. I do not recollect, sir.

Q. Were all the tickets voted of that character, so far as your recollection goes?—A. I could not say as to that. We may have had different tickets, you know. I am satisfied this ticket was voted.

Q. How many Republican votes were there at your precinct?—A. Well, sir, the majority there is about 300 generally. We get about 700 to 800 votes generally. The Republicans have about 300 majority—along in that neighborhood. I do not recollect about the majority on that occasion. I am speaking about the common majority.

Q. So far as your recollection goes, was the majority of the Republican tickets of that character?—A. Yes, sir. They may all have been of that character, but I could not say as to that.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I understood you to say that the heading of that ticket would seem to distinguish it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Distinguish it from what?—A. Well, you know that is rather a peculiar heading.

Q. I ask you what you mean; distinguish it from what?—A. Well, it would distinguish it from all the other tickets.

Q. Please to take the Democratic ticket that was handed to you a while ago, and I will ask you if by the heading of that Democratic ticket you would not distinguish it from the Republican ticket?—A. Certainly.

Q. Just in the same way?—A. It is not quite so conspicuous.

Q. I will ask you to take the National ticket. Could you not distinguish from the heading of the National ticket all the other tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Republican ticket, you say, is a little heavier paper than the Democratic ticket, and that is all you know about it, so far as the quality of the paper is concerned?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you that you acted as one of the judges at that election, and you could distinguish the Republican ticket by handling it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who received those tickets at the window and deposited them in the ballot-box?—A. Mr. McMurry was the inspector.

Q. He received them all and put them in the box?—A. I cannot say that he received all of them. He generally received them, and would ask the rest of us when he was absent.

Q. Did any one come to the window and complain to the board of judges about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many Democrats voted there that day?—A. I do not recollect; there was about 100.

Q. And there was no complaint about the character of this ticket, in any way, to the board of judges?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. As one of the judges, you were inside of the room, shut out from the crowd?—A. Yes, sir.

FRANKLIN LANDERS.

SILAS T. BOWEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Silas T. Bowen; age, 63; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided here?—A. Just about 30 years.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am in the book and stationery business.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. I think I was.

Q. Did you attend that election—were you at any of the precincts?—A. I believe I voted that year.

Q. Did you see the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets voted at that election?—A. I do not think I waited to see anybody else's ticket but my own. I think I went right across and presented my ticket and left. I do not think I saw any tickets voted.

Q. Have you seen any of those tickets since?—A. I saw the Republican ticket before

I went to the polls, and I saw the Democratic ticket before I went to the polls, or on the way there somewheres. I looked at the tickets. I did not see them voted.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets at that election, if you know?—A. Mr. Peelle on the Republican and Mr. English on the Democratic. I do not recollect the National. I suppose I could tell by thinking a moment.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked "Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay": was that the ticket that you saw on that day, as the Republican ticket?—A. I think it was. It was very like the ticket.

Q. Is there any figure, embellishment, or distinguishing mark at the head of the Republican ticket, or elsewhere, to designate it?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the ticket itself is the best evidence.)

A. You mean any embellishment on it.

Q. Yes, sir.—A. The heading is, I should think, a lithograph. I would not like to be positive, because they imitate them so very closely in print sometimes; but if I was to form an opinion I would judge it was a lithograph.

Mr. PEELLE. You mean engraving.

The WITNESS. What I mean by lithograph is an engraving on stone. I may be mistaken about that.

Q. Is that ticket on what is called plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and that the ticket must speak for itself.)

A. It is white paper, but I should call it a species of thin card-board. Still it is made like paper, and it is white, and it is plain, but thicker than what we would call ordinary paper.

Q. Is it plain white paper?—A. From that on, but it would not come under that head as classified in the circulars in our line, I think. I should designate that as a little different from the ordinary plain white writing paper.

Q. What is the material on which that ticket is printed?—A. It is paper.

Q. I know, generally speaking; but what kind do you call it?—A. We call it very light card-board. I think the lithographers call it plate paper. It is a special term that belongs specially to that business.

Q. Is it not called in your business book paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it not called writing paper or print paper?

(Objected to.)

A. We do not call it that. When it gets as thick as that we designate it by some other term. It is made like writing paper, though.

Q. If a man were to come to your store and ask to buy plain white paper, would you show him such material as that upon which the Republican ticket was printed?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Not unless he defined his request differently from that. We would not show him that paper for white paper.

Q. You say it is known among the profession as plate?—A. I think the lithographers call it that. I should call it very light bristol-board. It seems to be like that.

Q. When that Republican ticket was lightly folded, would it remain folded or would it be apt to spring open?—A. It would depend upon how firmly it was folded. If it was folded firmly it would not; if it was loosely folded, being stiffer, it would be more likely to spring open.

Q. You say you voted a Democratic ticket that day. I call your attention to this ticket marked "Exhibit C, to the deposition of W. O. De Vay." Is that the material upon which the Democratic ticket was printed, if you recollect?—A. I don't know that I voted the whole ticket. I should think that was the ticket.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket voted at that election from the Democratic ticket, by its appearance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you by its touch and handling?—A. Yes, sir. There is a marked difference in the thickness and touch.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket voted at that election from any ticket of like length and width that was printed either on plain white print paper, writing paper, or book paper, said tickets being folded separately with the names inside?—A. What we call writing paper ordinarily in business circles, or book paper of ordinary thickness, I could distinguish it. But this is paper.

Q. Yes, sir. Card-board is paper?—A. Yes, sir. I mean it is made like paper, and the distinguishing mark is in its unusual thickness for that purpose.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your politics.—A. I am a Democrat, I suppose.

Q. I will ask you to take that Democratic ticket and look at the heading of it and say whether or not the heading of that ticket would not distinguish it from any of the rest of the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if the heading of that ticket there is plain type—on that Democratic ticket.—A. It is type, but we would not call it the usual plain. I think it would not be called plain type.

Q. By the heading of the Democratic ticket, could you not distinguish that ticket from either the Republican or National tickets as readily as you could from the heading of either of the others?—A. I could, if I could see to read it.

Q. I mean by sight.—A. I suppose I could.

Q. State if the material upon which this Republican ticket is printed and upon which the Democratic ticket is printed are not both paper manufactured the same way.—A. I suppose they are.

Q. State if the color of the Republican ticket is not plain white.—A. It would be regarded as plain white.

Q. State, as a matter of fact, if it is not printed on plain white paper.—A. Yes, it is paper; it is plain and it is white, if you take the sense in which it is regarded, but my whole evidence explains it.

Q. You say that the lithographers recognize this in the trade as plate paper?—A. I think so. We do not have any in our own trade scarcely ever, but I think when it is used for that purpose it has a different preparation and there is a difference. Sometimes in examining colored paper that is called plate it is not finished quite the same way.

Q. In your trade it is not regarded as plate paper?—A. I would not like to say that. I think it is, but we do not do enough of that kind of business for me to say exactly.

Q. You say you can write on this?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can print on it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it can be used for either writing paper, print paper, or engraving paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in the book and stationery business in this city?—A. Twenty-nine years.

Q. You have been in the wholesale trade during all that time, as well as the retail?—A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You can write on card-board an inch thick?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can print on card-board an inch thick?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can write on wood—smooth, polished wood?—A. You might do that, but not very well.

Q. You can print on wood?—A. Yes, sir; we print our rulers, &c.

Q. And in one sense, the sense in which this question is asked, card-board an inch thick is paper?—A. Yes, sir. If it is paper—that is, made on paper, it is put together and then we call it card-board, and that is the proper term for it. Several sheets of paper are put together to make it thick, and sometimes, when you want it very thick, manila paper is put between it.

Q. Is it not true that there is bristol-board that is thinner than this Republican ticket?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; quite as thin. They can make it thinner, of course. There is ledger paper, used in making books, that is thinner, but not much thinner perhaps.

SILAS T. BOWEN.

EDWIN L. HASTINGS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. What is your age, and where do you reside?—Answer. Fifty-two; I reside at 550 North Illinois street in this city.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Twenty-six years, I think it is. I am not positive.

Q. What is your business?—A. A printer.

Q. How long have you been a printer?—A. About thirty-five years.

Q. Did you ever hold any office in this State?—A. I held the office of clerk of the printing bureau.

Q. Of the State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in the city on the 7th of November, 1882, at the time of the Congressional election in the seventh district?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you this ticket marked Exhibit B, and made a part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I ask you if you saw that ticket on that day?—A. The same kind of a ticket. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the character of the head of that ticket? Is that heading engraved?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent and leading, for the reason that the ticket will speak for itself.)

A. Yes, sir.
Q. What would you call the material on which that ticket is printed?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. It is paper.
Q. What kind of paper?—A. It is pretty thick paper.
Q. Do you know the technical name for it, or if it has a technical name?—A. It has no technical name.
Q. What is the name of it in the paper business?—A. We used to call it railroad paper. That is what we call it.
Q. Do you know of any other name for it than railroad paper?—A. No; no other name.
Q. Do you call it print paper?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. It is not print paper.
Q. Is it book paper?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. No; it is not book paper.
Q. Is it writing paper?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever know tickets printed on that material to be used for election purposes before?
(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)
A. Well, very nearly this class of ticket. Yes, I have known tickets to be printed before, the same thickness, so far as that is concerned.
Q. On the same quality of paper, is the question; the same kind.—A. Yes; just about the same kind.
Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Where are you now employed?—A. Mr. William B. Burford's.
Q. The same gentleman who testified here the other day?—A. I do not know.
Q. That Republican ticket that you have been talking about—I will ask you to state if that is paper.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the color of the ticket?—A. White.
Q. Is it plain white?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is not that a plain white ticket?—A. Yes, sir; plain white paper.
Q. I will ask you if that is not a printed ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you if that ticket is not printed on plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you have been engaged in the business how long?—A. Thirty-five years.
Q. You have had the handling of all kinds of paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you not formerly employed by the Journal Publishing Company?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you have an extensive acquaintance with the different qualities and kinds of paper?—A. I think so.
Q. I understand you to say that you have known tickets voted at elections to be printed on paper like that?—A. Yes, sir; I know of one election where they were printed just exactly like this—fully as heavy, I think.
Q. How long ago was that?—A. I do not recollect that.
Q. About how many years?—A. Four or five or six years ago. It seems to me it was the election before this one; I am not sure. I know we printed the ticket and it was printed on heavy paper.
Q. You printed the ticket at the Journal Company?—A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. For what party did you print that ticket that you referred to that you said was on paper such as that?—A. The Republican party.
Q. Do you know when that was done?—A. I could not say. I think it was the election before this, but I am not sure.
Q. You think for the Congressional election before this?—A. It seems to me it was.
Q. You think then a ticket of that character was used by the Republicans in the Congressional election preceding this one?—A. Well, it seems to me it was. That is my impression now.
Q. You say you have been in this business a long time; is not that what is called lithograph plate by the trade and business?
(Objected to as leading, immaterial, and not a proper re-examination.)
A. No; I do not think it is called lithographic plate, but it is a sort of a plate paper for the simple reason that it is highly calendered and unpressed.
Q. It is a kind of a plate paper.—A. It is for a certain purpose.

Q. What do yon mean by the word "paper?" What is paper?—A. Any kind?
Q. What do you mean by the word "paper" as distinguished from wood or iron?—A. Well, paper is simply paper, and there are a great many different grades of it.
Q. Would not you call bristol-board or card-board paper?—A. No.
Q. What would you call it?—A. I would simply call it card-board.
Q. Is not card-board paper?—A. Yes, sir. They all are.
Q. They are all paper. Is not that true—made out of the same material substantially?—A. Substantially, but the manipulation is different.
Q. It is paper then, is it not?—A. No, sir.
Q. What is it?—A. Card-board.
Q. What is it made out of?—A. Cotton.
Q. What is paper made out of?—A. Cotton also; but there is lots of it made out of rags.
Q. You say card-board is not paper?—A. Not in the sense you put it.
Q. You call that plate paper, and you say it is made out of the same material that card-board is substantially?—A. Yes, sir; it is made out of the same material, but there are other things put with it.
Q. Are there any other things put with it that distinguish it from plain book paper?—A. No, sir; I think not. I think this is nothing but ordinary, good book paper.
Q. You think this is ordinary, good book paper?—A. Yes, sir; the stock.
Q. What else is there in addition to the stock that makes it what you call plate paper?—A. It is the sizing and calendering.
Q. Is it not the sizing and calendering that distinguish card-board from plain white paper?—A. No, sir.
Q. What is the difference?—A. It is tougher. There are certain other things put in. Of course there is some card-board the same as this.
Q. There is some card-board the same as this Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; when it comes down to that, but it would be thicker.
Q. What would you call it if it would be half an inch thick and made out of the same material that is?
(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)
A. I never saw anything of that kind done.
Q. What would you call it if it was done?
(Objected to.)
A. I do not know what I would call it. I do not know what I would use it for if I had it.
Q. If the Republican ticket was printed on it you would think it was plain white paper, would you not?
(Objected to.)
A. No, sir; I would not. I do not think I would.
Q. If it were made an eighth or a quarter of an inch thick and gotten up on the same style, what would you call it?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. One-eighth of an inch thick would be a sort of a blank board.
Q. On white paper?—A. Yes, sir. It would be white paper, made out of the same material. Blank board is the same material as this.
Q. It would be one-eighth-of-an-inch-thick blank board?—A. Yes, sir. What is technically termed blank board.
Q. It is made out of similar material as that gotten up in the same style as that?—A. Yes, sir; only thicker.
Q. Would you call that blank board gotten up in that style plain white paper?—A. No, sir.
Q. Then your idea of plain white paper depends upon the thickness.—A. No, sir; it does not depend upon the thickness.
Q. You said if it was one-eighth of an inch thick, made of the same material and gotten up in the same style and calendered the same style, you would call it blank board. I ask you if the difference between that Republican ticket and blank board is not simply a difference in the matter of thickness?—A. No, sir; I think not.
Q. Explain the difference.—A. Blank board would have to be stuffed with something to——
Q. You said it was made out of the same material.—A. The top and bottom would be.
Q. It is not made in the same way?—A. Not exactly the same way this is.
Q. My question was: What would you call it if it was made of the same material and gotten up in the same manner one-eighth of an inch thick?—A. If it was gotten up in the same character I would call it the same as this.
Q. And you call that plain white paper?—A. If it was gotten up one-eighth of an inch thick it would not hold. You could not hold a sheet of that made of this same material. It would not hold straight.

Q. Do you mean it would bend?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You would call it plain white paper?—A. I would call this (Republican ticket).
Q. You would call that, made one-eighth of an inch thick in the same manner, plain white paper?—A. If it was made out of this same stock. It does not make any difference about the thickness.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I hand you this ticket marked Exhibit C——
Mr. WILSON. Do you make him your witness?
Mr. PEELLE. No, sir.
Mr. WILSON. Is this re-examination?
Mr. PEELLE. Cross-examination of what you have brought out.
Mr. WILSON. I will object to this examination as improper at this time. We have finished our re-examination. It is improper, irrelevant and immaterial, and not, in any sense, a cross-examination.
Q. State whether or not the Republican ticket which you hold in your hand and the Democratic ticket are not both of the same quality and kind of paper, except that the Republican ticket is a little heavier than the other?—A. No, sir. They are not.
Q. What is the difference?—A. This is supersized and calendered paper. [Referring to "Exhibit C" in De Vay's testimony.]
Q. How can you tell that?—A. I have handled so much of this paper that I know it.
Q. I will ask you if you don't lithograph on that kind of paper.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You can lithograph on that?—A. As easily as we can on anything.
Q. I will ask you again, if the only difference between that Republican ticket that you hold in your hand and the Democratic ticket is that the Democratic ticket is not on as heavy quality of paper.—A. The Democratic ticket is a better quality of paper when you come down to the quality. You simply wanted to know about the quality.
Q. The difference in the paper.—A. Well, this [Democratic ticket] is a better quality of paper.
Q. I will ask you if in the trade both tickets are not printed upon what is known as plain white paper?—A. Yes. Plain white paper. That is as near plain white paper as they can get. They are both plain white.
Q. And they are both paper?—A. Yes, sir. Only the Democrats have a little finer article of paper than the Republicans had. That is the only thing.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that the Democratic ticket is printed on supersized and calendered paper.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is not that book paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Plain white, supersized, calendered paper, which you mean, is book paper.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You say it can be lithographed upon as easily as the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it used for lithographing purposes to the same extent as the other?
(Objected to as incompetent.)
A. I could not tell you whether it is or not; I do not think it is.
Q. You do not think it is used to the same extent?—A. You mean that heavy?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; I do not think it is, but it could be done; it could be lithographed on; you can lithograph on tissue paper for that matter, or writing paper, or book paper, or plate paper either; there is no trouble about lithographing.
Q. Is not plate paper usually the paper that is used for lithographing?—A. No; not when you take the majority of lithographing; I should say no.
Q. What is plate paper used for principally?—A. Oh, plate paper is used for lithographing.
Q. What is it principally used for?—A. Principally used for lithographing and for fine wood-cut printing.
Q. Is book paper principally used for lithographing?—A. No, sir.
Q. You say that the Democratic ticket is printed on a better quality of paper?—A. Yes, sir; a better quality than this Republican.
Q. What is the price, if you know, per ream of the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. That would depend upon the number of pounds to the ream.
Q. According to the character of the paper you have in your hand. You have been in the business and you could say how many pounds to the ream there would be? What would you say to that?—A. That I could not tell.
Q. Would you say that the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed would cost less than the material upon which the Democratic ticket was printed per ream?

(Cost of the paper objected to as immaterial, the quality only being in question.)

A. That I could not say, and I could not say it because I don't know the heft of this paper.

Q. Does not the quality of the paper determine its price, in a measure?—A. Yes, sir; but the heft, of course, would come in right there.

Q. What would you say was the price per ream of book paper of the character of this upon which the Democratic ticket was printed at the time of the election on the 7th of November, 1882, if you know?—A. $8\frac{1}{2}$ or $8\frac{3}{4}$; I have forgotten.

Q. What would you say was the price of the material, per ream, upon which the Republican ticket was printed, at that time?—A. About 7c; I should think so.

Q. What was it a ream?—A. All these papers run by the number of pounds there is in a ream; it is so much a pound. From $8\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{3}{4}$ was the price of that paper at that time.

Q. Your answers in reference to cost relate to cost per pound?—A. Yes, sir; cents.

EDWIN L. HASTINGS.

EMMETT L. ROSE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Emmett L. Rose; age, 29; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indianapolis?—A. 29 years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election; if so, what?—A. I was clerk of the election board in the second precinct of the twenty-third ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you the ticket marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay; is that the character of the ticket that was used by the Republicans at that election?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. I will ask you, does that Republican ticket have any distinguishing mark or embellishment except the name of the candidate and the office for which it was voted?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the embellishment?—A. At the head.

Q. Is that an engraved heading, or what is it?—A. A lithographed heading. Do you want the distinguishing marks?

Q. What are the distinguishing marks?—A. You can see through the head of every ticket that is folded. You can see through the ticket.

Q. Does the material upon which that ticket is printed designate it?—A. Yes, sir. The material designates it as the ticket that was used that day.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a journalist and traveling man.

Q. How long have you been connected with journalism?—A. Seven years.

Q. What would you call that material upon which that ticket is printed?—A. I am not versed as to the material, but I should say it was cardboard, lithograph plate.

Q. When lightly folded would that ticket remain folded, or would it be apt to spring open?—A. It springs open.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside of it, and, thus folded, the tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would the ticket be likely to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?—A. It would; and there was evidence found in the box that they had been put in there.

Q. Could you distinguish that ticket by sight?—A. Oh, yes; we could very plainly distinguish it.

Q. I show you the Democratic ticket, marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay; I will ask you if that was the ticket that was used by the Democrats at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish by sight the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket when they were folded?—A. Very easily.

Q. Could you do it by touching and handling it?—A. Yes, sir; I could. I did not touch any of the tickets on election day in any capacity, but I could if I had touched them. The way I know they could be distinguished by touch is that I was sitting very close to the inspector at the time of the election, and sometimes when a Republican ticket would be voted he would turn to me and say: "There is another good Republican vote going in the box."

Q. Could you distinguish the tickets that were voted by sight?—A. Yes, sir; very easily. I could distinguish them so easily that I watched very closely during the day, and I only missed it five votes with the number of Republican tickets that were in the box at the close of the count on a bet of the cigars with the inspector, Mr. Fred Ward.

Q. Was he a Republican?—A. Yes, sir. He is candidate for councilman in our ward. I missed it five. I had five too many.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls tell these Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector, and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I could say yes. We could hear them speaking, the challengers and the persons on the outside, and when a man would put in his ticket I could tell that they distinguished it on the outside.

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot destroyed or impaired at said election at the precinct where you were voting, or where you were an officer, by the use of said Republican tickets?

(Objected to as a matter of opinion.)

A. Yes, sir; except so far as the scratching went.

Q. How many such Republican tickets were voted for Mr. Peelle, if you know?—A. I could not say positively. There was 122, I think, for the head of the ticket. I cannot say positively whether for Mr. Peelle or not.

Q. You mean for the head of the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. Had you any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. No, sir; except so far as the cigars.

Q. Did you not have a bet on Mr. English's success in this Congressional district?—A. No, sir.

Q. With any one at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. For whom were you traveling at that time?—A. The Indianapolis Sentinel Company.

Q. For whom are you traveling now?—A. I have been with the Sentinel until two weeks ago.

Q. The Indianapolis Sentinel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not engaged pretty actively in the last campaign in Mr. English's interests in this Congressional district?—A. No, sir; not any more than any one else's interest that was on the Democratic ticket. Not specially in Mr. English's interest.

Q. Where did you travel during the last campaign?—A. In Indiana.

Q. Did you travel in Hancock and Shelby Counties any?—A. I have been at Greenfield, Hancock County. I never done any business there. Mr. Bigham went there and he done that.

Q. You were one of the clerks at what precinct?—A. The second precinct, or lower precinct, of the twenty-third ward. I was during election day.

Q. Who was inspector there?—A. Fred Ward was the inspector, now a candidate for councilman from our ward on the Republican ticket.

Q. Who were the judges?—A. Mr. John Vandersauer was the Democratic, and the Republican was Mr. Schultz, the first name I have forgotten.

Q. Who was the other clerk with you?—A. His name I have forgotten.

Q. How far were you from the other clerk of that board?—A. He was on the other side of me. I was between him and the inspector.

Q. You were very close together?—A. Yes, we were sitting at the same table.

Q. You could both hear about the same thing that was going on, could you not?—A. Well, I don't know whether he could hear conversation that I could hear for the reason that I was closer to the inspector. I was closer to the election board. I was there a little early and I got a seat close to the election board where I could see outside and be near.

Q. Were you nearer the window than the election board themselves?—A. No, sir.

Q. They were nearer to the window than you were?—A. Yes, sir; part of the time, and part of the time I was as near as they were.

Q. You was there taking down the names of the people as they voted?—A. Whenever they were called; yes, sir.

Q, How many votes were there in that precinct?—A. I think there was 491. That is my impression.

Q. Do you say now you could hear conversation that went on on the outside?—A. Very distinctly.

Q. It did not interfere with your duties in taking down names?—A. Not at all.

Q. If you could hear it, the clerk by you could hear the same?—A. Yes, sir; the judges could hear it positively. So far as the clerk was concerned, I don't know whether he was paying attention to it.

Q. Did you ever have any experience in handling or dealing in paper?—A. Yes, I have had some, but very little. I have sold book work for the Sentinel, but I am not a connoisseur in that line of business.

Q. You do not know what this kind of paper is as an expert at all?—A. I can say that it does not take an expert to tell that kind of paper. It is very common in printing offices. I have been in printing offices a good while. It is lithograph plate.

Q. It is very common?—A. Very common for lithographing. I have seen a good deal of paper lying around of this character. It is generally used for railroad printing and lithographing.

Q. It is very common paper around a printing office?—A. Common around all printing offices that do railroad printing and lithographing. We do not do lithographing, but it is also used for lithographing.

Q. It is common about your establishment?—A. It is used there for railroad printing. I have seen it there. I am not an expert.

Q. When have you seen it there?—A. Different times.

Q. Is there any of that kind of paper there now?—A. I could not say now.

Q. When did you see it there last?—A. I could not say.

Q. Are you certain you ever saw any of that kind of paper around there?—A. Not as an expert; but I am very positive that I have. I said I was not an expert.

Q. You say the heading of that ticket is engraved.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the difference between a lithographing and engraving?—A. Yes, sir. I should say so—not as an expert, because I never done any lithographing. I think any person can tell a woodcut from an engraving or a lithograph.

Q. You think anybody can?—A. Anybody that has handled books at all.

Q. You say the heading of that ticket is lithographed?—A. I would not say positively whether it was a lithograph or a woodcut. Come to look at it, my impression would be—I think it is a woodcut.

Q. Take this Democratic ticket which has been made an exhibit here in the testimony of Mr. De Vay; state if the heading of that Democratic ticket is not a woodcut also.—A. I am not positive as to that. You could make the same letters as these very easily with type, but you cannot make the other.

Q. Is there not any type of that kind made?—A. Oh, yes, sir; there is type of that character.

Q. You are not certain whether that is type or a woodcut [Democratic ticket]?—A. I could not tell positively about whether that is type or a wood-cut, but you cannot find any type of that character [Republican ticket].

Q. When you was down there as clerk at that precinct did any one come to the window and complain to the judges about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. Oh, there was no complaint, of course; they merely made the assertion.

Q. There was no complaint made to the board about this ticket being wrong in any way?—A. There was a good deal of complaint in so far as assertions.

Q. I am asking you about any complaint to the judges—to the board. Did any Democrat or Republican come to the board and make any complaint about that ticket; and, if so, who was it?—A. I am not positive as to that; I merely say that I heard them speaking about it. Different parties spoke of the ticket in a complaining manner.

Q. Give us the names of the persons you heard speak of that ticket in a complaining way.—A. I could not do it; there was so many there that I could not be positive. If I would tell you now and lay it to any certain man that made a complaint of that kind I would probably be mistaken as to the man.

Q. You cannot give the name of any man?—A. Almost every man at the polls that was interested in any way politically in the election spoke of the character of the ticket.

Q. Now give us the names of some of them.—A. I expect I would name almost every Democrat in the ward. I could not positively do that. This has been a year ago, and a man's memory don't last him that far. It was a general complaint; I will say that.

Q. You say now it was a general complaint, but you cannot give the name of any particular individual who composed that general?—A. No, sir; that is correct.

Q. Did I understand you to say that the Republican ticket was voted by any one who had a ticket folded inside?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it that voted that way?—A. I can not tell you, because it came out of the box.

Q. How do you know that any man voted more than one ticket at that poll?—A. I don't know positively that they did, but they were together when they came out, and there was a discussion on the board at the time about the ticket.

Q. How many tickets were there of that kind?—A. About but one, because there was discussion about that.

Q. Who engaged in that discussion?—A. There was not much said about it. They were talking and they were counting, and there was not much said about it. The tickets may have fallen together. That ticket that way [indicating] and another ticket could have fallen in at the side of a ticket of this character, because there was a spring back. You could not distinguish that there were fraudulent tickets voted for that reason.

Q. I understood you to say that there were two tickets voted by some one.—A. No, sir; I say there were two tickets together.

Q. Don't it frequently occur that tickets run together in boxes, no matter what kind of paper it is?—A. No, sir; not with that kind of paper.

Q. Were you ever on an election board before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that tickets folded up and put in the box all together without shaking; and don't you know, further, that before they count out the tickets they shake them up and frequently tickets are folded together?—A. Before they commence counting they generally shake the box for the reason if any tickets have fallen closely together, if they are folded in such a way, that they would come apart. That is the reason there was a discussion on this ticket.

Q. Is it not a fact that the Republican ticket you speak of, opening a little easier than the one you speak of, would be more likely to have another one in it than the Democratic ticket, if what you say were true?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. I ask you if it would not be more likely, in the shaking of the box, to have another ticket fall within that ticket than the Democratic ticket would have?—A. I will say that it would; and, on the other hand, I will say that it would be just as likely, if there were two tickets fell together in the box, that they would be separated.

Q. And would not they be more likely to come together more than the other?—A. Not more likely than that would be to separate them.

Q. I ask you, if that ticket, in shaking the box, would not be more likely to have another ticket fall within it than the Democratic ticket you have spoken of would have?—A. I don't know whether it would be more likely, but probably it would.

Q. Then you don't say that anybody voting at that poll voted one of those Republican tickets with another folded within it?—A. I do not say positively. I said there were tickets found together.

Q. Do you know the number of tickets voted at the polls there, of all parties?—A. 491, I think.

Q. How many names did you have on your poll list?—A. I think we had 491. Wait a minute! I want to stop on that. We had more tickets in the box than we had names, because there was a discussion about it at the end of the time, and my impression is it was either two or five, but you can find that out from inquiry I think. That is my impression.

Q. Don't that frequently occur, that there are more tickets than there are names, or more names than there are tickets?—A. It is very common that there are more names than there are tickets, but in this case there was more tickets than names.

Q. And that one ticket that was folded with another is the only ticket about which there was any discussion?—A. There was not much discussion about that. It was mentioned, "Here is a ticket; what shall we do with it?" and we looked at it, and had a few words about it, and I think the decision was that it should be counted.

Q. Was there any objection to the counting?—A. I think there was a little objection, but it was withdrawn. It was very late in the count. I cannot recollect exactly.

Q. Did you ever find any Democratic tickets folded together?—A. Not that I remember of. We found a case where there was one ticket—one Democrat and one Republican ticket—folded together and voted, and they were neither counted. I believe there was a case of that kind where there was a Democratic and Republican ticket folded together. The party did not want to vote at all, I suppose; he merely wanted to make a stand off. I am not positive whether we counted that one for each or not. I think we threw it out.

Q. How long have you been traveling for the Sentinel Company?—A. I cannot say just the length of time. I have been traveling off and on; part of the time not traveling, and part of the time something else. For two years, I guess.

Q. Did you have any conversation with any one about this case before you came here?—A. I met Mr. English.

Q. Which Mr. English?—A. William E. English. I was just crossing the street, and he shook hands with me and said, "I have got a subpœna for you," and I said, "What about?" and he said, "This contested election," and I said, "You had better let me come up right now and attend to it, because I probably will not have time afterwards."

Q. That is all the conversation you had?—A. Outside of what we had in there a few minutes ago. [Referring to adjoining room.]

Q. I understand you to say you do not know anything, as an expert, about the paper?—A. No, sir; I am not an expert.

Q. What is the color of the Republican ticket?—A. I will say this: that I am not an expert on colors either; but if the Democratic ticket is white, it is not white. If it is white, the Democratic ticket is not white.

Q. You can take the Democratic and Republican ticket together and compare them.—A. I would say that on election day, as the tickets came in and before they were soiled, but straight and nice as they came to the board, it was very easy to distinguish the tickets by the color, in addition to the card-board. The other voters did it.

Q. You are mistaken about that.—A. I cannot be mistaken, because——

Q. Take those tickets that have been made exhibits, and I will ask you to state the color of that Republican ticket.—A. Well, it is not the color of the Democratic.

Q. I am not asking you that.—A. I am not an expert on colors.

Q. State if that Republican ticket is not white.—A. Yes, it is a shade of white.

Q. State if it is not plain white.—A. It is a shade of plain white.

Q. You are not an expert on the quality of paper, or on the colors of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. What you have stated on the subject as to the quality of the paper is a mere question of opinion with you?—A. It is an opinion based on considerable experience.

Q. I understood you to say that you had had no experience.—A. I am not an expert, I said.

Q. I understood you to say you had had no experience in the handling or selling of paper.—A. I have had experience in selling. I have sold a good deal of book work.

Q. Did you ever sell any of that kind of paper that the Republican ticket is printed on?—A. I don't know that I ever did. I have had considerable experience in handling paper of various kinds, but not as an expert.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You speak of Mr. Bingham going to Hancock County; was it Mr. Bingham in the employ of the Sentinel?—A. Yes, sir; I said I was of the impression Mr. Bingham went there; I never went there at any time.

Q. You have traveled for the Sentinel Company?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You did not answer my question when I asked you what you were engaged in now.—A. You asked me what I was engaged in at the time.

Q. State what you are engaged at now.—A. At present, not anything.

Q. Are you in the employ of any one, in any wise?—A. I am in the employ of the Sentinel this far—whenever there is anything to do I expect I will do it.

Q. Are you in the employ of any one else in any way, shape, or form?—A. Not for two weeks.

Q. What business are you engaged in to-day?—A. I have an engagement.

Q. What engagement is that?—A. I have an engagement with another firm, but I am not employed at the present time on anything, and have not been for two weeks, and have been up to two weeks.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you ever in the employ of William E. English?—A. No, sir.

Q. For any political purpose?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever go anywhere on any political errand to Hancock County or Shelby County?

A. No, sir. [Objected to as incompetent.] I have been employed with the Sentinel for a long time in different capacities. I was city editor for nearly three years, and was a reporter for a while, and I have traveled for the Sentinel and solicited for them and sold book-work for them, and done most everything.

Q. Has the Sentinel Company a job-room for doing job-work, binding books, and getting up records for county officers, &c.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it do any railroad work?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever travel for that department?—A. No, sir; I have sold book-work in the county offices.

E. L. ROSE.

ERNEST KITZ, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Ernest Kitz; my age, 40 years; and I reside at Circle Park Hotel, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. Ten years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882; and did you attend the same?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election; and, if so, what?—A. I acted as inspector of the second precinct of the eleventh ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to this ticket, which is marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and headed "Republican Ticket." Is that the ticket that was used and voted on that day?—A. That seems to me to be the ticket; and I believe I have one or two of them myself.

Q. You saw the Democratic ticket voted on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the ticket I call your attention to, marked Exhibit C to the same deposition, and headed "Democratic Ticket?"—A. That is the ticket, I believe.

Q. Did you see the National ticket that day?—A. I saw one or two, I believe.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit D, headed "National Ticket." Is that it?—A. That looks like it.

Q. Is there any distinguishing mark or embellishment, except the name of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted, on the Republican ticket?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. I see an embellishment in the head.

Q. Do you know whether that is an engraved heading?—A. I cannot tell very well. I do not think it is engraved. It seems to me to be printed, because it shows on the other side and the regular engraving don't show on the other side.

Q. What would you call the material on which that ticket is printed?

(Objected to for the reason that the witness has not shown any knowledge of paper.)

Q. Did you ever have any experience in buying paper?—A. I have bought considerable.

Q. What would you call that material?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I would not call it paper at all.

Q. What would you call it?—A. I would call it a thin board. It is almost as thick as Bristol, and it is smoother.

Q. Did you ever know of such material being used before for tickets?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. No, sir; I never did.

Q. When lightly folded would that ticket remain folded or be liable to spring open?—A. It sprung open when there was two in my hand, and I called the man back and made him deposit one only.

Q. You say it is liable to spring open?—A. I can say so because I counted all the tickets and saw them all spring open after the box was opened up.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside of this ticket, and thus folded the tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would this ticket be liable to spring open so as to release the inclosed ticket and make two ballots?—A. It might if the box were shaken up and handled.

Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by sight?—A. I could tell every one without seeing them.

Q. Could you tell it by touch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position did you say you held?—A. Inspector.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls tell thsee Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector, and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and for the reason that the witness cannot tell what the crowd would do.)

A. I made a few observations about it, and I saw that the outside were always looking——

Q. Could they tell the ticket?—A. My opinion they could tell every one.

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot destroyed or impaired at that election at the precinct where you acted as inspector—— A. No, sir.

Q. (Question continued.) by the use of said Republican ticket?—A. Was it impaired?

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot destroyed or impaired by the use of said ticket?—A. I took notice that the challengers took good care when they saw a stiff ticket they would not challenge.

Q. What challenger?—A. Mr. Porter, son of Governor Porter.

Q. What party does he belong to?—A. I think he belongs to the Republican party. I never asked him. I took notice that they commenced to challenge the other frequently when there was a little trouble, and I kept my hand around the ticket before I dropped it in the box and my hand covered the ticket, and sometimes a man would hand up his ticket and I would hold my hand in front, but I took notice that there was little trouble whether they would challenge when the name was not on the poll-book after that, but that only lasted a little while. We had a little squabble, about half an hour, and everything went off pleasantly again.

Q. How many Republican tickets were voted for Mr. Peelle, if you know?—A. I do not know as I could tell you. He had a majority there.

Q. What was the Republican vote; can you recollect?—A. I cannot tell you. I have got a poor head for figures. I know the vote in the precinct; I have got it down.

Q. How many of the Republican tickets were of the character of this; all of them? (Objected to as leading.)

A. The Republican tickets were all printed like this, but some were scratched.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You are the present Democratic township trustee in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were inspector at your precinct in the eleventh ward at the last election?—A. Yes, sir; appointed by law.

Q. I will ask you if there was any complaint made to the board there about the character of the Republican ticket that you have spoken of on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom?—A. Mr. McDonald was the first one. He came and objected and called the attention to it.

Q. State now if you know of any one that was misled or deceived in voting there at that poll in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. I could not say that, not being outside where the tickets were handled. I can tell you one case where some one deposited two tickets.

Q. They were not deposited in the ballot-box, were they?—A. I did not deposit them.

Q. Could you not more readily detect two Republican tickets folded together than two Democratic tickets?—A. I could in this case, because he did not have them folded very hard.

Q. Could you not, anyhow, detect two tickets of the Republicans folded together better than the Democrats?—A. I could if they were not folded out enough to get through the slit in the box. The slit would admit three.

Q. Was the Republican ticket on heavier paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It made a larger bulk when folded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not true that two Democratic tickets folded together would be more liable to be voted at that precinct or any other precinct by the familiarity you would have in feeling the tickets?—A. I can tell just two Republican tickets when they were folded. I could see four corners. If I could not tell by the touch I could tell by the looks. I could not tell any of them by the touch. By folding two tickets there would be four single corners.

Q. I will come back to the plain question again: if in consequence of the weight of the Republican ticket, if two Democratic tickets would not have been more likely to have been folded together and voted without detection than two Republican tickets?—A. I suppose two Republican tickets would have weighed heavier. You could easily tell by the weight.

Q. By the thickness?—A. It might be by the thickness.

Q. Could you not tell that by the Republican ticket much quicker than the Democratic?—A. I could if I paid attention.

Q. You were paying attention?—A. I was paying attention looking at it, not to touch, to see if I could see four corners sticking out of it.

Q. What would be the difference between two Democratic tickets folded together and one Republican ticket folded by itself; what would be the difference when handed to you, as inspector, in the feeling?—A. I suppose the two Democratic tickets would not be as heavy as the Republican.

Q. I am speaking about one single Republican ticket.—A. I cannot tell without scales. I suppose two of them would weigh about as much as one Republican.

Q. In consequence of that would not two Democratic tickets be more likely to be voted at the poll than two Republican tickets folded together?—A. I would not trust my sense of weight. I would trust my eyes, because, in such a small weight, you cannot tell by your hand.

Q. You can tell by the bulk?—A. You can tell by the thickness.

Q. If you take two Republican tickets and fold them together in eight folds or any other number of folds, and take two Democratic tickets and fold them in the same manner, would not the Republican ticket be less liable to be voted than the Democratic ticket, by feeling?—A. By bulk; it is plain enough to be seen that it would make more of a bulk.

Q. You do not know of any other Republican ticket that was voted there that day that had another folded inside of it?—A. No other; only except that I had it half in, and I must say that the weight did not tell me, or the touch either. It was half in, and I saw those sharp corners, and the bulk did not keep me from putting it in, and the other judges were looking on, and I saw the four corners sticking out.

Q. Could you not as readily distinguish the Democratic from the Republican ticket?—A. Certainly I could.

Q. You say the heading of the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I think it is printed. Of course I am not an expert, but I have had a little experience in it.

Q. You know nothing about the quality of the paper?—A. I know it is almost equal to bristol-board. Bristol-board has got a better finish.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the subject at all?—A. Yes, sir; I have bought a great deal of paper.

Q. For what?—A. For the city directory, in printing cards in Philadelphia.

Q. If you know what kind of paper it is printed on state what it is.—A. I cannot say that it is such, but I should call it thin bristol-board, unfinished. The bristol-board is smoother. It has a smooth finish. It is not glazed by smooth finish.

Q. Are they all paper?—A. They are all made out of rags, I suppose.

Q. I am asking you if that is paper that the Republican ticket is printed on?—A. I suppose it is the same material of paper.

Q. What is the color of the Republican ticket?—A. White.

Q. Plain white?—A. It is not very white.

Q. It is what you understand to be plain white?—A. It is plain white; yes, sir.

Q. Is it the same color as the Democratic ticket would be?—A. The color is the same. I think it is about the same color. It looks like a little more intensely white because it is thicker.

Q. Look at the head of that Democratic ticket that you have in your hands that has been made an exhibit; is that plain type?—A. There are so many types I do not know as you could call it plain or not.

Q. Is that plain type?—A. There is no embellishment about it except a few dashes there.

Q. Look in the body of the ticket and say if you see any dashes there.—A. I do not see any there.

Q. Do you not see some dashes down in that ticket with some little rings about them?—A. That is dividing the different parts of the ticket.

Q. There are dashes there with little circles in the center part of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I don't call that an embellishment.

Q. You say that that ticket in the words "Democratic Ticket" is plain type?—A. I do not say it is plain type. There is no cut made for this. It is the plain type, but this type (Republican ticket) is cast this way. And this is made from the cut.

Q. I am not asking you how that is cast. I am asking you whether those letters there indicate plain type?—A. I should call them plain, because they are printed that way and set together in the stick.

Q. Take this National ticket and see if the words "National Ticket" at the head, if they are plain type.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the difference between that and the National?—A. There is no difference there, only one is called——. I do not know the difference. One might be called "pica" and the other something else, but they are plain and set up in letters as they are taken out of the box, while the Republican is made of cast. It is made after a cut, and the others are taken out of the box and set together in the composing-stick.

Q. I am asking you to state whether or not that "Democratic Ticket" is plain type?—A. I should call it plain type; none of it has a finish to the "C."

Q. If that is plain type, state whether or not the words "National Ticket" on that National ticket are plain type?—A. It is the same shape, too.

Q. Are they the same kind of letters?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is the difference?—A. If I could get the samples from the foundery I could tell you the difference.

Q. State from that ticket the difference between those tickets?—A. The type is a little fatter, and they have a light stroke, and there are no shades on the Democratic ticket.

Q. What are those little dashes there?—A. Just finishing the letter; one man makes his "O" with a dash and another does not.

Q. That indicates it is not plain type?—A. I do not see any embellishment to it. Instead of making a straight finish it is turned around. I think I write a plain hand; sometimes I make my letters different from another style. I would not call it fancy writing, because I cannot do fancy writing.

Q. Don't you say that "Democratic Ticket" there is embellished type?—A. No, sir.

Q. Shaded?—A. There is no shades there.

Q. What is the difference between that lettering and the National ticket?—A. There is a difference in the small letters in the letters of the National ticket.

Q. Don't you see in that Democratic ticket there are shades?—A. There are some shades.

Q. Curls?—A. The finish of it is curled instead of straight, but there is no superfluous dashes. It is only——

Q. Don't that necessarily make it uncommon type?—A. I should not call it uncommon type, because it is type that is in the market. I would not call it uncommon type, though it is finished different from the other. If either one was uncommon I would call the other uncommon.

Q. Now you say, notwithstanding the dots and dashes in the letters, the finish of the Democratic ticket is plain type?—A. I should call it plain type. I should not call it "pica," or "pearl," or whatever the different denominations are. It has got its name, and you may find it among the common type in the printers' sample-book, but you will not find anything like the Republican ticket. I have got a little printing office myself; it cost me about fifty or sixty dollars.

Q. I am not asking you about the different quality or kinds of type?—A. I understand you. I should not call it fancy, because it is commonly sold for plain type.

Q. That is what you understand as plain type?—A. I should call it plain type, just as well finished, though that has a shade.

ERNEST KITZ.

JOHN MALONEY. being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. I am in the neighborhood of 55 years of age, and I reside in Indianapolis, in the seventeenth ward.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I have lived here since 1854.

Q. How long have you lived in this State?—A. I have been out once or twice in La Fayette, and I worked here before I made it my residence, but I have lived in this State since about 1855.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. I was judge on the board in the seventeenth ward.

Q. Which precinct?—A. The lower one, on South street.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket that was voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress?—A. I ought to. I handled them.

Q. I show you ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and ask you if that was the ticket that was voted and used by the Republicans on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that Republican ticket any distinguishing mark or embellishment on it?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, and that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. The face of it shows what it is. It is distinguished, of course. Anybody can see at once, when it is folded up, what it is. I could tell every one that was voted there as quick as they came up.

Q. How would you tell them?—A. By the stiffness of the board, and also by this heading here.

Q. When lightly folded would that ticket remain folded or would it spring open?—A. Spring open. I had kicked half a dozen times about the ticket where they have been lapped together, and they would spring open and come down when they were dropped in the box. It would be regularly folded, and I got this inspector there—he keeps a boiler and machine-shop. Hetherington, he was inspector, and I kicked against him for the way he acted with the tickets. He would take them corner-ways, and some of them would lap out. He made it a point where they were lapped out that way. One was smaller than the other. [Illustrating.] That is generally the way they were, and they would go down in the box where they would be stuck in that way. [Illustrating.] He would take them, and they would drop out, and as a general it dropped out—give them a shake and they would drop out.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket by touching it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you by sight?—A. By sight as well.

Q. Did you see the Democratic ticket voted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you this Democratic ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and ask you if that was the ticket used at that election by the Democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket by sight and touch from that Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; very easy. Any man could do that. Any one that has been around elections could see it; not me alone, but any other person could tell.

Q. How many votes were cast at that precinct?—A. I cannot say exactly; it was somewhere in the neighborhood or close to 700. A fellow cannot keep these things in his head all the time.

Q. And this Republican ticket that has been shown you was the Republican ticket that was voted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know how many were voted?—A. Somewhere close on in the neighborhood of 700 is the total vote.

Q. Did the Democrats or Republicans have a majority?—A. The Democrats had a majority.

Q. How much?—A. I think something like between 40 or 50 majority.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat, sir.

Q. Had you any wager on the result of the Congressional election last November?—A. No, sir; I had none at all. I have often bet on elections, but not then.

Q. You were judge of what precinct in the seventeenth ward?—A. At the southern or lower precinct.

Q. How many names were there recorded on the poll-list there by the clerk?—A. To the best of my recollection there was more votes I think really on the poll than there was names, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Do you remember anything about it? State how it was.—A. I cannot exactly state how it was, but to the best of my opinion there was some more votes in the box than there was names for.

Q. Have you ever been judge of elections before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That frequently occurs, does it not, that there are more tickets in the box than there are names?—A. Sometimes it occurs.

Q. There was nothing remarkable about it this time, was there, from what it usually is?—A. There was more of it then than at any other time.

Q. It frequently occurs?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any complaint made by any one to the board of election there that day about the character of the Republican ticket that was voted?—A. They were all complaining about the quality of the ticket, and it was so much more remarkable than the Democratic ticket; the paper distinguished it.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board of which you were a member about the character of that ticket?—A. They were complaining there outside.

Q. I am asking about the board. I am not asking about what occurred outside. Was there any one came to the board and complained about the character of this Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; they said it was not legal.

Q. Give the names.—A. I cannot give the names. There was several parties there said that the ticket was not legal.

Q. Give the names of them.—A. I cannot give you the names.

Q. Could you give the name of one of them?—A. I do not think I could, sir; but there was several came there. I know they made several complaints that the ticket was not legal.

Q. Do you know of any one who voted at that precinct who voted the Republican ticket with another ticket folded inside of it?—A. I did not tumble to those kind of things at the start or else I would have paid more attention, and I might have noticed. I did not at once form an idea that that ticket was gotten up for that purpose.

Q. You spoke about the folding of that ticket together there, and you spoke about the Republican ticket being folded together, and you instanced here the manner in which they were folded together.—A. I have seen them in the box lapped in on each other.

Q. Now, do you say that any man voted two Republican tickets down in that precinct?—A. I could not say, sir, that I seen any doing it. If I did, I would check it up.

Q. You know nothing about it?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. How many Republican tickets did you see folded together in the box?—A. I had a fuss about four or five different ones where they were folded separate and they were lapped in on each other.

Q. Let me ask you this: Is it not quite common for tickets put into a ballot-box in that way to be found folded together and lapped in together in the way in which you have described here?—A. Not as a common thing. On the Democratic ticket you cannot get them that way, and you cannot get them lapping in on each other.

Q. Is it not quite a frequent thing for the Democratic tickets to be folded together when you shake up a box, and don't you frequently find them so?—A. Not frequently. Where we took up two tickets in together we did not count them where they were folded together.

Q. I understand you to say that all the tickets that were found folded together you did not count.—A. Where they were lapped together we did not.

Q. So if they were voted together you did not count them; whether they were or not they were not counted?—A. They were not counted where they were lapped together.

Q. I will ask you whether there were any two Republican tickets in the box that were folded together?—A. No; not folded together. Not both together. They were folded separately and lapped in on each other, because if they were folded together there would be no chance for them to escape at all; they would be sure to be condemned. They were folded separately and lapped in on each other, and when the tickets went down—they were heavy tickets, and of course when they went down—I will show you how it was done; it was done very scientifically. When the tickets would come down they would get out of the——

Q. Would not the inspector more readily detect two Republican tickets folded together that way than he would two Democratic tickets, for the reason that the Republican ticket was more bulky?—A. The inspector down there was a Republican.

Q. I am not asking you about that. I am asking you if it is not a fact that two Republican tickets folded together in the way you have described would be more readily detected in consequence of their bulk than two Democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir; certainly they would, because the size would be more noticed. When you get a big, large, bulky ticket, don't you know it can cover up more of anything inside of it than a smaller ticket can, because it has a heavier back and body to it? Then it will cover up anything folded inside of it.

Q. Was there any other kind of Republican tickets voted at that poll?—A. No, sir; but the one kind.

Q. None found in the ballot-box?—A. No, sir.

Q. All of the same kind?—A. Yes, sir. I mean all the same kind of Republican tickets.

Q. How many Democratic tickets did you find folded together down there?—A. Whatever went in there the inspector sent out.

Q. How many of them?—A. I believe there was one or two. I believe there was one there to my best recollection that was lapped in together.

Q. You do not recollect how many more?—A. No, sir. That was all that there was. There was only one thrown out.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that a Democratic ticket folded that way with another was not counted?—A. No. This Democratic ticket was not—I suppose probably some greenhorn fellow that did not know that they were wrapped together.

Q. Were they counted?—A. No, sir; they were not counted.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I thought you said they were folded together?—A. The Democratic ticket was folded, doubled together. Some fellow had taken it through ignorance in voting in not seeing; probably some Irishman or Dutchman. It was my poll, and he had two of them all together wrapped up.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that the Republican tickets that were folded together were not counted?—A. No, sir; they were not counted.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. There was four or five of them.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say it was some greenhorn Democrat that voted those two Democratic tickets?—A. It was wrapped double together.

Q. If a Republican ticket had been voted that way would he have been some greenhorn Republican?—A. I believe he would be if it was wrapped up double.

Q. Could you not more readily detect two Republican tickets than two Democratic tickets thus folded from the weight of them?—A. Yes, sir; from the weight of them.

Mr. WILSON. Folding the two Republican tickets together, would it not be more apt to spring open and separate than the Democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir; that is what it was done for. That was the object it was done for.

JOHN MALONEY.

The further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until to-morrow (Thursday, October 4, 1883) at 2 o'clock p. m.

THURSDAY, October 4, 1883—2 p. m.

ALBERT F. AYRES, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Albert F. Ayres; 34 years old; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. All my life.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election; and, if so, what, and where?—A. I was clerk of the election board at the second precinct in the thirteenth ward in the city of Indianapolis.

Q. Did you se the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election?—A. I did.

Q. I will call your attention to the Republican ticket marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay. Look at that and say if that is the ticket that was used and voted by the Republicans in your precinct.—A. Yes, sir. I think it is similar to the tickets that were voted at that election.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress at that election on the Democratic, Republican, and Greenback tickets?—A. Mr. Stanton J. Peelle was the candidate on the Republican ticket and William E. English was the candidate on the Democratic ticket, and on the Greenback ticket I do not remember.

Q. Was it Mr. Medkirk?—A. Yes, sir; I think that is the name.

Q. I will call your attention now to the ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked as Exhibit C to Mr. D. De Vay's deposition. I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted at that election by the Democrats for Mr. English for Congress in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I think tickets similar to that were voted in that precinct up there.

Q. Is that Republican ticket, to which I have called your attention, and the ticket that you say was used by the Republicans—has it any distinguishing mark or embellishment except the name of the candidate, and the office for which they were voted?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.)

A. Well, I should say that it had, from the quality of the paper used, more than anything else. The paper is stiff, and cannot be folded in so small a bulk as the Democratic ticket. It is not the same kind of paper by any means.

Q. The question was, has that any embellishment?—A. There is an embellishment on the head of the ticket. (Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, and for the reason that the ticket will speak for itself.) That distinguishing mark on the head of the ticket will not show when the ticket is folded, but when it is open it will.

Q. I will ask you to look at the back of the ticket. Does not that distinguishing mark show through there?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes; it shows slightly.

Q. Does the material on which that ticket is printed designate it or distinguish it from the Democratic ticket?—A. You mean the paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; I should say that it did.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by sight?—A. Well, I never had any experience in trying it, but to look at the two of them I believe I can, because I can see the difference in the paper here. The style of the paper is different from the ticket that was voted at that time and the Republican ticket. Those two tickets are not made of the same paper, and I think I can distinguish them. The Democratic ticket and the Republican ticket were not both printed on the same paper; and I think the paper that the Republican ticket was printed on was a great deal heavier paper.

Q. What would you call that material upon which the Republican ticket was printed?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I could not answer that, because I am not sufficiently acquainted with the paper.

Q. I do not ask you as an expert, but what do you call it proper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It is more like pasteboard than paper to me.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used for tickets before, at any election, as that upon which the Republican ticket is printed?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I don't remember whether it was or not. I do not have any recollection upon that subject as to whether this kind of paper was ever used or not. It seems to me like it was used in former elections. My recollection is that that paper has been used before, but I am not positive about that, because my attention was not called to it directly. I was not on the board at any election. I simply went and voted, and was about the polls, and worked around there at former elections.

Q. You say you have some idea that that ticket was used at former elections. By what party?—A. It was used by the Republican party.

Q. When lightly folded, would that Republican ticket remain folded, or would it be apt to spring open?—A. I would say, from the texture of the paper, that it would spring open.

Q. If another ticket were folded inside that Republican ticket, and, thus folded, the tickets were dropped into the ballot-box, would the ticket be liable to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that such is the case.)

A. I should think it would be liable to spring open.

Q. Could you, as an officer at that election, at your precinct, tell by the character and appearance of the tickets from the outside, as folded, the Republican from the Democratic?—A. I could hardly answer that question, because, in the first place, I was clerk of that election board, and was sitting back at the table, and I was not out where I could see those things. The clerk occupies a position back five or six feet from the inspector, who was standing at the window, and the Democratic judge was sitting by the side of him with his hand over the ballot-box, and I was sitting down there writing the names of each voter. I did not notice those tickets that were handed up, and I have had no experience in that, any more than what you might say that I could distinguish them by seeing those now. As I said a while ago, by taking the two together I think a man could do it, but at that election I did not notice it, because I was not in a position to notice it. I did not notice it then.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from a ticket printed on ordinary book paper, ordinary writing paper, or ordinary print paper?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the witness has not testified that he had any knowledge of the different qualities of paper at all.)

A. Yes; I think that a person could distinguish it.

Q. How many of such Republican tickets were voted at your precinct, if you recollect?

(Objected to for the reason that the returns will show for themselves.)

A. I do not recollect now how many there were. I believe there was something in the neighborhood of 600 votes polled in the second precinct of that ward, and the majority was something less than 100 in that precinct. There must have been something over 300 or 400 Republican votes in that precinct.

Q. When voted, the tickets were of that character?—A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection now about it; that that is the same ticket that was used that day out there. I did not count the ballots out of the box. I simply tallied them as they were counted.

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot impaired at that election by the use of that ticket by the Republican party?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law, and as leading.)

A. Well, I should say that it was.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am an attorney at law.

Q. Did you ever hold any official position in this State?—A. I was deputy attorney-general of this State at one time under Mr. Buskirk and Judge Woollen—about five years.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. State if you are at present a candidate on the Democratic ticket for councilman in the thirteenth ward in this city.—A. I am.

Q. I understood you to say that there was no distinguishing mark on that ticket, on the back of the ticket?—A. No; except the heading of the front side.

Q. I am speaking of the back of the ticket. There is no distinguishing mark on the back of the ticket?—A. I can see by close inspection the marks from the Republican ticket on the front side.

Q. I will ask you to look at the Democratic ticket that you hold in your hand, and see if you cannot do the same thing. Hold it up between you and the light?—A. Yes; I can just see that.

Q. Now, is it not a fact that there are no distinguishing marks on the back of that Republican ticket?—A. There are no distinguishing marks on the back of that ticket that a man could see if that ticket was folded up.

Q. State if you have any knowledge as to the quality of paper—different kinds of paper.—A. No, sir; I never dealt in paper enough to have very much knowledge of it.

Q. You do not know what kind of paper that Republican ticket was printed on?—A. I don't know what kind of paper they call that. Papermen have a name for it. I do not know what it is.

Q. Do you know what kind of paper that Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what difference there is between the two tickets?—A. I know the difference is this: that the Republican ticket is printed on much heavier paper than the Democratic ticket.

Q. That is all you know about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Republican ticket is a little heavier paper than the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it more resembles pasteboard. The Democratic ticket resembles softer paper.

Q. You say you were one of the clerks at the second election precinct in the thirteenth ward.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not notice the tickets as they came in that day?—A. No, sir; I did not have time to; I was sitting back.

Q. Did you at any time distinguish a Republican ticket from a Democratic ticket as they were handed in?—A. No, sir; I did not at that time.

Q. Was your attention at that time called to the difference in the tickets at all?—A. I think not; there was nobody spoke to me at that time.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not any complaint was made to the election board by any one at the election last November, where you were clerk, as to the character of the Republican ticket.—A. I heard none.

Q. If any had been made to the board would you not have heard it?—A. I think I would; I was inside of the room all the time that the vote was going on, from the time the polls were opened in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening, and then commenced counting.

Q. Could you distinguish that Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket?—A. You mean could I at that time from where I was?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; I don't know that I could from where I was in the room; I could not tell it that far off.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket two or three paces off, folded?—A. I don't know that I could; not two or three paces off.

Q. Do you know of any one who was deceived or misled in voting that day in consequence of the Republican ticket being printed on that kind of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then when you say the secrecy of the ballot you think was disturbed, what do you mean?—A. I mean this: that the inspector of the election could tell something about what kind of a vote was being handed up to him, and when the challenge would be made I know there was some sign passed out there; I was informed some signs were made by the inspector of the ward; that he could tell when he took the ticket whether it was a Democratic ticket or a Republican ticket, and he held it in a certain position.

Q. Do you say now that the inspector of the precinct gave out any signs to any one?—A. I don't say that he did, because I do not know it, but I know it was said that he did. I know they said that he held tickets up this way [indicating]. I may get that wrong. I cannot tell about that positively. I was told if it was a Republican ticket it was held up that way [indicating], and if it was a Democratic ticket it was turned down that way [indicating], or vice versa, so that the inspector would know from the feeling of the paper. Anybody can tell by feeling these two papers what ticket it is. Anybody can tell that.

Mr. WILSON. You mean this Republican ticket.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. You can tell which piece of paper is the heaviest?—A. Yes, sir. Now, just what might have occurred from the inspector holding that ticket in that particular way, I do not know. Of course I cannot tell what the result might be. I don't know whether it was for the purpose of giving his friends a chance to know what the ticket was, and the Democrats to understand—of course they did not understand anything about it until late in the day, when they began to notice it. I know it was talked about afterwards. I did not notice it.

Q. Who was the inspector at that precinct?—A. Mr. James Isgrigg. Understand me, I do not say that Mr. Isgrigg done that, because I did not see it. I heard that in the ward. I do not know as I could tell you who said it. I heard it.

Q. You were one of the clerks there, and you did not see it.—A. No, sir; I did not see it.

Q. Do you know Mr. Ernest Kitz, the present township trustee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was inspector at one of the precincts in the eleventh ward?—A. I do not know anything about that. I do not know where Mr. Kitz lives. I know he is township trustee.

Q. Do you know that when he received tickets he received them and concealed them from the crowd outside by putting his hand between the audience and the ticket?—A. No, sir; I do not know anything about that. I did not hear of it. He is not in my ward.

Q. If he did that, how much difference would there be between that and the way the inspector you spoke of did?—A. I don't know what the difference would be. The difference would be in the intention of the party that did it, and what that intention was I do not know. The parties themselves would have to answer that, if they had any intention.

Q. I will ask you to take that Democratic ticket there in your hand and look at the heading "Democratic Ticket" and state whether or not that ticket is in plain type?—A. Well, sir; I think it is plain type.

Q. I now hand you the ticket purporting to be the National ticket voted at that election and marked "Exhibit D" in the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and ask you to state whether the heading of that ticket, "National Ticket," is in plain type—A. Yes, sir; they are; both of them.

Q. Is there any difference between the type in the heading of the Democratic and National tickets?—A. Yes, sir; there is some difference in the type.

Q. Do you notice some dots and dashes in the heading "Democratic Ticket?"—A. Yes, sir; there are some quirls in the letters there.

Q. Would you call a letter that had curls in it and dots and dashes in it a plain letter?—A. It is plain. For instance, there is the name "William R. Myers;" that is a plainer letter than the words "Democratic Ticket" up there at the head, but not very much; a letter that is more commonly used, perhaps.

Q. I understood you to say you could not give the names of any persons who spoke about the manner in which this inspector held the tickets.—A. No. I do not believe I can. I remember of these things having been charged on Mr. Isgrigg, but I cannot tell you who said it now, and I do not know whether he did it or not.

Q. Rumors and charges are frequent about election times?—A. Yes, sir; of course.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say you have no knowledge of paper; do you mean you have no knowledge at all, or no knowledge as an expert?—A. No knowledge as an expert; that is what I mean. Of course I have knowledge of writing paper and book paper.

Q. When you say you don't know what kind of paper the Democratic ticket is printed on, you spoke from the stand-point of an expert?—A. Yes, sir; that is what I mean. I never handled any of it or dealt in it.

Q. I understand you to say you were sitting back and could not see the tickets as they were put in the box, and the inspector's back was turned to you?—A. Yes, sir. He was standing up on a box; that is my recollection; and they had the ballot-box up in the window, and the ballot-box came way up on his breast, and I was down on the floor, back five or six feet from him, sitting down by a table, really with my back to him, and he with his back to me, and the gentleman sitting opposite me was the clerk on the Republican side, and he was facing the window and nearly right in front of the window, and I was at the side of the room with my back to the gentleman that was taking in the tickets. If I had turned around and looked back I could not have seen probably, because the Democratic judge and the Republican inspector were both of them with their backs to us taking in the votes, and as fast as they would take them in I had to record the name of the voter, and I had no time to pay any attention.

Q. In answer to Mr. Peelle's question in reference to complaints about this ticket by any one, do I understand you answer in reference to complaints to the board, or with reference to no complaints at all?—A. There were no complaints made to the board at all. I did not hear any.

Q. You said from where you sat you could not distinguish the Republican ticket from any other ticket. Could the challenger distinguish those tickets? [Objected to as immaterial.] Could the challenger and inspector distinguish these tickets, standing right by the box where they were deposited, by seeing them?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, for the reason that the witness cannot tell what the inspector or bystander would see or do.)

A. Well, I should say this: If I had been the challenger or inspector, knowing where the challenger stood there, and knowing the position and the place where the inspector was, I think I could have distinguished them, and by the quality of the paper that the Republican ticket was printed on. As I said a while ago, if the ticket was folded the distinguishing mark could not be seen at all.

Q. When you say "distinguishing mark" you refer to the heading on the inside of the ticket?—A. I mean the heading, and if that was folded inside, as it might be very easily, and the ticket folded from the top, in.

Q. What were the politics of the inspector?—A. Republican.

Q. Was there any Republican tickets folded in together found in the ballot-box in your precinct of this same character as the ticket marked Exhibit B, which has been shown you?—A. Yes, sir; there was two of them folded together. I will state that when the inspector was taking the tickets out and counting them, while the gentleman that was called in that night to witness the count—the Democrat—was sitting at the side of the ballot-box, this witness discovered two tickets folded together—Republican tickets, such as these are. I do not know how they were folded, only they were found together, and the Democratic judge that was called in spoke about it, and said: "There, Mr. Isgrigg, look out there, there are two tickets folded together. That won't do. You can't count them." And Mr. Isgrigg said that was all right; they were together, and he laid the tickets out, and they were not counted, either one of them. That is the only case that was found in the box.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You do not remember whether the tickets were folded together or whether they were lapped in together by the shaking of the box?—A. That was the decision of the Republican inspector, that they were folded in.

Q. Therefore they were not counted?—A. No, sir. They considered that it was an attempt to vote two tickets.

Q. I will ask you whether there were any Democratic tickets folded together?—A. There was no question raised about them, and the inspector did not charge that any person attempted to vote two Democratic tickets at once.

Q. But, nevertheless, you would frequently find Democratic and Republican tickets folded in together by shaking up the box?—A. I don't know as there were any folded together. They were stuck together.

Q. And might look suspiciously, folded together, when in fact they became stuck together by shaking?—A. The inspector laid them out and he considered that they were actually folded. One ticket was laid on top of the other and they were lapped down together.

Q. And they were not counted?—A. No, sir. They considered that some man had attempted to vote two tickets at the same time.

ALBERT F. AYRES.

W. F. CHRISTIAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your age and residence?—Answer. I am 44 years old. I reside at No. 124 East Vermont street, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. About 19 years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend that election?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election; and, if so, what and where?—A. I was the Democratic judge of the tenth ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted at that election for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Republicans at the election?—A. Yes, sir; I think it was.

Q. Looking at the face of that ticket, I will ask you whether it has any distinguishing mark or embellishment upon it, or at the head of it?—A. Well; what do you mean? The letters, or the way it is headed? The heading of it is. [Objected to as immaterial and incompetent for the reason that the ticket will show for itself.] The lettering of it is a little different from what tickets are generally lettered. They are generally lettered in plain black letters, but the most distinguishing feature of it is the thickness of it.

Q. I call your attention to the Democratic ticket which is marked as Exhibit C as a part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay; and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats for Mr. English at that election?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. Does the material on which that Republican ticket is printed designate the ticket, or discriminate the ticket from the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it designate or discriminate that ticket from any other ticket of a like size printed on plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and as assuming that this ticket is not printed on plain white paper.)

Q. Are you an expert in the paper business?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you, as a non-expert, what is the character of the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the witness has stated that he does not know.)

A. It is very easily distinguished. That is, any one within four or five feet of me I could distinguish the ticket as he brought up his hand. I could tell what ticket it was.

Q. Do you know what the material is upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. No, sir; I don't know. It is different from any other paper. I have had no experience in paper.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded or would it be apt to spring open?—A. Spring open.

Q. If another ticket were folded in it, under such circumstances, would they be apt to come apart?—A. Yes, sir; they would.

(Objected to as leading and immaterial, for the reason that there is no evidence of tickets being thus folded.)

Q. You say you attended at that election. Could you tell that Republican ticket by sight when it was voted from the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; every one of them.

Q. Could you tell it by handling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell by these Republican tickets when folded with the names of the candidates inside whether or not the person voting them was voting the Republican ticket?—A. They knew the Republican ticket. They could not tell whether they were scratched or not. We knew they were Republican tickets. We could not tell anything about the scratching until we opened them.

Q. Could persons looking on at the polls standing away from the box tell those tickets?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, for the reason that the witness cannot tell what persons could see.)

A. Yes, sir. They seemed to have them all counted up pretty well.

Q. Was the secrecy of the ballot destroyed or impaired at that precinct where you acted as judge by the use of that Republican ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that it is a conclusion of law.)

A. I thought it was partially.

Q. How many such tickets, if you know, were voted by the Republicans at that precinct?—A. I do not know; I could not say that they were all; I think the majority of them were.

Q. I will ask you how many votes were cast there, if you know—both sides?—A. I forget now; I know about; we had between 600 and 700.

Q. The majority Democratic?—A. The majority is Republican.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What precinct and ward were you one of the judges in?—A. The second precinct of the tenth ward.

Q. Did you receive any of the tickets as they were handed in by the voters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if any complaints were made to the board there that day by any one as to the character of the Republican ticket?—A. We were all talking of it; there was no complaint made to us; the board talked about it themselves, and the men outside were talking about the tickets being so thick.

Q. There was no complaint came to the board from any one concerning the character of the Republican ticket?—A. There was in the afternoon. Mr. English's son-in-law came up and asked one or two questions about the ticket.

Q. What is his name?—A. Doctor Walling.

Q. What did he say?—A. He came up and asked the judges if we knew that the Democratic tickets were being copied. That is, if Mr. Peelle's name had been printed on Mr. English's ticket.

Q. I am not asking you about anything except these Republican tickets. I am asking you if any complaint was made to the board by any one about the character of these Republican tickets.—A. No, sir. No outsider made any complaint. They were all talking about it; the challengers outside.

Q. You say you have no knowledge as to the different qualities of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know what that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. No, sir. I know it is thick paper. I don't know what the character of the paper is.

Q. You don't know what the Democratic ticket is on?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one who was misled or deceived in voting at that precinct on account of the Republican ticket being printed on that kind of paper?—A. No, sir. I believe not at present.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I don't know that I do.

Q. Were you there when they were counted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find Republican tickets that had been folded together and two tickets voted by any one person?—A. I don't think I did last year. I do not remember now.

Q. Then there was no double voting at that precinct?—A. I don't think there was.

Q. All the Republican tickets were the same kind, were they not?—A. I think they were. I will not say positively about that. I know the majority of them were these thick tickets, and I think perhaps all of them were.

Q. There was no tissue ballots there, or anything of that kind?—A. No, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you ever judge of an election before?—A. Yes, sir. I have been there about ten or twelve years.

Q. Did you ever see tickets printed on material like this Republican ticket before? (Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir. Not that thick.

W. F. CHRISTIAN.

The further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until to-morrow (Friday, October 5, 1883), at 2 p. m.

FRIDAY, October 5, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment, and the further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until to-morrow (Saturday, October 6, 1883), at 10 o'clock a. m.

SATURDAY, October 6—10 a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

JOHN JOHNSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. I was 53 years old on the 16th day of last April. I lived in Wayne Township, in this county, pretty nearly 53 years. I now live in this city, at 276 North West street.

Q. Were you in the city on the day of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. I was at the election, out in Wayne Township.

Q. Did you occupy any official position?—A. I was one of the judges of that election at a voting precinct in that township.

Q. Which precinct was that?—A. That is precinct No. 4. It was cut out of what was called the Mount Jackson precinct, and was located on the Crawfordsville road, on a cross-road right across from the asylum to the poor farm.

Q. I will ask you who were the candidates for Congress at that election in this district?—A. William E. English on the Democratic, and Stanton J. Peelle on the Republican.

Q. Who was the National candidate for Congress?—A. I forget him. I don't think there was more than three or four votes cast there for him.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, and I will ask you if the Republican ticket voted at that election was on material of that character?—A. I think it was. I know we could designate them very distinctly from the Democratic ticket, because the inspector laid them out to one side, and we counted by fives and tens—probably by fives, and he would lay out five Republican tickets when he would come to them, and lay them to one side, and that is the way we designated them. We could tell by the material they were on.

Q. Could you do that without opening them?—A. Yes, sir; I laid them aside that way without opening them. You could tell them very readily.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket as marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the Democratic ticket you refer to as having been voted at that election?—A. I think it is the same ticket, as near as I could tell now.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded or be apt to spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that the ticket was lightly folded when voted.)

A. Yes, sir; it would.

Q. If another ticket was folded inside of it——A. [Interrupting.] I did not see any other tickets folded inside of it.

Q. If another ticket were folded inside of it, and they were dropped into the box after being thus folded together, would they be apt to spring open and thus release the inclosed ticket?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it would.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish it by handling it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were one of the judges of that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When I say by sight and touch, I mean you could distinguish them that way when folded.—A. The inspector and judges and all could distinguish them, or lay them to one side. We could tell them by the feeling of them.

Q. Without opening them?—A. Yes, sir; they were different from the paper our tickets were on. They were on heavier paper.

Q. Did you ever know a ticket similar to that that the Republicans used to be used at any election in this State before?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I do not know as I ever saw any before.

Q. How many tickets were voted at that precinct, Democratic, Republican, and National?—A. I think there was a little over 300. We divided our voting places to Mount Jackson. We had 600 and something in the precinct and we divided. Ours was not quite as large as theirs. It was something in the neighborhood of 300.

Q. How many of those tickets were Republican, if you know?—I could not say that. I did not give it much thought after the election.

Q. Which has the majority, the Democrats or the Republicans?—A. In our precinct I think the Democrats have a majority on a close vote, but how the Congressional vote was I could not say now. I have not thought much about it since.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat, sir.

Q. You are living in the city now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business now?—A. I am manufacturing brick, and farming, and doing a little of everything that a man can to keep out of mischief.

Q. You were one of the judges at precinct No. 4, in Wayne Township, last November?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say there were none of the Republican tickets that were folded together; you said you saw none of them voted that were folded together?—A. I said I saw none with the tickets inside of them.

Q. Did you see any Democratic tickets that were that way?—A. No, sir.

Q. You saw none of either kind?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board by any one upon the outside as to the character of the Republican tickets?—A. There was some comment upon it.

Q. Was there any complaint?—No, sir; I do not think there was.

Q. Do the Democrats have a majority in that precinct?—A. I think they have a small majority.

Q. Do they have any majority in the township?—A. I don't think we have a majority of Democratic voters. We have a good many good Republican votes with us that help us carry the township sometimes. It is not really done by Democrats.

Q. Is the precinct of which you were a judge the precinct at which the attendants voted from the insane asylum?—A. No, sir. The attendants voted at Mount Jackson precinct.

Q. You have no knowledge whatever as to the quality of paper?—A. Only what I see there.

Q. You can tell what is heavier from lighter paper?—A. We generally took it upon ourselves at the polls——

Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking you if you have any special knowledge as to the different qualities of paper.—A. The only knowledge I have is what I saw at the polls.

Q. Simply that one paper is heavier than the other?—A. Yes, sir; that is all; only what I see.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle's question, I believe, is that you have no particular knowledge of paper. You mean by that that you are not an expert?—A. No, sir; I am not an expert.

Q. You have the knowledge which the average citizen has?—A. I can tell when I see thick paper or thin paper. I am not a manufacturer of paper or anything of that kind, but I can tell when I take hold of a ticket or piece of paper if it is heavier than another. It does not take an expert to tell that.

Q. Who was the inspector out there?—A. William Watt.

Q. What are his politics?—A. A Republican.

Q. Was the number of votes in your precinct in excess of the number of names you had on your poll books?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. I think there was six tickets.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Six more tickets than names on the poll-list?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the Democratic majority in that precinct?—A. I could have told you a while ago. I cannot tell you now. I have forgotten it.

Q. How much larger was it than before?—A. It was not any larger.

Q. Was it not about 12 or 13 votes larger than it was before?—A. That precinct is a new precinct and——

Q. Was there not 12 or 13 votes more in that precinct at the election in last November than there was at the spring election before?—A. I do not recollect that.

Q. You frequently have been on election boards before, have you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if it has not been a frequent occurrence, as shown by your observation, that there were frequently more tickets than there are names, and vice versa, at election precincts?—A. I don't think I have known more than one or two before, and those were voted doubled together. I was at the Mount Jackson precinct at one time and there was one Republican ticket and a Democratic ticket folded together.

Q. Do you know of any man who voted that day who voted more than one ballot?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You heard of no such thing?—A. I did not hear of anything like that.

JOHN JOHNSON.

ELIHUE R. PAYNE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Elihue R. Payne; my age is 38, and I reside No. 293 East New York street. Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. How long have you lived in Indiana?—A. All my life.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I have lived here since 1871.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I was clerk of the poll up there in the second precinct of the ninth ward. I was the Democratic clerk, and Mr. Harvey was the Republican clerk.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted at that election for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; I saw the ticket that was voted.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and headed Republican Ticket—was that the ticket that was voted at that election for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; that is the Republican ticket.

Q. Mr. Peelle was the candidate on that ticket for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you, when lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded, or would it spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were lightly folded when voted.)

A. Well, when the inspector or the judges counted the ticket out, when they were laying there on the table they would kind o'fly up a little and open out.

Q. If another ticket were folded in one of those tickets, would it be apt to spring open and release the inclosed ticket when dropped into the ballot-box, or when shaken up?

(Objected to as immaterial, &c.)

A. Well, from the impression I had, or from the way I would look at the ticket, if they were to put tickets in there they could be shaken out.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C to the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election for Mr. English for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; that is the original Democratic ticket.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican tickets voted at that election from the Democratic tickets voted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish it by sight?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. The Republican ticket was on thicker paper than the Democratic ticket and made a bigger bulk and looked larger together when they were counted out by fives.

Q. Could you distinguish it, then, by sight?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish it by handling and touching?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir; I could tell the difference between the tickets by the looks of them.

Q. You say you were clerk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a clerk acting on that board did you in fact distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket?—A. Well, the man would put the ticket in the box—I don't know what you call him, whether he was the inspector or not—and we could generally tell. When the ticket went into the box we would say to ourselves, "There goes"—one kind of a ticket or there goes another.

Q. How many votes were cast at your precinct at that election?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the returns will show for themselves.)

A. I don't recollect the exact number that was cast in that precinct. I think it was somewhere like 400—it was 431.

Q. Did the Democrats or Republicans have a majority?—A. The Democrats had a majority on the State ticket.

Q. How many votes were there for the Republican ticket at that precinct?—A. Well, I cannot exactly tell; it has been so long ago. They ran about 190, I think; somewhere along there, or 150 or 160 along up to 300. We had some majority there, but I forget now how much, but quite a difference in some of it.

Q. The ticket voted there was this Republican ticket that I have shown you?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I believe you stated that you were a Democrat in politics?—A. Yes, sir; I am inclined that way.

Q. Had you any wager up on the result of the Congressional election last November?—A. No, sir; not a cent.

Q. You were clerk to the board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you to say when the tickets were deposited you could tell the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket, and vice versa?—A. Yes, sir; from the looks of them.

Q. You could distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the same way you could the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, in consequence of the quality of the paper or the look and weight of the paper?—A. From the size of the ticket. The Democratic ticket was smaller than the Republican.

Q. If you were looking you could always tell when the Democratic ticket went in—distinguish it from the Republican ticket?—A. I could distinguish them. It was not the same kind of a ticket.

Q. My point is: You could distinguith one ticket from the other?—A. Yes, sir. I think anybody could by seeing them laying alongside of one another at any place.

Q. They were both plain white paper, were they not?—A. Yes, sir. One of them was heavier paper than the other. I saw tickets there with a kind of a glazed appearance, I thought.

Q. They were both plain white?—A. They were both plain white.

Q. The Democratic ticket would fly up very nearly as much as the Republican when it was lightly folded?—A. Well, I did not notice them particularly. They all laid out there together.

Q. You did not notice them particularly?—A. No, sir. You take that one thrown down, would fly up—that is, have the largest appearance—larger than the Democratic ticket, but they probably both looked the same.

Q. There are two tickets open now—the Democratic and Republican ticket. [Illustrating.] Is not that about the way they would be, one-half to three-quarters of an inch would be thrown up on both of them?—A. Yes, sir. They might both be laying just that way.

Q. You could not pretend to distinguish the tickets from flying open?—A. We could generally tell the tickets from the looks of them.

Q. You could not tell them from the open appearance of them?—A. Only from where the Republican ticket looked larger.

Q. I am speaking about the open space in the ticket where they would fly open. You could not distinguish that ticket from the other on that account?—A. I could tell them separately. I don't know how it would be if they were in the box together.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you see the National ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir. I think we only had four votes.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit D to the deposition of De Vay, headed "National Ticket."—A. The candidate for Congress on the National ticket, I think, only received a few votes in our precinct.

Q. Was that the ticket that was voted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket from the National ticket folded up and put in the box, even in counting them?—A. Well, I do not know that I could.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you to take that Democratic and National ticket in your hands now and state if the Democratic ticket is not on heavier paper than the National ticket; if it is not a heavier quality of paper and a better quality of paper?—A. There does not seem to be much difference. The Democratic ticket seems to be the best paper.

Q. Has it not a little better finish to it?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is a better quality of paper.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was there an excess of votes over the number of votes on your poll-book in that precinct?—A. No, sir; we were 2 votes short of what we ought to have had on that count. There were 2 votes that the judge would not allow put in the box. On the tally-sheet I think it was 431 names on our roll, if I am not mistaken, and when we counted there was 429 votes and there was 2 votes that should have been counted to make the ballots in the box tally with the sheet. They were laid out to one side. He made some objections to the votes. They were thought to be Democratic votes. They were laid out to one side of the box, the inspector laid them where we all could see them during the whole time of the count, and about the time he knew the result of the election a great many came in there, and they conceded that the Democrats had carried the election, that they had carried everything, and we did not make much fuss about the 2 votes. We thought we had enough without them.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you see the tickets that were laid out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The face of them?—A. No, sir; I did not look at the face of them.

Q. You don't know whose names were on the tickets?—A. No, sir; I could not tell who was on there for Congress.

Q. You don't know whether they were Democratic or Republican tickets.—A. No, sir; I don't know who was on the face of the tickets, only the face of the ticket was different from the Republican tickets.

Q. Different?—A. Yes, sir; they were similar. That is what I mean.

E. R. PAYNE.

WILLIAM D. BYNUM, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. William D. Bynum; age, 37; I reside in Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. How long have you lived in Indiana?—A. All my life.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. I was, and I attended the election almost the entire day.

Q. Did you ever hold any official positions in this State?—A. A few.

Q. Please state what they were.—A. I held the position of mayor of the city of Washington, and a member of the legislature.

Q. You were speaker of the house of representatives last session?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle at the last Congressional election in 1882?—A. I did, in the precincts in which I attended the election.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket" and marked on the back Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Republicans at that election, if you know?—A. Yes, sir; that is a similar ticket, except this is considerably soiled.

Q. Has that Republican ticket any distinguishing mark or embellishment on the face of it except the names of the candidates?

(Objected to as immaterial, because the ticket will show for itself.)

A. The heading of the ticket is rather attractive. I should not call that a distinguishing mark, however.

Q. Would you call it an embellishment?—A. Yes; I would call that an embellishment, but not such an embellishment as would be probably covered by our statute, because it is on the inside of the ticket and not upon the outside.

Q. I will ask you whether or not you saw the Democratic ticket voted at that election.—A. I did.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C in the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election?—A. In my opinion it was a ticket similar to that.

Q. I call your attention to the National ticket voted at that election, and marked on the back Exhibit D to the evidence of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Nationals at that election.—A. I could not say. I do not recollect of seeing any of those tickets that day in that precinct.

Q. I will ask you, could you distinguish and did you distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket at that election.—A. I did, and could almost every one that was voted.

Q. Could you distinguish that ticket from all other tickets voted at that election?—A. I could.

Q. I will ask you how you managed to do that.—A. By reason of the fact that it was printed upon heavy, thick card-board paper that was peculiarly white and glazed.

Q. Could you distinguish it by handling it?—A. You could distinguish it without seeing it and you could distinguish it by seeing it without handling.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used before for tickets at any election in this State?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I never saw tickets printed on that kind of material before.

Q. Were you looking on as a bystander at that election, or were you inside of the room with the judges and clerk and inspector?—A. I was on the outside all day.

Q. As an outsider, looking on, did you in fact distinguish those tickets?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I did, during all the time I stayed at the polls. Whenever the ticket was in sight I could very readily tell it.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket be apt to spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were thus folded.)

A. It would spring open when doubled up in the ordinary manner in which the ticket was doubled up, even if doubled with considerable force.

Q. If another ticket were inclosed in it under such circumstances, would it be apt to release the inclosed ticket if shaken and moved?

(Objected to.)

A. It would, if not doubled entirely on the inside. If folded separately, and then stuck together, they would spring open and separate.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from any ticket of like character, of like length and width, printed on plain white print paper, or plain white book paper, or plain white writing paper, the tickets being folded?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were folded in such a way.)

A. I could.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that Republican ticket, at your precinct, upon the secrecy of the ballot?

(Objected to as immaterial and as giving a conclusion of law.)

A. The practical effect of it was to destroy the secrecy of the ballot.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What do you understand by destroying the secrecy of the ballot?—A. Anything which enabled the bystanders outside to tell what character of ticket the elector was voting.

Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket voted at that election?—A. I could; and it was by reason of the fact that the Republican ticket was printed on that character of paper.

Q. And you could distinguish the Democratic from the Republican ticket from the fact that the Democratic ticket was printed on lighter paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your politics?—A. Democrat.

Q. You were elected to the legislature last fall at the same election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were speaker of the house of representatives in this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever do any handling of paper, or dealing in paper, as a dealer, wholesale or retail?—A. None whatever.

Q. Did you ever have any experience in the manufacture of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge, as a manufacturer or dealer in paper, as to the different qualities of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what character of paper that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. Only from investigation since the ticket was printed. I made some investigation in regard to some suits that I was engaged in as attorney, and learned from paper dealers that it was called lithographic card-board.

Q. Are you sure they said card-board?—A. I would not be certain about the exact language. That is the substance of what they said.

Q. Who did you converse with about that?—A. I conversed with a gentleman in Mr. Burford's store; not with Mr. Burford, but a gentleman in his store.

Mr. WILSON. Did not he say "lithograph plate?"

The WITNESS. It may have been lithograph plate, or lithograph card-board. That is the only man I recollect now of conversing with connected with a paper store.

Q. Do you know the quality of the paper the Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. It is what we call common print paper, or book paper.

Q. What is the National ticket printed on?—A. I do not know exactly.

Q. Is not that on print paper?—A. That is probably print paper. I cannot say as to that. It is a slightly different quality from the Democratic.

Q. Is it not much lighter and less polished than the Democratic ticket?—A. It is much lighter. I do not think it is less polished.

Q. See if the Democratic ticket is not polished much more than the National ticket, and more compact paper and heavier?—A. It is slightly heavier. I don't think it is more polished.

Q. Don't you think the Democratic ticket is polished smoother?—A. It is more compact, but it does not seem to be glazed quite as much as the other.

Q. You spoke about being the attorney for some contestants growing out of the election last November?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are Democrats, are they not—all of the contestants?—A. The one I was attorney for was a Democrat. He is not living now. It was Mr. McOuatt.

Q. That is the only one you were attorney for?—A. Yes, sir. There is one answer I intended to put in that question as to the character of the paper or the quality of the paper on which that Republican ticket was printed. I investigated, and I learned that the weight of the paper of that ticket was considerably more than that of common book paper such as is ordinarily used. The man weighed the paper and made his calculation, but I forget now what the figures were.

Q. You were attorney for Mr. McOuatt in a contest in which it was to the interest of your client that it should be shown that these tickets were distinguished from the Democratic tickets?—A. That was not a contest; it was a quo warranto proceeding brought. I think there was no trial. The allegation was that the ticket was an illegal ticket. That was the sole point in the case.

Q. As to the quality of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. That proceeding abated by the death of the contestant, Mr. McOuatt, did it not?—A. I believe so.

Q. You are not attorney now for any one?—A. I would not be positive about that. I think there was a compromise of that proceeding before his death.

Q. You are not attorney now for any one in any contest?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or any quo warranto proceeding?—A. I am attorney for no one in which this question is now in issue.

WILLIAM D. BYNUM.

JAMES W. HARPER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. James W. Harper; age, 38; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. Thirty-eight years.

Q. How long in the city of Indianapolis?—A. With the exception of about two years, I have resided here thirteen years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the November election, 1882, and did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir; both.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election?—A. I was one of the judges on the election board.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. I do not know what precinct it was. It was one of the precincts of the second ward. There were two there.

Q. Was it at the engine-house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the upper precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election?—A. I did.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. De Vay; and I will ask you if that was the ticket?—A. I should say that was the ticket.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket headed "Democratic Ticket" and marked as Exhibit C, to the deposition of W. O. De Vay; and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at that election?—A. I should say that that was similar to the tickets voted by them.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded, or be apt to spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence showing that it was lightly folded.)

A. If lightly folded it would voluntarily open.

Q. If another ticket were folded and placed in the fold would the outside ticket be apt to spring open and release the inclosed tieket?—A. Yes, sir. The two would be very apt to spring on a slight movement if folded in that way.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket voted in that precinct?—A. We could form a correct opinion as the tickets came in from the size of them which they were, Democratic or Republican, on account of the difference between the paper of the two tickets.

Q. Did you see the National ticket voted at that precinct?—A. There were very few National tickets voted. I cannot now recall what they were.

Q. I show you the ticket headed "National Ticket," and marked as Exhibit D to the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and ask you if that was the ticket voted at that election by the Nationals?—A. I would not be able to say.

Q. How could you distinguish the Republican ticket?—A. It was thicker and stiffer.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from any other ticket of a like length and width printed on plain white book, or print, or writing paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that the witness has not testified that he knows whether it was book, print, or writing paper.)

A. I am not posted on the various kinds of paper. I know this to be the fact: as the tickets were handed in we could observe the difference between the Democratic and Republican tickets, and members of the board, by looking at the tickets, would often say, "That is a Republican ticket," or "That is a Democratic ticket," and we distinguished the two by the size and the thickness of the paper and the size of the tickets. When folded the Democratic ticket was thinner and smaller than the Republican ticket when folded.

Q. Was one on ordinary paper?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the witness has not testified that he knows what ordinary paper is.)

Mr. WILSON. I am using him in the popular sense; not as an expert.

A. Well, I would say that the Democratic ticket was on the kind of paper ordinarily used at election in my opinion [objected to as being an opinion], and so far as my knowledge of such things goes.

Q. And as to the Republican ticket, was that on ordinary paper, or what was the character of the material, so far as your knowledge goes?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the witness has said that he did not know what it was on.

A. The Republican ticket, as used at that election, was printed on paper that was stiffer and thicker than that which was used by the Democrats for the Democratic ticket, or than that which was used at elections before, if my memory serves me right.

Q. Did you ever know material like that upon which the Republican ticket was printed to be used for that purpose at any election?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I have been in the habit of attending elections ever since I was a voter in this State, and I do not believe I ever saw a ticket printed on the kind of paper that the Republican was printed on at that election.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that Republican ticket at that precinct upon the secrecy of the ballot?—A. The effect was as tickets were handed in, by looking at them pretty closely, we could form a pretty correct idea of the kind of a ticket that was being voted, whether Democratic or Republican.

Q. How many votes were cast at that precinct, if you know?—A. I think it was in the neighborhood of 800. I don't recollect the exact number.

Q. Were all the tickets voted by the Republicans of that character at that precinct?—A. I would say this: nearly one half of the Republican tickets voted at that precinct were scratched, and something over one-half of the Democratic tickets voted there at that time were scratched.

Q. I mean as to the character of the material.—A. Yes, sir; the Republican tickets used there were all of the same kind.

Q. The Republicans had a large majority of the votes cast at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; the Republican vote amounted to between 600 and 700, and the Democratic vote I think about 160, to my recollection.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You were one of the Democratic judges at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never had any experience in the manufacture or dealing in paper?—A. None whatever, and I am as ignorant on the paper question as you can imagine a man to be

Q. All you have said is that you found the Republican ticket printed on a little heavier paper than the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. That is about the amount of it.

Q. I will ask you to take that Democratic ticket in your hand, and I will also ask you to take the National ticket in your hand, and examine them and see if the Democratic ticket is not on a heavier paper and better quality of paper and finished better than the National ticket is?—A. The two have been handled a great deal, but I believe I can say yes to that question.

Q. That the Democratic ticket is on heavier paper and better quality and finer finish?—A. Yes; I think so.

Q. Now, as one of the judges of that election, I will ask you to state if any one complained to the board as to the character of the Republican ticket voted at that precinct?—A. I do not think any formal complaint was made to the board, and yet there were frequent remarks made by bystanders, as that the Republican ticket was on heavy pasteboard paper, or like that.

Q. There was no complaint made to the board by which those tickets were sought to be prevented from being voted?—A. There was not the slightest objection made by anybody to receiving those tickets, and so the board received them and counted them.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you say you are ignorant of paper, do you answer that question from the standpoint of an expert?—Yes; that is what I mean. I am not an expert.

Q. I will ask you if it does not require a careful examination and a close inspection in order to tell the difference between that National ticket and the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it does.

Q. Could you, looking on at an election precinct as a bystander, the ticket being folded, tell that Democratic ticket from the National ticket?—A. No, sir; I do not believe the difference could be detected without taking them in your hands and closely comparing them and feeling them.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELE:

Q. And you would answer the same thing as to the Republican and Democratic tickets if you were standing off looking on; you could not tell from the character of the paper and the color the difference between the Democratic and Republican tickets?—A. I could not tell from the color, because they were both plain white paper, but you could tell a difference, I will say, 5, or 6, or 7 feet away.

Q. You could not tell that by looking at the external appearance of the ticket folded up?—A. You could only tell it by the way the ticket was folded and the bulk of the ticket after folding.

Q. You would have to see the end and the bulk before you could distinguish it from the Democratic ticket?—A. You would have to see the ticket.

Q. You would have to see the end of the Republican ticket in order to get at the bulk of it before you could distinguish it from the Democratic ticket?—A. The ticket would have to be held in such a manner that you could see a portion or most of the ticket.

Q. If the ticket were held up and you simply looked at the external appearance of it you could not tell one from the other by the color of the tickets, could you—by external appearance?—A. Not by color; by size.

Q. And you could distinguish the Democratic from the Republican in the same way?—A. Yes, sir; the Democratic was just as plainly distinguishable from the Republican ticket as the Republican ticket was from the Democratic.

Q. I will ask you if it did not facilitate Democrats in double voting in consequence of it being lighter material than the Republican ticket?—A. No, I do not think it did.

Mr. WILSON. I understand you to say you could distinguish one ticket from the other because of the bulk, size, and weight of the Republican ticket?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

JAMES W. HARPER.

ROSS CLARKE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and place of residence.—Answer. Ross Clarke; 28 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—A. I have lived here seven years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the last Congressional election, held on November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did; I was there all day.

Q. Were you an officer or did you in any way work in that election?—A. I was challenger on the Democratic side of the chute at the first precinct in the eleventh ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket and the National ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticked headed "Republican Ticket," marked "Exhibit B" on the back, and part of the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted at that election by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention also to the ticket marked "Exhibit C" on the back, and on the face "Democratic Ticket," and ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats on that day?—A. Yes, sir; that is one of them.

Q. Now I call your attention to the ticket labeled on the front "National Ticket" and marked on the back "Exhibit D" to the testimony of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the National ticket?—A. Yes, sir; there were a few of those voted at my precinct—four or five, or six or seven.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket be apt to spring open?

A. Yes, sir; it would.

Q. If two of those tickets were folded separate, and one were inclosed within the other and dropped into the ballot-box, would they be apt to spring open from a little shaking and release one from the other?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; they would.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket by sight at that election?—A. Yes, sir; I could distinguish it very handily.

Q. How could you distinguish it?—A. By the thickness of the paper and the general appearance of the ticket.

Q. You mean by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish it by handling?—A. Yes, sir; very readily.

Q. What sort of material was that Republican ticket on, if you know?—A. Well, from inquiries made of the paper men, it is card-board.

(Objected to as incompetent.)

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket from any ticket that was printed on paper of the same width and length, on plain white print paper, or plain white book paper, or plain white writing paper?—A. Yes, sir; I could and did readily. When I challenged there I could tell a man when he started up the chute by the ticket in his hand whether he was a Democrat or Republican, and so could our inspector. I would see him very frequently nod and wink at the Republican challengers on the Republican side when they would not be paying attention.

Q. Who was the Republican inspector at that precinct?—A. Mr. James C. Yohn.

Q. The tickets voted at that precinct by the Republicans you say were on that material?—A. Yes, sir; all of them that I saw.

Q. In your answer as to the character of the material do you answer as an expert, or do you answer as you understood it?—A. No, sir; I am not an expert. It is just my knowledge about the paper, my general knowledge of it from using it one time and another.

Q. Did you ever see such material used before as that upon which the Republican ticket was printed, by any party at any election?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that ticket by the Republicans upon the secrecy of the ballot?—A. The effect was to destroy the secrecy of the ballot. I saw persons (colored men) come there, and they would look at the two tickets, and if they had a desire to vote the Democratic ticket they would go away. In one or two instances I saw them go away and come back with their tickets in a little envelope and go to the window so that the Republican challengers could not see their tickets.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you if that was not a Democratic trick, to put those tickets in those envelopes?—A. No, sir; it was not a Democratic trick.

Q. You are a Democrat in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You was the Democratic challenger there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are at present the Democratic candidate for alderman in one of the districts in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you give the name of a single colored man that went to the polls and voted with his ticket in an envelope?—A. I don't know the names of the colored men that did it, but I know that myself and others witnessed it.

Q. Can you give the name of a colored man?—A. If I had thought about the matter at that time I could have done it.

Q. Could you give the location where any one lives?—A. They live in this precinct. This is in the eleventh ward.

Q. You say that James C. Yohn, the inspector at that precinct, would nod and wink?—A. Yes, sir; and I told him so.

Q. You say you told him that?—A. Yes, sir, I did, and he heard me himself. I asked him to stop winking at the challengers.

Q. Can you give me the names of any one that was standing by and heard you?—A. I do not remember who was standing there, but they all did. Mr. George W. Stout was a member of the board and he, no doubt, recollects it. I said that openly.

Q. Is he a Democrat or a Republican?—A. He was one of the judges there—a Democratic judge.

Q. State if you know of any one who was deceived or misled in voting at that precinct in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the character of paper it was?—A. I do not know that anybody was misled or deceived into voting that ticket.

Q. I will ask you if you know of any one who would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed upon the same character of paper as the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir. In answer to that I will say that I don't know any particular person, but I saw the effect of it; that men were afraid to show their tickets and afraid to let their hands be seen with them—certain men.

Q. How many of that kind were there there?—A. A good many of that kind.

Q. Can you name any one of them?—A. I don't know that I could now. If I had been called on the next day after, I might. It has passed out of my mind.

Q. Did you hear any one complain to the board of election that day about the character of the Republican tickets?—A. I complained myself when it was opened there. I got up in the window and proclaimed that it was an illegal ticket.

Q. Who gave you that information?—A. Nobody; I detected it myself.

Q. I will ask you if the Hon. Joseph E. McDonald had not been around to that poll before that?—A. No, sir; I did not see him.

Q. Was he at that poll there that day?—A. I think he voted there.

Q. You got up there at the poll yourself, and what did you say?—A. I said that that was in violation of law—that ticket.

Q. How many were standing around there at that time?—A. There were a good many there.

Q. About how many?—A. Thirty or forty.

Q. Were there fifty or one hundred there?—A. Thirty to fifty.

Q. And you proclaimed to the multitude that it was an illegal ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to the board and make any complaint, and ask to have the ticket rejected?—A. I went to the window and held the ticket up and told them that it was in violation of law. That is what I said.

Q. Who was there at the time?—A. All the Republican challengers were there.

Q. Give me the name of the Republican challenger?—A. I think Mr. McLain was one of them, the county clerk, and Ott Hasselman, and there were a good many there that stood on that side of the chute. Those I know were there.

Q. And you don't remember any others?—A. I could think them up, I think.

Q. You say you have no knowledge as an expert as to the different qualities of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know what kind of material that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. I do know what kind of material it is.

Q. What kind of material is it?—A. It is a very heavy kind of card-board, I judge.

Q. Which is it? You say you know.—A. I mean I know what kind it is.

Q. What is it?—A. I say it is a very extraordinarily heavy kind of paper.

Q. What is the color of it?—A. White paper.

Q. Is it plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it is plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the election last November?—A. No, sir; I did not; not a cent bet on it.

Q. Have you been around hunting up evidence on this question since the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you say you had consulted with paper dealers?—A. I did then and there consult. They were right there at my polls. If I am not mistaken, Mr. De Vay was there and some other person.

Q. Mr. Hasselman was there, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you consult with him about it?—A. There was not any use to consult with him.

Q. Why?—A. He was on the other side. I have no doubt that he was the man that got up the ticket and was in the scheme.

Q. What scheme do you refer to?—A. The scheme of using such a ticket as that.

Q. When you say it was no use to consult him, what do you mean?—A. I mean to say that so far as he was concerned he was of a different party from me, and I did not consult him about it, as a matter of course.

Q, Do you mean me to infer from that that a Republican shall not accept anything that is said by a Democrat, and vice versa?—A. No, sir; nothing of the kind. What information I sought about it I sought elsewhere. That is what I mean to say.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am 28 years old.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was not Mr. Hasselman the Republican challenger at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he is a very active Republican, is he not?—A. Yes, sir; rampant.

Q. Was he not, in point of fact, a member of the Republican executive committee that had charge of that campaign?—A. Yes, sir.

(Last two questions objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

Q. Was he not in the printing business?—A. Yes, sir; he said they were, and laughed, and said that that was a scheme that would work. He laughed and crowed there about it.

Q. Are you not an attorney?—A. I am, and practice here. I have been in the law business ever since I have been here, studying and practicing together, 7 years.

Q. Do you understand, in the popular sense, that the Republican ticket is on plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Well, I will say that I do not understand it to be on the kind of ticket contemplated by statute.

(Objected to as an opinion.)

Q. I will ask you whether it is on book paper, as you understand book paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or writing paper?—A. No, sir; neither writing paper or news paper.

Q. Or book paper.—A. No, sir.

Q. How many tickets, if you know, were voted at that precinct where you were?—A. There were 200 Republican tickets and 165 Democratic tickets, I think.

Q. Was the Republican ticket voted there like this ticket you have called attention to here?—A. They were all that kind of tickets.

Re cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State what kind of material that Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. It is upon ordinary white book print paper.

Q. How do you know?—A. I know by opening a book and looking at it.

Q. Where did you get the information that the Democratic ticket was printed on book paper? You say you are not an expert?—A. I am not an expert, but I know different kinds of paper that are used. I write every day on paper and have read books all my life, and I know that much about it.

Q. You know there are different qualities of book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell what the quality of that is?—A. I cannot tell it exactly, not what an expert would call it.

Mr. WILSON. You answer that question in a popular sense?

The WITNESS. Certainly I do.

ROSS CLARKE.

JACKSON LOUDERS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Jackson Louders; 41 years old; residence, 622 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. Forty-one years.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Since the 4th day of October, 1873, about ten years.

Q. Have you ever held any official position in this county?—A. I was County Treasurer.

Q. Were you in this city, and, if so, did you attend the election held on November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress, if you know, on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets at that election?—A. Mr. English was the Democratic, Mr. Peelle was the Republican, and the National I could not tell.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity on that day in that election?—A. I was judge, I think.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. Precinct No. 1, second ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Democratic ticket voted for Mr. English at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay and headed, "Republican Ticket." I will ask you if that was the ticket voted at that election by the Republicans?—A. As I remember now, it was.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, headed "Democratic Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election?—A. I think so.

Q. When that Republican ticket is lightly folded, would it remain folded, or would it be liable to spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason there is no evidence that it was so folded.)

A. My opinion would be it would be inclined to fly open.

Q. If another ticket was placed inside of it after being folded, that other ticket being folded, would they remain together, or would they be apt to come apart by shaking?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, for the reason that there is no evidence the tickets were voted so.)

A. That I cannot tell; I never practiced it.

Q. What do you think about it?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I suppose if an expert had hold of it it might shake out.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket voted at that election?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. You mean, I suppose, at the time they were being voted?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think as a rule it could be done.

Q. How would you do it; and if you did, how did you do it?—A. By the thickness of the paper.

Q. By the appearance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact did you, and could you, at that election at that precinct, tell the Republican ticket when you saw it or when you caught hold of it in your hand without opening it?—A. As a rule we could.

Q. Did you ever see a ticket, voted at any election, printed on material of that character that the Republican ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I do not remember that I have ever seen one printed on as heavy paper as that.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that ticket at your precinct upon the secrecy of the ballot?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

Q. Was it impaired?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. To a great extent I would think it was.

Q. Do you know what the number of votes of that precinct at that election in the aggregate were?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Which had the majority at that precinct, Democrats or Republicans?—A. The Republicans were vastly in the majority.

Q. What, approximately, was the result at that precinct?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the return will show for itself.)

A. I could not say, to get at it exactly.

Q. Was there 100 Republican votes?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the tickets voted there of the character that you have looked at here?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I think that is the ticket. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You were one of the Democratic judges at the first precinct in the second ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you as a matter of fact if you know of any voter at that precinct who did distinguish the Republican from the Democratic ticket?—A. As a matter of fact I could not say that I did.

Q. Do you know of any one who was misled or deceived in voting at that precinct in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the material it was?—A. My recollection is that we found in the box one ticket of this Republican ticket with the Democratic ticket pasted right over it and voted that way. Pasted right over the Republican ticket on the face of it.

Q. That would make the ticket still heavier?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know who voted that ticket?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know of any one that would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been upon the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I don't.
Q. Was there any complaint made to you, or to the board, I should say, about the character of the Republican ticket on that day?—A. No, sir; not that I remember of.
Q. State if the ballots were all counted there by the board without objection from anywhere.—A. They were all counted except one ballot.
Q. Without objection?—A. Without objection. There was one Democratic ticket thrown out.
Q. And one Republican ticket?—A. I do not think we threw out any Republican that I remember of.
Q. Was it the ticket you threw out that was pasted upon the Republican ticket?—A. No, sir. I think that was a Democratic ticket that was cut out of the Sentinel as it was published in the Sentinel, and they ruled it out on that ground because there was printing on the back side of it; also it was cut out of a newspaper.
Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket?—A. Well, we thought we could at the time.
Q. As readily as you could the Republican from the Democratic ticket?—A. Oh, no.
Q. Did you have any wager on the result of the Congressional election last fall. That you are at liberty to answer or not as you please?—A. I will not answer it then.
Q. Take that Democratic ticket and National ticket in your hand that you had a moment ago, and examine the two tickets, and I will ask you to state if the Democratic ticket is not printed on heavier paper than the National, if it is not more compact, and if it has not a better finish on it?—A. The Democratic?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. It is slightly heavier paper.
Q. Has it a better finish?—A. I think the Democratic part of it has.
Q. I say the Democratic ticket, is not the paper better finished?—A. I am no expert on paper.
Q. You can see by looking, and tell that it has a better, finer finish and polish on it?—A. It is slightly heavier; that is all I can say.
Q. Has it not a smoother surface?—A. Yes, sir; it is smoother.
Q. State if you cannot tell the difference between those two tickets in the weight of the paper that the tickets are printed on.—A. By handling them and looking at them closely you can.
Q. Could you by sight?—A. I do not think I could.
Q. Could you tell the Republican from the Democratic ticket by sight?—A. I think so.
Q. Are they both plain white?—A. I think so.
Q. How can you distinguish between the color of the tickets so as to tell one from the other?—A. I could not tell from the color.
Q. I am speaking about the external appearance of the tickets when they are folded.—A. I could not tell by the color; they are both on white paper.
Q. By sight?—A. I did not say by sight.
Q. Can you tell the Republican from the Democratic ticket, when folded, by sight?—A. I think I could.
Q. From its external appearance?—A. From the size of it.
Q. Supposing you did not get to see the end of the ticket, then could you tell the Republican from the Democratic ticket?—A. I do not think that I could.
Q. It would be necessary to see the end of the ticket and its bulk to distinguish them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you do that you could distinguish the Democratic from the Republican as quick?—A. Yes, sir,
Q. Could you not distinguish the Democratic ticket from the National ticket if you could get at the bulk of it?—A. Not so readily.
Q. You could distinguish it, could you not?—A. I do not think I could. I would not think there was as much difference in the weight to tell that.
Q. It is not in the weight. It is in the bulk?—A. There is not so much difference as there is in the others.
Q. There is a difference, is there not?—A. A slight difference.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you tell the difference between that Democratic ticket and the National ticket except by a very careful inspection?
(Objected to as leading, and not examination in chief.)
Mr. WILSON. It is not examination in chief.
A. I think it would take a close examination to tell.

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets folded as they went in the box; standing and looking on, could you tell that one was a Democratic ticket and another a National ticket folded in that way?—A. No, sir.

Q. Could you tell the difference between the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket folded and voted in that way, standing and looking at the inspector putting them in the box?

(Objected to.)

A. As a rule, we could.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you remember an instance in which you detected it?—A. I remember talking about it all the time.

Q. As a matter of fact, is it not frequent on election boards that you are surmising and say "There goes a good Republican ticket," or "a good Democratic ticket?"—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is frequent?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has not that happened always heretofore?—A. I never knew so much of it before.

Q. Is it not of frequent occurrence?—A. Yes, sir.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I will ask you as a physical fact, and not a surmise, if you could not distinguish these tickets as they were dropped in the box and as they went down, from their bulk and size and general appearance?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. As a rule we thought we could.

Mr. PEELLE. Especially when you saw the man that handed in the ballot. What do you say about that?

A. I do not know a great many of them.

JACKSON LANDERS.

CHARLES G. STEWART, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Charles G. Stewart; nearly 48 years old; residence, 495 North East street, in the city of Indianapolis.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis in November and December, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this notice, and upon the back of it there is an acknowledgment of service by Stanton J. Peelle, and I ask you if you at any time mailed a copy of such notice——

Mr. PEELLE. I admit I got the notice and that is my indorsement upon the back of it. This notice came in time so far as that is concerned.

Q. I will ask you if you mailed a printed notice similar to the one you have in your hand to Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you direct the letter to?—A. I directed one to Washington and one to Indianapolis, and I believe I went around to his boarding house to give him one; I went there and they told me that Mr. Peelle had gone to some funeral of some Congressman.

Q. The notice you directed to Washington was directed to Stanton J. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection.

Q. The letter was sealed up, stamped, and put in the office here?—A. Yes, sir; I put it in the office myself.

Q. You took a copy of the notice and carried it where?—A. I think it is right back of the city library; I forget the lady's name, but she told me Mr. Peelle had been boarding there and he had gone to the funeral of some Congressman up in Ohio.

Q. Did you leave a copy of the notice there?—A. Yes, sir; I left a copy of the notice there.

Q. You say you were in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the November election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. No, sir; simply a voter.

Q. I will ask you if you have ever had any experience in handling paper, buying or selling paper, or in the book business?—A. Yes, sir; I was in that business for about twenty years.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B to Mr. De Vay's evidence, and on the face headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was used by the Republicans at that election?—A. To the best of my recollection it is; yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention also to the ticket marked Exhibit D to Mr. De Vay's testimony.—A. I did not see the National ticket at that election. I do not think I saw one of them. I did not get down town until late. I stay up all night and it was three o'clock or later when I got down there, and I did not stay around there very long then.

Q. Look at the heading on the front of the Republican ticket and state what is the character of that printing at the head of it. Is it an engraving, is it a lithograph, or is it a print with type, or what is it?—A. I suppose that might be a print. It might be set up in print, type, or lithograph. I am not familiar enough with type to tell you anything about it. Type I do not know anything about.

Q. State what the character of the material is upon which the Republican ticket is printed.—A. Well, if that had been handed to me when I was in the book business I would call that a kind of card-board. (Objected to as immaterial.) I have not been in it for ten years now.

Q. Did you ever know of such material to be used for tickets before at any election?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I do not recollect. They have had so many tickets about here at these elections, and sometimes they are very thin and sometimes very thick.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket folded with the names inside from any other ticket printed on paper the same size and width, if the other paper was plain white book paper, plain white writing paper, or plain white print paper?

(Objected to as incompetent, as a conclusion of law.)

Q. Take it folded up between the fingers and look at it.—A. Why, certainly I could.

Q. Could you by looking at it?—A. It would depend upon what sort of a look I had. My eyesight is not very strong. I believe I could, for it is so much bulkier and heavier, and this [indicating] is so thin.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Could you tell from the external appearance of the tickets when folded?—A. Just lying in that way? [Indicating.]

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; I believe I could.

Q. They are both plain white?—A. Yes, sir; but a man that has been in the business regards that as a very superior grade of material—I mean that Republican ticket. It looks like a finer job all the way along. It has got a heavier, finer look to it in every way. This paper here on which the Democratic ticket is printed is just simply common white paper.

Q. Now take the National ticket in your hand and see the difference between that and the Democratic ticket. See if there is not as much difference between the quality of the National and Democratic ticket in its finish and appearance, as much as in the weight.—A. The finish is simply, perhaps, run through what they call a calender—I believe that is the term for it—but I would have some trouble in telling the difference between those.

Q. See if there is not a material difference in the finish of the two tickets.—A. It is a little bit whiter.

Q. Has not the Democratic ticket a much finer finish and more compact paper?—A. No, sir; I do not believe it has. The National ticket looks like a good sort of paper. There is not much difference between those two tickets.

Q. There is some difference, is there not?—A. I can tell the difference almost between any two pieces of paper unless they are identically the same, because I handled them so long.

Q. Between any kind of paper?—A. Almost; I think I could. I do not want to stretch the assertion, but I think I could. You see that is a different sort of thing.

Q. What is your politics?—A. Democratic, sir.

Q. Had you any wager on the result of the last election?—A. No, sir; I did not bet a cent. I never do.

Q. You did not go to the polls until 3 o'clock?—A. No, sir; I stay up all night, and it is generally late when I get down.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am managing editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel.

Q. The leading Democratic paper in this city?—A. Yes, sir; we try to make it so.

Q. You say you have been out of the paper business so long you cannot tell the difference between qualities of paper?—A. I did not say that at all, because I was in twenty years, the best years of my life.

Q. Can you tell the kind of paper that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. Trade names fluctuate. I know what they are calling it now, for I have heard; but I would not know of my own knowledge. When I was in the business that was known as a kind of card-board.

Q. How long ago?—A. I left in 1873.

Q. Do you know what it is called now?—A. I heard it simply stated it was plate paper, or lithograph paper; I heard that. I do not know anything about that. I heard that is what they are calling it in the trade, but that is what we would call a bristol-board or card-board. We cut them up into visiting cards and business cards. I used to have a machine to do it, and they would come in great sheets 22 by 28 inches.

Q. You would not say of your own knowledge what kind of paper it was?—A. I say that is what we would call it.

Q. I am speaking about it now?—A. No, sir; not of my own knowledge; that is, the technical name for it. I would not call that paper.

Q. What is it made out of?—A. Fine linen rags, I guess.

Q. Is it not paper?—A. The heaviest kind of paper. Card-board is made out of that.

Q. And it is paper, is it not?—A. I do not think you would call it paper. I would call it a species of card-board.

Q. Is not that paper?—A. It is made out of the same material as paper, but you would not call it paper.

Q. What kind of paper is that the Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. I would call that paper, but there are different kinds of paper.

Q. What kind of paper is that Democratic ticket printed on?—A. Either news or book paper. Either light book paper or good quality of news paper.

Q. Why would you call that book paper and the other card-board?—A. There are different styles of paper, but that gets beyond paper and gets into a species of board.

Q. That is all paper, I understand you to say?—A. It is made out of the same material, but they put more rags into it and more pulp, and put a finer finish on it and call it something else. They even make car-wheels out of that now.

Q. Car-wheels out of what?—A. Out of pulp, out or paper. You could not call that paper when it gets into a car-wheel.

Q. Your best judgment would be, then, that the Democratic ticket is printed on book paper?—A. Book or newspaper, and the other is on card-board.

Q. I understand your position to be that the Democratic ticket is printed on book paper, and that the Republican ticket is printed on card-board paper, and it is not paper?—A. Yes, sir. If it was a car-wheel I would say it was upon a car-wheel, but not on paper. They make buckets out of it and all that sort of thing now.

The notice referred to was made a part of this deposition, and will be found attached hereto, marked Exhibit E.

CHARLES G. STEWART.

Exhibit E to deposition of Charles G. Stewart.—P. C. H., N. P.

Contested election of Representative in Congress, seventh Congressional district of Indiana

NOTICE OF CONTEST.

To Hon. Stanton J. Peelle:

You are hereby notified that I shall, and do hereby, contest your election to the office of Representative in the Congress of the United States for the seventh Congressional district, in the State of Indiana, as declared by the official canvass of the election therefor held on 7th day of November, 1882.

I contest your said election on the following grounds:

That the official returns legally made by the election boards of the several election precincts of said seventh Congressional district of Indiana show that the contestor, William E. English, received a greater number of legal votes at said election held November 7, 1882, for Representative in Congress for said Congressional district than did the said contestee, Stanton J. Peelle.

That the claim that said Stanton J. Peelle received a plurality of eighty-seven votes at the said election is not correct, for said William E. English in fact received a greater number of the legal votes cast at said election for Representative in Congress for said district than did the said Stanton J. Peelle.

That 12,551 ballots were received and counted for said Peelle at said election in the city of Indianapolis and county of Marion, in said seventh Congressional district, that were illegal and void because in violation of the following law of the State of Indiana, viz:

"All ballots which may be cast at any election hereafter holden in this State shall be written or printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments thereon except the names of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted for."—(Section 4701 Revised Statutes of 1881.)

That said 12,551 ballots so counted for Peelle were not on "plain white paper," "without any distinguishing marks or embellishments," but were, in fact, on the material known as lithographic, plate or cardboard, so thick, sized and supercalendered as to be easily distinguished both by sight and touch, and so constructed as to come unfolded in the ballot-box, thus facilitating the voting of double ballots and commonly called on these accounts, spring-back tickets, or cardboard tickets.

The said tickets had other "distinguishing marks or embellishments," and were designed for the purpose, and, in fact, did destroy the secrecy of the ballot, intended to be secured by the above recited law, and by the constitution of Indiana, and were, therefore, clearly illegal and void.

That the effect of destroying the secrecy of the ballot by the use of these cardboard spring-back tickets was greatly to the injury of this contestor, aside from the counting of such illegal ballots for said Peelle, as all of the Federal office-holders, all the county and city officials, the police force, and most of the officers of wealthy corporations in said city and county were and are Republicans and supporters of said Peelle, and hundreds of colored men, laborers, employés and others were prevented from voting for this contestor by reason that the secrecy of the ballot was destroyed by the use of these cardboard spring-back tickets that could be easily and certainly distinguished to be Republican tickets by either sight or touch.

That said cardboard spring-back tickets were intended to and did promote frauds in double voting, there being over 100 more ballots voted at said election than persons voting, most of said ballots being wrongfully counted for said Peelle.

That said cardboard spring-back tickets were further designed to and did prevent persons from voting for this contestor, who desired to do so, because said tickets were not printed on "plain white paper," as required by law, but on cardboard so sized and supercalendered, that the name of this contestor could not be securely placed over the name of said Peelle, by reason of which 100 votes were lost to this contestor.

That Republican inspectors of said election, supporters of said Peelle, refused to receive the votes of 200 qualified voters at said election who presented legal ballots, containing the name of this contestor for Representative in Congress from said district, by reason of which unlawful and unjust refusal, 200 votes were lost to this contestor.

That in all, or nearly all, the election precincts in said district the supporters and agents of said Stanton J. Peelle circulated spurious and fraudulent tickets, being in exact similitude of the Democratic ticket on which said William E. English's name appeared for Representative in Congress, except that said counterfeit tickets had the name of Stanton J. Peelle printed in the place of the name of this contestor, and in some instances the name of other Republican candidates for other offices were printed in place of the Democratic candidate, but in all cases such fraudulent tickets so circulated by the supporters and agents of said Peelle were headed "Democratic ticket," with the names of the Democratic candidates for State offices thereon, and in many cases with the names of all the Democratic candidates thereon except the name of said English, for which the name of said Peelle was substituted, by reason of which fraudulent devices and practices 300 electors voted at said election for said Peelle who in truth and in fact intended to vote for said English, and actually supposed they had so voted until said fraudulent and spurious tickets were discovered.

That in the city of Indianapolis, in said district, a number of persons, who were qualified electors in said city, who desired and intended to vote for this contestor in the precincts in which they were entitled to vote, were deterred and prevented from so doing by the threats, menaces and intimidation of Republican policemen, United States deputy marshals and others, working in the interests of said Stanton J. Peelle at said election, and that by reason of said wrongful and unlawful threats, menaces and intimidations used in behalf of said Peelle by his supporters at said election a large number of votes, to wit, 200 votes, were at said election, in said precincts, cast for said Peelle by the electors so threatened, menaced and intimidated, which votes would have been cast and counted for this contestor but for such threats and menaces; and 200 other legal voters were deterred from voting for this contestor by reason of said threats, menaces and intimidations, and did not, by reason thereof, vote at all.

That Republican officials or others, working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle, took from the Marion County jail and the station house of the city of Indianapolis 100 prisoners, and caused them to vote 100 ballots for said Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at said election, the said 100 persons so voting not being qualified voters, or voting for said Peelle because of the threats, intimidations and undue influences of said Republican officials or others.

That Republican officials or others working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle took fifty-seven paupers out of the Marion County poorhouse, and by threats, intimidation and undue influence caused them to vote for the said Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at said election, which they would not have done but for the wrongful acts of said Republican officials or others.

That Republican officials or others working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle took thirty-five persons out of the city hospital of said city of Indianapolis, and by threats, intimidations and undue influence caused them to vote for said Peelle for Congress at said election, which they would not have done but for the wrongful acts aforesaid.

That persons working in the interest of Stanton J. Peelle imported persons into said district who were not entitled to vote therein, but who voted at said election for said Peelle to the number of 200 ballots, which ballots were wrongfully counted for said Peelle, and 100 other persons voted for said Peelle in election precincts in said district in which they were not entitled to vote, and such votes were wrongfully counted for said Peelle.

That said election was wrongfully interfered with by Republican officials of the United States Government, who, under the pay of the General Government, came from Washington City and elsewhere in large numbers, to wit, the number of 100, to control and overawe the lawful electors of said district to elect the said Stanton J. Peelle; and to further that end a large fund was raised by assessments upon Federal office-holders by J. A. Hubbell's committee, and by other parties, and brought into said district by the said Stanton J. Peele, or his agents or supporters, and was, with other moneys, unlawfully and corruptly used to promote the election of the said Stanton J. Peele, whereby he received 500 more votes than he would have received but for such corrupt and wrongful interference.

That in several of the election precincts in said district, ballots that were for this contestor for Congress, or intended by the person voting to be for him, were wrongfully rejected and not counted for him because they contained the wrong middle initial letter of his name, and for other insufficient causes, and in several precincts the return made is not a true and correct return of the legal ballots voted at such precincts.

Wherefore, this contestor alleges that said Stanton J. Peelle was not, but that the said William E. English was, duly and lawfully elected Representative in Congress from said district at the election aforesaid.

November 29, 1882. WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

UNITED STATES,
District of Columbia:

Before me, the undersigned, a notary public within and for said District, on this day personally came ———, to me well known, who being duly sworn, upon his oath says that on the ——— day of December, 1882, at said District, he personally served the within notice on the within-named Stanton J. Peelle by delivering to him a true copy thereof.

THOMAS B. MESSICK, being first duly swqrn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Thomas B. Messick; my age, at my nearest birthday, 42; my residence, 218 Blackford street, in this city.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the 7th day of November, the day of the last Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election that day?—A. Yes, sir; I did, sir.

Q. Did you act in any capacity that day at the polls?—A. No, sir; not officially. I held the poll-book; that is the book of the poll of the ward.

Q. You were challenger?—A. Yes, sir; I acted in that capacity part of the time.

Q. What precinct was this in which you acted?—A. Precinct No. 1, thirteenth ward.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will call your attention now to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and on the back indorsed Exhibit B to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was voted on that day by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I also call your attention to the ticket labeled at the head "Democratic Ticket" and indorsed on the back Exhibit C to Mr. DeVay's testimony, and I will ask you if it was the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "National Ticket" and marked Exhibit D on the back, to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if you know whether or not that is the ticket voted and used by the Nationals at that precinct?—A. I do not recollect of having seen that ticket at all, in fact there was very few of them there.

Q. Could you at that precinct tell from the appearance when a Republican ticket was put in the box that it was a Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; most generally I could. I stood right up close to the window.

Q. Could you tell that ticket from the Democratic ticket, watching them as they went into the box?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of material, if you know, is that Republican ticket printed on?

(Objected to for the reason that the witness has not shown himself competent to tell.)

Q. I ask your the question in the popular sense, not of you as an expert?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I should judge that the ticket is what has been generally termed card-board.

Q. Could you tell that ticket from any ticket of a similar size and width of fold if that other ticket were printed on plain white book paper, plain white print paper, or plain white writing paper—ordinary plain white paper of that character?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent for the reason he has not said that he knew what plain white book paper or print paper was.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have seen plain white book paper, have you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have seen plain white print paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have seen plain white writing paper, have you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any official position now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that?—A. Assessor for Center Township, Marion County.

Q. Do you handle paper in that capacity?—A. Not a great deal; no, sir.

Q. What effect did the use of that Republican ticket printed on that material have, if any, on the secrecy of the ballot at that precinct?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and as a conclusion of law.)

A. I think it had some, from the fact that there was a number of colored people in that precinct over there that had signified their intention of voting the Democratic ticket, and when they came to the election that morning and saw the style of the paper and the kind and quality of the paper that the Republican ticket was printed on, they were almost afraid to risk it.

(Objected to for the reason that the testimony of the colored man is the best evidence.)

Q. Where were you standing in relation to the ballot-box at your precinct, and how far from it?—A. I suppose I was not more than three feet from it.

Q. Could you see the tickets as they were dropped in?—A. Yes, sir. Not all the time; but part of the time.

Q. When you could see them plainly could you tell what was the character of the tickets, as between the two parties?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many votes were cast at that precinct, if you know?—A. That I do not remember.

Q. Were all the Republican tickets voted there of that character?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Approximately, how many Republican votes were there?—A. I suppose 150.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say there was 150 votes in that precinct?—A. No, sir. I think there was 150 Republican tickets voted; 100 at least.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You are a Democrat and assessor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. City or township?—A. Township.

Q. Did you have any wager on the result of the last election?—A. Not a cent.

Q. You have no knowledge of paper as an expert?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day as to the character of the Republican tickets?—A. No, sir. I think not.

Q. Do you know of any man who was misled or deceived in voting that day in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No, sir. I did not hear of any.

Q. Do you know of any man that would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was?—A. Nothing, except as I said a while ago, several colored men had expressed a desire to vote the Democratic ticket.

Q. When did they express that desire?—A. Prior to the election.

Q. To whom?—A. A number of Democrats in the ward.

Q. That was before the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir,

Q. What are the names of those colored men?—A. I cannot say now.

Q. Can you give the name of one of them?—A. No, sir.

Q. The only thing is that some days prior to the election some of those men expressed a desire to vote the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when the time came they voted the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they say anything on the day of the election about it?—A. One or two of them said they desired to vote it, but they were too closely watched by the Republicans there, and Ben Thornton in particular. Ben Thornton was the policeman there.

Q. Who were the colored men that said that?—A. That I cannot say.

THOMAS B. MESSICK.

JESSE S. WHITSIT, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Jesse S. Whitsit; I am thirty-seven years old; I reside in Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Between twenty-six and twenty-seven years.

Q. Were you in this city on November 7, 1882, the day of the last election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.

Q. Have you held any official position in this county?—A. Representative to the General Assembly.

Q. You were one of the members elected to the last Legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked on the back Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and on the front "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Republicans at that election at your precinct?—A. It was a very similar ticket as near as I can recollect. I expect that would be the same style of ticket used on that day.

Q. Which is your precinct?—A. First precinct, twenty-second ward.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C on the back, and on the front headed "Democratic Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats at your precinct?—A. I think it was a similar ticket.

Q. Did you see the National ticket that day?—A. Yes, sir; but I did not notice it particularly.

Q. I will ask you to look at the ticket marked Exhibit D on the back, to the deposition of Mr. De Vay and headed "National Ticket," and state, if you can, if that is the ticket that was used.—A. I think it is a similar ticket, although, as I said, I did not notice particularly. I think probably the same class of ticket that was used, but I did not handle any of them at all.

Q. You were about the polls all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at any time posted about the ballot-box watching the vote?—A. Yes, sir; I was there at the box most of the time when any one voted.

Q. I will ask you if you could distinguish the Republican ticket used that day at that election when it was folded; if you could tell which was the Republican ticket when it was folded up and voted and held close to you?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. Did you do it?—A. Yes, sir; a number of times.

Q. Could you tell that ticket from the Democratic ticket when folded?—A. Yes, sir; easily.

Q. How could you do it?—A. By the bulk of the ticket and the stiffness of the look of the paper. It made a bulk about twice as large as the ordinary ticket, almost, and the general appearance of the ticket was easily distinguished from any other ticket there.

Q. I will ask you what effect did it have at your precinct upon the secrecy of the ballot—the use of that Republican ticket, I mean?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law and leading.)

Q. What effect, if any, did it have?—A. I do not know as I can say that it had any particular effect in my precinct.

Q. As to the secrecy, whether or not it was known?—A. It was well known that it could be distinguished from any other ticket; that no man could secretly vote the Republican ticket or Democratic ticket on that day.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say it was well known?—A. A man could tell very easily which ticket a man was voting without any trouble.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You are the present chairman of the city central committee on the Democratic side?—A. No, sir; it is my brother.

Q. You are the Democratic member from this county in the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have frequently been at the polls on election day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you as a matter of fact if it is not frequent that you can tell when men are going to the polls what kind of a ticket they are going to vote?—A. I never noticed it before. I understand you ask as to the tickets.

Q. I am asking you if it has not been frequently the case at the polls where you were; you have been frequently at election polls on election day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you could tell when men were going to the polls with tickets in their hands what party they were going to vote for?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you not said with other men: "There goes a good Republican vote" or "a good Democratic vote?"—A. We might tell what the man had heretofore voted, but we could not tell by the ticket in his hand.

Q. Do you say you can tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket from its external appearance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the difference?—A. The difference is in the bulk of the ticket.

Q. You would have to see the end of the ticket. I ask you, as I hold them up one in each hand before me, to state if you can tell, looking at the size of those tickets folded together, the difference in the bulk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How can you see it?—A. How can I see that pile of books?

Q. I hold now in my hands two books. Can you say from the size of those books which one is the heaviest?—A. I do not know as I could if I saw the side. If I saw the end I could say. I could tell that the book on the north side was the heaviest.

Q. When two tickets are taken and folded together, I will ask you if you can tell the two tickets from the external appearance unless you can see the end of the tickets, to see the thickness of the tickets?—A. You can almost always see the ends and sides when a man has hold of the ticket. It is sometimes impossible to see the side.

Q. Can you from here? There is a distance of about seven feet between you and myself, and those two tickets are folded, and can you tell the difference between the two tickets I hold now in my hand from the external appearance, folded?—A. I could if it was out in perfect light. I cannot see them plainly the way I set.

Q. Can you see any external difference in those two tickets?—A. Not a great deal.

Q. Then you would have to get at the end of the tickets in order to see the difference and in order to get at the bulk; is not that true?—A. Yes, sir; end or side; you would have to see one or the other.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understand you to say, Mr. Whitsit, that the fact of the use of these two tickets so contrasted was that anybody standing there could distinguish when the Democratic or Republican ticket was voted.

(Objected to.)

Q. Could the challengers where they were standing see the votes as they were put in the box?

(Objected to, for the reason that the distance at which the challengers stood has not been shown.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far were these challengers standing from the box?—A. Not above four feet.

Q. How were they located with reference to the box?—A. The box stood just inside of the window, and the challengers stood just outside. The challengers stood on each side of the chute.

Q. Then there was a chute there up which the voters walked?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could the challengers see, if the voter held the ticket in his hand, the ticket as he walked up to vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could they see that ticket from where they were?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They could see what ticket the man was voting in that way?—A. I should think there was no question about it.

Q. How many tickets were voted at that precinct, if you know?—A. I do not know.

Q. Was the majority Democratic or Republican?—A. Democratic. The majority in the ward was 224.

Q. Do you know of any one that was prevented from voting by the use of that ticket?—A. Not in that ward.

JESSE S. WHITSIT.

VICTOR M. BACKUS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Victor M. Backus; my age, 34; I reside 190 North West street.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. Not until night.

Q. What did you do that night?—A. I was a watcher. I was put on there by the county central committee.

Q. What was your duty there—to watch that count?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle at that election?—A. I saw the Republican ticket; I suppose his name was on it.

Q. Mr. Peelle was a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket, Mr. English on the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to ticket marked Exhibit B to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and headed "Republican Ticket." Please look at it and see if that was the ticket used at your precinct by the Republicans at that election?—A. I believe it was.

Q. What precinct were you in?—A. The south precinct of the thirteenth ward.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket marked Exhibit C to Mr. De Vay's testimony and headed "Democratic Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats at that election?—A. Yes, sir; it looks like it.

Q. How close were you to the box from which the count was being made while they were being counted?—A. I stood right at the side like this [indicating], and the men that had charge, Mr. Isgrigg stood right in front of it, and another gentleman on the other side.

Q. Did you attend the poll on the outside that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there all day?—A. I was away about an hour and a half in the morning, or two hours.

Q. With that exception you were there all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take any interest in what was going on?—A. I was one of the workers.

Q. I will ask you if in watching the count you could tell the Democratic from the Republican ticket when they were taken out of the box and unfolded?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I could if they were anyways open in this shape [indicating]. If they were up tight and close together I do not suppose I could, unless they opened them up.

Q. Could you tell the Republican tickets when they were voted, that they were Republican tickets?—A. They were. I watched right close. We had what I counted as doubtful votes, and I watched right close. I saw them come to the polls, and if I saw a Democratic ticket I would go and tell them it was a Democrat; and if he had a Republican ticket I would tell them it was a Republican ticket. Of course, I could not tell everything, and if a man had a ticket in his hand and holding it right close nobody could tell it, but if he should swing it out loose I could tell it. If he held it out loose it would spring out.

Q. I will ask you if that Republican ticket was folded lightly, would it be apt to spring open when it was in the ballot-box?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I do not understand you quite.

Q. Take these tickets as they stood originally, and fold them together without springing them or without creasing them, and would they spring open?—A. We would go right along and take them out as quick as we like in 5's or 100 of them—the inspector could, or the men that were there that had charge of the ballot-box; he would go right along and take them out and call them Republican, and he would take them right out, and he could generally tell them. They seemed to be larger and heavier.

Q. Could he tell them without reading them?—A. I did not say that he could.

Q. When these tickets were lightly folded without being creased, state if they were apt to spring open.—A. Yes, sir; I think they are.

Q. Did you see any tickets that had partially come open in the ballot-box in that way?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. If two Republican tickets were folded separately and one placed within the other, and the one on the outside was lightly folded without creasing, would they spring open when dropped in?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I should think they would. I would not say they would positively, but I think they would.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. Democrat.

Q. I understood you to say if those tickets were folded closely, as they usually are when voted, it would be difficult to tell one from the other.—A. As you come up to the polls?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think it would.

Q. I will ask you, when tickets are folded when voted, if they do not usually fold them pretty close and hold them in their hand pretty close when they vote.—A. Yes, sir; some of them do.

Q. Is it not a general thing that they fold them pretty close?—A. Yes, sir; as a general thing. I have seen some hold them right up open and others pretty close.

Q. Democratic tickets were as liable to come together and run together in the box as Republican tickets?—A. At this special election I saw two tickets folded, but I do not recollect what one of them was. One of them was the Republican ticket, and he brought them out, and I said that is double right there and made it stop, and he said it was not, and I made a kick and our other man made a kick, and he insisted that it was, and he made a little fuss about it.

Mr. WILSON. Who were those parties, do you know?

The WITNESS. I forget this other man's name. He was a judge, and Mr. Isgrigg and Mr. Ayres.

Q. That was not counted?—A. No, sir; that was not counted; we made them throw it out.

Q. If that Democratic ticket should be lightly folded, would it not be liable to spring open?—A. I am not an expert about paper. I do not know anything about it. I do not think it would be as apt as the other.

Q. I ask you, if that Democratic ticket should be lightly folded, if it would not be likely to spring open.—A. I must say I did not see any of them folded.

Q. I do not ask you about that. You saw some of the Republican tickets?—A. I saw it spring open.

Q. I am asking you if that Democratic ticket, when you fold them up lightly, if they are not liable to spring open?—A. I would not say they would be as liable as the others.

Q. I ask you if that Democratic ticket, when lightly folded, is not liable to spring open?—A. I do not think it would spring open as easily.

Q. I ask you again, when the Democratic ticket that you have in your hand is lightly folded, if it would not be liable to spring open?—A. I presume it would.

Q. I will ask you if any other ticket folded partly in there, when slipped in the box, if they would not be liable to separate when you shook the box up?—A. I presume they would.

Q. Just the same as a Republican ticket?—A. I do not think they would unfold as easily as the Republican ticket, because it is a stiffer ticker; it is stronger; it has got more of a spring in it.

Mr. WILSON. You mean in the Republican ticket?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if, in consequence of that Democratic ticket being on a little lighter paper, if it would be more liable to spring out when shaken than the Republican ticket?—A. I should not think it would.

Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently at that poll on that day if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper the Democratic was on?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. What is your business?—A. I used to be a carriage-maker.

Q. You were the Democratic watcher there that night?—A. I was appointed that night. I worked at the polls all day, and some one brought an appointment there, and I did not want to go in.

Q. Were you appointed there as the Democratic watcher that night?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. By the Democratic central committee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The tickets are plain white, are they not, both of them?—A. Yes, sir; I should think they were.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understand you to say when he held them in his hand that way [indicating] you mean that the ticket must be concealed from view?—A. As a general thing when a man comes to vote he has his ticket pretty close.

Q. I will ask you when he hands it to the inspector, and the inspector puts it in the box, if you do not have a close view of that ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the election?—A. On you? No, sir.

Q. Did you on any one else?—A. No, sir.
Q. You had no bet on the result of the election last fall?—A. No, sir.

V. M. BACKUS.

HARRY O. THUDIUM, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Harry O. Thudium; age, 29; residence, 195 North East street, city of Indianapolis.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis, November 7, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. First precinct, tenth ward.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and at the head, on the front, "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted and used at that election by the Republicans at your precinct?—A. That is the same kind. I have some over at the office that I saved.

Q. I will ask you to look at the ticket marked Exhibit C to the evidence of Mr. De Vay, and at the head "Democratic Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted and used by the Democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congress at that election?—A. William E. English and Stanton J. Peelle.

Q. Who was the candidate on the National ticket?—A. I do not know.

Q. Were you close to the ballot-box during the balloting that day?—A. I was there most of the day.

Q. How close to the box?—A. Within four feet.

Q. Were you inside of the room at all where the ballot-box was?—A. I was just outside, the first man at the chute, that is, the nearest man from the box to the chute.

Q. Then you must have been a little closer than four feet?—A. Well, say three feet.

Q. I will ask you if you saw the tickets that were handed in by the voters to the inspector as they were handed in and put in the box.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell the Republican ticket when you saw it voted? Did you have a chance to see?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could not tell the National ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. How could you discriminate? How could you tell one ticket from another?—A. The Republican ticket would not fold up properly.

Q. Was there any other difference in their appearance?—A. I considered that so much difference in that particular thing that we knew all day exactly how the thing was going.

Q. Did you ever have any experience in the paper business?—A. Yes, sir. I have been in the paper business fourteen or fifteen years.

Q. Do you know the character of the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. It is paper made especially for a purpose, as much as I know about paper.

Q. For what purpose?—A. For a special purpose. It is not paper that is carried by dealers or by houses generally.

Q. Do you know what is the name of it?—A. I would consider that it was machine bristol, but a very thin quality of machine bristol. It is what I would take it for. It is stuff we ordinarily use for cards, but it is somewhat thinner than that.

Q. I will ask you what is the material upon which that Democratic ticket is printed?—A. That is ordinary book paper. What we call Western book paper.

Q. What was the effect of that Republican ticket upou the secrecy of the ballot or the vote?—A. We did not find much secrecy about it. I had to or did inform the Republican inspector that it was against the law, as much as I knew about it, to let anybody know how a man voted.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name?—A. Thudium.
Q. What nationality are you?—A. I am an American, born in Philadelphia.
Q. What is your politics?—A. My politics were Republican; I am a Democrat now.
Q. Were you a Democrat in that last election?—A. Yes, sir; I was.
Q. Where is your place of business?—A. Twenty-Seven south Delaware street.
Q. What is your business now?—A. Newspaper publisher.
Q. What is the paper?—A. Gutenberg Co. German Telegraph.
Q. How long have you been employed there?—A. I have been in that business about ten years.

Q. You say that that paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed there is not the kind of paper that is kept at all in stock?—A. Not, as much as I know about the paper business.

Q. You claim that it is not kept in stock here in town?—A. I never found it in town at any dealers.

Q. Do you know the name of that paper?—A. As I said before, it is what I would consider thin bristol-board.

Q. Did you have any wager or bet upon the result of the election last fall?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not on any one?—A. No, sir.

Q. You stood at the polls all day?—A. I do not think I left them five minutes all day.

Q. You were challenger there?—A. Part of the time.

Q. Do you know of any one who was deceived or misled in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being on that kind of paper?—A. I cannot say as to that, because I was right at the chute there, and such exclamations, if there were any made, were made outside.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted different if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper as the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was the name of the inspector of that precinct?—A. Barton W. Cole.

Q. You say you called his attention to the ticket?—A. I called his attention to the fact that he was letting his friends, his Republican friends, know how the people were voting. I did call his attention to it because he was letting his Republican friends know how they were voting.

Q. How was he doing it?—A. Part of the time by nodding, and partly open, if he was asked.

Q. I understand you to say you called his attention to the fact that these tickets were illegal?—A. No, sir; I said that his manner was illegal.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board there that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. There was some talk, but nothing official.

Q. They were counted without objection?—A. I was not inside.

HARRY O. THUDIUM.

The further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until Monday, October 8, at 10 o'clock a. m.

MONDAY, October 8, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

CALVIN F. DARNELL, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name and age?—Answer. Calvin F. Darnell; my age is 50 years.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. No. 738 North Illinois street, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indiana?—A. Fifty years.

Q. Have you held any office?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what office.—A. I have held the office of county recorder, and, I guess it would be called an office, as councilman.

Q. Were you at the last election here for Congress that took place on November 7, 1882, in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir; I was at that election.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at that election; were you on the board?—A. No, sir; I was not on the board.

Q. Did you stay at the polls all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was you a challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. It was precinct No. 1, in the third ward.

Q. Did you see the ticket voted by the Democrats and Republicans on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I ask you if that was the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct on that day.—A. It is; or one similar to it.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and indorsed on the back as Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and will ask you if that is the ticket that was used by the Democrats on that same election.—A. I should say that it was, or one similar.

Q. You say you were challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far were you standing from the ballot-box; how many feet?—A. Two or three feet.

Q. You had a chute up there for voters to pass up?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How close did the voters pass to you as they would go up the chute to vote?—A. It was a chute I guess about that wide—about two feet. I made the chutes and I think they were about two feet wide, and it had a side right along it, and we rested our elbows on it, and the Democrats on the other side.

Q. When the voter would pass up and hand his ticket to the inspector and the inspector would place it in the box, standing where you were could you see the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell whether the ticket was a Democratic or Republican ticket as you saw him go to the box and hand it to the inspector and the inspector put it into the box?—A. I guess I could.

Q. How?—A. In the first place, I thought the Republican ticket was a little wider than the Democratic ticket; secondly, I judged it by the thickness of the paper.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican.

Q. Were you acting as challenger for the Republicans that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you vote for a candidate for Congress at the last election?—A. Yes, sir; I think I did. I voted the ticket without being scratched.

Q. I do not ask you to state how you voted. You have frequently been challenger up there in that precinct in the third ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you have not always been able to tell the Democratic from the Republican ticket up there as a challenger and as a close observer?—A. Yes, sir; on several occasions I could. There was one time in particular I recollect, because the Democratic ticket was so very thin.

Q. When was that?—A. I disremember when that was.

Q. Can you state about how long ago it was?—A. No; I cannot.

Q. Was it in 1878?—A. I would not be positive about that.

Q. The Democratic ticket was so thin that the print could be seen through it when it was folded?—A. I don't recollect how that was now. It has been so long ago. That was one of the signs I had to go by.

Q. You, as a challenger there, have always been very active and very scrutinizing of the tickets when they went in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by that close examination you have always been able to tell, have you not, very nearly every ticket that went to the inspector, and how they were voted?—A. I could not say at all times. I remember that one time in particular, but to say when that was I could not.

Q. You say that the Republican ticket was a little wider than the Democratic ticket.—A. I thought it was. I never measured them in my life, but I thought so.

Q. What was the color of the Republican ticket?—A. White.

Q. Plain white?—A. I guess so.

Q. I will ask you to take that ticket, marked Exhibit D and made a part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and headed "National Ticket," and I will ask you to take the Democratic ticket also, and state if there is not some difference between those two tickets.—A. One appears to be a little firmer in the paper.

Q. I will ask you if that Democratic ticket is not heavier than the National, and if it is not a finer-finished paper.—A. I am not a judge of paper, but I would think it was heavier paper.

Q. I will ask you if you would not be able, as challenger, with your close examination and observation, to detect those tickets when they went into the box.—A. I cannot answer that question.

Q. When they were folded?—A. I knew every Greenbacker there was in my ward, and did not pay any attention to scrutinize those tickets particularly as I would the Democrats.

Q. Don't you know every Republican that votes at your precinct?—A. I come very near it.

Q. I will ask you if you did not judge of the Republican tickets more by the men that were voting them than you did by the ticket itself?—A. No; I could not say that I did, because there were some that had moved into our ward that I did not get acquainted with. I know pretty near all the Democrats in the ward, but there were some few Democrats that day that I did not know.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was there any doubt in your mind that day as to how the colored people might vote at your precinct?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Oh, there always has been doubts.

CALVIN F. DARNELL.

AUSTIN H. BROWN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Austin H. Brown; 55 years years of age; I reside in Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. I have lived here for the last thirty-three years; I came here forty-six years ago, and I was absent five years.

Q. Have you held any official positions; if so, what?—A. Yes, several. I was State printer, printer to the last constitutional convention, county auditor and county clerk, collector of internal revenue, and I was in the city council for thirteen years prior to 1876, and am now a member of the school board, of which I have been a member for the past twelve years. I believe that is all.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882; and if so, did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir; I was, and I attended that election and voted.

Q. State, if you know, how many election precincts there were in Indianapolis at that election.—A. There were fifty-six in Indianapolis.

Q. State, if you know, in how many of these precincts the inspectors of the election were Republican in politics, and how many Democratic.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. There were fifty-four that had Republican inspectors, and there was one at which the township trustee was inspector—that is all that was Democratic; and there was one at which there was a National inspector, one of the precincts in the seventeenth ward.

Q. State, if you know, at how many of these precincts a majority of the election board were Republican in politics?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. All but two. The one at which the National inspector was was equally divided. Mr. Kitz's had one Democrat, which gave them the majority.

Q. If you know, please state whether there were many persons in the city on the day of said election who were office-holders under the General Government?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. There were between eighty-five and ninety United States officers, including employés, clerks, and mail-carriers.

Q. Do you know what their politics were?—A. They were all Republicans.

(Objected to.)

Q. State, if you know, what was the politics or what were the politics of the governor of Indiana and the State officers residing in Indianapolis at the time of the election.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

Mr. PEELLE. I want to ask the purpose of this testimony. I want the purpose stated in the deposition itself.

Mr. WILSON. It speaks for itself.

Mr. PEELLE. I want to know your purpose. I insist that you shall state the purpose for which you introduce this testimony, so I shall know what I have to meet.

Mr. WILSON. I decline to state that any further than it speaks for itself.

Mr. PEELLE. Then I shall anticipate it and meet it in the making of my case.

A. The governor was a Republican and so were all the State officers and all the appointees except the quartermaster-general, who was a Democrat.

Q. State, if you know, what the politics of the county officers of Marion County were at the time of the election.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. They were all Republicans.

Q. State, if you know, what were the politics of the mayor and other city officers of the city of Indianapolis at the time of said election.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. If you exclude the council and board of aldermen they were all Republicans.

Q. Do you know what the politics of the majority of the council and board of aldermen were at the time of the election?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. Republican.

Q. State, if you know, about the number of men on the police force of the city of Indianapolis at the time of that election and their politics.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. There were 74, and on the day of the election there was 150 extra policemen in addition.

Q. State, if you know, what the politics of those policemen were.—A. They were all Republicans.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

Q. State, if you know, who were the candidates for Congress voted for at that election from this district, the seventh Congressional district, on the Democratic, Republican, and National tickets, respectively.—A. William E. English on the Democratic, Stanton J. Peelle on the Republican, and Robert W. Medkirk on the National.

Q. Have you had any experience in the paper and publishing business?—A. I am a printer, and learned my trade, and published a newspaper for five years, and had a book and job office connected with it, and am now interested in a monthly periodical for which I buy the paper regularly.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Democratic ticket voted at that election?—A. I did.

Q. Did you see the "Greenback" or National ticket voted at that election?—A. I did.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that is the character of the ticket or the ticket that was voted or used by the Republicans at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. We offer that as an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. Brown and as part of the same, and ask that it be marked and identified.

(The ticket was marked Exhibit F to deposition of Austin H. Brown, P. C. H., notary public, and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.)

Q. I show you the ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and ask you if that was the ticket that was voted and used by the Democrats at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. We offer that as an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. Brown and as part of the same, and ask that it be marked and identified.

(The ticket was marked as Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, P. C. H., notary public, and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.)

Q. I show you a ticket headed "National Ticket," and ask you if that is the ticket used by the Nationals at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I ask that that be made a part of his deposition and identified.

(The ticket was marked as Exhibit H to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, P. C. H., notary public, and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.)

Q. Did that Republican ticket have any distinguishing mark or other embellishment except the names of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted, and, if so, describe the same?

(Objected to as immaterial and as being a conclusion of law, and because the ticket will show for itself.)

A. It had; in the character of the paper it was printed on.

Q. I ask as to the distinguishing marks and embellishments, if any.

(Objected to as a conclusion of law and immaterial.)

A. The head was engraved a large size with a big R, and with a tail to it and a dash underneath it that distinguished it from the head of the other tickets.

Q. You spoke of the character of the paper. Is that plain white paper?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. It is not, as known to the trade.

Q. What is the character of the material?—A. Well, it is known as lithographic plate paper, used for printing and engraving mainly.

Q. Could you distinguish that ticket as the Republican ticket?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. When voted?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Clearly; yes, sir. It was much larger in size.

Q. When lightly folded would that Republican ticket remain folded, or was it liable to spring open?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. It would spring back when folded, held between the thumb and finger; it would spring back and the fold would open again, that is, lightly folded.

Q. If another ticket were folded inside that ticket, both being folded before placed together, and thus folded one in the other and dropped in the ballot-box, would the ticket be liable to spring open and separate so as to release the inclosed ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that tickets were so folded.)

A. It could be used that way.

Q. Could you distinguish by sight the Republican ticket, when folded with the names inside, from one printed on plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading, and a conclusion of law.)

A. I answered that before. Yes, sir; I could

Q. Could you distinguish it, when folded, by touching and handling it?

(Objected to.)

A. I think it was a smoother surface than the other, and distinguishable on that account.

Q. Did you ever know such tickets to be used before at any election?

(Objected to.)

A. I never did.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the Democratic ticket voted at that election, said tickets being separately folded and with the names on the inside?

(Objected to.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How?—A. By its size and its smoothness.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket voted for Stanton J. Peelle from the National ticket voted at that election, both being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir. For the same reasons.

Q. Could you distinguish the Democratic ticket voted at that election from the National ticket, the tickets being folded with the names of the candidates inside?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Democratic and National?—A. I could distinguish either. No; they were very nearly alike. When folded I could not tell the difference.

Q. Could you distinguish the Republican ticket from any ticket of like length and breadth that was on either plain white print paper, plain white writing paper, or plain white book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial, and a conclusion of law, and for the reason that there is no evidence that tickets were voted other than those which have been described and made part of the witness's deposition.)

A. I could.

Q. Could the inspector and other election officers tell these lithographic plate tickets even when folded with the names of the candidate on the inside, whether or not the person voting them at said election was voting the Republican ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and as assuming that the tickets were on plate paper.)

A. They could and did distinguish them.

Q. Could you, when looking on at the polls, at that election, tell these Republican tickets when the voters handed them to the inspector and the inspector placed them in the ballot-box, even when carefully folded with the names inside?—A. They could be distinguished and were made a point in challenging.

Q. State, if you know, how many persons were on the board of canvassers of Marion County that compared and made return of the vote of that county at the election of November 7, 1882, and how many of said board were Republicans and how many were Democrats.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that the record will show for itself.)

A. There were 80 in all. There were 56 in the city and 24 in the country, and they were all Republicans except six. One of these was a National and the other five were Democrats—township trustees by virtue of their offices.

Q. Have you any knowledge whether the return of the vote of that election as made by said board of canvassers was correct?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I have.

Q. How did you obtain that information?—A. By having been a member of the board of commissioners appointed to recount the vote for sheriff on a contested election, and having during that service handled and counted every ballot.

Q. Who had the custody of the ballots from the time of said election until the time of the recount by said commissioners?—A. Under the law they were in the custody of the inspector after the election from the time of closing until the meeting of the board of canvassers on Wednesday, or 10 o'clock of that day, and then they were placed in charge of the clerk of the county, and they were then retained by him until this commission met, and they were turned over by the then clerk. In the mean time there had been a change in the office. Mr. Ransdell had gone out and Mr. McLain had succeeded him.

Q. What were the politics of these clerks?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Republican.

Q. Were they the supporters of Stanton J. Peelle as a candidate for Congress at that election, if you know?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes. So far as I know, they were.

Q. Were the ballots sealed and put in bags, as required by law, at the time the commissioners received thom officially from the clerk?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. All that came into the possession of the commission were so sealed.

Q. Did you and the other commissioners count the ballots for the office of sheriff and compare the result of your count with the return of the vote as made by the board of canvassers.

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, and for the reason that the board were acting under an order of the circuit court of Marion County and enjoined to secrecy in the performance of their duty and not to divulge anything that was discovered or made known to any one, and that the report made by them to the court is the only evidence of what they did.)

A. My answer is that we did so count and compare, officially, the vote for sheriff.

Q. Did you find on that recount that the vote for sheriff, as made by said board of canvassers, was correct?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that the return will speak for itself.)

A. We found that it was not.

Q. Was that the unanimous decision of the commission that made the recount?

(Objected to as divulging the record of the court.)

A. That is what we said in writing in our report. We agreed unanimously.

Q. Was or was not a majority of said commissioners Republicans and supporters of Mr. Peelle for Congress, at that election?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. They were. I can give you the names if you wish.

Q. Did you at that time count the ballots given in Marion County at said election for William E. English for Congress, and for Stanton J. Peelle for the same position?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and for the reason that it was outside of the duties for which the witness was appointed by the circuit court.)

A. I did this voluntarily. I kept account of every ballot and looked at the tickets and counted them over, first on sheriff, and then went over in the second count—they were handled by fives—and then I noted the vote on Congress.

Q. Did you carefully examine and count every ballot?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I did.

Q. Did you, at the time, make any report of the result of that count?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes. I made a statement in writing, which I have here.

Q. If you have that record please produce it, and read it, and attach it to your deposition as a part thereof.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and as an indirect attack upon the returns.)

A. (Reading): "In the election contest for sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, in the case of Lemon vs. Hess, I acted under appointment of the circuit court as a commissioner to recount the ballots received for that office at the general election held in that county November 7, 1882. The recount took place between the 23d and 27th of that month. At the same time I counted the vote for Congressman for that district, every ballot passing through my hands and being closely scanned by me, and of the ballots for Stanton J. Peelle for that office, 12,551 were of the kind commonly called card-board, or spring-back tickets; and the aggregate of all the ballots showed said Peelle's plurality over William E. English in that county to be 99 votes less than the number returned by the board of canvassers, making his plurality 443 without the vote of the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis, which precinct the board of canvassers returned as 98 majority for Peelle. My count embraced the ballots in all the election precincts of the county except the ballots in the second precinct of the twelfth ward, which could not be found; but the vote of that precinct was returned to the board of canvassers by the inspector of elections of that precinct as 98 majority for Peelle in said precinct. This 98 majority added to the aggregate of my count of the ballots of the other precincts would make Peelle's vote 541 more in Marion county than English's, being 99 less than the number returned by the board of canvassers November 9, 1882.

"INDIANAPOLIS, November 28, 1882.

"AUSTIN H. BROWN."

(The original will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof and marked Exhibit I to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. P. C. H., notary public.)

(Answer continued). I made that statement out the day after the commissioners made their recount and made their official report, and have had it ever since.

Q. Is that a true statement of the vote cast in Marion County at said election as between William E. English and Stanton J. Peelle, as you found it at the time of the recount?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. According to my count it is.

Q. Refreshing your recollection by that memorandum, what was the plurality of Stanton J. Peelle over William E. English in Marion County, as you found it by actual count of the ballots and of the return made of the second precinct of the twelfth ward, in Indianapolis, by said board of canvassers?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. 541.

Q. Did any other person upon the occasion of that recount count all the ballots for Congress but yourself?—A. No other person counted all the ballots for Congress.

Q. Did you compare the number of the ballots with the number of votes returned on the poll lists?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. We did. We took the poll-lists and saw that there was a certain number of votes polled, and then we added the votes, counting the vote for sheriff and adding them together, and compared them with the book showing the total number of votes. We did that in the instance of every precinct; of course they would not agree because some of the tickets got the names scratched entirely off and it was counted as a full vote.

Q. Did you find them to agree? If not, what was the difference?—A. There were discrepancies in most all the precincts.

Q. Were there more tickets than names on the poll-books?—A. There were in some instances; not many.

Q. In that recount did you find any ballot for William H. English for Congress?—A. There was one; in one of the precincts of the sixth ward, if I remember right.

Q. How did you count that?—A. In my count I counted it for William E. English, supposing that to be the intention of the voter.

Q. In that recount did you find any ballots that purported to be Democratic tickets and contained the names of the Democratic candidates for the various offices, except that Stanton J. Peelle's name was printed for Congress in place of William E. English; and if so, how many?—A. Yes, sir; I think there were not more than a dozen in the whole county got in the box of that character.

Q. How did these tickets count in your recount, as given by you in your statement of the result of that vote?—A. They counted for Stanton J. Peelle.

Q. Is the ticket I now show you the ticket to which you refer?—A. I think so.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that as a part of his evidence. Let it be identified as an exhibit.

(The ticket was marked Exhibit J to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, P. C. H., notary public, and will be found attached to this deposition.)

Q. What effect did it have upon the secrecy of the ballot, the voting of that Republican ticket at your precinct, if you know?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. It was noticeable when one of those tickets came up you could tell it from any other. It had that effect upon the secrecy. I think the inspector could tell when he took the ballot that he had a Republican ticket in his hand.

Q. I refer to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," that I showed you some time ago.—A. That is the one you call the "spring-back," as I understand the question; not to this last ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. Have you not been very active in the interests of the Democratic party in this State for years?—A. Yes; I was not very active last year.

Q. But you have been an active politician?—A. I did not work at the polls last year.

Q. I will ask you to state at whose instance you kept an account of the vote for Stanton J. Peelle during the time of the Lemon-Hess contest.—A. Mr. William H. English came to me, I think it was a day or two before we commenced our duties there, and asked me to take an account of all of the so-called "spring-back" tickets—that is, the character of the tickets that have been explained in this evidence as such—and offered to compensate me for it.

Q. Did he do it?—A. He did.

Q. You kept an account of the matter at the instance of Mr. English?—A. The matter of the vote between the two candidates I kept voluntarily myself. I did not ask a nickel for that.

Q. You kept the vote between Mr. Peelle and Mr. English?—A. I did that voluntarily.

Q. Did you keep the total number of votes cast for Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir; and the total number for Peelle, and the total number for Lemon, and the total number for Hess.

Q. What was the total number of votes, as counted by you, for Mr. English?—A. I cannot tell now.

Q. Have you not based in that statement simply the majority that was returned for Mr. Peelle as being 99 less by your count than was returned by Mr. English, as returned by the vote from the board for Mr. Peelle and Mr. English, basing it simply upon the vote as returned by the board of canvassers for Mr. English, and basing it upon the count for Mr. Peelle as made by yourself?—A. The board of canvassers showed a certain vote given for you and Mr. English. I took the vote and I counted and compared the two columns together and it showed there was 99 votes less, after deducting one from the other in the plurality than there was as shown by the board of canvassers. The count I made made that difference.

Q. Is it not a fact that you did not keep an account of the vote cast for Mr. English at all, but kept simply the account of the vote cast for Mr. Peelle?—A. I kept them both. There was scratches on both sides.

Q. You pretend to show by that statement you have made the vote cast for Mr. Peelle and Mr. English upon the basis of your count?—A. I do not understand the question.

Q. Is not this the fact: that the vote there that you claim that Mr. Peelle had less, was simply less than the vote as returned for Mr. English and not according to the vote, as counted by you, for Mr. English?—A. As reported by the board of canvassers, you mean?

Q. Yes, sir; is not that true?—A. It is just as I said. We would take up a precinct and we would count the vote for sheriff, and I would tally my votes for English as I went along; and when we got through that precinct I would refer to the tally-sheet and see what the vote was for Congressman and make a deduction, one from the other, showing the difference.

Q. Is it not a fact now that you did not detect or discover any mistakes in the vote of Mr. English, but accepted the vote as returned for him?—A. No, sir; I gave Mr. English and you the benefit of everything. Your name was on a great many Democratic tickets, and I found his on some Republican tickets, and those I counted for you and the others I counted for him.

Q. I ask you again, if you have not, in the statement you made, based your estimate upon the return made by the board for Mr. English and upon the count made by yourself for Mr. Peelle?—A. They failed in his case. I took the board of canvassers and they have failed, and I took the vote as I counted it for both.

Q. Did you discover any errors against Mr. English in counting those ballots?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not the fact that you did not take any note of them, but accepted the return as made?—A. No, sir; I took the vote both ways. The idea was to get at the correct vote.

Q. What was the difference in the return of the vote made for Mr. English and your count?—A. I cannot tell you the aggregate vote for Mr. English at all.

Q. Did you keep any account of the aggregate vote of Mr. English, or the mistakes made for or against him?—A. Yes, sir; I noted them as I went along, and that paper that I have presented gives the final result.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that the paper you have read simply gives the errors that occurred to Mr. Peelle in the total vote cast for him upon which you give this estimate, and upon the return of the board of election for Mr. English?—A. That was not made of errors; that was the actual count of tickets.

Q. I ask you if the vote for Mr. English is not identically the vote you made your calculations from?—A. The identical vote as shown by the tickets counted?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir. And so of you.

Q. The identical vote, as returned for Mr. English, corresponds with your count, don't it?—A. I do not get at the point at all.

Q. I want to know if it is not the fact that in the count that you made there you noted the errors as you went along, and if, when you got through, you did not count the errors that were made for Mr. Peelle and accept the returns as they were made for Mr. English?—A. Do I understand your question, that I noted simply the discrepancies that were shown in the ballot and not the actual vote?

Q. The actual vote I am speaking of.—A. I did not put down losses and gains at all. I put down the facts as they were; the actual vote for Mr. English and yourself.

Q. What was the total vote, as counted by you, for Mr. English?—A. I could not give you that. I have not got it.

Q. Was it not the same as returned by the board?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was the difference?—A. There was some considerable difference, and both sides aggregated, as I have said.

Q. Didn't your count made of the vote cast for Mr. English correspond entirely with the vote as returned for Mr. English?—A. No, sir.

Q. By the board of canvassers?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was the difference?—A. I took the majorities, as you would call it, and I show by that statement—and that statement is based upon facts—that when counted up there were 99 votes; you were given 99 votes more by the board of canvassers than the actual tickets gave you that I counted.

Q. I will ask you this: If the 541 votes there that you speak of being for Mr. Peelle is not 541 votes over the return made by the board for Mr. English, instead of your count?—A. It is 541 on my count. In that, of course, is this twelfth ward ballot. I gave the board of canvassers for that. I took that for granted as being the vote he had there.

Q. You say that, according to your count, Mr. Peelle had 541 votes over Mr. English. Now, do you mean he had 541 votes over the vote as actually returned for Mr. English, or over his vote as actually counted by you?—A. According to the board of canvassers you had a plurality over Mr. English of 640, and my count gives that 541—a difference of 99.

Q. That is the majority simply over the vote as returned for Mr. English, is it not, by the board of canvassers?—A. Well, it is two different counts, I take it. If you take theirs it is one way, and if you take my statement of the count it is different.

Q. Is not that majority for Peelle based upon your count as compared with the actual return for Mr. English by the board of canvassers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that there was more than one hundred errors discovered in that count against Mr. Peelle?—A. In which count?

Q. That you discovered more than one hundred errors—errors in more than one hundred votes against Mr. Peelle on that count, as compared with the returns?—A. Well, there was some difference, of course. I suppose they showed errors of that amount.

Q. Against Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir. The board of canvassers showed it differently. I wish to make a correction about the one hundred errors, because that is a mistake. The errors covered that number of votes. It would be 5 votes sometimes, and that would be one error only. I have a memorandum here of the exact difference in the count for sheriff. I know exactly what discrepancies were there and the number of them. It only goes to show that the thing was incorrect as a whole.

Q. I do not care anything about the vote for sheriff. I am getting at the vote for Congress. Do you remember what the total vote is?—A. There was not one hundred errors in the vote for Congress; I do not think there was that many.

Q. I will ask you if in that examination in the votes for sheriff for the Republican candidate, if the vote was not largely increased over the returns made by the board?—A. The Republican candidate got more votes.

Q. According to that count?—A. Yes, sir; I have it here exactly. Mr. Hess's vote was actually increased 7, and Mr. Lemon's was 35 of a loss.

Q. Making a difference of how much gain for the Republican candidate for sheriff?—A. The whole number of votes decreased. The ballots less were 35.

Q. How many gain would that make for the Republican candidate over the return of the board?—A. About 49, sir.

Q. Can you give me the total number of votes you counted as cast for Mr. Peelle for Congress?—A. I cannot, sir. I can give you the total number of a certain ticket, on the "spring-back" ticket, but your name was on some Democratic tickets and on a few National tickets.

Q. All the votes that were given for Mr. Peelle on any ticket were counted, were they not?—A. I have not that memorandum with me.

Q. Didn't you count all the ballots that were given for Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir; but I have not the memorandum with me.

Q. Have you the memorandum of the total vote for Mr. English before you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any way by which you can tell the total vote for Mr. Peelle as counted by you?—A. I think I have a memorandum somewhere unless it is mislaid.

Q. Can you state now what the difference was between the total vote cast for Mr. Peelle as counted by you and as reported by the board of canvassers?—A. As I said before, I only gave it as to majorities and plurality. I can give you the aggregate vote by each, and you can deduct one from the other.

Q. Can you for the vote for Mr. English as counted by you, and the return of the board?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you get at it then?—A. I took it down at the time; I made that memorandum from the face of my notes.

Q. And the vote for Mr. Peelle was 541 majority over Mr. English as based upon the return made for Mr. English by the board of canvassers?—A. By comparison; yes, sir; it is my actual count.

Q. But you did not vary the total for Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir; and you too.

Q. Did you compare the total vote of Mr. English as counted by you with the return?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What difference was there between the total vote for Mr. English as counted by you and the returns as made by the board?—A. You have got to take the two together and compare them.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that Mr. English, according to your count, had 50 or 60 less votes than were actually returned to him by the board?—A. No, sir.

Y. Did he have 40?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he have 30?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he have 20?—A. Less than the aggregate vote?

Q. Yes, sir; as counted by you, than was returned by the board?—A. I could not say.

Q. Did he have a less vote as counted by you than was returned by the board?—A. I don't recollect about that.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Peelle had any less vote as counted by you than returned by the board of canvassers?—A. In the aggregate I think he had. I know he had.

Q. I will ask you if Mr. Peelle did not have a greater number of votes, according to the count as made by yourself, than returned by the board of canvassers?—A. No, sir; I have no recollection on that subject.

Q. Can you explain how you got at the difference in that vote?—A. Yes, sir; I counted the ballots, five at a time, and kept a tally on the vote for Congress, and I footed that up, and there was always a period after we got through one before we took up another, for the purpose of verifying, and I took advantage of that time to foot up and make my comparison with the tally-sheet, which I had before me, and then I made my note as to the difference in the vote. After we got entirely through I sat down with my notes on Friday and I footed them up, and I kept a memorandum of the difference in the majorities; no, the plurality; that is, the vote between yourself and Mr. English.

Q. You kept simply the difference in the plurality?—A. Yes, sir. And I footed that up and I made this statement. And that is the result of the count made in that way and noted in that way.

Q. I will ask you now if that is a fair way of arriving at the actual difference in the vote between Mr. English and Mr. Peelle on that election?—A. I think so; I think I got the facts.

Q. You made a comparison simply in the pluralities?—A. Yes, sir. I did not count the Greenback vote as anything in the contest, because it was so small.

Q. I ask you again if you did not accept the return made by the board of canvassers, so far as Mr. English was concerned, in arriving at that conclusion?—A. No, sir; except the figures of the missing precinct.

Q. You took your count of the vote for Mr. English, the total vote instead of the returns for Mr. English, did you?—A. Yes, sir; and Mr. Peelle the same way; and I added to it the report of the board of canvassers in the second precinct in the twelfth ward.

Q. I will ask you if at any time any one went over the figures with you in getting at this conclusion.—A. No, sir; I did that myself. I did not mention it to anybody.

Q. How long after you left the room there where you counted these ballots was it before you made this statement?—A. Well, I went home that afternoon. We quit at 3 o'clock. I went home about 4. I went to rest. I was very tired and I was worn out, and some time in the middle of the forenoon following, on the 28th of November, on Friday.

Q. What did you do with the figures that you made there in that room?—A. The impression I have is that they are home. I think I put that memorandum away some place. I am not sure about it.

Q. Do you think you could find those figures?—A. I will make the effort. I do not say I can. I have given you the facts as I understand them.

Q. I want to know what you made the total vote for Mr. Peelle and Mr. English at that election, according to your count?

(Objected to as having been asked several times before.)

A. I stated before that I could not tell you that, because I have not got the figures with me.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I will ask you if you found errors against Mr. Peelle in the original count as made by the board of canvassers, and the return?—A. Yes, sir

Q. Did you find errors in his favor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This plurality which you have given here is the result of your count, taking into consideration errors in his favor and against him too?—A. That is as near the actual count as I could make it.

Q. Did you pursue the same method as to Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. But the basis of your calculations here is the return made of the vote for Mr. English in getting at the vote for Mr. Peelle?—A. You mean the board of canvassers?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. The comparison as to the errors was made, of course, with the board of canvassers.

Q. And the 541 votes which you say Mr. Peelle had in this county majority, was that much of a vote over the vote for Mr. English as returned by the election board?—A. It was that much as compared—it was that much according to my acuual count as compared with the board of canvassers.

Q. Did not your count of the vote for Mr. English correspond exactly with the vote as returned for Mr. English in the final conclusion?—A. No; I do not say that. I simply say that my vote shows 541 plurality in Marion County, and the board of canvassers shows 640.

Q. I want to know if you did not get that majority for Mr. Peelle from the return made by the election board instead of your own count?—A. I took that board of canvassers as the basis for comparison.

Q. Did your vote differ from the vote as cast for Mr. English as returned by the board?—A. You are getting at aggregates again?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I could not tell you about that; I could not say.

Q. I will ask you if it was not the same?—A. No, sir.

Q. How much difference?—A. It is impossible to tell; there were too many errors in the count to make it the same.

Q. If there was any difference state what it was between your count and Mr. English's vote as returned for him.—A. You mean aggregate?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I cannot do that because I have not got the memorandum with me; I will be glad to furnish it to you if I can find it.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Didn't you find errors all along in that count as to all those other candidates?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I could give you an illustration if it is necessary, but it is not. I remember distinctly in one count for Congressman there were 3 votes—2 or 3—where Mr. English's name was pasted upon the Republican ticket and they were counted as straight Republican tickets. They were counted against him when the board of canvassers counted them.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You spoke about errors here. When there was a tally of 5 votes you counted that as one error. You don't mean by that that there were not more than 100 errors against Mr. Peelle in that count?—A. I mean it may have affected 100 votes, but not 100 distinct errors.

Q. I mean there was more than 100 errors discovered—amounting to more than 100 votes against Mr. Peelle.—A. Yes, sir; and English, both—the same way.

Q. Was there more than 100 votes errors against Mr. English?—A. In my count?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Q. There were more errors in the vote as cast for Mr. Peelle than the one as cast for Mr. English?—A. The aggregate number of votes might do that.

Exhibit I to the deposition of Austin H. Brown.—S. C. H., Notary Public.

In the election contest for sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, in the case of Lemon vs. Hess, I acted, under appointment of the circuit court, as a commissioner, to recount the ballots received for that office at the general election held in that county November 7, 1882. The recount took place between the 23d and 27th of that month. At the same time I counted the vote for Congressman for that district, every ballot passing through my hands and being closely scanned by me, and of the ballots for Stanton J. Peelle for that office 12,551 were of the kind commonly called card-board or spring-back tickets, and the aggregate of all the ballots showed said Peelle's plurality over William E. English in that county to be 99 votes less than the number returned by the board of canvassers, making his plurality 443 without the vote of the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis, which precinct the board of canvassers returned at 98 majority for Peelle. My count embraced the ballots in all the election precincts of the county except the ballots in the second precinct of the twelfth ward, which could not be found; but the vote of that precinct was returned to the board of canvassers by the inspector of elections of that precinct as 98 majority for Peelle in said precinct. This 98 majority added to the aggregate of my count of the ballots of the other precincts would make Peelle's vote 541 more in Marion county than English's, being 99 less than the number returned by the board of canvassers November 9, 1882.

[Indorsed.] Exhibit J to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, P. C. H., Notary Public.

JOSEPH E. MCDONALD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Joseph E. McDonald; age, 64 years; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. Fifty-seven years.

Q. Did you ever represent this State in the United States Senate?—A. Yes, sir; from March 4, 1875, to March 4, 1881.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882, and did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir; I was here all day. I was chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee and was giving the matter of the election at that time my especial attention.

Q. Did you see the Republican ticket that was voted for Stanton J. Peelle at that election?—A. I saw a Republican ticket.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. I will ask you if that is the ticket?—A. Yes, sir; that is the same print and the same ticket.

Q. Did you see the Democratic ticket voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir; and voted one of them myself.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the Democratic ticket that was used and voted at that election?—A. I should say it was; it bears that appearance and has the heading.

Q. Has that Republican ticket that I have shown you any distinguishing mark or any embellishment?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. The name at the top of the ticket, "Republican Ticket," is an engraved heading.

Q. Does the material on which that ticket is printed in any way distinguish or designate it?—A. It is much heavier and stiffer than ordinary plain white paper.

Q. Do you know what that material is?—A. I did not at the time. I have seen it since, and I have understood its trade name since.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used as a ticket before?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, I don't know that I ever knew of any paper of that kind to be used for a ticket; I have heard of it being used.

Q. When lightly folded would that ticket remain folded or would it be apt to spring open?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It would spring open.

Q. If another ticket were folded, and that one folded and placed within the other, the outside one being lightly folded, would they remain together; or, if shaken up, would they spring apart when deposited in the box?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. If folded with the intention of being allowed to spring apart, they would spring apart without being shaken. I had better explain how my attention was called to this ticket, and what I did myself in regard to it.

Q. Was your attention called to that ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I went down soon after breakfast to the Democratic headquarters, over the First National Bank, on the corner of Meridian and Washington streets, and I had been there but a short time until some of these tickets were brought in by some parties, and I examined them and folded two together so as not to place one inside of the other except as they were placed in the folds in this way [indicating], and I put them together and took a hat and tried voting them, the same as putting them in a ballot-box, and I found they would very readily spring apart. I then started and went to the Sentinel office and called the attention of some of our friends there to the ticket, and to the uses that I thought might be made of it, if persons were so disposed. I went from there to the precincts in the eleventh ward, and explained to the judges and showed them the ticket, and explained the effect of folding the ticket in that way; that the spring in the ticket was sufficient to throw it apart. I think I called them, in speaking to the judges, "spring-back" tickets. I had heard of tickets of that kind, but I had never seen one before, and I think I called them, in my explanation to the judges, "spring-back" tickets, and I asked them to give special attention to see that they were not voted double, because they could not tell after they got into the box whether they had ever been folded together or not, ordinarily. I went to all of the polls in the eleventh ward; I walked, and gave the same instructions and the same advice, and called the attention of the judges especially to it; and I then got my horse and buggy, shortly afterwards, and went to a number of wards in the northern part of the city, and gave out the same information in regard to it.

Q. Did you ever hear of a ticket of that character; you said you had heard of it, but did you ever hear of it being used in this State?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by sight?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. I could distinguish them from any ticket of any kind printed on ordinary white paper, unless it was folded very tight so as to compress it much more than it would be ordinarily compressed in voting. I suppose you could fold it up very tightly, so when it was folded up it would not look differently from the ordinary ticket.

Q. What would be the effect upon the secrecy of the ballot, the use of a ticket of that character, if the other tickets were printed upon ordinary white paper?

A. I would say this: that after learning the character of the ticket by an examination before starting out of the room, and comparing it with the other tickets that were in use that day, I had no difficulty in distinguishing it at the polls in the hands of those who were peddling them or voting them.

Q. Could you do that when the tickets were folded as parties went up to vote?—A. Yes, sir; when they were folded as they ordinarily handle them in their hands. I was going around on purpose to check any effort at double voting more particularly. That was my purpose in going at that time to these different wards. I do not know how many I went to—probably a half dozen different polls. I went to all three in my own ward.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That Republican ticket is heavier paper than the Democratic?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it not be more difficult to vote two tickets of those at once than it would be of the Democratic ticket for that reason?—A. It would be more difficult to vote them. When folded as I have said and placed in the hand you could not, in all probability, detect the fact that they had been folded together.

Q. Would not any other tickets, folded together in the manner in which you have described, if shaken in the hat, come apart and make two tickets?—A. I did not shake them.

Q. Would not they open out?—A. You could probably shake them apart, but I did not in the experiments I made for the judges whose attention I was calling to this matter; I just took one of their hats and dropped the tickets in, the two together. I did not shake them. They flew apart as soon as they got out of my fingers.

Q. They were lightly folded?—A. They were folded as I supposed persons would be likely to fold them who were trying to vote two. My purpose simply was to prevent it if there was any such intention. I do not know, of course, what particular object there was in making those tickets peculiar.

Q. Do you know of any one, or did you ever hear it charged that any one had voted two of those tickets at that election?—A. I heard it charged that in five minutes after I left the first precinct——

Q. Do you know of a single party voting that way?—A. The party voting it was called back and they detected it. You asked me if I heard it charged; I had not been gone from that poll over five or ten minutes.

Q. Do you know of a single vote of that kind?—A. No, sir; except the one I have spoken of.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that two of those ballots were not voted by any individual at that election?—A. No, sir; I do not know it as a matter of fact, because I had nothing to do with the counting of the vote.

Q. You never heard of any very great discrepancy between the names of the voters and the votes?—A. I did hear that in some of the precincts there was a discrepancy.

Q. You heard both ways?—A. You could not tell which way it was—one way or the other. There were more ballots in the box than names on the poll-books.

Q. And more names in some places than ballots?—A. I did not hear of anything of the kind. If such a thing occurred I did not hear of it. I did hear in some of the precincts that there were more ballots in the box than there were names on the poll-books; but as I had nothing to do with the count or canvass of the vote in any way I am not able to say.

Q. You never heard it charged that there was double voting there with those tickets, by which your party lost anything?—A. As I told you, at the first precinct of the eleventh ward I was told that a gentleman, a very few minutes after I had left there, came up and voted double tickets of that kind.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. It was up here on Ohio street.

Q. That was detected before it got into the box, was it not?—A. I don't know whether it got into the box. It was detected and he was called back and his ticket voted single, so I was told, and he did have them folded together.

Q. That was the precinct in which the Democratic township trustee was inspector?—A. I think he was the inspector. I have this recollection about it: that it was the first place I had given information about it, and it was very soon after I was there that this was done. That is what I was told. You asked me for what I had heard and I only know that from hearing it. I cannot tell you whether the ticket was voted or not. The officers of that poll can give you that information.

Q. Can you state the precincts you went to that day?—A. I can not tell you the number of the precincts, nor am I able to tell you the different wards they were in. I can tell you the district in the city that I went to. I went to the precincts in the northeastern part of the city; northeast of the eleventh ward.

Q. Where the strong Republican vote was supposed to be?—A. The wards I think I went to up there were Republican wards.

Q. Were you in the sixth ward?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. Were you in the second ward?—A. Except my own, the eleventh ward, I am not very well posted on the geography of the other wards; but I took my horse and went to the polling precincts covering the northeast part of the city.

Q. And did you explain to any of the judges at the election precinct except in the eleventh ward?—A. Yes, sir; I think I did; to each one of them.

Q. Did you get out of your buggy after you left the eleventh ward at all?—A. Sometimes I got out of my buggy, and sometimes I would call a friend whom I saw standing there and explain the matter to him and ask him to go and explain it to the judges, and would wait and see that he did.

Q. Your object was to prevent double voting?—A. That was all that I had in view at that time.

Q. The Democratic ticket which you have in your hand, if you fold it in the same manner you described, would be likely to spring open and separate when shaken up?—A. Yes, sir. You take any ticket when it is printed on paper you can fold it so it might be shaken apart. You can fold two together so they will shake apart; but stiff paper of this kind [illustrating] will spring apart.

Q. Suppose this stiff paper you speak of is folded creased, would it be less liable to spring open than the Democratic ticket?—A. You could crease it down.

Q. It would be less liable?—A. Probably it would. You could break it down.

Q. And when so folded it would be difficult to detect it by its external appearance from the Democratic ticket similarly folded?—A. If it was folded down tight. You could take this Republican ticket and fold it down there, creasing it down there tight so it probably would not be distinguishable in my hand, but folded as they were ordinarily folded; of course, my attention being drawn to this ticket early in the morning when I went to these different precincts, I looked around me to see how they were being used, and I did not have much difficulty in determining the Republican from the other tickets.

Q. In the hands of those that were peddling them?—A. Yes, sir; and in the hands of those that were voting them at the polls; when they were going in, when a man holds up his ticket as he stops to give his name, I could tell. I remember of noticing that fact myself sitting in my buggy, off probably 15 or 20 feet. I would drive up to the sidewalk as close as I could conveniently get, and as a man would step up to the place to vote, and give their name, they generally had their tickets in their fingers, and I could tell the Republican ticket from the other tickets.

Q. That distance off you would have to know who it was voting?—A. No, sir; for there are a great many men that I do not know how they vote.

Q. Did you have your glasses on 15 or 20 feet away?—A. No, sir; I would not have seen as well with them. I wear glasses only on account of close observation. I can see better without glasses that distance—as far as from here to that brick wall. [Indicating.]

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understood Mr. Peelle to ask this question: When creased and folded they were less liable to spring open than the Democratic ticket. Suppose the Democratic ticket is creased in the same way, would it be as likely to spring open?—A. No, sir; I think not.

J. E. McDONALD.

The further taking of these depositions was adjourned by consent of both parties until Wednesday, October 10, 1883, at 2 p. m.

WEDNESDAY, October 10, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment, and the further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until Saturday, October 13, 1883, at 10 a. m.

SATURDAY, October 13, 1883—10 a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Thomas A. Hendricks; 64; Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you been a resident of this State?—A. Sixty-two years, nearly.

Q. Have you been an observer of elections in this State since you were a voter?—A. I suppose I might say that I have observed the general course of things.

Q. You have taken an interest in politics?—A. Certainly, I have.

Q. An active interest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you whether, in your long experience, you have ever, before the election of November 7, 1882, known an election ticket to be on such material as that Republican ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Well, I do not think I ever saw such a ticket as this, so thick and of the character of this. I do not know anything about the voting of these tickets. I was sick at the time of the election. I had no knowledge of it at that time, and this ticket is probably the first, but one, of the kind that I have seen. I have seen one before like this.

Q. Could you distinguish that ticket from any ticket of like width and length, printed on plain white writing paper, plain white print paper, or plain white book paper, said tickets being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that the witness said that he never saw this ticket but once before and has not said that he is familiar with plain white writing paper, or plain white print paper, or plain white book paper.)

A. I should think I certainly could.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE.

Q. State your politics.—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You have been, all your life, I believe?—A. Well, I suppose there was a period when I did not have any politics hardly; since the time I have been a voter I have been a Democrat.

Q. And have been quite active in the political counsels of the Democratic party in this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any knowledge as to the different character or qualities of paper?—A. I think I have. I use paper, and then I know what kind of paper tickets are generally printed on. I know that more from the ticket I vote myself.

Q. Are you a sufficient judge of the quality of paper to tell what kind of paper that Republican ticket that you have in your hand is printed on?—A. I could not give any particular name. It is a stiff, heavy paper, if it is called paper at all.

Q. You could not give any name for that paper, then?—A. No; I do not believe I know the technical name for it.

Q. You were not at the election last November?—A. I was sick at the time.

Q. And you was not able to be out.—A. No, sir.

Q. And you never saw but one of these tickets before?—A. I recollect distinctly of seeing one, and I am not sure but another. I think not more than two before this. The one that I saw before had been folded, and it was folded for the purpose of showing that it did not remain compact when folded.

Q. Lightly folded, was it?—A. I don't know about that. I had not done it myself.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. In answer to Mr. Peelle's question as to the character of this paper, you do not answer as an expert, but answer from your popular understanding?—A. Yes, sir; that is it exactly. I never was in a business that called me to know particularly the differences or distinctions between paper, or anything representing it.

Q. In a popular sense what would you call that material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. It does not seem to me to be paper, nor yet hardly pasteboard; so I do not believe I can tell you what it is. I do not know the names of those classes of paper or the uses to which they are put well enough to answer your question.

T. A. HENDRICKS.

W. P. FISHBACK, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. William P. Fishback; age, 51; Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. A little over twenty-six years.

Q. Were you in the city on November 7, 1882, the day that the Congressional election took place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. I think it is one of the precincts of the second ward. I think they vote at the corner of Ash street and Home avenue. It was either there or at the engine-house.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted at that election by the Democrats and Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, indorsed on the back as Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican Ticket." I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used there that day, if you know?—A. It was a ticket like this. Yes, sir; I remember. I think I saw the tickets, before I went to the polls, in Judge Gresham's office. I was there when Senator McDonald was exhibiting them. I do not think I voted until noon—at any rate, I saw the ticket there either before or after I voted, when he was speaking about the ticket and making some exhibitions about folding and dropping it into a hat. There was a number of gentlemen present.

Q. Where was that?—A. I think it was in Judge Gresham's room in the post-office building.

Q. Judge Gresham's room?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to a ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, headed "Democratic Ticket." I will ask you if that was the ticket that was voted by the Democrats on that day?—A. I am not so familiar with that; I could not say; I do not remember. I saw them, but I did not have them in my hand. I saw that they were different that day. I noticed that.

Q. What was the difference?—A. Well, the bulk of the tickets when voted was so much greater. I noticed that when the voter would pass me. I was up at the fourth ward or some place on Indiana avenue during the day, and I stood at the chute and saw them voting, and there was no difficulty in telling the tickets by the bulk of them; that is, those who kept tally did not seem to have any difficulty in doing so.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that Republican ticket that day at that election so far as secrecy in voting was concerned, in your estimation?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. All I could say is this: they were easily distinguishable by their bulk.

Q. When that Republican ticket was lightly folded would it remain folded, or would it be apt to spring open?

(Objected to for the reason that there has been no evidence that the tickets were so voted.)

A. I saw these experiments tried with it.

Q. What was the result?—A. Senator McDonald took one and folded it up, or I took one and folded it up. We were talking about the tissue-paper-ballot voting in South Carolina and the facilities for folding, and I alluded to what was once done in this city, as I heard, the use of tissue tickets long before we had heard of South Carolina, and I said this would be a good ticket for that sort of business. It did not occur to me then about distinguishing them to the eyes. We saw them spring open after folding and putting them in the hat. We would press them pretty tight, and make a trial and drop them into the hat, and they would spring open so if there had been anything in it it would disengage itself; and if it was pretty freely entered into and followed it would enable a man to cast more than one vote in many instances. We called attention to it, and it was folded frequently, and it was called the "spring-back" ticket. Senator McDonald spoke of reading in the testimony in that contest of what was called "spring-back" tickets, and spoke of these as "spring-back" tickets.

Q. Do you know what material this ticket is printed on?—A. I called it card-board that day, but it is not that, of course; and it is not like newspaper. I have been in the newspaper business. It is a little coarser than book paper. There is paper that is called news paper, and then there is book paper. What is known as book paper is the paper that is used in printing our reports and the official documents. This is coarser than book paper.

Q. It is not plain white news paper?—A. I never saw newspaper, unless it was advertising cards, printed on paper as close as that.

Q. That is not plain white writing paper, as you understand it?—A. I would not say it was writing paper. I have not tried it with ink.

Q. You were in the newspaper business for some years?—A. Four years.

Q. You acquired some knowledge of newspaper paper?—A. We bought a good deal of it.

Q. Did you have any job printing establishment connected with the paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I believe you are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir. I do not know whether I am in good standing or not. I have always voted the Republican ticket.

Q. You voted one of these tickets that day, did you?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Not entirely. I voted one of that kind of tickets.

Q. Did you have some compunctions of conscience as a lawyer when you voted a ticket on that material?—A. I had not changed my opinion about the ticket, which I had expressed to Senator McDonald.

Q. What was that opinion that you expressed? [Objected to as incompetent.] What did you say when you voted?—A. I said before I voted, when I saw it, that it was a fraudulent ticket, and it was probably designed for fraudulent purposes. I think I said that in the presence of Senator McDonald and Judge Gresham.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You came here voluntarily as a witness?—A. Mr. English came after me.

Q. You were not summoned here; you came at the request of Mr. English?—A. At the request of Mr. English and Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson kindly came after me.

Q. You say you had a conversation in which Senator McDonald and Judge Gresham were present?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the conversation came up in the presence of Judge Gresham?—A. I am not certain whether Judge Gresham was there. He was there in the morning; the office was open I know, and Senator McDonald was indignant; that is, he talked like a man that was indignant, and he was making these exhibitions I speak of.

Q. You were never engaged in the manufacture of paper or in dealing in paper?—A. Only as our firm bought; I am no expert.

Q. That was no part of your business as connected with the paper?—A. No, sir; Mr. Hasselman had charge of that.

Q. You were simply managing editor of the paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had no business with that part of it?—A. I was excluded from that part of it, as he was from the editorial department.

Q. Do you know of anybody that was deceived or misled in voting at that election in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the material it was?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody that would have voted differently if that Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know anybody personally or by hearsay that voted two tickets of that Republican ticket?—A. No, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you about the effect of that ticket. Did you watch the voting at any precinct where that ticket was used?—A. I went over where the colored men were voting. I had some hint that there was some obstruction to voting at Indiana avenue, and as I had nothing to do in the afternoon, and it was a short walk, I went out with some one and stood by the chute.

Q. What did you observe there as to the effect of that ticket being used there upon those electors?—A. I do not know that I saw them voted. Of course, each party had their poll-book, and they stood by the side of the chute, and they went by the size of the ticket, and would say "Democrat," and our boys "Republican," when a man would put in a ticket, and they would mark it down.

Q. Was that at a precinct where a good many colored people voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the ticket folded when they were making these memorandums?—A. I saw no tickets except folded tickets voted.

Q. What official position, if any, do you hold now?—A. I am master in chancery in the United States courts here.

Q. Did you ever hold any other official position in this State?—A. I was prosecuting attorney for four years—about three years. I resigned in the middle of the second term.

Q. Your are an attorney and practice law?—A. Yes, sir.

WILLIAM P. FISHBACK.

GEORGE A. HARDESTY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. George A. Hardesty; age, 34; Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. Ten years.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th of November, 1882, the date of the Congressional election?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there?—A. I used the poll-books at the ward.

Q. You were challenged.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You held the poll-book?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there by the Republicans and Democrats at your precinct where you were challenged?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. I think I was in the second precinct.

Q. What ward?—A. In the seventh.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. W. O. De Vay, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used by the Republicans on that day at your precinct?—A. It does not look hardly as stiff as the ticket that was used. It may be that this has been handled a good deal.

Q. I will call your attention to Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket?—A. I think that would be the ticket.

Q. They are substantially the same ticket; the only difference is, one was folded and the other was not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and will ask you if that is the ticket that was used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the National ticket voted that day at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket indorsed Exhibit D to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and headed "National Ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used by the Nationals that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you, as challenger at that precinct, when the Democratic ticket was folded and voted, and the Republican ticket was folded and voted, tell which was the Democratic and which was the Republican by watching carefully and looking on?—A. Oh, yes. I could tell which way a man voted by the ticket he put in the box.

Q. I will ask you what effect would you say the use of that Republican ticket had on the secrecy of the ballot, if any, at your precinct?

(Objected to as incompetent and being a conclusion of law.)

A. I should think it would make men that were timid, that did not care to let us know how they voted; it would rather intimidate them, or rather make them afraid at least.

(Objection to the answer as a supposition, and for the reason that there is no evidence that such was the case.)

Q. I will ask you would this Republican ticket when lightly folded be apt to spring open, or would it remain folded?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were so voted.)

A. It would spring open.

Q. How could you tell this Republican ticket from the Democratic?—A. I could tell it if I was anywhere close, by the thickness of the paper. It does not fold as close as the Democratic ticket, and I think it is a little whiter; if I am not mistaken, a shade whiter than the Democratic ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE;

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. You were challenging in the interest of the Democratic party that day, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one who was misled or deceived in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No; I could not give any names of any one; it has been so long that I have almost forgotten about it.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was on?—A. I do not know that I could mention any one.

Q. You have been challenger before at precincts at elections?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And frequently stood around the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you have not always been able to tell when a man went up to vote whether he was voting the Democratic or Republican ticket?—A. Not unless I knew he was a Democrat.

Q. Have you not been always able to tell from the character of the tickets—has there not always been a slight difference between the tickets voted by the Republican and Democratic parties in this city?—A. I do not believe I noticed it until these tickets were out.

Q. Don't you know there has always been a difference in the tickets?—A. No; there has been a difference in the headings sometimes; that is all.

Q. Did you vote at this city election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you notice any difference between the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. We had a little conversation there in the forenoon of the day of the election in regard to the size of it; we did not compare them.

Q. I will ask you if there was not a difference in the size of the tickets and the appearance of the tickets when folded?—A. There was a difference in the size is the only way I noticed the difference.

Q. I will ask you if, at the election on last Tuesday, the Democratic ticket was not on much heavier paper than the Republican ticket?—A. I don't believe I discerned that or noticed it only in the size, and we had no conversation about it.

Q. I will ask you if, when the two tickets were folded, if you could not tell when a man went up to the chute to vote, whether he had the Republican or Democratic ticket from the bulk of the ticket?—A. No, sir. I have often made the remark when there was a man I knew to be a Republican went up to vote, and the same when there was a Democrat. You could not discern what way he voted from his ticket. You could not tell which way he voted from the color or looks of his ticket.

Mr. WILSON. What election was that?

The WITNESS. The city election last Tuesday.

Q. I will ask you if that Democratic ticket when lightly folded would not be more likely to spring open than the Republican ticket—the one that was voted last November—is not as likely to spring open as the Republican ticket?—A. I don't think it is, sir.

Q. I will ask you when that Republican ticket is folded and creased if it is not less liable to spring open than the Democratic ticket when folded and creased—than the ticket which I now hand you, and which has been made a part of the deposition of Mr. De Vay?—A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. I will ask you if the Democratic ticket when lightly folded is not liable to spring open?—A. No; they will not spring open. They open as any paper would. There is no spring about them.

Q. What makes them open if there is no spring about them?—A. I suppose they could be folded so they would not open at all.

Q. Could not the Republican ticket be folded the same way?—A. Hardly.

Q. And is it not more likely, folded so, that it would not spring open because of its bulk and because of the fact that it could be creased closer?—A. No, sir; I don't think it is so. It is a question we talked about on the day of the election.

Q. You see the Democratic and the Republican ticket laying doubled there [indicating], and both have been folded; I will ask you to state if they are not both equally sprung open now?—A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. Just as you threw them down upon the table?—A. Yes, sir; just as I threw them there.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you whether or not you knew of any one whose vote had been influenced by the use of that ticket, and you said you did not know the name of any one.—A. I cannot remember any one.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you know whether any person was?—A. As I stated before, I thought probably it would have an influence on some timid people.

(Objected to as a supposition.)

Q. You do not know the name of any one?—A. I could not mention any names now, it has been so long ago.

GEO. A. HARDESTY.

The further taking of these depositions was, by consent of both parties, adjourned until Monday, October 15, at 2 p. m.

MONDAY, October 15, 1882—2 o'clock p. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

WILL F. A. BERNHAMER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Will F. A. Bernhamer; aged 33; residence, Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana, No. 121 Doherty street.

Q. Have you held, or do you now hold any office?—A. I have been a member of the common council, and I claim to be yet, and I am a member-elect of the board of aldermen of Indianapolis.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the 7th day of November, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend the election that took place that day for Congress in this District?—A. I did.

Q. Did you take any part in that election?—A. I was judge of the election in precinct No. 2, Ward No. 22, in Indianapolis.

Q. Did you vote?—A. Yes, sir; I voted.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the Republican, Democratic, National, or Greenback parties in your precinct that day?—A. I did. I have no definite recollection of the Greenback ticket at this particular time. I know there were Greenback tickets there, but whether there were any voted or not I do not remember.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Republicans that day?—A. That is the kind of a ticket that was voted in my precinct.

Q. I call your attention also to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at your precinct on that day?—A. that is the ticket as voted there.

Q. Do I understand you to say that you do not recollect what the character of the National ticket was?—A. I do not know at this time.

Q. Could your memory be refreshed on this subject?—A. I think it could. I think if I saw one I could tell.

Q. I will ask you if the ticket marked Exhibit D in Mr. De Vay's testimony is the character of ticket used, or one similar to it?—A. That is about the ticket, if not the ticket, that was used.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the other tickets voted at that election, all said tickets being folded as tickets are usually folded when voted?—A. I could distinguish it so well that I marked nearly every man—what he voted, Republican or Democrat.

Q. By the appearance of the ticket?—A. By the appearance of the ticket.

Q. At your precinct you did so distinguish the tickets?—A. I did.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from any ticket of like length and width printed on plain white writing paper, book paper, or print paper, all of said tickets being folded as tickets are usually when voted?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and for the reason that there is no evidence that the witness has any knowledge as to the different qualities of paper.)

A. I could tell whether the voter voted the Republican ticket or other ticket before the vote was deposited in the box.

Q. The question was whether you could distinguish that Republican ticket from any other ticket which was printed on plain white writing paper, or plain white print paper, or plain white book paper, the tickets being folded.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent and as a conclusion of law, and for the reason that there has been nothing shown as to whether the witness knew what plain white book paper, writing paper, or any other kind of paper was.)

Mr. WILSON. I am going to follow it up with an interrogatory on the subject of the kinds of paper.

A. I could.

Q. What kind of material is this Republican ticket printed on, if you know?—A. It was what I call——

(Answer objected to as to what the witness calls it.)

A. (Continued.) If I am allowed to answer, it is a thin pasteboard.

Q. It is, in fact, you say, a thin pasteboard?—A. Yes, sir; a thin pasteboard.

(Question objected to as leading.)

Q. Could one standing near, or rather looking on at the polls while voters were placing their ballots in the box through the hands of the inspector, tell what ticket was being voted at your precinct?—A. A close observer could.

Q. Could they tell whether it was a Republican or Democratic, or rather a Democratic or National?—A. You could.

Q. Did you ever before know tickets used at any election in this State to be printed on such material as that Republican ticket was printed on?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I never knew of any ticket of that kind being used at any election in this city.

Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket impair the secrecy of the ballot at your precinct?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial and a conclusion of law.)
A. It did.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat and a Democratic member of the aldermanic board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were a member of the council as a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I have always been a Democrat.

Q. You were one of the judges at that precinct in ward No. 22?—A. I was the Democratic representative of the ward on the board.

Q. Do you know of anybody who was misled or deceived in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the character of paper it was?—A. I cannot say that I do.

Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was?—A. I know of no particular instance.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board by any one about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I will not be positive on that question. I know that the matter was talked of among the Democratic workers.

Q. You remember of no complaint being made to the board?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were those Republican tickets at your precinct counted without objection or protest?—A. They were counted.

Q. Without objection?—A. I don't know about that. I suppose they were.

Q. I will ask you if that Democratic ticket that you have in your hand, which you have just identified, could not be distinguished from the Republican ticket at that precinct in consequence of it being on the kind of paper it was?—A. I could tell what kind of a ticket the voter voted, as to whether he voted a Republican or other ticket.

Q. Could you not distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket equally as well as you could the Republican from the Democratic?—A. As between the Democratic and National I believe it would be hard for me to distinguish, but as between the Republican and Democratic I had no difficulty in distinguishing the difference.

Q. How could you distinguish one of those tickets from the other whilst they were being voted?—A. In the first place, the inspector, on receiving a vote from a Republican, it is said to me, would take the ticket at once and turn it over to the hole in the box and usually insert—I don't want to say he ever dropped a ticket in there that was challenged, but he would put the ticket in at once, and a Democratic, it is said to me, he would always hold it up so it could be seen from the outside. I sat all day on the left of the ballot-box and the inspector sat on the right, and I could see every ticket before it went into the box.

Q. How could you tell one ticket from the other?—A. Owing to the thickness of the Republican paper, and at the same time the heavy print that was on it. I could tell through it what kind of a ticket it was.

Q. You say that the top of that ticket shows through at all when it is folded?—A. It did. I could tell from the paper and the top what kind of a ticket it was.

Q. Could you make any distinction on the Democratic ticket that way?—A. I think I could make some distinction on the Democratic ticket, but I think it showed through on every one of those [Republican tickets]. It would depend partly on how the light would shine at the particular time. That would have something to do with it.

Q. Who was the inspector there?—A. S. C. Crane. He is in the jewelry business down here on Washington street.

Q. In your testimony a moment ago, stating the manner in which he held the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket, do you mean to speak of that as being done by the inspector for the purpose of giving information outside?—A. It was stated to me so.

Q. Did you make any objection at the time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did any one make any objection about the manner in which he held tickets there?—A. I don't think they did. I did not find out what it was done for until afterwards.

Q. Did the votes of that precinct correspond with the tally-sheet?—A. I don't know; I think they did.

Q. You do not know of any one that voted two Republican tickets at that precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. The number of votes corresponded with the number of names voted?—A. The party organization was so closely protected in that precinct that I do not think there was a vote sworn in during the whole day. I don't think there was a vote offered but what was accepted.

Q. On either side?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever engaged in the manufacture of or dealing in paper?—A. No, sir; only in the use of it.

Q. You have no knowledge as to different qualities of paper?—A. I have knowledge from practical experience. I cannot give you the names the trade applies.

Q. Is not all you know that you can tell heavier paper from lighter paper?—A. I can tell the quality by touch and sight.

Q. Do you know what kind of paper that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. I never saw any other ticket just like it.

Q. What is the color of that ticket?—A. It is white.

Q. Plain white?—A. Yes, sir; they were plain white, no doubt.

Q. You spoke of that being a light pasteboard; how did you form that conclusion?—A. Because it is thicker. I think you would call it a light pasteboard.

Q. Would you call all thick paper light pasteboard?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why do you give the term "light pasteboard" to that ticket there, if you have no knowledge of the qualities of paper?—A. Because it has the appearance of pasteboard. I have more knowledge of pasteboard than paper.

Q. You say you never saw any of that before?—A. No, sir; I never saw any of that.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Your answer as to the quality of paper is not as an expert, but simply from the popular sense as an observer?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the politics of the inspector at your precinct?—A. The inspector was Republican.

Q. You say you did not find out until after the election was over why it was that the tickets were held in this way, as you described?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you happen to find that out?—A. Partly from conversation, and then from conclusions I formed, based on that conversation, and conclusions based on observation.

Mr. PEELLE. You say there was no challenging that day. There was not a vote sworn in on either side?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

Q. Who did you talk with?—A. Mr. Ransdell, chairman of the Republican county committee.

Q. What did Mr. Ransdell say?

(Objected to as hearsay.)

Q. Did you know, from the use of that ticket, the result of the vote there that day before it was announced by the officers that made the count?—A. I think I could have known it if I had added it up. I took no time to add it up.

Q. Did anybody know it around you, that you know of? Did they keep any account of it?—A. I am not positive of it, but at my precinct, on the outside, it was claimed, when the poll closed, that the ward had gone so much Democratic in our precinct. I do not know who claimed it; the Republicans and Democrats both; I do not know who it was.

Q. Do you know whether the Republican central committee knew the result of the election at your precinct, or at other precincts, before the vote was counted, as the result of the use of this ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. From what members of the Republican party told me——

(Objected to as hearsay.)

A. That is all I know.

Q. What was stated to you on that subject?

(Objected to as incompetent and hearsay evidence.)

A. The first man that told me was Dr. Bigger, in explaining the completeness of the organization of the Republican party; that the reports had been sent every fifteen minutes, I believe it was, to the postmaster's room on Pennsylvania street, and there was such a difference in the tickets that there were men stationed on that Tuesday who would carry the information and tell just how many Democratic and Republican tickets had been voted, and that the county ticket was safe; that there was enough Republican tickets voted—together with the scratches—to make the Republican county ticket safe. About a week or ten days, may be longer, after that, I took a very active part before the board of canvassers. The board of canvassers met to canvass the vote at 10 o'clock on Thursday, and I remained with them until 9 o'clock Friday; and Mr. Ransdell and I discussed the matter. I think it was in front of the post-office——

(Objected to as incompetent.)

The WITNESS (continuing). That their organization was complete; that they got reports from every precinct every fifteen minutes as to just how the vote was going; that they got the report at the post-office. Whether it was true or not I don't know.

Q. Did they state how they could make the report in that way?—A. Dr. Bigger told me that—and I think Mr. Ransdell told me the same thing—that they could tell by the difference in the tickets; that the ticket could be told before it went into the box.

Q. Who is Dr. Bigger?—A. A physician who lives down on Virginia avenue.

Q. Mr. Ransdell is what?—A. Chairman of the Republican county central committee.

Q. Did Doctor Bigger state that that was the result of their organization?—A It is my recollection; I believe he told me. I cannot state who was with me.

Q. Is Doctor Bigger a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. An active Republican?—A. A very active Republican.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that after the polls closed on election day last fall, that the Republicans were jubilant here and supposed they had carried the city by fifteen hundred or two thousand majority?—A. I could not tell about the majority. I think we did not get through until midnight.

Q. Didn't they expect they had carried it by a much larger majority than they did?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do not you know that in the pool-rooms in this city no bets would be taken by Democrats as to the result in this city?—A. I cannot tell anything about the pool-rooms. I do not frequent them.

Q. Didn't you hear it?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have been a close observer of elections?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has there ever been a time in that ward when you could not tell the difference between the Republican and Democratic tickets when voted?—A. I have been a close observer. I usually get a pretty good idea of it from the person that is voting; I know how the people stand.

Q. Is it not true that men standing there and challenging the votes have always been able to tell to a pretty definite certainty the number of Democratic and Republican tickets polled?—A. Not always.

Q. Has it not been pretty generally the case?—A. If a fellow was right smart at it and understood it thoroughly, he would have same chance.

Q. That is the kind of men that challenge in this town, ain't it?—A. We never had as good a chance as we did last fall. That is the best chance I had to find out.

Q. Has it not been frequent that men could tell the difference between the Republican and Democratic tickets, and has there not always been some difference in the tickets in this city?—A. There has ever since the year 1876. There has always been some distinguishing mark on the Republican ticket at the elections; every time, on the inside.

Q. There was no mark on the outside of the ticket by which it could be dis inguished from any other ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it not the fact that there has always been a difference between the Republican and Democratic tickets as folded by the voters when they vote?—A. There has always been a difference and nearly——

Q. Could not you tell them on last Tuesday's election in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And both of them were on plain white paper.—A. No, sir; they were not.

Q. What was the difference?—A. The difference is that the Republican ticket last Tuesday was printed on—we called them the slick ones. They were very slick, and you could tell the Republican ticket when it was held up at once.

Q. It was plain white paper?—A. Perhaps it was.

Q. Have you not always been able to tell the difference between the Republican and Democratic ticket in this city since you have been a voter?—A. I have always been able to tell some difference; but I make the distinction, and say that last fall I had the best chance I ever had.

Q. And yet you did not handle any tickets last fall; you were a Democratic judge.—A. Yes, sir; I was the Democratic judge, and the Republican inspector does not let the Democratic judge handle tickets.

Q. You had no way to detect, except by sight, did you?—A. I was sitting right alongside of the ballot-box and I could tell as they came in.

Q. Do you remember of Democratic tickets being used in this city with a flag on them?—A. Yes, sir; that used to be, years ago.

Q. You used to vote a ticket with a flag on it.—A. Yes, sir; years ago.

Q. Do you remember that inside of six years the Democratic ticket in this city was voted on as heavy paper as the Republican ticket you have been shown, is on?—A. If it was I do not recollect it. If it was that heavy I do not recollect it.

Q. Do you remember that it was voted on paper that was a quarter of an inch too narrow, or a quarter of an inch too wide under the law?—A. That law has only been in force since 1879 or 1881. Prior to that time there was no law regulating it.

Q. Since that time?—A. Since that time if the Democratic ticket has not conformed to it I do not know it. I know the matter was investigated.

Q. Did that Democratic ticket conform to the required width last fall?—A. That is my recollection.

WILL F. A. BERNHAMER.

ENOS B. REED, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. You name, age, and residence.—Answer. Enos B. Reed; age, 61; residence, Indianapolis, No. 208 N. Illinois street.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. About fourteen years.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am editor and proprietor of "The People," and publisher of the paper.

Q. How long have you been in the newspaper business?—A. Forty-odd years.

Q. In that position have you had any occasion to buy or deal in paper in any way?—A. I have had about 60 men under me at one time in Cincinnati, and a great many in other places, in the job printing and book publishing business.

Q. What official position, if any, have you held?—A. I held the position of councilman four or five years, and was president of the board two or three years.

Q. Were you in this county on the 7th day of November, 1882, at the time of the last Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I think I did, so far as my memory serves me. I am very bad as to dates. I have no doubt I attended that election and voted at it.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if you remember if that was the ticket voted and used by the Republicans that day at that election?—A. That is, no doubt, the ticket that was used on that occasion; whether the dates are right or not I do not know.

Q. I will call your attention to the ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of W. O. DeVay," and I will ask you whether that was the ticket used by the Democrats at that election that day?—A. I presume that is the same ticket. I had both tickets in my possession and examined them very closely and wrote articles on them in my paper.

Q. What is the character of the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed, if you know?—A. Gentlemen, in the first place, if you will excuse me, I should like to have the law read in regard to the ticket.

Q. We have agreed that the statute requires that the ticket shall be printed on plain white paper.—A. Then I decidedly state that that is not, in the common acceptation of the printer's phrase and parlance, plain white paper.

(Objected to as not being in response to the question.)

The WITNESS. I give that as an expert.

Q. What would you call it as an expert?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I would call it a sort of two ply-board—probably it may be one and a half; a sort of a bastard paper that lithographs are printed on; a sort of a lithographic paper. In olden times it used to be called different from that.

Q. What was it called in the olden times?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It was generally, in olden times, called zylographic paper; to print colors on. It is not paper at all.

Q. It is not plain white paper?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. No, sir; it is not plain white paper.

Q. Is it plain white book paper?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Is it plain white print paper or book paper?—A. No, sir; it is not white paper at all. In the first place it is too thick for plain white paper and it is simply a board, a thin card.

Q. You say you are familiar as an expert. Do you know the nomenclature of that, what it is called?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I don't know that I could tell exactly what it is called, more than it is called a species of card board. It was never called paper under my administration of forty years in the book business.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from any ticket of like length or width printed on plain white writing paper, book paper, or print paper. all such tickets being folded as tickets usually are folded?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Do you mean could I distinguish them from common paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; certainly I could, even by the sight.

Q. Do you remember of being present at the day of the election and watching the tickets?—A. Not particularly.

Q. Did you ever know such material to be used for the purpose of tickets before?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What effect would it have upon the secrecy of the ballot for one party only to use tickets printed upon the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed and for the others to use plain white paper?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. I do not know what you mean as to the effect. Do you mean going to the polls with these papers?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. They would be distinguished where other paper would not be. Any person with half an eye could see that in contradistinction to the other.

Q. What is the material upon which that Democratic ticket is printed?—A. It is plain white paper. It is the plainest kind and thinnest kind; a litte too thin may-be

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What are your politics?—A. It would be very hard for me to state my politics.

Q. Were you a supporter of the Democratic ticket last fall?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if that Republican ticket is printed on paper.—A. No, sir; that is not paper.

Q. What is it?—A. A species of card-board.

Q. What is card-board?—A. You might say that anything of that sort was paper probably.

Q. That is paper, then, is it not?—A. Even a blank card is paper.

Q. That Republican ticket is printed on paper?—A. Not in the general acceptation of the phrase.

Q. It is paper, is it not?—A. I presume it is. It may be straw; even paper is made from straw and printed on.

Q. That is paper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; I suppose it is.

Q. The color of the ticket is plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then it is plain white paper?—A. Not in the common acceptation of the phrase, it is not.

Q. Is it not plain white paper of one quality?—A. No, sir.

Q. Has it any quality? –A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. The quality is a two-ply or a ply and a half.

Q. You say it is paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is plain white in color?—A. Plain cards are probably upon paper.

Q. Is it not plain white in color?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not that Democratic ticket on book paper?—A. No, sir; it is common print paper.

Q. You differ from the other witnesses.—A. I do not know whether I do or not. I have not heard them.

Q. If you testify it is print paper, you differ from them.—A. Yes, sir; I differ entirely. It is common print paper. Book paper is a better quality. Books may be printed on that same kind of paper, but book paper is a different quality and much superior to that. That is what I call print paper.

Q. Is print paper plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is book paper plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then there are different kinds of white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you again if that Republican ticket is not printed on plain white paper of one quality?—A. No, sir; it is not printed on plain white paper of any quality. It is not printed upon book-paper.

Q. It has no quality?—A. Yes, sir; it has a quality; the quality that cards are printed from, or lithographed.

Q. You say there are different kinds of plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; only when it goes to a certain extent it ceases to be paper and becomes card-board.

Q. Before that time there are different kinds of white plain paper?—A. Yes, sir. Certainly.

Q. And there is no one single kind of paper that is designated and known as plain white paper?—A. No, sir. Paper may be thin and cost $3, and paper may be thick and cost $6 and $8; but to call that paper, it is not paper, it is card-board. This Republican ticket is not even book paper.

Q. That Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir. Although books, I have no doubt, have been printed on such paper.

Q. Did you see the national ticket voted at the election last November?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. I will show you now the ticket headed "National ticket" and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of W. O. De Vay.—A. That is a thinner quality of paper still.

Q. What kind of paper is that?—A. Plain white paper of a thinner quality than the Republican ticket.

Mr. ENGLISH. You mean the Democratic ticket?

Mr. PEELLE. Let him answer.

The WITNESS. That is thinner paper still than this.

Q. Which?—A. The Democratic ticket.
Q. It is a thinner ticket than the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. It cost less money.
Q. What kind of paper is it?—A. Plain white paper.
Q. What is the technical name for it?—A. No particular name but plain white paper.
Q. Print or book paper?—A. Print paper.
Q. And the same as the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Only of a less quality?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever see any of the paper of the kind that the Republican ticket is printed on, before?—A. I presume I have, sir, and I may have printed on it before even.
Q. Where?—A. In Cincinnati.
Q. How long ago?—A. Twenty or thirty years.
Q. Have you seen it since?—A. I have seen the paper floating around. I have seen it used for purposes. I have seen it used for the purpose of some genealogical affairs; some man in Cincinnati had a book printed on that paper.
Q. A book printed on the same material as that Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you not seen public documents printed on that kind of paper?—A. I have seen public documents printed on vellum, I suppose, but I do not think I ever saw public documents printed on that kind of paper in my life.
Q. Have you not seen public documents printed on as heavy paper as that?—A. Yes, sir; probably heavier.
Q. Then it may be used for books?—A. It may be.
Q. You have had no experience in dealing with that kind of paper for 20 years?—A. No, sir.
Q. And you cannot recall that you ever had that kind of paper in your custody?—A. I have not printed on it for twenty years. When I was in the book and jobbing business I have had that paper often for jobs, but I never would call it paper.
Q. You say that Republican ticket can be distinguished from book paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Yet you say that may have been used and has been used for book purposes, and heavier paper?—A. No, sir; I never said it had been used for book purposes. I said I had seen it used for some genealogical purposes by some man in Cincinnati.
Q. Is not that simply book paper of a heavy quality?—A. No, sir; it is not book paper at all. It would not be called paper under the general acceptation of the word.
Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. Nary bet. I am conscientiously opposed to betting unless I have a good show, and I didn't have a good show there.

ENOC B. REED.

JAMES T. DOWLING, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. James T. Dowling; 31 years; 187 West South street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. Since 1874.
Q. Were you in the city at the election held November 7th, 1882, for Congress, in this district?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you act in any official capacity on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was that?—A. I, together with another gentleman for one of the political parties, had charge of the 15th, 16th, and 25th wards. That was the official capacity I was placed in by my party.
Q. Did you vote at that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What precinct?—A. The third precinct of the 16th ward.
Q. Did you see the tickets used by the Democrats and Republicans, and National, or Greenback parties, on that day?—A. I saw the tickets used by the Democratic party and the Republican party, but I could not swear that I paid any attention to the National ticket.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and headed Republican ticket, and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Republicans on that day.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit C to Mr. DeVay's testimony, and ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats on that day.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you, on that day, at your precinct, distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket voted by the voters?—A. Most decidedly.
Q. Could those looking on at the polls, standing close to the chute and watching the vote, distinguish those tickets, if you know?—A. That depends, in my judgment, on whether a man is accustomed to standing at polls and watching people as they vote.

Q. How could you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic?—A. By its thickness, and when folded it would certainly show the thickness; and the difference between it and the ticket of my party—the Democratic party.

Q. What kind of material was that Republican ticket printed on?—A. I do not know, except I know it was thicker paper. I do not know anything about the material used.

Q. You do not know what kind of material it is?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are not an expert?—A. No, sir.

Q. From your knowledge, not as an expert, but as a business man, could you say what kind of paper that is on—what material it is?—A. Is the answer to that to be given from my own individual knowledge, or by what I have learned?

Q. Your knowledge is what you have learned; what you know and what you think about it.

(Objected to as incompetent.)

Q. What would you call it?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I would call it thick paper of some kind, but as to what it is, I do not know.

Q. Did you ever know tickets to be printed on material of that kind before?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent)

A. No, sir; I have not in my connection with the tickets.

Q. What effect did the use of that ticket at your precinct have upon the secrecy of the ballot?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and a conclusion of law.)

A. It had this effect generally, that a man that came there and desired to vote—to my personal knowledge—was handed a different ticket, and when he walked up to the chute the challenger on the opposite side there and myself saw the ticket that was in his hand, and knowing, as any person that knows anything about it by participating in it at all can tell, that it was not the ticket that was handed to him, and he challenged the vote and the challenge was held good by the board, and we did not have people to swear in the vote, and we lost several votes.

Q. I understood you to say that the challengers could tell what ticket a man was voting when he came up to vote with the Republican ticket in his hand or with the Democratic ticket in his hand?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. How could they distinguish those tickets? How could they tell one from the other?—A. By the thickness of the ticket. The ticket that my party voted was thinner, and when folded together would certainly lay flat; but a man coming up and handing a ticket, whether he grasps it very tight or not, at the end of the ticket, the other end would show the thickness of it. [Illustrating with the Republican ticket.]

Q. You mean the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; that would spring out. This ticket I remember distinctly, because I had occasion to. I know from my personal knowledge, and would state on oath, that the challengers on the other side of the chute positively knew what men were voting, and so did I myself.

Q. You mean the Republicans on the opposite side?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I am a Democrat.

Q. Have you ever held any official position in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?—A. Councilman from the 16th ward.

Q. How long have you been a member of the council?—A. Since May, 1879.

Q. Are you a member elect of the new, incoming council?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And always have been a Democrat, if I remember rightly?—A. Yes, sir; I have never been anything else but a Democrat.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. Not a bet.

Q. None whatever?—A. None whatever.

Q. Either of your own money or of anybody else's?—A. No, sir. I understand your question to apply to the result of the Congressional election?

Q. Yes, sir; that is what I mean.—A. None at all.

Q. You say you had some connection with the 15th, 16th, and 25th wards last November.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your party designated you and some one else to look after these wards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you around to the different wards that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not challenging at a precinct regularly?—A. I did, but not regularly.

Q. How long were you at a precinct at any one time?—A. Challenging?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I challenged at one precinct for an hour and a half to relieve the other challenger.

Q. You have been a looker-on and observer of elections for a good many years?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been a challenger for your party before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The 16th ward is strongly Democratic?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the 15th and 25th?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Three of the strongest Democratic wards in the city?—A. Three of the strongest.

Q. Are they the three strongest?—A. They are not the three strongest now.

Q. On the last Congressional election?—A. On the last Congressional election the strongest Democratic ward was the 23d.

Q. And the 15th, 16th, and 25th were the next?—A. About in that ratio. I could not say from my memory now.

Q. Do you know the names of those persons that you gave that had been given tickets and had their votes challenged?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were they?—A. Crowley was one.

Q. Who is he?—A. He is a resident of the 25th ward.

Q. What is his first name?—A. Jack.

Q. What are his politics?—A. I think Democratic.

Q. What did you mean to have understood a while ago when you spoke about knowing of your own personal knowledge that men had been given one kind of a ticket and had gone to the polls and been challenged?—A. Mr. Crowley came from the jail with a Republican ticket in his hand and he came to me in the 25th ward and threw the ticket upon the ground and said, "Give me a ticket," and he went in the chute and I was rather alongside of the chute, and the Republican policeman, Webb Robinson, challenged him.

Q. Challenged his vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were giving that testimony as a reason why you could tell one ticket from another at that precinct?—A. Not at all. I have other places where I knew I could tell that ticket from the other.

Q. How did you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic on that day?—A. In the piece of stiff paper. I don't know what it is, but grasped, as it generally is grasped by the voter, it will fly open, and take a piece of thin paper and fold it together and it will remain folded.

Q. It will remain folded?—A. In the vast majority of cases.

Q. Do you know of anybody who was misled or deceived in voting at that election in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No, sir; I cannot say that I do know that.

Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. Any number of them.

Q. Give the names of them.—A. Jack Crowley, in the 2nd precinct 25th ward.

Q. You say he was a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been on the same material that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?—A. Because he would have got his Democratic vote in and would not have been challenged by the police officers.

Q. Who is some other one that would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been upon the same kind of paper?—A. Porter.

Q. What is the first name?—A. Jack.

Q. What are his politics?—A. Republican.

Q. You say that Jack Porter would have voted the Democratic ticket if the Republican ticket had not been on that kind of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where does Porter live?—A. I cannot tell you where he lives now. I know he lived in the 2nd precinct of the 25th ward at that time; he was a citizen there, and came out of jail with the balance of them, and the Republican ticket was given to him over there in the jail.

Q. How do you know?—A. By his own testimony; by his own statement.

Q. Where did he make that statement?—A. There; publicly in the precinct.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. The second precinct of the 25th ward.

Q. Who was present?—A. I do not know. I could give a list of names. Costello and Webb Robinson, the Republican police officer which challenged, were present. I do not know whether he heard it or not. He made the statement publicly, in the middle of the street, on Ray street, and Cronyn, that was on my side of the house. I can refresh my memory if you want to examine me at some future time. There was a whole host of people there.

Q. That is all you can recollect?—A. Carson and a whole crowd of people were there.

Q. He made that statement publicly there; that he had been given a Republican ticket and came down there to vote?—A. Yes, sir; and he did not want to vote it, and I gave him a Democratic ticket and gave Porter a Democratic ticket. I will volunteer that testimony.

Q. Were they challenged?—A. Certainly they were.

Q. Did they get their votes in?—A. Not to my knowledge. They were denied the privilege of voting.

Q. Those men that had Republican tickets given them, that came down there to vote, did not get to vote?—A. No, sir.

Q. They were challenged by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir; challenged by the Republican police officers.

Q. You say one of them was a Republican?—A. Yes, sir. Porter, at least, claimed to be a Republican, but he would be damned if he was going to vote the Republican ticket, and he took the Democratic ticket and walked up to the chute and was looking at it and trying to vote it. That is the remark he made.

Q. Do you know whether they were residents of that precinct or not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they had been 60 days?—A. They were residents, but the challenger, the Republican police officer, claimed that their residence was in the jail, when, to my personal knowledge, the parents of these parties lived in that precinct.

Q. The Republican police officers claimed that their residence was in the jail and they had no right to vote at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you know how those gentlemen came to be there? You say the Republican police officer challenged them on the ground that their residence was in the jail and they had no right to vote at that precinct?—A. They both got in for some misdemeanor, and they were let out of jail with the Republican ticket in their hands to go down there and vote, and when they presented the Democratic ticket in place of it they were challenged.

JAS. T. DOWLING.

By agreement of both parties, the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Tuesday, October 16, 1883, at 2 p. m.

TUESDAY, October 16, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

JOHN W. FULTZ, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. My name is John W. Fultz; I am 39 years of age on the 31st of October; I live in this city, at No. 72 Church street.

Q. How long have you lived in Indiana?—A. All my life; I was born here.

Q. If you ever held any official position you can say so.—A. I have; I am holding one at present; councilman from the 25th ward.

Q. Were you in this city at the election held November 7th, 1882, for membership in Congress from this district and other offices?—A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity on that day?—A. I was around the polls all day, and the official capacity that I acted in was after the election was over; I went to the third precinct in the 25th ward to see the count.

Q. You call that person the watcher? I believe that is the name.—A. Yes, sir; I suppose so.

Q. Did you vote at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. The third precinct of the 25th ward, the one I live in.

Q. Did you see the ticket voted in that precinct by the Democrats, Republicans, and Greenbackers or Nationals?—A. I remember distinctly of seeing the Republican and Democratic tickets, but if there was a Greenback ticket on that day in our ward I failed to see it. I do not think there was one in our precinct; there might possibly have been; I do not think there was; if there was I don't recollect of seeing it.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown; is that the ticket the Republicans used and voted there that day?—A. They had quite a number of tickets there that day [witness examined ticket]. Hold on a minute until I look over this; this looks like one of the tickets used; yes, sir, I should recognize that as one of the tickets.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think it was. I know more about this ticket than I do the other, for I handled some of these.

Q. You say you do not recollect the National ticket?—A. I could not say that I do. I don't remember that I saw one. They may have been there in the precinct, but I did not see them.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket voted at that precinct at that election on that day, both tickets being folded?

(Objected to as incompetent and a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir; I think that I could—at quite a distance.

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, distinguish them whilst you were there looking on?—A. Yes, sir; and called the attention of some of the gentlemen around me to the ticket.

Q. What material is that Republican ticket printed on, if you know?—A. I do not know the names of the different classes of paper and pasteboard, but I should not call that paper.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from any ticket of like length and width, printed on plain white writing paper, book paper, or print paper, all of said tickets being folded as tickets usually are when voted?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I could, and if necessary I will give you my reasons why I could distinguish them.

Q. Did you ever before know tickets to be used at any election in this State printed on such material as that Republican ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Never, to my knowledge.

Q. What effect did the use of that Republican ticket have upon the secrecy of the ballot at your precinct?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Well, it had the effect in two instances of allowing men to vote that, in my judgment, were not entitled to it.

Q. I ask you as to the general effect upon the secrecy, as to impairing it.—A. Probably I do not comprehend your question properly.

Q. Could you tell what tickets people were voting at that precinct by the character of this ballot?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. I will ask you this question: Would that Republican ticket, when lightly folded, as tickets are usually folded when voted, be apt to spring apart when placed in the ballot-box?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that said tickets were so voted.)

A. The ticket, in my judgment, could fold so that it would spring, and it could also be folded so it would not. If it was carelessly folded it would spring.

Q. Could two tickets folded, one placed in the other, both of them being these Republican tickets, be voted in such a way that they would be liable to come apart in the box?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, and for the reason that there is no evidence that they were voted so.)

A. Yes, sir; I think they could, and in the third precinct of our ward I am satisfied tickets were voted in that manner in some instances.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am known as a Democrat.

Q. You were a Democratic watcher?—A. After the polls closed, I was.

Q. What was the difference between the number of ballots and the number of names recorded?—A. It has been so long ago that I doubt whether I could give an answer as to how much, but from the best of my recollection at the present time I think it was something like 8 tickets.

Q. More than names recorded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think there were eight?—A. Yes, sir; I think there was. I am not positive. That is my judgment.

Q. It frequently occurs at elections that there are more ballots than there are names recorded, does it not?—A. I think not. This is the first time I ever had any knowledge of where there was more tickets than names.

Q. What was the Democratic majority last November, at this precinct?—A. This last election?

Q. I mean in November; I do not mean the city election.—A. I could not tell you that.

Q. What was the difference between the majority last November and in 1880?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. I will ask you if the Democratic majority in that precinct in 1882 was not greater than it was in 1880?—A. I could not tell you now unless I referred to the papers.

Q. You say you have no knowledge as to different qualities of paper?—A. That is, I do not distinguish them by name. Of course I have the knowledge that I can tell thick paper from thin paper; but to distinguish them by the names they are properly known, I cannot do that. I am not a printer or a book-binder or anything of that kind.

Q. And you never was a dealer or manufacturer of paper?—A. No, sir.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You mean you are not an expert.—A. That is what I mean; yes, sir.

Q. You have the same knowledge that an ordinary citizen has about it?—A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. And your answer is in the popular sense, and not as an expert?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you what number of tickets there were in excess of the number of names on the poll-books; was the Democratic majority there greater, proportionately, at that election over the Republicans than it was at the prior elections or at subsequent elections?—A. That I could not say. I don't remember. I did not try to fix anything of that kind in my memory.

Q. The Democrats had a majority there?—A. Oh yes, sir; certainly; they always do.

Q. Who had the inspector and the majority of the board?—A. The Republicans; I can state also that I objected to the inspector counting two Republican tickets at one time on account of them being folded together, and suggested that they be laid to one side until the balance of the ballot was counted out to see whether the names would overrun. It was done and the tickets did overrun.

Mr. PEELLE. Were they counted?

The WITNESS. No, sir; they were thrown out I think. But there was of the 8 tickets I told you I thought were thrown out they threw out 4 tickets of each; they threw out two Democratic tickets under my protest, that I am satisfied were not folded together.

Mr. PEELLE. And four Republican tickets?

The Witness. Four Republican and four Democratic.

Mr. PEELLE. And would that leave the number of ballots in the box correspond exactly with the names recorded?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. So the number of votes actually counted in that precinct corresponded with the names on your poll-books?—A. That is my remembrance about it.

Q. Did you stand outside the polls during the day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you watch the vote as you were standing there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you close to the chute?—A. On many occasions and many times. I was in the vicinity of the polls all day. I went down to the second precinct on one occasion.

Q. In standing at the chute and watching the ballots as they went into the box, could you distinguished one from the other, of the Democratic and Republican?—A. Certainly; it was not necessary to stand alongside of the chute, as I could distinguish the difference between the two tickets in the middle of the street, and those are fifty-foot streets; at the distance of 25 or 30 feet I could distinguish the ticket.

Q. When folded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were distinguishing those tickets by the tickets and not by the men who were voting them.—A. Yes, sir; by the tickets, by the paper.

Q. What was the appearance of that paper?—A. When the ticket was folded it was more thick and bunglesome.

Q. Could others standing there do the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they, do you know?—A. Yes, sir; I believe they did and I believe they could, and I am satisfied in my own mind that there was not a ticket that went through the inspector's hands that he could not tell whether it was a Republican or Democratic ticket.

Q. Then would you say whether there was any secrecy in that precinct in voting.

(Objected to as incompetent, &c.)

A. The only secrecy there would be about it would be in the shape of whether they used pasters or a pencil. That is my opinion.

Q. Do you know of any voters who would have voted the Democratic ticket, including William E. English for Congress, and who voted the Republican ticket, or else did not vote at all because of the Republican ticket being printed on material which distinguished it, and thus effected the secrecy of the ballot.

(Objected to as going back to the direct examination.)

A. I know of three men; one of them lives in the first precinct, and he voted the Republican ticket against his will, never having voted it before in his life, and when he acknowledged the fact to me he was crying. I know another one that was compelled to vote the Republican ticket. I don't know that he was compelled, but he was coerced and persuaded, and he never voted the Republican ticket in his life before, and I have since been informed that he laid and cried all night about it. And I know of another one that tried to vote the Democratic ticket; he had been arrested for some offense, and he was let out of jail as a "trusty." He lived in the second precinct of the 25th ward, and he tendered his vote and his vote was refused, and they came down to me in the third precinct to come up in the second and see what the trouble was, and see if I could not assist him to get his vote in. He was a young man that I had known for some time, and he had worked with me in the shop where I was employed, and they challenged his vote and I asked them on what grounds, and they called my attention to a clause in the election laws where a person serving a sentence for a misdemeanor or crime was not entitled to vote, and they refused to receive his vote. These other men I spoke of, they had also been prisoners in jail, and they were not let out as "trustys"; they were let out for the purpose of voting the Republican ticket and gained their freedom by so doing. That they acknowledged.

Q. Do you know of anybody else that would have voted and did not on account of the character of the ticket?—A. I know others that claimed they were let out of prison to vote the Republican ticket to gain their freedom.

Q. My question was, whether you knew of anybody else that was prevented from voting on account of the character of the ticket?—A. There was one man that I saw, but I cannot tell you his name now, in the third precinct of the 25th ward. I can state the circumstances, but I cannot give the man's name. If that will answer the purpose I will answer your question.

Q. I did not ask you for the names. The question was whether you knew of any other person, whether you knew their names or not, that were prevented from voting by the use of that heavy ticket that you have described?—A. I did, at one time, have a list of 26 or 28 names, I believe, who were coerced into voting the Republican ticket that never had voted it before—let out of prison for that purpose—but who they are now I cannot tell you. I know the names of two of them, probably three.

Q. What are their names?—A. One is named Edward Tettenbrock and one is named John Condon. I could give the names of two others, but I promised them I would not use their names at the time they told me this. They wanted me to suppress their names, and gave as a reason that the police would run them in on some future occasion every time they got a chance, if they did it. If you want to know the circumstances of this other man voting I can tell you the circumstances. I know he did not vote his sentiments. I am satisfied about that.

Q. State the circumstances.—A. They are simply these: There was a man came up into the chute in the third precinct of the 25th ward, and he had a Democratic ticket in his hand, and was going to vote it, and a Republican policeman was standing there challenging, and he caught him by the shoulder, and he says, "Come here a minute; I want to see you." I was satisfied that when he called him out he was going to try to coerce and bulldoze the man into voting the Republican ticket, and he took him around the corner, and was speaking to him, and I tried to get close enough to hear what he was saying; but when he saw me approaching he took him on the other side of the street. The man was a Democrat, and never voted anything else but the Democraticticket, and when he came back again he had a Republican ticket in his hand. I could tell by the difference in the paper, and he pulled his hat down over his eyes, and was going up to the chute, and I said to him, "I would like to see you a moment," and he would not pay any attention to me, but walked right up and voted his Republican ticket.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say you know some man in the first precinct of the 25th ward that was let out of jail for the express purpose of voting the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his name?—A. Edward Tettenbrock.

Q. Did he vote it?—A. He told me that he did.

Q. Did you see him vote?—A. I did not see him vote.

Q. Did you see him let out of jail?—A. No, sir; I know he was in jail.

Q. You think he was let out of jail on that day?—A. He told me so.

Q. Was he a Democrat?—A. He claimed to have been a Democrat.

Q. All you know is what he told you?—A. Yes, sir. He was crying when he told me. He said he never voted the Republican ticket in his life, but he voted it that day to get his liberty; that his liberty was sweet, and he voted it.

Q. Where is he now?—A. In the city.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. He lives on McCarty street.

Q. What is his business?—A. I cannot tell you what he is working at.

Q. Did you ever see him before that day?—A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. How often?—A. One hundred times I guess. May be more than that.

Q. Did he live in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And entitled to vote there?—A. Yes, sir. That is, if he had not been serving a sentence. I want to tell of another case to offset that one, to show in what manner some of those people were treated down there, if you want to hear it.

Q. It makes no difference. You are the witness. If you want to volunteer anything you can do it. Is that the only one in the first precinct that you know of down there?—A. The only one I know of.

Q. Was there any in the second precinct of that ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his name?—A. John Condon.

Q. Do you know him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Three or four years.

Q. Does he live in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Entitled to vote there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are his politics?—A. Democratic.
Q. Did he vote?—A. Yes, sir. But he voted the Republican ticket.
Q. How do you know?—A. Because he said so.
Q. Was that the only one in that precinct?—A. The inspector of that ward told me that he voted the Republican ticket also.
Q. What is the name of that inspector?—A. Amer J. Funk.
Q. The second precinct of the 25th ward?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know of any in the third precinct, of the 25th ward, that came down that way?—A. No, sir; I cannot say that I do.
Q. You don't know any of them?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know James T. Dowling?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Councilman from the 16th ward?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he down in any of the precincts of the 25th ward that day?—A. He was down in the third precinct of the 25th ward once in the morning, I think; he may have been there oftener, I don't remember of seeing him but once.
Q. Was anybody challenged there that day on the ground that their residence was in the jail?—A. I cannot say.
Q. Do you know of any challenges having been made by a Republican policeman, or other Republicans, on the ground that the residence of the party was in the jail?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was it?—A. The man's name was John Crowley that was challenged.
Q. Was that Republican policeman on duty?—A. Yes, sir; he was challenging at the polls.
Q. Was he on duty as a policeman?—A. I cannot say whether he was on duty or not. I know he was on the police force.
Q. Is it not the fact that he was not on duty as a policeman?—A. I cannot say. Whether he received pay for doing his duty as a policeman or not, I could not say.
Q. He exercised none of the duties of a policeman that day at that precinct, did he?—A. I cannot tell you, because I was not there but a few minutes. I was up there trying to get this man Crowley's vote in, and he was challenged because he had been in jail, but he was out, and he claimed to have been let out as a "trusty."
Q. Those are the only ones you know of in those precincts down there?—A. I did know others in other portions of the city.
Q. You say you had a list?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did you do with it?—A. I destroyed it.
Q. When did you destroy it?—A. Five or six weeks ago. I had it in a memorandum book and carried it in my pocket.
Q. You knew there was a contest over that election?—A. I did hear that there was a contest down there. That is the reason I retained those names.
Q. You knew there was a contest in the county candidates?—A. No, sir.
Q. Didn't you know that Mr. Lemon had made a contest?—A. I knew he had spoken of it.
Q. Didn't you know that the candidate for recorder had a contest pending?—A. No, sir. Mr. Lemon entered a protest, but he let the thing fall through. At least I was told so.
Q. What was the name of that policeman?—A. Webb Robinson.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you understand that this Congressional contest was going to be prosecuted?—A. No, sir; I did not. I thought it was from what I read in the papers in the first place, and that is why I retained the names. I got the names from some of those men that voted the Republican ticket in order to get their liberty from prison.
Q. Did you understand that the contest had been abandoned?—A. Yes, sir; I felt that way and that is the reason I destroyed the names.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That it had been abandoned?—A. Yes, sir; I felt that it had been abandoned
Q. Those men that you saw were taken down there from the jail, had been arrested for some misdemeanors, drunks and disorderlies?—A. I suppose so. I don't know what they were arrested for.
Q. Some trivial misdemeanor?—A. Yes, sir; I suppose so. I don't know what their offenses were. This man Crowley, his offense certainly could not have been great because they let him out as a "trusty."
Q. They are frequently let out that way, aint they?—A. I cannot say. I don't know.

JOHN W. FULTZ.

CHARLES M. COOPER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Charles M. Cooper; age, twenty-eight; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. Were you in the city at the election held November 7th, 1882, for Congressman and for other officers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.

Q. Did you vote?—A. I did.

Q. Did you act in any capacity on that day?—A. I acted as challenger in the first precinct of the second ward.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them.

Q. I will ask you whether or not this ticket, marked Exhibit B to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, was the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you the ticket marked Exhibit C, to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and I ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit D to the testimony of Mr. De Vay, headed "National Ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted there at that precinct?—A. I remember of seeing this ticket at that precinct, but there was but very few.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the other tickets voted at that election, all the tickets being folded?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. The tickets were very easily distinguished from each other.

Q. Do you know what kind of paper that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. Well, that ticket is called a paste board spring-back ticket. I am not a paper man, and, of course, I cannot tell the technical name for it.

Q. You are not an expert?—A. No, sir; not an expert.

Q. As a matter of fact that day challenging at that precinct could you, when the voters came up and voted, tell what they were voting by the tickets they voted?—A. Yes, sir; you could tell whether or not they were voting the Republican ticket or the Democrat ticket.

Q. Could you distinguish the Greenback from the Democrat ticket?—A. I don't remember whether any National or Greenback tickets were voted in our precinct or not, but you could easily distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democrat ticket, as the voters would come up the chute and handed them to the inspector.

Q. Did you ever know tickets printed upon the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed, to be used before at an election?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What effect did the use of that ticket in your precinct have upon the secrecy of the ballot?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law, and immaterial.)

A. Well, there was no secrecy of the ballot at all.

Q. Was there any complaint made at that precinct on that day on account of the character of that ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any objections made?—A. Objections made by both Democrats and Republicans in my presence at the polls.

Q. On what account?—A. On account of the stiffness of the ticket, and because it was a spring ticket, one that would not stay folded up.

Q. If that ticket was lightly folded would it spring open or would it remain folded?—A. It would spring open unless it was broken; I suppose you could break this ticket so it would not spring open, but when it is folded as tickets are usually folded it would spring open.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last November?

Mr. WILSON. I do not know that that is necessarily a fair question to ask. The witness is not bound to answer.

Mr. PEELLE. He may use his own judgment about answering it.

The WITNESS. I will refuse to answer that.

Q. I will ask you to state if you know of any one that was misled or deceived in voting at that precinct in consequence of the Republican ticket being printed on the kind of paper it was.—A. I cannot give the names of any persons that were deceived on account of this ticket.

Q. Do you know of any one that would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. Well, there were persons that were deceived by this ticket that would have voted differently if the ticket had been on common paper, but as for giving their names I cannot just state now who they were.

Q. Do you know the names of any such?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there a single man at the precinct where you were that would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been upon the kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I think they were judging, from the complaints I heard. I cannot state their names.

Q. What Republican made complaint of that ticket up there that day?—A. I remember distinctly of Mr. W. P. Fishback denouncing this ticket openly at the polls; he said he thought it was a fraud and gotten up for frauduient purposes.

Q. Do you know of any other Republicans that did?—A. I don't remember of any other Republican now that openly denounced the ticket.

Q. Mr. Fishback did it at the precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir; right there in my presence.

Q. Was it so the crowd could hear it?—A. There were several people standing around there.

Q. To whom did he address that remark?—A. I suppose it was made to me as much as any person else.

Q. Was there any one made any complaint to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I know complaint was made in the presence of the board.

Q. Was there any made to the board?—A. Whether it was made directly to the board or not I cannot say.

Q. Was there any objection to the counting of those tickets by the board?—A. None that I know of because I was not there at the counting.

Q. You say you have no knowledge as to the different qualities of paper at all?—A. No, sir; I am not an expert on the paper question.

Q. What you have answered you have answered as to your knowledge of paper without any familiarity or dealing in paper?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. As an attorney at law you buy and use paper?—A. Oh, yes, sir; I use paper, and as chairman of the Democratic committee of this city I bought paper for the purpose of having tickets printed to use at the election.

Q. What election was that?—A. That was the city election two years ago or eighteen months ago.

Q. Eighteen eighty-one?—A. Mr. Smart and Mr. Grubbs were the opposing candidates for mayor.

Q. That was in 1881?—A. Yes, sir.

CHAS. M. COOPER.

CHARLES W. GORSUCH, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. What is your age?—A. I am 38.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. Indianapolis, Ind.; No. 32 School st.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Seven years.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election that year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. It was the first precinct of the 20th ward.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity that day?—A. I was clerk in there.

Q. Democratic clerk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted that day by the Democrats, Republicans, and Greenbackers, or Nationals?—A. I saw the Democratic and Republican tickets. I do not recollect now about the Greenback ticket. There was a ticket there.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct on that day.—A. I don't know as that was the ticket; it was a ticket similar to that.

Q. Was it on material similar to that?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit D to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and I will ask you if that was the character of ticket, or a ticket similar to that voted by the Democrats.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket voted at that precinct that day?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. Yes, sir; I think I could.

Q. As a matter of fact, looking on, could you tell, and did you tell, one ticket from the other as they were put in the boxes, if you saw them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How could you tell?—A. I kept a note of this before I knew Mr. English was going to contest this election, and I told by the thickness and another thing was by the spring in the tickets—especially the thickness.

Q. Do you know what material that Republican ticket is printed on?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I cannot call the name from memory, but I have heard it quite often. I don't know as I ever heard it spoken of during this election, but I did during our city election in 1881. I recollect of Professor Smart speaking of it; that it was medicated, and a plaster would not stick to it. I don't know as it was about this one, but it was about a similar one.

Q. I did not ask you about the election in 1881.—A. No; I was only talking about the tickets. I heard them spoken of at that time; I don't know as I did at this election.

Q. What effect did the use of that Republican ticket have upon the secrecy of voting at your precinct? Did it impair it? Could you tell what a man was voting by the use of that ticket at your precinct?—A. Do you mean in regard to when they passed their tickets up to the ballot-box?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. What effect it had?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I could not say about the effect. I could distinguish them very easily. Almost every man that voted there I knew how he voted—quite a number at least.

Q. Did you tell that from the appearance of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir. That was talked of. We talked over that in the board there and I jested with Mr. Adams, the Republican inspector, that I could tell who were Democrats and who were Republicans when they were voting. That was about all.

Q. When folded up slightly, would that Republican ticket be apt to spring open?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If another ticket was folded and put in—each ticket folded separately and one stuck in the other and dropped in the box, would they be apt to separate?—A. I presume they would. I would not like to say exactly; I am afraid I would be governed a little by politics.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You acted as clerk in the interest of the Democratic party that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody who was deceived or misled in voting that day in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. Well, I cannot call to mind any one now.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was?—A. I cannot say that I do.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. It was talked over there; that is, people would come to the window to vote, and there was one or two made remarks. I cannot call them to mind now.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board?—A. I would not know whether they were making complaints directly to the board or not, but when they were voting there was no less than two said that anybody could tell how they were voting. That was not a complaint direct to the board.

Q. Were those Republican tickets counted at that precinct without objection to the board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge about the different qualities of paper?—A. I do not know what you would call that Democratic paper or the Republican paper. I know it is white paper; I don't know the composition of it.

Q. It is plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one ticket is a little heavier than the other?—A. Yes, sir. I know what they used to term them in Maryland when they were voted there, but I do not know what they called them here.

Q. Did you use to vote that kind of a ticket there?—A. They occasionally did, I don't know that it was done to any great extent.

Mr. WILSON. You are not an expert?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

Mr. WILSON. Your answer as to the character of that paper——

Mr. PEELLE. He did not answer at all as to the character.

Mr. WILSON. You asked him whether it was plain white paper.

Mr. PEELLE. He did not answer the question as to what the quality of the paper was. You asked him what it was popularly called, and he could not tell you.

The WITNESS. I could not tell you what that paper is called. I don't really know what you call paper that newspapers are printed on, but I have seen that kind of paper.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if there was any objections to the counting of the tickets at that precinct; was there no objection at all made by any one to the counting of these tickets in any way, shape, or form?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I could not say that there was an objection to the counting of these tickets from the simple fact that they were thicker than the Democratic tickets. I don't know as there was.

Q. And they counted all the tickets that were put in the box on both sides?—A. Yes, sir; and I believe two more.

Q. How was that?—A. I don't say two more; but I think there was a difference of two more votes in there than what the tally-sheet shows. That is my best recollection.

Q. Did they count those two or three?—A. I think there was a note made of them at the bottom of the tally-sheet.

Q. Do you know whether they were counted or not?—A. Really I cannot say now.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you if, in that precinct, there was not two Republican tickets thrown out?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. Was there not two laid aside as they were counted?—A. If there was it was not while I was there. I was there during the whole time of the taking of the tickets, and of the counting. and I know we had some disputes there.

Q. You found no tickets folded together in the box?—A. I could not tell that, because Mr. Adams took the tickets out.

Q. There were no tickets found folded together and laid aside in the box?—A. After we was counting?

Q. No, sir; but that you took out of the ballot-box and laid aside and passed over until you got to the end of the count?—A. No, sir.

Q. What precinct is that?—A. The first.

By Mr, WILSON:

Q. All the tickets voted there were of that character?—A. Yes, sir.

CHAS. W. GORSUCH.

WILLIAM B. LEWIS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. What is your age?—A. I will be 43 the 26th day of this month.

Q. How long have you resided in Indiana?—Ans. Ever since I was born.

Q. Did you reside in this city in 1882?—A. I did.

Q. Were you in this city, and did you attend the election in this city for Congress November 7th, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. Precinct No. 1, of the eighth ward.

Q. What capacity did you act in that day?—A. I was challenger.

Q. Democratic challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw the tickets voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Democratic and Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any Greenback ticket?—A. I think, if I remember right, we had one in our precinct.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit B, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Republicans and voted at your precinct on that day?—A. It feels a good deal like the same paper.

Q. Do you think it is the same material?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket marked Exhibit C, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that was the Democratic ticket that was voted that day at that precinct?—A. It is my impression that is the same ticket.

Q. You saw these tickets voted, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket that day as it was being voted from the Democratic ticket, both being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Anybody could see the difference, I think, that had any eyes at all.

Q. You did distinguish them, as a matter of fact, then?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. When that Republican ticket is lightly folded and placed in the box will it stay folded, or will it spring open?

(Objected to for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were so voted from the commencement of this case to the present time.)

A. My impression is that if there were two of them together they would spring open. I think I saw them spring apart out of our box.

Q. Were you there whilst the tickets were being counted?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see them counted?—A. I did—every one of them.
Q. What effect, I will ask you, did it have to fold one of these Republican tickets lightly, and fold another and fold it in and drop it into the ballot-box? Would it remain together or separate?
(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, and for the further reason that there is no evidence that tickets were so folded.)
A. I took two of the tickets, as I watched this count, and I doubled and fixed them together, and I saw it could be done and they would come very nearly springing open, so near that it would hustle a man to watch the count and catch it if it didn't spring apart.
Q. Did you see any Greenback tickets voted there that day?—A. I don't know that I saw one voted. I think when we counted them, if I remember right, there was one in our box.
Q. How many Republican votes was there in that precinct?—A. I cannot tell you that to-day.
Q. All of the Democratic votes were on the ticket I have shown you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And all the Republican votes were of the character that I have shown you?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you was the challenger there that day, in the interest of the Democratic party?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And after the polls closed, you became a watcher in the interest of the Democratic party?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. There was no kicking done only by me.
Q. Did you make any complaint to the board?—A. I did.
Q. What complaint did you make to the board?—A I told Mr. Buddenbaum that the tickets were a fraud.
Q. You were afterwards Democratic watcher, when the tickets were counted?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were the tickets counted without objection?—A. No.
Q. Who made that objection to the counting of the tickets?—A. I did.
Q. As a Democratic watcher?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was the inspector at that precinct?—A. Mr. Buddenbaum.
Q. Who were the judges?—A. Mr. Shryer, and I think, the other man's name is Zimmerman.
Q. Who were the clerks at that precinct?—A. Mr. Hays; I believe it was William, I am not sure about that; I am sure who the Republican clerk was, and the other was Mr. Hugo. He was the Democratic clerk.
Q. What precinct was that?—A. Precinct No. 1, of the 8th ward.
Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the last Congressional election?—A. No, sir.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am an upholsterer by trade.
Q. Do you know of anybody who was mislead or deceived in voting there on account of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed upon the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was?—A. I cannot say that I do. I am under the impression that I saw three men vote two of those tickets at once, to the best of my knowledge.
Mr. WILSON. What ticket do you mean?
The WITNESS. The Republican ticket.
Q. How did the votes in that precinct correspond with the names on the tally-sheet?—A. That is something I am not able to answer to-day.
Q. Was there any comment at the end of the count as to the difference, if any there was, between the number of ballots and number of names on the poll-book?—A. I cannot say whether there was or not, because I was not there when they fixed up the tally-sheet.
Q. Were all the tickets in the box counted?—A. Every one of them.
Q. If there were more tickets in the box than names on the poll-list you don't know it?—A. I could not say. That is one thing I can find out very easily though at home.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. The majority of the board at that precinct were Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Buddenbaum, the inspector, was a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

WILLIAM B. LEWIS.

By agreement of both parties, the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Wednesday, Oct. 17th, 1883, at 2 p. m.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 17th, 1883—2 o'clock p. m.

WILLIAM LANGSTAFF, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. William Langstaff; 46 years old; I live 763 E. Washington st., Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. Were you in the city at the election held November 7th, 1883, for Congress?—I was.

Q. Did you vote at that election?—A. I did.

Q. At what precinct?—A. I voted at the 19th ward. I think it is the 1st or 3rd precinct. I am not sure. It is 715 E. Washington street where we vote at—at a schoolhouse. Not one of the city schools, but a Sunday-school house.

Q. Were you acting in any official capacity that day?—A. Yes, sir; I was at the polls that day.

Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. I was peddling tickets around there.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I had charge of the Democratic poll-book there f r a while.

Q. You saw the tickets voted that day at that place, did you?—A. Yes, sir, I did; all of them.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir; that is about the ticket voted there. Early in the morning I went to Mr. Thompson, deputy postmaster—he votes at our precinct—and I asked him to give me one of their tickets, and he did so, and I says, "Do you call that a legal ticket?"

Q. This ticket that they voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You asked that question?—A. I asked that question of Mr. Thompson, and he says, "That's all right." "Do you call that a legal ticket, Mr. Thompson?" says I, and he says, "That is the ticket that will win."

Q. I will call your attention to Exhibit C to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the Greenback ticket used that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit D to Mr. De Vay's testimony, and I will ask you if that was the National or Greenback ticket that was voted that day at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket. Now, there were some Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name on them at our precinct instead of Mr. English's name. They had been put there by Republicans that used them. I called Mr. Thompson's attention to that, and he said he knew nothing about it at the time, but I got it from Mr. Plummer. Mr. Plummer had the tickets with Mr. Peelle's name on, and Mr. English's name taken off. It was the Democratic ticket, and it was made upon the same paper as ours and just like ours.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the other tickets voted at that precinct, all the tickets being folded as tickets are usually folded?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir. It was remarked all the day that we could tell who voted it. I stood at the chute and watched them vote, and I could tell every man's vote as he put it in the box.

Q. As a matter of fact you did distinguish these tickets there?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. All the way along, all day we did.

Q. When that Republican ticket was lightly folded, as tickets are usually folded when voted and placed in the ballot-box, would it remain folded or spring open?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the question assumes that tickets usually voted are lightly folded.)

A. No, sir.

Q. How many votes were given at your precinct in all, if you know?—A. I think somewhere in the neighborhood of 260. I am not sure about the number exactly.

Q. That is the entire number?—A. That is as near as I can remember.

Q. What effect, if any, did the use of that Republican ticket have on the secrecy o the vote at your precinct?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. As far as my judgment is concerned it would have this effect: There were several gentlemen there, I believe, that wanted to vote for Mr. English, and on account of that ticket they were afraid to do it.

Q. You mean they wanted to vote the Democratic ticket?—A. They would have voted a part of the Democratic ticket. They wanted to erase Mr. Peelle's name and put on Mr. English's name, but they could not do it very well because the pasters would show plainly on the ticket.

Q. Did you ever know a ticket printed on material of that kind—like the Republican ticket—to be used at any election in this State before?

(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. No, sir; I never did.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your business?—A. Florist.
Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. I did not. Not a cent.
Q. Do you know of any one who was mislead or deceived in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. I believe that there were some in our precinct that were misled on account of that ticket.
Q. Who were they?—A. I don't remember their names.
Q. Can you give the name of one?—A. I could not give the name of any one just now. It has been so long ago. We talked about it some days afterwards.
Q. You say there were some that voted part of the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. They would have done it—voted part of the Democratic ticket and the other the Republican.
Q. Those men you spoke of voted part of the Democratic ticket and part of the Republican?—A. No, sir; I do not say that; I say those men wanted to vote it, but would not vote it when they had the spring-back ticket.
Q. For what reason?—A. Because they thought they would be caught voting it by Republicans to whom they had pledged themselves to vote the Republican ticket, but secretly they wanted to vote for Mr. English.
Q. What were their politics?—A. They were Republicans—at least they had always voted the Republican ticket—so they said.
Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I believe I did at that time.
Q. Who were they?—A. I don't remember now who they were.
Q. You do not recall any of them?—A. I don't think I could mention the name of the parties now. It was a matter I did not think of for some time.
Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day about the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who made that?—A. I made it for one, and Mr. Howland made it for another, and I believe Mr. Piel.
Q. Was he the starch man?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Those tickets were counted there without objection?—A. Yes, sir. They had to be counted. They had a Republican board there.
Q. There was no objection made?—A. There was objection made at the time.
Q. Who made the objections?—A. Those gentlemen I spoke of.
Q. Was you inside?—A. Yes, sir; at first when they commenced counting.
Q. And you made objections?—A. Yes, sir; I made objections. There were two or three of them.
Q. Who were they? Give their names.—A. Mr. C. B. Howland was one, and Mr. Piel and myself.
Q. W. F. Piel?—A. I don't know his initials. He lives in that precinct and is a starch man.

WILLIAM LANGSTAFF.

C. S. BUTTERFIELD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. C. S. Butterfield; I am 48 years old; Indianapolis.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am a printer and stationer.
Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. Off and on for a great many years. I commenced the printing business in 1847, and have been in and out of it. The greater part of the time I have been in that business since.
Q. I call your attention now to this ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to state what material that is printed on.—A. I should pronounce that a raw or unfinished Western plate paper, or lithographer's blank. It is evidently a Western plate paper, made from pulp; Western plate paper unfinished, and called lithographer's blank or lithographer's paper, would be my judgment.
Q. I call your attention now to the ticket marked Exhibit G to Mr. Brown's deposition, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you what is the material upon which that ticket is printed.—A. It is very heavy news or medium book paper. It is also an unsized and cold calendered paper. I should call it a very cheap article of book paper or heavy news.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit D to the deposition of Mr.

DeVay, and headed "National ticket," and I will ask you what material that is printed on.—A. That is a cheaper grade of book or a fair news—lighter weight news.

Q. What is the material used for upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. It is usually used by lithographer's for cut work. If that was a finished paper it would be called plate paper and would be used for printing very fine cuts on for insets or illustrating book work; we buy it to print coarse work on or lithographer's work. It is commonly used for lithographer's work.

Q. What is the process which you term lithographing?—A. Lithographing is printing from stone instead of type.

Q. You engrave the stone first, do you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you take the print from the engraving?—A. Yes, sir. It is printed from stone, and put in the press, and copy plate cut. This paper might also be used to print heavy cuts on, and it is.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Were you ever engaged in manufacturing paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. I understood you to say that is what would be called Western plate or unfinished paper?—A. Yes., sir. I would call it Western plate paper.

Q. Unfinished, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean by that unsized and uncalendered?—A. Yes, sir; it is sized to a certain extent. It is not a cold calendered. If it was highly finished it might be styled Eastern plate.

Q. That is, it lacks the ordinary finish of plate?—A. That is plate paper.

Q. Is not that frequently used for book work?—A. Not for the text of the book.

Q. Haven't you seen books printed on heavier paper than that?—A. Not of that kind of paper.

Q. Have you not seen them on heavier paper?—A. Yes, sir; I have seen them on Brown's ledger paper.

Q. Have you not seen it upon white paper?—A. Yes, sir; I have seen it on heavy book paper. I have printed books on heavy book tinted paper—perhaps as heavy as that.

Q. Or heavier?—A. Yes, sir; but not on plate paper. That is too expensive a process.

Q. You say this has no finish on it?—A. The pulp is there, and the material. It is clear quill-pulp. That is what they call lithographer's blank. Western plate is the proper name for it.

Q. It is paper?—A. Western plate paper.

Q. It is plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your place of business?—A. 36 West Washington street.

Q. Just in stationery, are you?—A. Printing and stationery.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Is that Republican ticket printed on what is termed commonly white paper, or plain white paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent and leading.)

A. Well, I do not know that the color would figure in the question; that does not describe that paper. If I was going to order the paper or even sell it, I would not ask for plain white paper of that kind; I would ask for western plate paper.

Q. What is the difference between western plate and eastern?—A. Eastern plate is a highly finished paper with a smoother surface, a closer paper with just the same body and the same pulp without that finish.

Q. Has it any finish?—A. It is cold finished; that is, sized under the pulp in the cold finish under cold rollers. I have been in the factory and have seen the process. The difference between this and what we call eastern plate is the surface sizing with a hot roller when they run through hot cylinders.

Q. One of them is more highly finished than the other?—A. Yes, sir; they can be made of the same pulp, but the different finish would perhaps be 50 per cent. in the value of the paper of the same weight.

Q. Is it plain white book paper?—A. It is not what I would term that.

Q. Is it plain white news paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it plain white writing paper?—A. No, sir; it is not classified as that.

Q. Were you in the city on the 7th of November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote?—A. I voted one of those tickets.

Q. Are you a Democrat or Republican?—A. I am a Republican.

Q. You say you voted one of those Republican tickets?—A. Yes, sir; I said so.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. If a man would come to your store and ask you for plain white paper would you know what he wanted, until you inquired what kind of paper he meant?—A. I should ask him whether he wanted news paper or book paper or writing paper; those are the three classes of paper commonly used.

Q. I will ask you if plain white paper is not plain white paper, if it is white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no such thing known in the trade as plain white paper, without other distinctions is there?—A. Plain white paper means paper that is not printed upon and it applies to writing paper or book paper or news paper or print paper; that would be the term usually applied to it.

Q. If it was plain white it would apply to any kind of paper, book paper, print paper, plate paper, equally one to the other?—A. Yes, sir; it would be unruled and unprinted paper.

Q. Any paper that is unruled and untinted paper is plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; certainly; without any other distinction. Each class of white paper is classified by its name; there is writing paper, news paper, book paper, and plate paper, eastern and western plate.

Q. And if a man would ask you for plain white you would have to ask him, before you knew what he meant, whether he wanted white plate paper, white book paper, or white print paper?—A. I would be very apt to ask him what kind of paper he wanted.

Q. That would not designate the kind of paper?—A. Further than he wanted paper that was not ruled on or printed on.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Is that plate paper ever put down in your catalogues as plain white paper?—A. Paper is not catalogued that way. It is classified as eastern plate, western plate, book, news, and writing paper.

Q. If a man would come to your office and ask you for paper to print tickets on, and ask for plain white paper, would you give him lithographic plate?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls that day?—A. I voted there; yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, both lightly folded, if you saw them as they went into the box?—A. If I had noticed them particularly for that purpose to distinguish them, I could; yes, sir.

Q. What official positions, if any, have you held?—A. Deputy secretary of state a year or more under Mr. Peelle, and I was clerk of the city for four years. I was in the war awhile, part of the time a private soldier and part of the time as commissary of subsistence.

C. S. BUTTERFIELD.

WILLIAM MARION HICKLIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. Your age and residence?—A. 43; I reside in this city.

Q. How long have you lived in this State?—A. Four years.

Q. Were you in this city on November 7th, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. In the second precinct of the 17th ward.

Q. What did you do there that day?—A. I was a kind of a deputy challenger, I suppose.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the Democrats and Republicans that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. W. O. DeVay, and I will ask you whether that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir; that looks like it.

Q. I will ask you to look at the ticket marked Exhibit C, to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. Could you distinguish at that precinct, on that day, the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, both of them being folded?—A. I could, very easily.

Q. Did you, in fact, distinguish them whilst there—one from the other?—A. I did, and could very readily.

Q. How could you tell?—A. I could tell by the looks of the ticket. One was thicker than the other, and one being apparently what we call pasteboard tickets. The challengers on the other side would say, "Here comes a pasteboard ticket," and would laugh at me. I could distinguish them myself as pasteboard tickets.

Q. "The other side" was the Republican side?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What effect, if any, did the use of that Republican ticket have on the secrecy of the vote?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Well, it had the effect that I could tell whether a man had the Republican ticket or the Democratic ticket in his hand.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were there that day in the interest of the Democrats?—A. I was not in the interest of the Democrats, or employed by them. I was there on my own hook.

Q. You were there in the interest of the Democratic party?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you any interest in the result of the last Congressional election?—A. I am glad I didn't have any.

Q. You have been at the polls there challenging before?—A. No, sir. That was the first time I challenged in Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in the State?—A. I have been here nearly constantly for four years.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am agent for the Kankakee line.

Q. Still there, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You were at the precinct how much of the day?—A. I was going to be a real nice fellow, and I was going to vote and go right back; and I went down about half-past eight in the morning, and I staid there until the vote was counted out that evening. I did not go home to dinner or supper.

Q. Was you watching the counts?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you watched the vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many votes were cast there that day?—A. No, sir; I could not speak from memory.

Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket tend to prevent any persons from voting the Democratic ticket who might have done so had not the Republican ticket been printed on that material, if you know?—A. I think it did, for the reason that there were two policemen on the other side all day, and some of the fellows that came there were legal voters, and one man I remember well—I do not recollect his name—and Mr. Bryce, the Republican councilman and candidate on the Republican ticket, said that man was a voter, and he was going to vote the Democratic ticket. (Objected to as hearsay.) And they challenged his vote and he went out, and I went to him and told him to go up there and vote, and he said he didn't want to get into any racket, and he would not vote; and then I took him to the man that was the challenger—I have forgotten his name—it was Chris. Schoettle—and I wanted him to go there, and I knew he lived there, and I know Mr. Bryce knew it, and I wanted him to vote the Democratic ticket, and he said no, he did not want to do that, and he didn't want to get into any racket. The policemen were Mr. Crane and Mr. Yerber. They were at the polls pretty much all day.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What was that man's name?—A. I don't remember his name. He was one of these timid Democrats. He was not one of the thoroughbreds.

Q. Did you know him before that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he live?—A. He boarded at the Phillips House.

Q. Did you know his politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say he was a Democrat—that man Mr. Bryce spoke of?—A. I knew he was a Democrat by the ticket he had in his hand. It was folded up, but I could tell by the ticket.

Q. Did he vote that day?—A. No, sir; he did not vote. He said he did not vote at that poll and couldn't vote anywhere else because he was in that precinct.

Q. Challenged by a Republican, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. That is the only person you know?—A. There were several others, but I cannot single out any particular one.

Q. What official positions have you ever held?—A. I have been a member of the legislature in Nebraska, and I have been a member of the council in Nebraska City, in Nebraska, and other offices I don't care about mentioning.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am the agent of the Kankakee line.

W. M. HICKLIN.

By consent of both parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Thursday, October 19, 1883, at 10 a. m.

THURSDAY, October 19, 1883—10 o'clock a. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

TIMOTHY GRIFFIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your age and residence.—A. Forty; residence, No. 67 Eddy st., Indianapolis.
Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Forty years.
Q. Were you in the city at the election held here for Congress, November 7th, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you vote?—A. I did, sir.
Q. Were you at the polls?—A. I was, sir.
Q. What precinct?—A. Third precinct, 16th ward.
Q. Did you act in any official capacity there that day?—A. As a watcher around the polls.
Q. Did you see the count and watch that?—A. I did, sir.
Q. Did you see the ticket voted there by the two parties—the Democratic and Republican?—A. I did, sir.
Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked as Exhibit C, to Mr. DeVay's deposition, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit B, to Mr. DeVay's deposition, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used there by the Republicans?—A. That is the ticket; yes, sir.
Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket at your precinct, as it was voted, from the Democratic ticket at the same precinct, both tickets being folded?
(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you, in point of fact, distinguish them, standing there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did you distinguish those tickets?—A. By the stiffness and the thickness of the tickets.
Q. What effect, if any, did the use of that Republican ticket have upon the secrecy of voting at your precinct, if you observed any?
(Objected to as a conclusion of law and incompetent.)
A. Yes, sir; it done a great deal of dirt down there.
Q. Did it destroy the secrecy?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. Yes, sir; I should judge it did.
Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket prevent anyone at your polls from voting his sentiments?—A. It did, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who was it?—A. Well, there was a party of five brought down from the jail by an assistant from the jail that would have voted the Democratic ticket only from that ticket, and they run them right up to the chute and you could not get to talk to them, and they had that ticket in their hands, every one of them.
Q. Did they vote?—A. Yes, sir. They had a right to vote there. They were citizens, and they had a right to vote there; and they voted that stiff ticket because there was a man from the jail followed them right up in the chute.
Q. What are the names of the party you speak of?—A. Patsey McMahan, Patsey Devlin, and Monk Lybrand, I think they call him.
Q. They lived in that ward, did they, all of them?—A. Yes, sir. They all voted down there, and they lived there.
Q. Were they of Irish descent, these men that you spoke of?—A. I believe they are, by their names.
Mr. WILSON. Do you know the politics of those voters you referred to?
The WITNESS. Yes, sir; they were all Democrats.
Q. A great many of the Irish people—Democrats—voted the Republican ticket at the last November election on account of a little revolt in the party, didn't they?—A. I don't know whether they voted it down there in that precinct or not. We gave a pretty good majority.
Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that there was a great many Democratic Irishmen voted the Republican ticket on account of a local difference in the convention, in not nominating Mr. Reinihan?—A. They did not vote the whole Republican ticket.
Q. And didn't they organize what was called the "Jackson club"?—A. They narrowed down to very few at the latter end.
Q. Was there not more Irishmen voted the Republican ticket in 1882 than ever before?—A. I don't know about that; I don't think there was.

TIMOTHY GRIFFIN.

C. B. WING, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. ENGLISH:

Q. State your name, age, and residence?—A. C. B. Wing; age, 30; residence, Cincinnati.

Q. What business are you engaged?—A. The paper business.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. Twelve or thirteen years.

Q. Are you connected with any firm?—A. I am connected with Chatfield & Wood, of Cincinnati.

Q. Is the firm with which you are connected extensively engaged in the manufacture and sale of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does your firm manufacture and sell lmaterialknown in the trade as lithographic plate, or plate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. and headed Republican ticket; you will please look at that, and state now what is the material on which that ticket is printed; what is it called in the trade?—A. It is called lithographic plate in the trade. That is the name we give it.

Q. Did you sell material of that description to the Journal Company in the city of Indianapolis a short time before November 7th, 1882?—A. Well, I cannot remember that exactly. We sell them this kind of paper all the time. Whether I sold them any at that time or not, I cannot remember.

Q. Does your house manufacture that lithographic plate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is that material generally used for?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. It is used by lithographers or for fine job work of any kind. Printers use it.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed Democratic ticket, and I will ask you what material that ticket is printed on?—A. It is printed on No. 2 book paper.

Q. What is the weight of that lithographic plate paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, size of sheets 25 by 38, per ream?—A. I do not know the weight of it; I could only judge that it is a sheet of regular sized plate paper.

Q. What would you say approximately?—A. I should think that paper would weigh, 22 by 28, 70 pounds.

Q. I ask you what would be the weight per ream of this paper where the sheets were 25 by 38, the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I say 108 pounds.

Q. What is the weight per ream of the book paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed, the sheets being the same size. What is the relative price of the lithographic paper and the book paper?—A. That all depends on how they are sold.

Q. The market value November 7th, 1882, if you know?—A. It would be on that sheet 9½ per pound; that is the manufacturer's price; that is our price.

Q. What is the price of book paper per pound?—A. This Democratic ticket, as near as I could guess, would be 8¼ at that time; it is worth 7¾ now.

Q. What would a ream of that lithographic plate cost about November 7th, 1882, retail or manufacturer's price, either?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I say manufacturer's price, our price. We are the only house West that makes lithographic plate. Our price is 9½ cents.

Q. What would a ream come to at that price, sheets being 25 by 23?—A. It would be 9½ times 108.

Q. What would be the value or the price of book paper of the character upon which that Democratic ticket is printed per ream, size of sheets being 25 by 38?—A. Eight and a quarter times 45.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you know what plain white paper is?—A. I think I could tell a sheet if a man would hand me one.

Q. Is there more than one kind of plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; there are forty different kinds. I think I could enumerate forty.

Q. If a man would come to you and want to buy plain white paper, would you know what the man wanted without interrogating him?—A. I would ask him what kind of plain white paper he wanted.

Q. What is plain white paper?—A. There are different kinds of that. There is plain white newspaper, plain white book paper, plain white tub size, and plain white writing paper, and I could enumerate many more.

Q. Is that paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed, plain white paper?—A. It is plain white plate paper.

Q. Is not that as equally plain white paper as the book paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed?—A. I would call that Democratic ticket white book paper, and this Republican ticket I would call white plate paper.

Q. And print paper you would call plain white print paper?—A. I would say white print. I don't know as I would use the word plain.

Q. If one is plain white paper the other is plain white paper equally.—A. Well, yes; I don't know but it is.

Q. What is it that makes plain white paper; what is plain white paper?—A. You can make plain white paper out of a good many things; you can make it out of wood and rags.

Q. That Republican ticket is printed on paper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is plain white, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if the Democratic ticket, which is printed on plain white book paper is plain white paper, the Republican ticket which you say is printed on plain white plate paper is equally plain white paper, is it not?—A. I would call it white paper, or white plate paper.

Q. You would call the other white book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If that is plain white paper the other is plain white paper, is it not? There is no difference between them, is there?—A. There is no difference in the color, there is a difference known to us paper men, this is blue white and the Republican is toned white.

Q, The Democratic ticket is not plain white paper then?—A. Yes, sir; it is what you would call, or the world would call, plain white.

Q. It is what is known as plain white paper in the trade?—A. Yes, sir; if a man would want plain white paper we would sell him that; but sometimes we get it a little blue or a little yellow, according to the water.

Q. I will ask you if that plate paper you speak of, upon which the Republican ticket is printed, is not frequently used for book purposes?—A. In a fine job.

Q. Is that what is known as plate paper in the East?—A. It is what they call lithographic plate.

Q. Has it that finish on that plate paper has?—A. Well, steel-plate paper is finished differently from this; steel-plate paper is finished more on one side; it is finished so purposely.

Q. You say you are selling that paper in the trade all the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if the same mill that makes that plate paper does not also make the book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your mill makes the book paper like that, as well as plate paper like that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What difference is there between that paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed, and the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. One is what we call common 2 book, and the other is what we call extra fine plate paper; that is the only way I can answer that.

Q. Extra fine plate?—A. Western plate; yes, sir.

Q. Are not both papers made the same way?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are they not made the same way except as to the finish?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is the difference?—A. On the plate paper we take more time to beat it up. It takes 6 or 8 hours more beating, and we are more particular in making the paper, where with the other grade of paper we let it run just as it will. We watch this plate paper to see that each sheet is the same thickness, so that it will run in the lithographic press all right. With a printer it does not make so much difference.

Q. You would have to observe the same rule in making book paper?—A. Yes, sir; we make a better grade of 2 book than that. We put in the same stock in one as the other, but we take ten hours more in beating the stock, and we take 6 to 8 hours longer in finishing the stock.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Is there any other mill than yours that manufactures this lithographic plate and print paper—book paper, I mean—any other mill than yours in the United States that manufactures both kinds, that you know of?—A. Yes, sir; they pretend to make it. They do not make much of a success of it.

Q. Do you know of any mill that manufactures plate paper that also manufactures print paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Does your mill?—A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if this material, upon which the Republican ticket was printed, was not paper, and you said it was. If a white card-board, a quarter of an inch thick, were shown you, and you were asked what it was, what would be your answer? Would you call it paper, or would you not, in the sense in which Mr. Peelle asked the question as to this lithographic plate?—A. If a man would hand me card-board, I would say it was card-board.

Q. Would it not be paper?—A. It is made out of about the same material.

Q. And if it is white it would be white paper, would it not?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You would not call it white paper in the trade, if it was card-board?—A. No, sir; you take the same material that makes fine writing paper, and that makes card-board.

Q. You would not call card-board, if it is white, plain white paper. You would call it card-board.—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. In the same sense in which you answer that question, you would call this lithographic plate, paper, if it was plain white lithographic plate, wouldn't you?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you if pasteboard is ever called paper in the trade?—A. Pasteboard and card-board are different things.

Q. I mean card-board?—A. No, sir.

Q. Plate paper is?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or book paper?—A. If a man asks for card-board, we would give him card-board.

Q. He would not say card-board paper, he would simply say card-board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And book paper, book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. When they call for lithographic plate, do they call for lithographic-plate paper usually, or lithographic plate?—A. If I would go into Mr. Burfords—he is in the paper business—he would say he wanted book paper, and I would show him book paper, and he might say he simply wanted S. & S. C. paper. He might not say book paper at all.

Q. Do you call lithographic plate in your business, lithographic plate; what is the technical name for it? Don't they call for lithographic plate when they ask for that paper?—A. Generally, I should say. I think our catalogue reads on that kind of paper, if I am not mistaken, Woodsdale paper. It is made at the Woodsdale Mill. I think the catalogue reads, "Woodsdale plate." But on another line, for instance, Tardsdale & Hollingsworth make for business cards, &c, we call that plate paper. We might just say Woodsdale plate. I am not sure.

Q. Do you say you did sell the Journal Company here lithographic plate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you invoice it to them when you sold it to them?—A. If we sold it to them, I would say so and so many reams of Woodsdale plate.

C. B. WING.

F. M. WRIGHT, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Francis M. Wright; age, 36; I live in Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I have lived in this city about thirty years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the seventh day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Were you interested in that election?—A. I was a candidate for prosecuting attorney on the Democratic ticket at that time.

Q. Did you attend the election?—A. I did.

Q. How many precincts, if you recollect, did you go to?—A. I would say, fifty.

Q. You went to a number of precincts?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will call your attention now to the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was voted and used that day by the Republicans.—A. Yes, sir; this is a ticket similar to the one that was voted that day.

Q. Is it on material of the same kind?—A. About the same material.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. DeVay, and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats on that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you observed that day, I will ask you could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, both being folded with the names inside, as they were voted; could you distinguish one from the other?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

Q. Could you tell one from the other?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How could you do it?—A. I have some of these Republican tickets and Democratic tickets at my office that have not been folded and when a voter would come to get hold of the ticket this way [indicating] and grab it up, it would swell out and extend out in a different manner from the Democratic ticket, and when a man would hold it by the end you could see, for instance, that it was not the Democratic ticket. You will notice that they don't "flop" out like the other, and the tickets being clean when they were being folded this way, the letters on the Democratic ticket would show through the back and you could read it from the back, and it would show through one paper and did not show through the other.

Mr. PEELLE. What do you mean by the other?

The WITNESS. I mean the Republican paper.

Q. Were there any persons that would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been on different material or material similar to the Democratic ticket?—A. I would have to answer that question this way: That in the morning about ten o'clock or half past ten I was at one of the precincts in the thirteenth ward and there was a colored man there challenging in behalf of the Republicans, and there were two police officers standing close by. This colored man challenged a man that I was informed by very reliable parties there was a Democrat, and there was not anybody there, no Democrat, to swear in the vote, and after he came away from the polls, as he stepped to one side, I saw his ticket, and he had a Democratic ticket, and there were two or three other parties who had the Democratic ticket in their hands that after this intimidation by the man challenging him—I say intimidation because immediately after he was challenged and good Democrats had vouched for his having a residence in that precinct, that these policemen came up and took the part of this colored man and then other men there, two or three of them, I am not positive which it was—and he turned away and Mr. English sat in his buggy right at the street at that time, within forty steps of where I was at the polls.

Q. I will call your attention to the Republican ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and also I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you now, from the outside of the ticket as to the heading of the Republican ticket, can you see the name through; can you see any distinguishing mark through there?

A. Yes, sir; and I can tell that ticket for Mr. English holding it up there; I can read that from the back as you hold it with the light that way.

Q. Cannot you do that as easily with the Republican ticket as with the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; and I can distinguish the two from the backs, and tell them immediately without looking at the head, although the head distinguishes it right away, where it says "Republican ticket" and "Democratic ticket."

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election?—A. I did not.

Q. You say that Democratic ticket, when folded, the type shows through?—A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. You could see the impress of the type through?—A. Yes, sir. I cannot see the pressure of the type through, but I can read them. I cannot see the pressure of the type on that Democratic ticket, but I can distinguish the tickets apart by seeing their backs as tickets are handed out by parties.

Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I cannot say as to that, one way or the other.

Q. Do you know of anybody who was misled or deceived in voting, in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were candidate for prosecuting attorney on the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you spoke about going to fifty precincts; you drove around in a buggy, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was with you that day?—A. I don't recollect. I think there must have been several parties at different times. I don't just recollect the names of any one.

Q. And you went to fifty of the fifty-six precincts in the city that day?—A. I think I went to all of them but two or three. I started early in the day.

F. M. WRIGHT.

CHRISTIAN BRINK, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. Christian Brink; 39 years old; residence, 351 South Pennsylvania st., Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indiana?—A. Since 1861.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the day of the Congressional election, November 7th, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.
Q. Did you see the tickets voted there by the Democrats and Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at your precinct.—A. I think that is the same ticket.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats.—A. Yes, sir; that is the same.
Q. Which precinct were you at?—A. 1st precinct, 24th ward.
Q. You voted, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you stay around the polls any?—A. Some.
Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket there that day, as they were being voted folded up and put in the box?—A. Yes, sir; I think I could. Yes, I could tell the difference.
Q. You could tell the difference in the size of it and the thickness?—A. They all noticed it.
Q. What effect would the use of the Republican ticket have upon the secrecy of the ballot? Was it impaired by it?
(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)
A. I should judge so.
Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket on that day at your precinct prevent any one who might be wanting to vote the Democratic from so voting?
(Objected to as leading.)
Q. Do you know of it having that effect, or did it have that effect, if you know, at that precinct or anywhere else?—A. I could tell a little experience I had on that day.
Q. Answer the question in general terms.—A. I do not know whether it did exactly, but I know the way others judged. I know a party that promised me to vote the Democratic ticket, and asked me to paste the Democratic names on the Republican ticket so that it would leave others under the impression that he was voting the Republican ticket, and he thought they could tell the difference in the tickets, and he was accused of voting the Republican ticket when he had promised some one, and when he was going to vote the Democratic ticket, and it was really a ticket of the Republicans that had the Democratic names on it, and I wrote it and fixed it up for him.
Q. Do you know what the politics of that party was?—A. He generally votes the Republican ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I am.
Q. Do you know of anybody who was misled or deceived in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being printed on the kind of paper it was?—A. You mean myself?
Q. Yes, sir; deceived in voting in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. Not individually deceived, but they deceived others. I would answer that so far as the same case I stated. He was accused afterwards of voting the Republican ticket when he had promised to vote the Democratic ticket. I would name the party but I would not like to.
Q. (Question repeated.)—A. No, I think not. I can state in my answer that I think anybody can tell the difference.
Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir.
Q. Even the man that you refer to as having pasted Democratic names on the Republican ticket had theretofore voted the Republican ticket?—A. That used to be his ticket.

CHRISTIAN BRINK.

J. J. BINGHAM, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Joseph J. Bingham; residence, 148 West Maryland st., Indianapolis.
Q. How long have you lived in this State?—A. About 40 years.
Q. Have you held any official position?—A. Yes, sir; I was public printer once a few years ago, and I am deputy auditor of state now.
Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir; I think I was.
Q. At what precinct did you vote?—A. In the 16th ward at the 1st precinct.

Q. Have you had any experience in buying, selling, or handling paper?—A. I was engaged as the manager of a publishing house for 12 or 15 years.

Q. You were engaged in that business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to this ticket headed "Republican ticket," and indorsed on the back Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you what is the material upon which that ticket is printed?—A. It is what is called lithographic plate.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit G to the testimony of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you upon what material that ticket is printed?—A. That is what is called printing paper.

Q. What is the purpose for which lithographic plate is usually used?—A. It is used for illustrations in plates and things of that kind; publication in books. It is used a good deal that way in the publication of books.

Q. Illustrations by way of plates?—A. Yes, sir; that is my knowledge of the use of it so far as I have had any special knowledge of it.

Q. Is it used for printing books upon?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I have never known it to be used; it is not used for that purpose.

Q. Have you ever known tickets to be printed on that material for election purposes?—A. No, sir; I have never known it to be.

Q. Did you attend the polls and observe the vote that day?—A. I was at the polls, but I was not where they were receiving the vote; I was not near enough to that to see the ballots put in the box.

Q. Could you tell or distinguish that Republican ticket, when folded with the names inside, from the Democratic ticket?—A. I should think it would be very easily distinguished; I think I could, standing at the polls and seeing it deposited in the ballot-box.

Q. Is this lithographic plate called book paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it newspaper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it writing paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish this Republican ticket when folded from a ticket printed on plain white writing paper or plain white print paper or plain white book paper of the same size?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. I think I could very easily, for there is a vast difference in the weight of it, and it would show at once in the fold of it.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Is that Republican ticket that you have in your hand paper?—A. Well, it looks like it; it is not what we would call paper.

Q. Is it paper?—A. No, sir; it is not paper.

Q. What is it?—A. It is what they call lithographic plate.

Q. Is it not lithographic plate paper?—A. It is made of the same material as paper. That paper there [indicating] is made of different stock from this. One is made from linen rags.

Q. You say that Republican ticket is not printed on paper?—A. I should not call that paper.

Q. You say that the Democratic ticket is printed on print paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take that ticket and examine it again, and see if you call that print paper.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you the ticket headed "National ticket," and marked as an exhibit to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. What kind of paper is that?—A. That feels like different paper.

Q. What do you understand as plain white paper?—A. Plain white paper is a paper that is used for ordinary purposes of printing, or it might be used probably, owing to the size and calender, &c., and sizing, for writing purposes.

Q. Might it not be used for book purposes?—A. Plain white paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Frequently it is; yes, sir.

Q. You say that Republican ticket is used for illustrations in book-work?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not plain white paper any paper that is not ruled and tinted?—A. It is any paper; of course it is paper.

Q. If that Republican ticket is paper, it is plain white?—A. If it is paper, but I don't call it paper.

Q. If it is paper it is plain white, is it not?—A. Of course it is plain white.

Q. You were not at the polls that day, so as to distinguish one ticket from the other or tell one ticket from the other?—A. No, sir; I was not about the ballot-box, only when I voted myself.

Q. You don't know anything about that?—A. No, sir.

J. J. BINGHAM.

JOHN SCHLEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. Your age and residence?—A. Age, 45; residence, 431 S. New Jersey st., Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. Since 1856.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct?—A. Second precinct of the 21st ward.

Q. In what capacity did you act in that election that day?—A. Challenger.

Q. Did you observe the tickets that were being voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, headed "Republican ticket" and indorsed as Exhibit F to the deposition of Mr. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Republicans that day?—A. From the general appearance I think that is the same ticket.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit G to the deposition of Mr. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. Could you distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket on that day at your precinct, both tickets being folded in the way in which they are ordinarily voted?

Q. Could you distinguish or tell which was which?—A. I could. I could tell nearly every ticket that came to the box.

Q. How could you tell that Republican ticket?—A. By its different appearance from the other.

Q. What was that difference?—A. It was in the weight of the paper and the quality of the paper it was on.

Q. You say you did tell the difference then?—A. I did; and could tell the difference between every one of them.

Q. Did you see the National ticket voted that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "National ticket" and marked as an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Nationals?—A. My impression is that the Nationals had two different styles of tickets that day, and this is one of them. There were very few votes cast down there by the Nationals at any rate.

Q. Do you know what kind of material that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. It is an unusual quality of stock used in printing. It is not a book paper, strictly speaking, and I hardly consider it a card-board. It is too thin for card-board and too thick for book paper for general use.

Q. What effect, if any, did the use of that Republican ticket have upon the secrecy of the ballot at that precinct that day?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. I think it had the effect of destroying the secrecy.

Q. Have you had any experience in buying or selling or dealing in paper?—A. Not especially in buying and selling paper, but I have been engaged in the printing business about thirty years.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. A Democrat.

Q. Do you know of any one who was misled or deceived in voting at your precinct in consequence of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. No, sir; not of my personal knowledge.

Q. Do you know of any one who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say that Republican ticket is printed on an unusual kind of paper?—A. For the general use of the trade; yes, sir.

Q. It is paper, is it not?—A. I would not hardly consider it was paper.

Q. It is not card-board?—A. That is hardly card-board.

Q. It is too light for card-board?—A. Yes, sir, it is too light, almost.

Q. Have you not frequently seen or known that kind of paper to be used for book-work?—A. I cannot say that I have. That quality of paper might possibly be used for heavy county blanks, and blank-books, and such as that.

Q. I mean in printing books.—A. I do not remember of having seen that kind of paper. That is generally used for engraving, for plate printing—to print plates that go into books, picture cuts, and things of that kind that require heavier paper and finer ink.

Q. It would go into book-work in that way, would it not?—A. That would be the only way it would go into it.

Q. That Republican ticket, being on heavier paper than the Democratic, enables you to challenge Republican votes very readily, don't it?—A. I was not there for the purpose of challenging Republican votes particularly; I was there to challenge illegal votes.

Q. You could readily tell, could you not, to make challenges?—A. If I was so disposed.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last fall?—A. I did not, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you ever know election tickets to be printed on material of the character that the Republican ticket is printed on in this State before?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. No, sir; I have no recollection of having seen any like that.

Q. Were the Republican tickets used at your precinct on that material that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many votes were cast there?—A. No, really I do not know the exact number of votes cast.

Q. Was the majority Republican or Democratic?—A. In that precinct the majority was Democratic. That is my recollection of it. I think I would be safe in saying that there was a small Democratic majority in that precinct.

JOHN SCHLEY.

JOHN EDWARDS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. 36 years of age; 239 South Alabama street, Indianapolis, Marion Co., Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. I have been living here ten years that I know of.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.

Q. At what precinct?—A. At the 18th ward, on South street, at the hook and ladder.

Q. Did you vote?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you act in any capacity on that day at that election at that precinct, and, if so, state what?—A. I took the challenger's book there when he went to dinner—about two hours.

Q. Democratic challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the Democrats and Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to Mr. Brown's deposition, and I will ask you if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that day at that precinct?—A. Some of these tickets were used and some were not. Some were heavier than this and some were thinner, and some were about this thick.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket, marked Exhibit G, to Mr. Brown's deposition, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, that is about the ticket.

Q. It was on material like that?—A. Yes, sir; just about like that.

Q. I will ask you, whilst challenging there did you and could you tell and distinguish the difference between that Democratic ticket and that Republican ticket, both being folded as they are when voters ordinarily vote them and as they were handed to the inspector and placed in the box?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir; the Republican ticket was the heavier ticket when folded, and you could see through and read the words "Republican ticket" when it was folded.

Q. Could you tell by its weight and feeling?—A. Yes, sir; you could see the big words "Republican Ticket" clear through it.

Q. Do you know whether any one was prevented from voting the Democratic ticket by the use, on the part of the Republicans, of the ticket that was used by them at your precinct?—A. No, not to my knowledge.

Q. You were there all day?—A. No, sir; I was there about two hours. Mr. English called me away to go around the polls in the forenoon, and I was there only about two hours.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Bill-poster.

Q. You are employed by Mr. English in posting bills for his theater, are you?—A. No, sir; I have not posted a bill for Mr. English since he had his theater.

Q. Do you know of anybody that would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. No; I do not.

JOHN EDWARDS.

By consent of both parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Friday, Oct. 19, 1883, at 2 p. m.

FRIDAY, October 19, 1883—2 p. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

EDWARD MILL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Edward Mill; residence, Cleveland, Ohio; age, 41.

Q. What is your occupation, and how long have you been engaged in that occupation?—A. I am superintendent of the Cleveland Paper Co. I have been connected with this same concern 25 years.

Q. To what extent have you been engaged in this business?—A. The manufacture, sale, and purchase. The yearly business at the present time will run from $1,000,000 to $1,200,000.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. I also call your attention to the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," marked as Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown. Now, I will ask you, is that Republican ticket shown to you plain white print paper?

(Objected to as leading and conclusion of law.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Is it plain white writing paper?

(Objected to as leading and a conclusion of law.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Is that Republican ticket plain white book paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the material on which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. I should call that a plate paper, such as is used by photographers, for printing show bills, and such as we make for that purpose.

Q. Do you buy or sell the material upon which that Republican ticket is gotten up as print paper, writing paper, or book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. We sell it as plate paper.

Q. If a man were to come to your establishment and ask to buy plain white paper, would you show him such material as that Republican ticket is gotten up upon?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What is that material called in the printed catalogue issued by your establishment?

(Objection, as immaterial, and for the reason that there is no evidence that there is a printed catalogue.)

A. Plate.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plain white print paper, size of sheets 25 by 38 inches?—A. From 30 to 35 pounds.

Q. What is the material upon which that Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. I should term that an extra quality of print or a cheap book.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of that paper, sheets 25 by 38 inches?—A. As near as I can judge, from this small piece, I should think it would weigh 40 pounds or a trifle over.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of plate, such as that Republican ticket is printed on, sheets 25 by 38?—A. Ninety to one hundred pounds to the ream.

Q. What was the wholesale price per ream of that plate, sheets 25 by 38 inches, November, 1882, if you know?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Ten dollars; about that, as near as I could tell.

Q. What was the price per ream at wholesale of the paper upon which that Democratic ticket is printed, sheets 25 by 38 inches, November, 1882?—A. Three dollars a ream, the same size.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. When did you come to this city?—A. This morning.

Q. At whose instance did you come?—A. W. O. DeVay.

Q. What did he tell you he wanted with you?—A. He wanted to see me on important business on my way home from Chicago. I was in Chicago yesterday.

Q. Did he tell you what the business was when you got here; and, if so, what was it?—A. He wanted I should examine some papers as an expert.

Q. Did he state to you what interest he had in the matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. He wanted you to appear as a witness in this election contest case, did he?—A. I don't know.

Q. What purpose did he want you to examine the paper for as an expert? If you know you can state.

(Objected to on the ground that a statement made by Mr. DeVay on that subject is not competent evidence.)

A. There was nothing said, any more than he wanted I should examine some paper.

Q. At whose instance did you appear here as a witness?—A. When I came here Mr. DeVay told me the business he wanted me for, and part of the business was that I would come here.

Q. Whose instance did you come up here as a witness at?—A. Mr. English.

Q. Mr. DeVay is connected here in a branch house or business in which the Cleveland Paper Company is interested, is he not?—A. Parties that are interested in the Cleveland Paper Company are also interested in the house in Indianapolis with Mr. DeVay, some of them.

Q. If a customer were to ask you for plain white paper, would you understand what he meant, unless he designated it as print, book, or plate paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is not that Republican ticket that you have in your hand printed on paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not the color plain white?—A. No, sir; it is what we call toned paper.

Q. Is not toned paper white?—A. No, sir.

Q. What color is toned paper?—A. Bordering on a buff tint.

Q. What is the color of the paper upon which that Democratic ticket you have in your hand is printed on?—A. That is white; dead white.

Q. Why did you pick up the Republican ticket just now, and compare it with the Democratic ticket before you answered the question as to the color of that Democratic ticket?—A. In order to make a correct answer.

Q. Are you selling paper either from your Cleveland house direct, or from the house here with which Mr. DeVay is connected, or otherwise to Mr. English for any purpose?—A. No, sir; I have no knowledge of it. I know of no sales made to Mr. English.

Q. With whom did you talk about these tickets or this paper other than Mr. DeVay before you came in here as a witness?—A. I saw Mr. English and Mr. Wilson this morning.

Q. Had you any bet on the result of the Congressional election in this district last November?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who compose the firm or stockholders of the Cleveland Paper Company?—A. I could not give the names of all of them—the entire list of them. I could give you the names of those holding the majority of the stock. There are thirty or forty stockholders, and it is a stock company of $300,000.

Q. You may give the names of the principal ones.—A. N. W. Taylor, H. S. Whittlesey, Mrs. Doctor Marrow, J. W. Brighton, Edward Mill, and a Mr. Clark. I could not give you his first name.

Q. Are you a stockholder in the company or an officer?—A. Both.

Q. You speak about that Democratic ticket being dead white in color. I will ask you if that is what is known in the trade as plain white?—A. Yes, sir; if it is not printed on.

Q. Explain the difference in color of plain white paper.—A. The difference in white paper is caused by the amount of bluing put in the same n its manufacture.

Q. State the difference accurately and particularly as to the color of those Republican and Democratic tickets.—A. The Republican ticket is about the natural color of the stock, with little or no bluing in it. It is what we term "toned." The color of the Democratic ticket is whiter, and is brought about by adding bluing.

Q. Are there not different shades of white—paper known in the trade as plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you again if the shade of white represented by that Republican ticket is not known in the trade as plain white, the same as the paper represented by the Democratic ticket; and, if not, state why, fully and particularly.—A. No; the Republican ticket is what we should term "toned," bordering on a buff. The Democratic ticket we should call white, the difference which can be readily seen by looking through both.

Q. What is the process of "toning" paper as refers to the color?—A. "Tone" is known amongst paper manufacturers as the color bordering on a buff. The process of getting a toned paper would be to leave out the bluing.

Re-examination:

Q. Can you make plain white paper without the use of bluing?—A. No, sir.

Q. What are your politics?—A. First class Republican.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. English's son, or father, or write to either or receive any communication from either or talk with either before to-day?—A. No, sir; I never have seen Mr. English, jr., until this examination.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Why do you use the term "first class Republican"?—A. Because I feel interested in politics and have worked heartily with the Republican party ever since the election of Abraham Lincoln the first time.

EDWARD MILL..

ESADORE DEITCH, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. Esadore Deitch; I am 49 years old; I live at 241 N. West st.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. Ten years.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Ten years.

Q. You say you were here on the day of the election; did you attend that election?—A. I was precinct committeeman.

Q. For what party?—A. The Democratic party.

Q. Were you there most of the time during the day?—A. I was there until I was arrested.

Q. Did you see the Republican and Democratic tickets voted that day?—A. I did, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was voted there that day by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket that was voted by the Republican party.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit G, to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats there that day?—A. Yes, sir; that was the ticket that was voted by the Democratic party.

Q. Could you, whilst looking on there, watching the vote, as you say you did, could you tell that Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How could you tell, or distinguish the Republican ticket?—A. When they folded the ticket the Republican ticket showed twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket always.

Q. If one of those Republican tickets were folded and another one folded and placed inside, and the two dropped in the box, would they be apt to stay together, or would they be apt to spring apart?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent, for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets were so voted.)

A. They would spring open.

Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket at your precinct impair, or effect in any way the secrecy of the ballot or the secrecy of voting?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you if the use of that Republican ticket, at your precinct, prevented any one from voting the Democratic ticket that wanted to vote the Democratic ticket?—A. It did.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who?—A. Some colored men.

Q. What are their names?—A. I don't know exactly that I can recollect now what their names are. Out of 100 colored men, I don't know one's name.

Q. How do you know it prevented them from voting?—A. I believe it done it—with me.

Q. How do you know it prevented them from voting?—A. It prevented them this way. They went up to the chute with the Democratic ticket I had given them, and they were challenged, and they turned around and came out, and afterwards took a Republican ticket and went up there and voted.

Q. You had given them Democratic tickets, had you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many did you give Democratic tickets to up there?—A. Oh, I expect there was not less than 30 or 40.

Q. That you gave Democratic tickets to?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. In the first precinct of the 13th ward.

Q. You gave as many as 30 or 40 Democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the politics of those colored men?—A. I did not ask them any further questions. I just asked them to vote the Democratic ticket, and they agreed that they would; but some of them would not take the Democratic ticket, and said "we darsent go up to the chute and vote for fear the Republicans would know it." They would know by the appearance of the ticket it was not one of the Republican tickets.

Q. Do you know of a colored man that voted the Democratic ticket that you gave him that day?—A. I don't know any colored men voting tickets that I gave them.

Q. You say you gave about 30?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of that number voted the Democratic ticket?—A. That is more than I can tell you.

Q. How many? You know.—A. No, I don't. I cannot tell you now.

Q. Do you know of any one of them that did not vote it when you gave it to them?—A. I told you exactly how it was. I don't know whether any of them got any of them in or not.

Q. You don't know whether any of them got in or not?—A. Whether they got the Democratic ticket in. I know they came and handed the ticket to the inspector, Mr. Chandler, and when a colored man would hand him the ticket Mr. Chandler held the ticket so the Republican challenger outside could see that it was a Democratic ticket and they challenged their votes.

Q. Did they vote?—A. Some of them voted afterwards that I seen.

Q. Did not every one of those men that were challenged vote at that precinct?—A. That is more than I can tell you.

Q. Do you know of a single man that did not get to vote at that precinct, that was challenged?—A. I expect they all voted afterwards. I don't know whether they all did or not. Some of them I know voted afterwards, and voted the Republican ticket. I was arrested and taken away from there for about three hours, and during that time Mr. Republican party got their dirty work in.

Q. What work do you refer to?—A. Got in votes that would otherwise have gone Democratic or was illegal.

Q. How do you know, if you were not there?—A. From what I could learn.

Q. Can you give the name of any man that voted there that was not entitled to vote?—A. I cannot give them, but there is another man that was down there who will give it.

Q. What is his name?—A. Mr. Hall.

Q. What is his first name?—A. I do not know what his first name is.

Q. You don't know of a single man that was challenged that day but what got his vote in?—A. I don't know about that.

Q. You don't know of a single illegal vote that was polled there that day, do you?—A. I don't know; but that gentleman knows.

Q. I am asking you, what you know?—A. I don't know whether there was any while I was away. I believe I was taken away just for that purpose. They arrested me there twice just for the purpose of getting their dirty work in that day.

Q. State what you were arrested for that day?—A. They charged me with trying to bribe a nigger with $5 to vote the Democratic ticket.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You said you were arrested twice?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was you arrested for the second time?—A. They accused me of trying to give some whisky away.

Q. State the circumstances of that arrest, please.—A. Mr. Ben. Thornton, the Republican policeman, and three other men, went to my house unbeknowns to me, and knocked at the door and called my wife, and my wife came to the door, and they says, "Mr. Deitch sent me to get some whisky," and my wife says, "we have no whisky on the place except what little whisky I have in the house for our own use;" says he, "you won't refuse us, Mr. Deitch sent us."

(Objection to the testimony as hearsay, and motion that it be stricken from the record.)

Q. State when you were arrested the second time.—A. I was arrested the second time about half-past two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. What did they do with you?—A. Took me up to the station-house.

Q. What did they do with you there?—A. I gave bail for my appearance before the mayor the next morning.

Q. Who bailed you?—A. Mr. Seidensticker.

Q. Did you appear before the mayor the next morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was done?—A. It was ruled out of court—no evidence there against me.

Q. The first time you were arrested where were you taken?—A. To the station-house first.

Q. Who bailed you out?—A. Mr. William E. English—young Mr. English. I was taken from there to the marshal's office—the United States marshal's office—and there Mr. English bailed me out again under the bail of $1,000.

Q. You went back to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long were you back there the first time before they arrested you the second time?—A. I reckon about an hour and a half.
Q. Did the same man arrest you again that arrested you the first time?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it Ben. Thornton?—A. Yes, sir; the colored man.
Q. Was he the policeman?—A. Sometimes he acted as policeman and sometimes he had his badge off and acted as challenger.
Q. He was a member of the police force was he, at that time?—A. Yes, sir; he was a member of the police force.
Q. Did you appear in the United States court under that arrest afterwards?—A. I did, sir.
Q. What was done?
(Objected to for the reason that the record of the court will show.)
A. There was no records made there. It was ruled out of court. They had no charges against me.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you, if on that day, you had any money to use at the election?—A. I had not, to influence votes.
Q. None whatever?—A. I had no money to use.
Q. You say you used no money that day at all?—A. I did not spend 5 cents for any votes whatever. I used money to pay for wagons and other legitimate expenses.
Q. You used no money there that day?—A. Not to buy votes.
Q. Did you have any whisky there?—A. None in my possession, sir.
Q. Did you have the control or direction over any?—A. I had not.
Q. How did Mr. English know you were arrested on that day?—A. He just happened to stand there in his buggy when the arrest was made, and Mr. English jumped out of his buggy and came running to me, and says: "You go ahead up there, I will be there before you will, and bail you out."
Q. What was the result in that precinct?—A. The result of the precinct, I think, was two hundred and some forty-odd Republican votes given there that day, and their majority larger than usual.
Q. Do you know what the majority had been theretofore?—A. I cannot say exactly.
Q. Who did you say it was went with Ben. Thornton, or do you know that he went there, except from hearsay?—A. He told me so himself.
Q. Who did he say went with him?—A. I don't know; I did not ask him who it was. He told me himself, and he said: "I was there at your house—me and three other men;" and he said "We got some whisky and cigars."
Q. Did he mention who it was went with him?—A. No, sir; he didn't tell me the name. I told you that Mr. Ben. Thornton and three other men went to my house and deceived my wife to give them some whisky and cigars, when I did not send them there, or know anything about it.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am in the buggy and carriage trade.
Q. You were the Democratic committeeman for that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did I understand you to say how many votes were lost there that day, at that precinct, by virtue of the use of that Republican ticket, to the Democrats?
Mr. PEELLE. He did not state.
The WITNESS. I did not state. I could not state. I just stated that the majority in that precinct was larger for the Republicans that day than usual.
Q. Do you know what caused that?—A. It was through "bulldozing." They got in lots of work while they arrested me, and they got work in some other way. They arrested me for that purpose—to keep me away from there. I was too hot on it and watched them too close.
Q. How many working Democrats were there at that precinct, working or looking on?—A. There were four challengers and myself.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Four Democratic challengers?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the vote up there in that precinct for Congress—how many votes did Mr. English get in that precinct for Congress?—A. Ninety-eight or ninety-nine; I forget now which.
Q. What majority was the vote polled there for Mr. Peelle over Mr. English?—A. That is more than I can tell you now.
Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that Mr. English ran far ahead of his ticket in that precinct?—A. I don't think he did. I can't tell you for sure.
Q. You don't remember his vote there?—A. I remember that they said he had either 98 or 99 votes when the polls closed. I put other parties in to watch the count.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was Mr. English's vote there along with the ticket, or ahead of the Democratic ticket, or was it about the same?—A. It was about the same, I think. I don't think he ran any ahead at all.

Q. Mr. Peelle, was he ahead, or along with his ticket at that precinct?—A. I cannot tell you exactly. I cannot answer that question now. Anything I don't know I don't want to answer.

E. DEITCH.

HIRAM W. MILLER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, att'y for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Hiram W. Miller; I am lacking a little of 39; my residence, Wayne Township, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. How long resided there?—A. I was born and raised there.

Q. Have you ever held any official position; if so, what?—A. I have; I was trustee of Wayne Township for four years.

Q. Did you attend and vote at the election held on November 7th, 1882, in that township for Congress and other offices; and, if so, where?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct?—A. It is a new precinct—precinct No. 4—Wayne Township.

Q. In what capacity, if any, did you act at that election at that precinct on that day?—A. I did not really act in any capacity, anything further than I had the poll-book of the precinct probably two-thirds of the day. Sometimes I would hand it over to another party.

Q. That was the Democratic poll-book?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted at that election at that precinct?—A. I did.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was used and voted by the Republicans in your precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Democratic ticket," and ask you if the Democrats voted that ticket at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket from other tickets voted that day, all of said tickets being folded with the names inside?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. Did you so tell one from the other as they were being voted?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever before know election tickets to be printed on such material as that Republican ticket is printed upon?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket on that material impair the secrecy of the ballot at your precinct at that election?

(Objected to as conclusion of law.)

A. I think it did.

Q. Did its use prevent persons voting the Democratic ticket at your precinct who would have voted it if they could have voted their sentiments without it being known by the use of said Republican ticket how they voted?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial and leading.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it did.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. Democrat.

Q, Was there any complaint made there on the day of the election to the board in reference to these Republican tickets by any one? And, if so, state who they were.—A. No. sir; I do not think there was.

Q. Were they counted without objection, so far as you know?—A. Yes, sir; they were counted.

Q. Do you know of anybody who would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper the Democratic ticket was printed on? And, if so, state who they were.—A. I do not know exactly. I do not believe I do.

Q. You have been standing at the precinct there before, have you not, at election times?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never stood there before?—A. No, sir. The precinct never was there before.

Q. You have been standing there in that township at its precincts before that on election days?—A. Not very much. For four years I was trustee, and, of course, I was on the election board.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did the use of the Republican ticket at your precinct prevent any person from voting his sentiments, if you know?—A. I think I answered that once before.

Q. What is the answer?—A. I answered that I believed it did, and Mr. Peelle wanted to know who, and I told him the paupers from the county farm.

Q. Did it affect the votes of any number of persons?—A. There was quite a number from that place that voted.

Q. Do you know what their politics were?—A. I think I do.

Q. What were they?—A. I think two-thirds of them were Democrats.

Q. How do you know that?—A. Well, sir, they had voted for me, and I claim to be a Democrat.

Q. How did they vote on that day?—A. They voted the Republican ticket.

Q. I mean on November 7th, 1882?—A. They voted the Republican ticket.

Q. How many of such votes were there?—A. I polled the house, and I made it 50 or 51; something like that. There was 57 voted that day—paupers and seven employés.

Q. I understood you to say that any one voting at that precinct, or any one looking on at that precinct, knew when a man voted the Republican ticket when it went in the ballot-box.—A. Yes, sir; so he could. I will state a little further in counting these tickets, if you want anything else. They counted these tickets by fives, and the inspector could readily pick up a Republican ticket from a Democratic ticket in the box.

Q. Without looking at the face of it?—A. Without opening the tickets.

Q. What were the politics of the officers of the poor-house, if you know?—A. They were Republican.

Q. How did those voters come down from the poor-house to the precinct?—A. They came down in wagons.

Q. Could they have voted the Democratic ticket without it being known by those who had charge of them what ticket they were voting?—A. I think not.

Q. Who had charge of them when they came down?—A. Well, sir, a part of the officers and employés of the farm.

Q. Would two-thirds of those voters in that poor-house have voted the Democratic ticket on that day if they could have voted it without any influence—if they could have voted themselves?—A. That is my impression.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Were they challenged?—A. Yes, sir; part of them were, I think. I challenged several voters myself.

Q. Were they sworn in or did they vote?—A. They were sworn in.

Q. Were they legal voters at that precinct?—A. Well, sir, that is something I am unable to say.

Q. Has there ever been any prosecution on account of the men sworn in?—A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. State the names of anybody that brought those paupers there.—A. Mr. Wright, the superintendent; Mr. Pfaff, the doctor or janitor—I don't know which you might call him; he is probably the doctor of the house—and another one; I do not remember his name.

Q. Anybody else?—A. The engineer that stays there. I could not positively say, but I think his name was Hill, or some such name, or Hilton.

Q. The county asylum is located in Wayne Township?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a candidate for township trustee on the Democratic ticket some years ago?—A. Yes, sir; I was twice; I was elected twice.

Q. You say about two-thirds of those folks voted for you when you were candidate for township trustee?—A. Yes, sir; I think there was more than that.

Q. You polled them at the last election, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did they come to be on that poll-book; you said you polled them and there were 51?—A. I did not take their politics at all.

Q. Did you poll it at all?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what purpose?—A For election purposes. Mr. Wright and his daughter gave me their names.

Q. You had voted them before for you?

Mr. WILSON. He did not say that.

Q. They had voted before for you?—A. I think they had.

Q. And they were polled out there that time by the Democrats for election purposes?—A. Yes, sir; I polled them four days before the election.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When they voted for you was there any difference between the tickets used by the two parties at your precinct?

(Objected to for the reason that the ticket is the best evidence of the fact.)

A. There was not any.
Q. I mean no difference in the ticket.
(Objected to for the reason that the ticket is the best evidence of the fact.)
A. No distinguishing difference.
Q. Under whose control was the poor-house, what party, and what were the politics of the men in control of the poor-house when you were elected?—A. Republicans.
Q. Were they the same men that are now in control?—A. Yes, sir—that is, at one election they were and one they were not. The first election it was under the control of Mr. Larry Logston and at the last or second election they were under the control of Mr. Wright, the same man that controlled them on November 7th, 1882.
Q. How many years ago was that election held there, the first time when you were elected?—A. That was in the spring of 1877, I think.
Q. The second election, what date was that?—A. It was two years later.
Q. 1879 that would be?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know what became of the tickets that was used at those two elections?—A. I cannot state positively, but my recollection is I have some of those tickets.
Q. Will you bring them in?—A. Yes, sir; I can.
Q. Bring them in, the Democratic and Republican.—A. Yes, sir; it is my impression I have them. They were at my house. I am talking about the tickets that were at my house. I think they were at my place, that is, the township ticket.
Q. Those that were put in the box?—A. Yes, sir; the township tickets, those that were put in the box. They were turned over to me as township trustee.

H. W. MILLER.

JOSEPH H. SHEPARD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. I am 40 years old; I live in Marion County, Indiana, in the city of Indianapolis, at No. 95 Minerva street.
Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Twelve years.
Q. Did you attend and vote at the election held November 7, 1882, in this city, for Congress and other officers?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Whereabouts—what precinct?—A. I voted in the first precinct of the 14th ward, and, being ward committeeman I attended the second precinct that day. I voted in the first precinct.
Q. You attended that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what capacity were you there?—A. A kind of general manager in the capacity of county committeeman about the polls.
Q. Did you observe the tickets that were used there that day by Democrats and Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you is that the ticket voted by the Democrats that day.—A. To the best of my knowledge it is; yes, sir.
Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans that day at that precinct.—A. Yes, sir; as near as I can recollect.
Q. Did you see those tickets put in the box, any of them?—A. Oh, yes, sir.
Q. Could you, whilst they were going in the ballot-box and whilst looking at them, tell the difference between the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. How could you do that?—A. By getting up close to the voter and, as the inspector held out his hand to take the vote, I could tell whether he was voting Republican or Democratic ticket, by the ticket being stiff.
Q. You mean the Republican ticket being stiff?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever before know election tickets to be printed on such material as that Republican ticket is printed on?
(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)
A. I do not know as I ever did.
Q. Did the use of that Republican ticket impair the secrecy of the ballot at your precinct at that election?
(Objected to as leading and a conclusion of law.)
Q. Did its use prevent persons voting the Democratic ticket at that precinct who would have voted if they could have voted their sentiments without it being known by the use of the Republican ticket?—A. Their sentiments I cannot say, but I know that ticket prevented their voting the Democratic ticket, and they were challenged on one side; if they did not have that kind of a ticket they were challenged, and if they had that ticket in their hands they were permitted to vote.
Q. You mean by "that ticket" the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir. They could vote right straight along and not be challenged.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Was there anybody challenged that day that did not get their vote in?—A. Yes, sir. I cannot call them by name now; there was several. There were some challenged in the morning that had the Democratic ticket in their hands, and in the afternoon they voted.

Q. Who was it?—A. I cannot call their names.

Q. Were they entitled to vote there?—A. They certainly must have been.

Q. You know whether they were or not?—A. I cannot say. The parties that challenged them in the forenoon let them vote in the afternoon without challenge.

Q. What is your impression; were they legal voters or not?—A. I judged them to be legal voters.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom?—A. By Joseph Shepard, myself.

Q. By you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the tickets counted without objection?—A. I believe not; but not being on the inside, there was an objection made; but I was not on the inside; I was outside.

Q. You do not know about that?—A. No, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How did they vote in the afternoon, those persons that were challenged in the morning?—A. They voted a stiff ticket.

Q. What official position do you hold?—A. I am councilman. I qualified the other day as councilman of the 14th ward, and had been previously councilman for one year from the same ward.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. How do you know those men that were challenged in the forenoon voted a stiff ticket in the afternoon?—A. By observing that they did.

Q. Did you have Democratic challengers there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they challenge them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then they were legal voters there in the judgment of your challenger?—A. They certainly must have been.

Q. Do you know what their politics were?—A. I do not know. I know they made an attempt to vote the Democratic ticket in the morning by seeing it and they were challenged, and in the afternoon they voted the Republican ticket.

Q. You do not know what their politics were?—A. No, sir; I cannot say.

Mr. WILSON. Were they black or white?

The WITNESS. They were black and white.

J. H. SHEPPARD.

MORITZ POSNER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. My age was 44 the 4th of last December, and I live 172 Indiana avenue, this city.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I will be in that place 13 years the 2d of February, in that same square where I do business at present, and I have been here before, but I went back to New York.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis the 7th of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. No; well I gave my vote. I do not know what you call attendance. I understand you 1872; Yes, I did.

Q. You attended that November election, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there?—A. Nothing at all.

Q. Were you there that night when the count was made?—A. I was there because they wanted me up inside by counting the tickets.

Q. Then you were watcher?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there that day?—A. No. I cannot tell nothing about that. I did not go close to the polls where they put the tickets into them.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted after they were voted?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked "Exhibit F," to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket the Republicans voted or that was taken out of the box to be counted?—A. That is the Republican ticket. That is the stiff ticket.

Q. I will ask you if this ticket—you say you counted them out of the box—of the Democrats, marked Exhibit G, to the deposition of Mr. Brown, is the ticket used by the Democrats on that day at your precinct?—A. That is the Democratic ticket. That will not spring. I saw them taken out of the box.

Q. I will ask you if you could tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket without looking at the names while they were folded there?—A. All I can tell you is this: I will just come plain out and tell you the whole thing how it was, because I am not a judge in court matters, and if you will let me talk clear through I will tell you the whole of it at once, and it will not take five minutes. First, I have been called in that night to watch the counting of the tickets. I asked Mr. Tom Chandler, he was sitting by the window, and I took my chair next to him; and the box was standing at this side and the front, and some one, I do not know who it was, took a chair, or something, and got the key from another man and opened the box, and run his hand in and shoveled kind of up the tickets. That was the commencement, and he says, "Move a little, I haven't got room enough," and I says, "I don't know, Mr. Chandler, you have room enough to sit here." Mr. Bunts was sitting on the other side, and then they commenced to count, and Mr. Tom Chandler he took the tickets out and called out, and I was a little astonished that he took the stiff paper out and counted it first. All the Republican tickets and the balance was kind of looked like scratched out here, and some Republican tickets also scratched, and the balance of it there was Democratic tickets, and what is the reason to open the box and not take out one ticket like another, and let it run clear through?

Q. Did he count those tickets without looking at the face of them; pick up Republican tickets one after another?—A. Why, no, sir; he really took the stiff papers out. You must know that is the Republican ticket, because all the Republican votes came out first, and that is the idea what it looks so strange to me.

Q. Could you tell the Republican ticket?—A. After he took the first, second, third, and fourth, going on to one hundred, and I saw all the stiff and as soon as that was through I saw the limber ticket come out and I knew that it must be the Republican ticket out first because I did not see any Democratic ticket come.

Q. Did he take them out without looking?—A. Yes sir. He took them out without looking. He never opened the ticket. He took them out and opened them and did call the names out.

Q. How did he count them, one at a time?—A. One at a time, and then he called the names to the secretary; one was Mr. Hovick and the other I don't know.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a Democratic watcher all that night?—A. Yes sir. That is what they called me up for. I did not want to go; they coaxed me

Q. Were those tickets counted without objection?—A. I don't know. I believed Mr. Bunts objected to one or two tickets. I cannot tell exactly. There was some objection to it.

Q. Tickets that were folded together?—A. No, no. I cannot say that.

Q. Were the Republican tickets objected to?—A. There was some objection about it of some kind, or some claim. There was none called.

Q. Was the counting of the Republican tickets there objected to by anybody?—A. No. I believe not.

Q. Did the votes correspond with the tally?—A. I do not know. I cannot tell; it is a matter what I never took any attention to, but I am too green in that business; I did not pay any attention and I do not know anything about it.

MORITZ POSNER.

The further taking of these depositions was by consent of both parties adjourned until Saturday, October 20th, 1882, at two o'clock p. m.

SATURDAY, October 20th, 1883—2 o'clock p. m.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

FLORECE CASEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. Florence Casey; age 31, as near as I can remember; residence, 9 Chadwick street.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. About 11 years.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day that the Congressional election took place?—A. Yes sir.

Q. At what precinct?—A. The first precinct of the 25th ward.

Q. Did you act in any capacity there that day other than simply a voter?—A. Yes, sir. I was in the capacity of clerk of the board.

Q. Were you the Democratic clerk?—A. Yes sir. Intended that way.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted?—A. I did sir.

Q. By the Republicans and Democrats at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to this ticket here, marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, as the Democratic ticket, and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Democrats at your precinct on that day at that election?—A. I think it was, sir.

Q. I now call your attention to this ticket, marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you was that the ticket voted by the Republicans that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you to say you saw those tickets voted there?—A. Yes, sir. I saw the tickets voted there.

Q. State whether or not you observed the tickets whilst they were being voted; and if so, whether you could tell one from the other—the Republican from the Democratic.—Yes, sir, you could; I think you could. The Republican ticket was larger; it was of a bigger bulk. It was thicker paper by a great deal.

Q. Did you, in fact, tell one from the other—could you whilst looking on when folded as tickets are ordinarily folded?—A. Well, if I could get close to them I could easily tell them if they were folded; perhaps standing a distance away, as much as 10 or 12 feet, I might not tell it.

Q. If the use of that Republican ticket had any effect on the secrecy of the ballot, you can say?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Well, in counting the tickets, after we got through the votes, I saw three or four, I believe it was, of young Will English's slips on the bottom of the ballot-box. I thought they were pasted on the tickets. It showed that was the vote conclusively, but they did not count them. They let them lay in the bottom of the ballot-box after they got through counting the votes.

Q. That is hardly responsive to my question. I will ask you if you tried to see whether a paster would stick to the Republican ticket?—A. No, sir; we did not try that.

Q. You did not?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was your statement as to pasters in the box?—A. There were, I think, three or four—I could not really say. It was about that, so far as I can remember, of Will English's pasters in the bottom of the ballot-box after we got through counting the votes.

Q. You say they were not counted?—A. No, sir. They were not counted for anybody.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were the Democratic clerk there?—Yes, sir.

Q. You don't know who put those pasters you spoke of in the box?—No, sir.

Q. You don't know how they got there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were those Republican tickets counted without objection?—A. The Republican tickets were all counted; yes, sir.

Q. Without objection?—A. Yes, sir.

FLORENCE CASEY.

JOHN P. FRENZEL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. Your name, age, residence, and occupation?—A. John P. Frenzel; age 30; president of the Merchants' National Bank; residence, Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. 29 years.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th of November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the Republicans, Democrats, and Greenbackers or Nationals at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now five (5) tickets, headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you whether or not those tickets were the tickets voted and used by the Republicans on that day at that election in the city?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. Now I make these as a part of the deposition of Mr. Frenzel, and I wish them to be marked, respectively, exhibits one, two, three, four, and five each to the deposition of Mr. Frenzel.

Mr. PEELLE. To which I object as not being the correct ticket voted at that election.

(The tickets will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.)

Q. I now call your attention to two tickets, headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you whether or not those were the tickets voted and used by the Democrats on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I offer those as part of his evidence and ask those to be marked as exhibits Nos. 6 and 7.

(The same will be found attached to the deposition of this witness as part thereof.)

Mr. PEELLE. I object to those tickets on the ground that the ticket has been heretofore introduced in this case, and that they are not the correct ticket voted by the Democrats on that day.

Q. Is that the kind of ticket, or ticket similar to that, or on similar material, that were voted by the Republicans and Democrats on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell those Republican tickets from the Democratic ticket on that election, all of the tickets being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you so distinguish them at the election?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed, if you know? Describe the material.—A. I think it is card-board.

Q. Could you distinguish those Republican tickets from any other tickets of like length and width printed on plain white print paper, plain white book paper, or plain white writing paper, the tickets being folded with the names inside?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you say, or do you know, whether the Republican challengers and inspectors at that election could tell those Republican tickets from the Democratic tickets, the same being folded whilst they were being voted?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that he is not presumed to know whether other people could tell or not.)

A. I believe I could.

Q. Did you ever know election tickets to be printed on the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed before?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the effect of the use of that Republican ticket, if any, on the secrecy of the ballot at that election?

(Objected to as incompetent and leading.)

A. The effect was to destroy the secrecy of the ballot.

Q. Did the use of that Republican ticked or did it not prevent persons from voting the Democratic ticket and for William E. English for Congress who would have voted for him had not the secrecy of the ballot been affected or impaired by the use of that Republican ticket that way?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I think so.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are now a member of the Metropolitan Police Board in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not active in the November election, 1882, in the interest of the Democratic party?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not collect and disburse funds or money in the interest of the Democratic party in 1882?—A. Yés, sir.

Q. Pretty extensively, did you not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you tell about the amount you collected and disbursed?

(Objected to as not legitimate cross-examination.)

A. I am not disposed to do so.

Q. Do you decline to answer?—A. Yes, sir; I, do.

Q. Were you at any precinct during that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct were you at?—A. At the first precinct in the 9th ward, and the second precinct in the 17th ward.

Q. Did you stay there all day, or just backwards and forwards?—A. I was most of the day at the 1st precinct in the 9th ward, and part of it at the 2nd precinct in the 17th ward.

Q. You have never been engaged in the business of manufacturing or selling paper, have you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge whatever as to the kind of paper that Republican ticket is printed on as an expert?—A. Only the knowledge that the handling of a great deal of paper in the kind of business I am engaged in would give me.

Q. You have no knowledge as an expert or paper dealer or manufacturer?—A. Not as manufacturer or dealer; no, sir.

Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election November, 1882?

Mr. WILSON. The question is whether he had any bet on Mr. English on the last November election.

Mr. PEELLE. Certainly

A. No, sir.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you whether you were at present a member of the Metropolitan Police Commission. I will ask you were you in November, 1882?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you become a member of that commission?—A. In April, 1883.

Q. Do you know when that commission was created?—A. You are speaking about the commission?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. The commission was not created in that month. I am speaking about the law.

Q. I am talking about April, 1883?—A. Yes, sir; I did not take the oath of office until April, 1883. Yes, sir; that is right.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That board is composed of two Democrats and one Republican, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Appointed by the State officers, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The State officers are Democrats, are they not?—A. Not all of them.

Q. The majority of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When were they elected?—A. November, 1882.

Q. And when did they go into office, if you know?—A. At different times, for instance, the treasurer went in the first of February.

Q. And the other, when?—A. Some of them before, I think, and a few of them a short time afterwards.

Q. After February?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were at what precinct most of the day?—A. First precinct 9th ward.

Q. You spent most of the day there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you go to the 2nd precinct of the 17th ward?—A. I think it was about half past one. I went there in the afternoon of that day.

Q. Why did you go?—A. I was called there because of some disturbances that were going on there.

Q. Did you go over there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find any trouble there growing out of the use of this Republican ticket; and, if so, what?—A. I found that owing to the Republican ticket being so easily distinguised from the Democratic ticket that when a Democrat went to vote the Republican challenger, and particularly this patrolman, would know that he was voting the Democratic ticket, and immediately when they found that out they would bulldoze and browbeat the man so that he was either afraid to vote or was challenged and left.

Q. How many men were there of that sort, if you know?—A. I think there must have been at least sixty.

Q. Were those 60 Democrats?—A. Yes, sir; I think they were.

Q. What do you mean by patrolman?—A. A member of the police force, called patrolmen.

Q. Was there more than one policeman there?—A. There was one policeman and two captains of police.

Q. Of what politics?—A. Republican.

Q. Do you hold any other office than that which you have named?—A. I am a member of the board of school commissioners of this city.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you now who made those contributions to you for election purposes?

(Objected to as not cross-examination in any sense.)

A. I do not choose to answer that.

Q. I will ask you if the saloon-keepers of this city did not nearly all to a man contribute liberally to the Democratic fund and place it in your hands to dispose of?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of them?—A. No, sir.

Q. None of them at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know to whom they did?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they did or not?

(Objected to as incompetent and not proper cross-examination.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Were there any men at your precinct down there that day that did not vote that were challenged?—A. Yes, sir

Q, Who were they?—A. I do not recollect their names.

Q. Can you give the name of one of them?—A. I cannot now, but I could on Monday. I saw the man again at the last election.

Q. What was his name?—A. I do not remember his name.

Q. You say he was challenged down there; at what precinct in the 17th ward?—A. At the second precinct in the 17th ward.

Q. Was he a voter there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did he live?—A. He lived in the precinct.
Q. Whereabouts?—A. I do not know just where he lived.
Q. How do you know he was a voter in the precinct?—A. Well, I know it from good authority, and from a passing acquaintance with the man himself and his face. I have seen him down there before.
Q. Was there any other man challenged there that day that did not get to vote?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you name him?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know where he lives?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know whether he is a legal voter or not in that precinct?—A. I do not know that.
Q. Do you know of anybody else down there that was challenged that did not get to vote that you know to have been a legal voter in that precinct?—A. No, sir.
Q. Then, in point of fact, you know of but one man who was challenged at that precinct that did not succeed in getting his vote in, and that man you do not know where he lives; is not that true?—A. Of my own acquaintance there was only this one man that I could name that was challenged that did not vote, and I could name him in a few days.
Q. Did you have some one down there to swear in votes that day when men were challenged?—A. We thought we had, but owing to the manner in which the police in that precinct were browbeating, the man was scared off.
Q. Who was that man?—A. His name was Chris. Schoettle.
Q. Did he own any real estate in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where was it?—A. He owned real estate on the corner of Madison avenue and South street.
Q. Did he own real estate in his own name?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And he left, you say?—A. He left part of the time and the greater part of the time he staid there.
Q. The greater part of the time he was there?--A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he go away and come back?—A. Yes.
Q. He was not frightened very much then, was he?—A. Yes, sir; very much.
Q. He staid there, though, notwithstanding he was frightened away, did he?—A. He staid there a good part of the day; yes, sir.
Q. After he was frightened away, as you say, he returned again?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON. He didn't say "frightened away."
The WITNESS. I did not say he was frightened away.
Q. He returned again after he went away?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And remained there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did he decline to swear any vote in which was challenged there that day—any Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was the man he declined to swear in?—A. This particular man I spoke of before, whose name I do not recollect.
Q. Why did he decline to swear him in?—A. Because he was browbeaten and bulldozed by the police.
Q. Was that the only reason that he gave for refusing to swear him in?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it not the fact that the only reason he refused to swear him in was because he did not know he was a voter in that precinct?—A. No, sir.
Q. You say he knew him to be a voter in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And he did not swear him in?—A. No, sir.
Q. He remained there after that?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And swore others in?—A. No, sir.
Q. Did he swear others in after that?—A. No, sir.
Q. You swore in some votes that day at one of the precincts of the 9th ward, did you not?—A. No, sir.
Q. Are you sure you did not swear in anybodies vote there?—A. I am sure.

JOHN LATHER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence?—A. John Lather; 41 years old; 514 North West street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. How long have you lived in the city?—A. About 15 years: I was away three years down South.

Q. Were you in the city at the time of the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct?—A. At the second precinct in the 4th ward.

Q. Did you vote there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any capacity than that of a voter?—A. I only voted and worked around the poll a little.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there by the parties?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Republican ticket" and I will ask you if this kind of a ticket, or one similar to it, was voted by the Republicans that day?—A. I believe that is the ticket.

Q. I call your attention now to the ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted and used by the Democrats that day?—A. I believe that is the ticket. I voted it. I saw the ticket, and talked about them.

Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket voted there that day when folded with the names inside of it from the Democratic ticket folded?—A. I could; yes, sir.

Q. How could you tell or distinguish it?—A. It was more smooth than the Democratic ticket was and shows like card-board more like.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have no knowledge of paper whatever as a manufacturer or dealer in paper?—A. I do not know; I deal a little in paper in my business. I keep a grocery up there.

Q. You do not deal in this kind of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge of it as a dealer or manufacturer?—A. No, sir.

Mr. WILSON. Were you the Democratic candidate for council at this last election?—A. Yes, sir; at this last election.

JOHN LATHER.

J. T. DOWNEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. J. T. Downey, age 43, residence 96 North Alabama street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. How long have you lived in the city of Indianapolis?—A. Since 1869.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. My business is the insurance business.

Q. What official position, if any, do you or have you occupied here in this city?—A. I have been councilman of the 9th ward, but do not hold any position now except I am councilman-elect.

Q. Were you in this city at the election held November 7, 1882, for Congress, and other offices?—A. I was.

Q. Did you see the ticket voted by the Republican party, and Democratic party at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to this ticket marked "Exhibit F" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican Ticket" and I will ask you if that is the kind of ticket that the Republicans voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention now to this ticket marked "Exhibit G" and headed "Democratic Ticket" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election?—A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. Could you tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket voted at that election, both of the tickets being folded with the names inside?—A. Yes, sir; I could very easily distinguish them.

Q. Did you distinguish them on that day?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I did.

Q. Did you tell them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct were you?—A. I was at precinct No. 1, or the western precinct of the 9th ward.

Q. Do you know what kind of material that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. I am not judge of paper enough to say just the kind of material. I noticed the peculiarity of the ticket at once.

Q. Do you know what it is popularly called?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
Q. I did not ask you for the technical name, if you do not know, but I ask you what it is popularly called, if you know?—A. I do not know as I could answer that. I do not know as I could say what it is popularly called. I might say, if it would be in place, that I was splitting my ticket considerably, and it did not matter to me much which ticket I got hold of. Before I saw the Republican ticket, I got hold of a Democratic ticket before I went to the polls, and I wanted my ticket fixed before going to the polls, and it was very well known I used the Democratic ticket, at least it was spoken about afterwards to me, and parties spoke about it afterwards and said Mr. Anderson the inspector knew that I voted the Democratic ticket, that I put in a Democratic ticket, then I very closely noticed the Republican ticket after that to know just why it could be so distinguished from the Democratic ticket, and it was not a matter of importance to me as I was voting for the men, and it did not matter which ticket I had, and I had already the Democratic ticket and voted it.
Q. Did you ever know election tickets to be printed upon material like that upon which that Republican ticket is printed?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. No, sir; I never did. I never saw it before or since.
Q. What sort of material are tickets usually printed on, and have been for the last ten years?
(Objected to as immaterial.)
A. That would be something I would not know. I would not know what the difference might be. When I want work done, I examine paper and know what kind of paper I want, but I do not know the names of the papers.
Q. Could you say what was the effect of the use of the Republican ticket on the secrecy of the ballot at that precinct that you were at?
(Objected to as conclusion of law.)
A. Well, I will say I think it deterred men from using the Democratic ticket that would have used it.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who were they?—A. I do not think of any man now.
Q. Not one?—A. I did at the time, but I have not borne them in my mind.
Q. How many did you know of at the time?—A. I do not know. I know that was the general feeling on the day of the election.
Q. And you cannot name a single one?—A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know of a single man that would have voted differently if the Republican ticket had been printed on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. Just a general impression that they seemed to have.
Q. You were elected to council recently by the Democrats in the 9th ward, were you?—A. I do not know about that. I suppose not. I carried the Republican precinct and lost the Democratic precinct. My name was on the Democratic ticket.
Q. Did you have any bet on the result of the Congressional election last November?—A. None whatever, on that result.

JOHN T. DOWNEY.

SIMEON COY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Simeon Coy, age 35, South Alabama street, Indianapolis, Indiana.
Q. How long have you lived in the city?—A. I have been here since 1863.
Q. Do you or did you ever hold any official position in this city?—A. I am a member of the city government.
Q. Were you in this city on November 7, 1882, at the time of the election for Congressman from this district?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you take any part in that election?—A. I attended my polling place in my precinct. I stayed there all day.
Q. Did you act in any capacity beside that of an ordinary voter?—A. I was a mem- of the central committee. I was central committeeman of that ward.
Q. Did you observe the tickets voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked "Exhibit F" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and I will ask you how does that ticket compare with the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. That was the ticket voted that day.
Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked "Exhibit G" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Democratic Ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket that was used by the Democrats that day in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; that appears to be the ticket that was used that day.

Q. Could you tell that day or distinguish whilst that were being folded and voted with the names inside, one of those tickets from the other?—A. Very readily.

Q. How?—A. For the simple reason it was the thickness of the paper.

Q. Which one?—A. The Republican ticket. The Republican ticket being so thick and heavy you could see as a voter came up very readily the difference between the two tickets.

Q. Do you know what sort of material that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. No, sir. I do not; I am not posted in regard to paper.

Q. Do you know the effect that the use of that ticket had, if any, on the vote at your precinct?—A. I have not the least doubt in the world that it deterred a great many people that would have voted the Democratic ticket from voting that ticket; for instance, men who are employed in factories and one thing and another that are more or less afraid to vote a ticket unless they know how their proprietors are related to it.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Can you give the name of any one who would have voted differently had the Republican ticket been printed upon the same kind of paper the Democratic ticket was printed on?—A. I do not know whether I could just now or not, but perhaps I could at that time.

Q. You do not know of any one?—A. Not at this time.

Q. Do you know the name of any one who was misled or deceived in voting on account of the Republican ticket being on the kind of paper it was?—A. There was one case I know of in particular.

Q. What was his name?—A. His name was Voght, a barber on Virginia avenue.

Q. Do you know of any others?—A. Well, I know very particularly about that.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am in the liquor trade.

Q. You are councilman from the 18th ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Elected by the Democrats?—A. I do not know whether the Democrats elected me or not; I suppose I got some of the Republican voters, as that is a Republican ward.

Q. Do you not know it is a largely Democratic ward?—A. No, sir.

Q. Has it not always gone Democratic?—A. I was the first Democrat ever elected in the ward, by 76, and the rest of the Republican ticket was elected from 76 up to one hundred.

Q. It went Democratic last election?—A. Yes, sir. I was speaking of the first election. The last election it went Democratic.

Q. It is regarded as a pretty reliable Democratic ward, is it not?—A. No, sir. That is the first time it went Democratic. It always went Republican heretofore, and it was considered one hundred Republican on the State ticket.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was it the use of that ticket that prevented that barber there voting, and if so explain how?—A. I get shaved there considerable. [Objected to as hearsay.] I will state while I was getting shaved a morning or two after the election he spoke to me about having intended to vote the Democratic ticket and I asked him if he had voted and he said he had voted the Republican ticket and I said, didn't you vote the Democratic ticket, and he said no he could not; he said there was an officer came down there and inquired if he had been to vote and he told him he had and he says, "I didn't want to vote the Republican ticket, but the officer went up and made an examination and found I had not voted and he came back and I had to go up and I had to vote the Republican ticket." It appears he was let off the stone pile upon the condition he would vote the Republican ticket if they would let him out, and the gentleman is here in the city, at least I saw him the other day.

Q. What do you mean by the "stone pile"?—A. It is a place where city prisoners are sent to work out their fines. It is located in the 18th ward.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is the name?—A. Voght.

Q. Where is he now?—A. Working on the corner barber shop of Delaware and South streets, at the Ray House. At that time he had a barber shop on Virginia avenue.

Q. Do you know how long he had been on the stone pile?—A. Only a few days. I remember of his arrest. He was arrested for fast driving.

Q. What was his politics?—A. He was a Democrat.

Q. How long had he been a Democrat?—A. Well, I could not say that, but I know he had theretofore voted the Democrat ticket.

Q. How do you know he voted the Republican ticket that day?—A. For the simple reason he told me he did.

Q. All you know about it is what he told you?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. The city prison—is that the jail?—A. Prisoners there are taken down from the station-house. A. that time they were taken from the station-house and taken to the stone pile.

SIMEON COY.

CHARLES JOHNSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Charles Johnson, Indianapolis, Indiana, age 35.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Different times for the last ten years.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th day of November, 1882, at the date of the Congressional election and election of other officers?—A. Yes, sir; I was clerk of the election board at the 10th ward.

Q. Did you see the tickets used there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do these tickets, one headed "Republican ticket" and marked "Exhibit F" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and the other headed "Democratic ticket" and marked "Exhibit G" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, compare to the tickets used by the Democrats and Republicans?—A. They are similar to the tickets voted that day.

Q. Are they the same material?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you that day there at the polls tell one of those tickets from the other when they were folded and being voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether others could standing there?—A. I know from what they said.

Q. Do you know how they could?—A. On account of the stiffness of the paper.

Q. The stiffness of the paper; do you mean Republican ticket?—A. Of either. One was limber and the other was stiff. The Republican ticket was stiff, and Arthur L. Wright often mentioned that such a ticket was a Republican ticket and the other was a Democratic ticket.

(Objected to as hearsay.)

Q. What officer was he?—A. He was inspector.

Q. You heard him as inspector make that remark?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go on and state what it was.

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. He expressed his knowledge of knowing what ticket was voted, whether it was a Democratic or Republican ticket.

Q. Did any one around you keep tally of the vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State who.

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. I do not know his name. I think he was a reporter of the News; he had a sheet with him, a tally sheet, and he noted each ticket, and observed very closely and craned his neck every once in a while to see whether it was on stiff paper or limber paper.

Q. As they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he make a tally?—Yes, sir,

Q. Do you know what the result of that tally was?—A. No, sir. Only he seemed to be keeping pace with the vote. That is, he expressed knowledge of the result as it was going on, as the vote was going on.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say he strained his neck in order to ascertain whether it was a Republican or Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; he craned his neck, and he seemed to be energetic about it.

Q. He did not pretend to keep accurate count?—A. Yes, sir; he pretended to.

Q. Did he make any note of the result there?—A. Yes, sir; every once in a while.

Q. Was he there all day?—A. Yes, sir; most of the day.

Q. What was his name?—A. I do not know.

Q. You say he was a reporter of the News?—A. I think he was.

Q. As I understood you, you were the Democratic clerk there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the interset of the Democratic party?—A. Always.

Q. Was there any objection made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I do not know.

Q. Were you there all the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not hear any?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was any objection made to the counting of the Republican tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. None whatever?—A. There was an intimation that I heard that they should not be counted because they were on stiff paper.

Q. Who made that?—A. I think it was Mr. Staub.

Q. Who is he?—A. The Democratic judge.

Q. Did he make any written protest?—A. None that I know of.

Q. Or any formal objection?—A. I do not know how formal it was. I do not think it was written.

Q. A man had to watch pretty close to tell that ticket, one from the other, when they were folded?—A. No, sir; they did not. It was very easily discerned. I could have told them without craning my neck where they were as close to me as where they were to this young man that was keeping an account.

Q. When the tickets were folded as tickets are ordinarily folded when they are voted, and a man comes up the shute to vote, could you tell the difference between them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How?—A. By the stiffness of the paper.

Q. How could you see the stiffness of the paper?—A. And by its form; the form of the printing. We had plenty of daylight.

Q. The tickets were folded?—A. Yes, sir; most of them.

Q. And you could not see when it was folded, could you?—A. Yes, sir; I could. I saw it several times.

Q. Were the tickets universally folded so you could see that head through them?—A. I do not know whether they were universally or not; I think that the tickets I saw were folded.

Q. Could you see through the Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. You could not see through the top of the Democratic ticket when it was folded on much thinner paper?—A. No, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You refer to the heading of the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could not see the name?—A. The form of this head is what I spoke of. It is generally folded so it could be seen.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. There is no difference in the color of those two tickets, Democrat and Republican.—A. No, sir; there was not that day.

Q. So far as color was concerned it was about the same, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you at the polls that day?—A. All day.

Mr. WILSON: When you speak of color you speak of color not as an expert.—A. As a non-expert.

JESSE S. WHITSIT recalled:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. You are the same gentleman who has testified already?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. We called your attention to these tickets when you testified before, didn't we?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you answered as to the power to tell one ticket from another.—A. Yes, sir; I was examined on that.

Q. I will ask you if you know of any one who was prevented from voting his sentiments because of the fact that the Republican ticket was printed on the material it was printed on [objected to as immaterial and incompetent], or in any ways affected so far as his vote was concerned?—A. Well, I cannot say that I do know that any one was actually affected. I was asked by a party whether there was any difference.

(Objected to as hearsay.)

A. (Continued.) I was asked by a party if any one could tell which ticket he was voting and if there was enough difference to distinguish what he voted.

Q. Was that before he voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before he had gotten to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what occurred then?—A. I met the gentlemen about two squares, as near as I can remember now, about 9 o'clock in the morning, and he was talking to me about politics, and he had always been known as a Democrat and I gave him a ticket.

Q. What sort of a ticket?—A. Democratic ticket, and he asked me if there was any difference between the tickets and I do not remember what reply I made to him, but having worked to secure his vote I tried to leave the impression on his mind, although I knew there was a difference at the time, and one or two spoke about the matter, and among other things left the impression on my mind that he was under a little obligation to vote for certain Republicans on the ticket, or felt compelled to if they would know his ticket, as he had a partner who was a Republican, the man who was backing him in business, and most of his customers were Republicans, and it left the impression in my mind that he was expected by those parties to vote the Republican ticket, although I am sure he wanted to vote the Democratic ticket if it would not be found out on him.

(This testimony objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

Q. You say impressions; was that what he stated to you?—A. Yes, sir; from the conversation, I do not recollect the exact language.

Q. That was the substance of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what he did vote?—A. No, sir; I do not know what he voted. I took a Republican ticket and wrote the names of the candidates on it and whether he voted it or not I do not know.

Q. What names did you put on that Republican ticket?—A. Democratic names straight through.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You tried to convince him that there was no difference between the tickets at that time?—A. It was my endeavor to leave the impression with this man that there was no difference.

Q. And he could vote one as well as the other without being discovered?—A. Yes, sir.

JESSE S. WHITSIT.

DORMAN N. DAVIDSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Dorman N. Davidson; reside in Indianapolis; age 43.

Q. How long have you lived in the city?—A. Pretty near 43 years; born here.

Q. Were you in the city November 7th, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the election held for Congress on that day?—A. I attended that election. I do not remember the date of the election, but I was at the election.

Q. Did you act in any capacity on that day?—A. I was Democratic clerk of the board.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. It was in the engine-house precinct of the second ward.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there that day?—A. Most of them.

Q. You saw the kind of tickets they were?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked "Exhibit F" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you, was the ticket voted by the Republicans made on that material or similar to that?—A. Yes, sir; I have one of them, I think. That was the ticket, I think. I kept one. I think that was the ticket voted at that precinct.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked "Exhibit G" to the deposition of Austin H. Brown, and I will ask you, was that the Democratic ticket used on that day, or was it the same kind of a ticket printed on the same material?—A. It was the same kind of paper.

Q. Could you tell one of those tickets from the other, Republican from the Democratic, that day when the tickets were folded together as they are usually folded when voted, if you could see one of them as they came up to the chute to put them in?—A. Yes, sir; when a man would come up with a ticket in his hand crumpled, if I could see the ticket at all I could tell.

Q. How would you tell one from the other?—A. I told by the thickness and the way the ticket would refuse to fold.

Q. You refer to what ticket when you say that?—A. The Republican ticket. To make the thing more clear, when a ticket came up folded, creased down closely and folded closely, we could see by the stiffness of it that it would fold closely and the other would not, and it would be like folding a piece of cardboard, or folding a bristol card close. You see there would be a break in it, and you take a piece of soft paper and fold it closely and there would be no break. We could tell by the appearance of it.

Q. One was a good deal thicker than the other?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of material would you say the Democratic ticket was on in general terms?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. The paper I should say ——

Q. Ordinary ——

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I should say ordinary paper. I should suppose, without knowing what I suppose the same material is, on about the same material that the ordinary newspaper is printed on.

Q. Now, what is the character as compared to the Democratic ticket and Republican ticket?—A. I should call that cardboard.

(Objected to as immaterial; that the question should be what it is, not what he calls it.)

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you know what paper is, from any knowledge of manufacturing or dealing in it?—A. No, sir; I have no technical knowledge of it.

Q. Then you do not know what kind of paper that Republican and Democratic ticket is printed on, in point of fact?—A. What it would be called in the trade I would not know.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you ever know tickets to be printed on material for elections before like that that the Republican ticket is printed upon?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I never saw them

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Any complaint made there to the election board that day of which you were a member about the Republican tickets?—A. To the board?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not know of any made to the board.

Q. That is all I am asking you about. Were the tickets counted by the board without objection?—A. All the tickets were counted except two tickets.

Q. Was there any objection to the counting of the Republican tickets because of their being on the kind of paper they were?—A. No, sir.

Q. Two tickets you spoke of not being counted; were they found folded together?—A. They were two tickets folded one inside of the other.

Q. And they were not counted?—A. They were thrown out.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say those tickets were thrown out?—A. They were not counted there.

Q. Were they Democratic tickets or Republican tickets?—A. Republican tickets.

Q. After throwing out those tickets, how did it leave the poll-book as compared with the number of votes?—A. The tickets corresponded then with the number of names on the poll-book.

Q. In other words, the actual number of tickets counted at the poll and the book corresponded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you whether any complaint was made to the board; were you on that board?—A. Yes, sir; I was one of the clerks.

Q. Where was the board; inside?—A. Yes, sir; inside.

Q. You mean to say when you answered that question that there was no formal complaint tendered to the board?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. I would answer this way, that I heard of no complaint to the board. I do not know that there was none, but I heard none.

DORMAN N. DAVIDSON.

PATRICK HAROLD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Patrick Harold. I reside No. 225 South West street, Indianapolis, Marion County, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Ten years last May.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Our last general election?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; I was there all day.

Q. What precinct?—A. Precinct No. 2, 15th ward

Q. Have you ever occupied any official position in this city?—A. Well, I was in the council once.

Q. What capacity, if any, did you act in on the day of the election at the precinct?—A. I was ward committeeman.

Q. Were you at the polls all day?—A. Yes, sir; I was from the time the polls were opened in the morning until they closed at night without ever leaving.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted by the two parties there?—A. Yes, sir; I saw most of them.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket voted by the Republicans at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I would suppose that was the ticket.

Q. I call your attention to this ticket, marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that was the Democratic ticket voted and used at your precinct?—A. I should think that was the ticket. I handled them all day long.

Q. I understand you to say you saw a good many of those tickets voted—most of them?—A. Yes, sir; I saw most of them.

Q. Could you—when those tickets were folded and voted—could you see them and could you tell the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Well, in some cases. Really in most cases I could always tell the Republican ticket going in. As a general thing I could tell the Republican ticket going in.

Q. How could you tell?—A. Well, I suppose there was two causes. In fact I knew a great many of the Republicans, and in the next instance I could tell by the fold of the ticket, because it was stiffer and it didn't fold as close. It was on stiffer paper to fold and did not close down as close, but worked a little stiffer.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You were a Democratic committeeman down there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew most of the Republicans in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; a good many of them.

Q. And when they came up to vote you could tell what ticket they were going to vote without seeing them vote?—A. No, sir; there were some instances where they came by that a person going by me with a ticket lightly folded I could tell.

Q. State your business?—A. Railroad man.

Q. Are you in any other business?—A. No, sir; no other business.

PATRICK HARROLD.

MICHAEL CLUNE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON, attorney for Mr. English:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Michael Clune; I am going on 41 years; I reside 633 South Meridian street, and the factory is 700 South Meridian street, Indianapolis, Ind., in the 24th ward.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a lounge and mattress manufacturer.

Q. How long have you lived in the city?—A. I came here in 1864.

Q. About 19 years?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in this city on the 7th day of November, 1882, the day of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election, and if so, what precinct?—A. I was there in the 24th ward.

Q. What capacity, if any, did you act in?—A. I was acting as Democratic judge.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the Democrats and Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir; I watched them all pretty closely.

Q. I call your attention to these two tickets, one marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Republican ticket," and the other marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Austin H. Brown and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you whether those are the tickets voted and used that day at that precinct at that election?—A. That is the kind of paper I think that the Democratic names were printed on, and the Republican ticket they had paper similar to this.

Q. Were they gotten up in that style and printed with that head?—A. They had a kind of big heading something like that.

Q. You think that is the ticket?—A. I would not say that one was the ticket, but it was a similar ticket to that. I know the Republican names were on very heavy paper, quite a difference from that that the Democrat names were printed on.

Q. Could you tell the difference in the tickets, being folded?—A. Yes, sir; in the size I could tell when they were folded up. One looked stiffer than the other.

Q. Where were you when the tickets were being counted?—A. I was right at my post watching the thing.

Q. Could you tell what the ticket was before it was opened by its appearance?—A. Oh, you could see it in the box when they were put in. They kind of sprung open, that is, when the box was opened.

Q. What ticket?—A. Republican ticket.

Q. How many votes were cast at your precinct, if you know?—A. That I could not say now. I did not keep run of the thing; I know it went pretty heavy Democratic in our ward.

Q. Did you ever fold one of those Republican tickets; did you try any experiment in that?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. After the election was over, I had heard so much about it, I thought I would fold one to see how it worked.

Q. State how you found it would work.

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. Of course if I would squeeze the ticket down and press it I could almost break it, that is, I would make a crease in it.

Q. If you didn't crease it?—A. If you did not press it down it did not go together.

Q. Did you ever try any experiment with pasters on those tickets?—A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Do you know whether a paster would stick to that Republican ticket?—A. I think if I put it on I would make them stick. When I put them on I looked to put them on so they could not get them off.

Q. Did they stick; do you know whether they did stick or not?—A. We found some sticking on there on the Republican ticket.

Q. Did you find any off in the box?—A. I think there was a paster or two out. I am not positive to that part of it. We had some tickets remaining over that we did not have registered names for. We had more tickets than names.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You were Democrat judge on the board that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any complaint made to the board that day by any one, and if so by whom, concerning the Republican ticket?—A. I did not hear any.

Q. Were those Republican tickets counted without objection?—A. They were counted. Yes, sir.

Q. Anybody object to it?—A. There was nothing said to the inspector or judge as to their counting the tickets.

Q. That vote that day was an unusually large Democratic majority, wasn't it?—A. Yes, sir; it was an unusually large that day in the ward in the whole thing.

Q. The whole Democratic majority in the 24th ward was unusually large?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much larger than usual?—A. That part of it I am not positive.

Q. Was there not one hundred more than it had been at any time before?

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. It was considerable larger, of course. That ward is growing; they will have to have some more wards down there. I believe in the 25th ward they ought to make three or four out of it the way it is growing.

Q. That 25th ward is largely Democratic too, is it not?—A. I cannot say anything about the 25th.

Q. Do you not know, as a matter of fact, the 25th ward is one of the leading Democratic wards in the city?—A. I expect it is; it generally has a big Democratic majority.

M. CLUNE.

Whereupon the further taking of testimony in chief on the part of the contestor is finally closed.

STATE OF INDIANA,
Marion County, ss:

I, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public within and for said county and State, do hereby certify that the witnesses, whose depositions are hereunto attached, were by me first duly sworn according to law, to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relating to matters in controversy in the cause hereinafter mentioned, and that said witnesses were examined according to law, and the foregoing depositions, to which this certificate is attached, were taken and reduced to writing by me, and under my direction by disinterested parties, and subscribed to by said witnesses as aforesaid stated. I further certify that the taking of said depositions commenced on Monday, October 1st, 1883, at 9 o'clock a. m., at the law office of Duncan, Smith & Wilson, No. 76 East Washington street, and continued from day to day, as hereinbefore set forth; that the contestor, William E. English, was present in person and by counsel, Mr. John R. Wilson, of the firm of Duncan, Smith & Wilson; and that the said contestee, Stanton J. Peelle, was present in person and by counsel, William L. Taylor, of the firm of Peelle & Taylor. I further certify that the foregoing depositions were taken in pursuance of the notice and agreements of parties hereto attached, and at the time and place therein specified, to be used on behalf of the contestor, William E. English, as evidence in the matter of the contested election for a seat in the 48th Congress of the United States, from the 7th Congressional district of the State of Indiana, in which William E. English is contestor and Stanton J. Peelle is contestee.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal, this 5th day of December, 1883.

[SEAL.]

PAUL C. HENDRICKS,
Notary Public.

(No. 2.)

TESTIMONY FOR THE CONTESTEE.

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES, attorney for Mr. Peelle:

Q. State your name.—A. William H English.

Q. Your age and residence?—A. My age is 61. My residence is No. 60 Circle street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. You are the father of the contestant in this case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a paper and ask you to state if that is a copy of the notice that was served on me, or sent to me, by William E. English, the contestant?—A. It seems to me to be a copy.

Q. That is his signature to it, is it not?—A. I think it is.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer this notice in evidence as a part of the deposition of Mr. English, and ask the notary to mark it as Exhibit No. 1.

The WITNESS. I do not know it to be a copy, but I think it is. Has it not been already put in?

Mr. PEELLE. You have it in your case, sir.

(The notice is objected to by Mr. English as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial:)

(The notice will be found attached to this deposition, and marked as Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. I now hand you what purports to be the answer of Mr. Peelle to the notice of contest of Mr. English in this case, and I will ask you to state if that is the answer that was served on Mr. William E. English, and on which he accepted service?—A. That is his signature, I think.

Q. Was you not present when he accepted that?

Mr. WILSON. Just let the record show that that is his answer.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer this in evidence as a part of the deposition of Mr. English, and ask that the same be marked by the notary as Exhibit No. 2.

(The paper was marked as Exhibit No. 2, and will be found attached to this deposition.)

Q. I now hand you what purports to be an agreement between the contestant and Mr. Peelle for the delay in taking the testimony in this case, and I will ask you to examine that and see if that is the agreement?—A. I think it is. That is one of the agreements. There are two.

Q. You have the other one in your case?—A. You have a copy of it.

Q. We have originals, both of us.—A. Is this the first agreement?

Q. The first agreement for delay in taking the testimony until after the first of September.—A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer this as a part of the deposition of Mr. English, and ask that the notary mark it as Exhibit No. 3.

(The paper was marked as Exhibit No. 3, and will be found attached to this deposition.)

Q. I now hand you what purports to be the agreement for further time given to the contestant in this case, and I will ask you to state if that is the agreement that was made?—A. I think it is.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer this as a part of the deposition of Mr. English, and ask that the notary mark it as Exhibit No. 4.

(The paper was marked as Exhibit No. 4, and will be found attached to this deposition.)

Q. I now hand you what purports to be a notice on Mr. English, containing the list of witnesses to be examined in this case, and I will ask you to examine it and see if that is his signature to it?—A. Yes, sir; it is. I have never examined it.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer this as a part of the deposition of Mr. English, and ask that the same be marked as Exhibit No. 5.

(The paper was marked as Exhibit No. 5, and will be found attached to this deposition.)

WM. H. ENGLISH.

Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of William H. English.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

Contested election of Representative in Congress, seventh Congressional district of Indiana.

NOTICE OF CONTEST.

To Hon. STANTON J. PEELLE:

You are hereby notified that I shall, and do hereby, contest your election to the office of Representative in the Congress of the United States, for the Seventh Congressional district, in the State of Indiana, as declared by the official canvass of the election therefor, held on 7th day of November, 1882.

I contest your said election on the following grounds:

That the official returns legally made by the election boards of the several election precincts of said Seventh Congressional district of Indiana show that the contestor, William E. English, received a greater number of legal votes at said election, held November 7, 1882, for Representative in Congress for said Congressional district than did the said contestee, Stanton J. Peelle.

That the claim that said Stanton J. Peelle received a plurality of eighty-seven votes at the said election is not correct, for said William E. English in fact received a greater number of the legal votes cast at said election for Representative in Congress for said district than did the said Stanton J. Peelle.

That 12,551 ballots were received and counted for said Peelle at said election in the city of Indianapolis and county of Marion, in said Seventh Congressional district, that were illegal and void because in violation of the following law of the State of Indiana, viz:

"All ballots which may be cast at any election hereafter holden in this State shall be written or printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments thereon except the names of the candidates and the offices for which they were voted for. (Section 4701, Revised Statutes of 1881.)

That said 12,551 ballots so counted for Peelle were not on "plain white paper," "without any distinguishing marks or embellishments," but were, in fact, on the material known as lithographic, plate, or cardboard, so thick, sized, and super calendered as to be easily distinguished both by sight and touch, and so constructed as to come unfolded in the ballot-box, thus facilitating the voting of double ballots, and commonly called on these accounts spring-back tickets, or cardboard tickets.

That said tickets had other "distinguishing marks or embellishments," and were designed for the purpose, and, in fact, did destroy the secrecy of the ballot, intended to be secured by the above recited law and by the constitution of Indiana, and were, therefore, clearly illegal and void.

That the effect of destroying the secrecy of the ballot by the use of these cardboard spring-back tickets was greatly to the injury of this contestor, aside from the counting of such illegal ballots for said Peelle, as all of the Federal officeholders, all the county and city officials, the police force, and most of the officers of wealthy corporations in said city and county were and are Republicans and supporters of said Peelle, and hundreds of colored men, laborers, employés, and others were prevented from voting for this contestor by reason that the secrecy of the ballot was destroyed by the use of these cardboard spring-back tickets, that could be easily and certainly distinguished to be Republican tickets by either sight or touch.

That said cardboard spring-back tickets were intended to and did promote frauds in double voting, there being over 100 more ballots voted at said election than persons voting, most of said ballots being wrongfully counted for said Peelle.

That said cardboard spring-back tickets were further designed to and did prevent persons from voting for this contestor who desired to do so, because said tickets were not printed on "plain white paper," as required by law, but on cardboard so sized and supercalendered that the name ot this contestor could not be securely placed over the name of said Peelle, by reason of which 100 votes were lost to this contestor.

That Republican inspectors of said election, supporters of said Peelle, refused to receive the votes of 200 qualified voters at said election who presented legal ballots, containing the name of this contestor for Representative in Congress from said district, by reason of which unlawful and unjust refusal 200 votes were lost to this contestor.

That in all, or nearly all, the election precincts in said district the supporters and agents of said Stanton J. Peelle circulated spurious and fraudulent tickets, being in exact similitude of the Democratic ticket on which said William E. English's name appeared for Representative in Congress, except that said counterfeit tickets had the name of Stanton J. Peelle printed in the place of the name of this contestor, and in some instances the name of other Republican candidates for other offices were printed in place of the Democratic candidate, but in all cases such fraudulent tickets, so circulated by the supporters and agents of said Peelle, were headed "Democratic ticket," with the names of the Democratic candidates for State offices thereon, and in many cases with the names of all the Democratic candidates thereon except the name of said English, for which the name of said Peelle was substituted, by reason of which fraudulent devices and practices 300 electors voted at said election for said Peelle who in truth and in fact intended to vote for said English, and actually supposed they had so voted until said fraudulent and spurious tickets were discovered.

That in the city of Indianapolis, in said district, a number of persons, who were qualified electors in said city, who desired and intended to vote for this contestor in the precincts in which they were entitled to vote, were deterred and prevented from so doing by the threats, menaces, and intimidation of Republican policemen, United States deputy marshals, and others, working in the interests of said Stanton J. Peelle at said election, and that by reason of said wrongful and unlawful threats, menaces, and intimidations used in behalf of said Peelle by his supporters at said election, a large number of voters, to wit, 200 votes, were at said election, in said precincts, cast for said Peelle by the electors so threatened, menaced, and intimidated, which votes would have been cast and counted for this contestor but for such threats and menaces; and 200 other legal voters were deterred from voting for this contestor by reason of said threats, menaces, and intimidations, and did not, by reason thereof, vote at all.

That Republican officials or others, working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle, took from the Marion County jail and the station houses of the city of Indianapolis 100 prisoners, and caused them to vote 100 ballots for said Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at said election, the said 100 persons so voting not being qualified voters, or voting for said Peelle because of the threats, intimidations, and undue influences of said Republican officials or others.

That Republican officials or others working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle took fifty-seven paupers out of the Marion County poor-house, and by threats, intimidation, and undue influence caused them to vote for the said Stanton J. Peelle for Congress at said election, which they would not have done but for the wrongful acts of said Republican officials or others.

The Republican officials or others working in the interest of said Stanton J. Peelle took thirty-five persons out of the city hospital of said city of Indianapolis, and by threats, intimidations and undue influence caused them to vote for said Peelle for Congress at said election, which they would not have done but for the wrongful acts aforesaid.

That persons working in the interest of Stanton J. Peelle imported persons into said district who were not entitled to vote therein, but who voted at said election for said Peelle to the number of 200 ballots, which ballots were wrongfully counted for said Peelle, and 100 other persons voted for said Peelle in election precincts in said district in which they were not entitled to vote, and such votes were wrongfully counted for said Peelle.

That said election was wrongfully interfered with by Republican officials of the United States Government, who, under the pay of the General Government, came from Washington city and elsewhere in large numbers, to wit, the number of 100, to control and overawe the lawful electors of said district to elect the said Stanton J. Peelle; and to further that end a large fund was raised by assessments upon Federal officeholders by J. A. Hubbell's committee, and by other parties, and brought into said district by the said Stanton J. Peelle, or his agents or supporters, and was, with other moneys, unlawfully and corruptly used to promote the election of the said Stanton J. Peelle, whereby he received 500 more votes than he would have received but for such corrupt and wrongful interference.

That in several of the election precincts in said district, ballots that were for this contestor for Congress, or intended by the person voting to be for him, were wrongfully rejected and not counted for him because they contained the wrong middle initial letter of his name, and for other insufficient causes, and in several precincts the return made is not a true and correct return of the legal ballots voted at such precincts.

Wherefore, this contestor alleges that said Stanton J. Peelle was not, but that the said William E. English was, duly and lawfully elected Representative in Congress from said district at the election aforesaid.

November 29, 1882.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of William H. English.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public

Seventh Congressional district of Indiana.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH, CONTESTANT,
vs.
STANTON J. PEELLE, CONTESTEE.

Contestee's answer.

To Hon. WILLIAM E. ENGLISH:

SIR: Your notice of intention to contest my election to the Forty-eighth Congress of the United States from the seventh Congressional district of the State of Indiana, as the result of an election held in said State on the seventh day of November, A. D. 1882, was received by me on the seventh day of December, A. D. 1882, and service thereof accepted by me on that date without waiving any objection thereto; and now reserving all benefit and advantage thereof, I make the following objections to your notice and the allegations contained therein, that is to say—

First. I object to your notice because the same does not contain a statement in writing of the grounds upon which you rely in the contest, and for the further reason that said notice was not duly and legally served, or within the time or in the manner required by law and the practice in such cases.

Second. Protesting against the truth of the allegations in said notice, I object, and say that said notice is so insufficient and defective and so general in its terms that I need not deny or admit the allegations therefor, for the reasons, to wit: Said notice does not specify particularly the grounds upon which you rely in your contest or intend to rely, and gives no reasons for your failing to do so.

Third. Your allegations are only conclusive of law and general averments of wrong-doing in some undefined portions of the said district by unnamed election officials of precincts not specified, or by persons not named or described, and in counties, and in places, and by means not specified, and in violation of laws and the rights of others not designated.

Fourth. Your allegations are so vague and uncertain that I am not informed as to the persons or officials whom you accuse of wrong-doing, and of violating law, and of intimidating electors in said district by threats and menaces, or where such acts were committed; nor do you aver wherein the official returns, legally made by the election boards of the several election precincts in said district, show that you received a greater number of legal votes in said district than I received; nor do you show what distinguishing marks, complained of by you, were on the tickets or ballots voted for me at the several election precincts in the city of Indianapolis in said district, or wherein said tickets destroyed, as you allege, the secrecy of the ballot, or the names of the persons who were deceived or misled thereby; nor do you aver and set forth the names of the electors in said district who were refused the legal right to vote, or the places where such persons were refused; nor do you allege and set forth the names of the persons whom you aver circulated spurious or counterfeit tickets with my name printed thereon, or the names of those whom you allege were deceived or misled thereby, or that such tickets were unlawful; nor do you aver that said tickets were not printed and circulated by you or your supporters among your party friends only, to my detriment and to promote your election; nor do you set forth the names of the electors of said district whom, you aver, were prevented from voting by threats and menaces, or the names of those committing such acts, or the places where such acts were committed, or that such names and places were unknown to you; nor do you set forth the names of those confined in the Marion County jail, the city hospital, and station houses of the city of Indianapolis, and in the poor-house of said county, whom, you aver, were taken out by Republican officials and influenced to vote for me, by threats and menaces; nor do you allege the names of the officials or persons making such threats, or the places where made, or that such inmates were not legal voters in said district; nor do you set forth the names of those persons who voted at said election whom, you aver, were not legal voters, or the places where such persons voted; nor do you set forth the names of the persons by whom you allege money was corruptly and unlawfully used in said district to promote my election to Congress, or the places where such acts were committed, or that the result of the election was thereby changed; nor do you allege that the persons and officials whom you accuse generally of wrong-doing, and the places where such acts were committed, were unknown to you, or that such wrong-doings and unlawful acts, so complained of, were not instigated by you or your supporters, or that such acts were known to or acquiesced in by me, or that the result of the election was changed by reason of the matters set forth in your notice.

Fifth. I object and except to your specifications of grounds of contest, because the same are unsufficient in law, and do not set forth facts sufficient, or of such character, as to enable or entitle you to contest my election aforesaid.

Sixth. I further object to your notice, and the vague and general allegations therein, because of the wholesale charges and averments of all kinds of crime and wrong-doing therein made, without specifications of persons or places, not because you had reason to believe that any one of them had been committed to your injury and to promote my election, but with the deliberate purpose to evade the limitation of the statute, and to speculate upon any future discoveries of evidence, real or intended, and so you have made unlawful, vexatious, and fraudulent use of the notice and process authorized by statute, and the same should be quashed and dismissed, for which I shall move at each stage of the progress in this case. Therefore, without waiving any objection to the manifold and vital defects of said notice, or my exceptions aforesaid, but reserving all benefit and advantage thereof, I make answer and say:

1. I deny each and every ground of contest set forth in said notice and deny each and every allegation contained therein; and aver that throughout said Congressional district, and in each any every precinct and county thereof, a fair and lawful election was held, except wherein you and your supporters prevented the same as hereinafter shown, and that the returns of said election were duly and legally made, and the results thereof duly certified to the secretary of State in said state, in the manner, and by the officers, required by law so to do; and now for a more particular answer to your vague, uncertain, defective, and general allegations, and without waiving my objections and exceptions aforesaid, but reserving all benefit thereof, I say:

1. I deny that the official returns, legally made by the election boards of the several precincts of said district, show that you received a greater number of legal votes at said election than I received, or that there were a greater number of legal votes received and counted for you than were received and counted for me; upon the contrary, I aver, and will prove, that said returns, so made as aforesaid, show that I received a greater number of legal votes at said election for Representative in Congress than you received, to wit, eighty-seven votes more than you received, and therefore I deny that the claim, as you aver, that I received a plurality of eighty-seven votes in said district is incorrect; upon the contrary I aver that said claim is correct.

2. I deny that there were 12,551 illegal and void ballots, or any other number, more or less, of such ballots, received and counted for me in the city of Indianapolis, or elsewhere, in said district, that were in violation of section 4701 of the revised statutes of 1881, cited by you in your said notice, or that were in violation of any law; upon the contrary, I aver that said ballots so received and counted were in all respects as required by said section of the said statutes.

3. I deny that there were 12,551 ballots, or any other number of ballots, received and counted for me in said city of Indianapolis, or elsewhere in said district, that were not printed on plain white paper, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments. And I deny that said ballots so received and counted for me, as aforesaid, were designed for the purpose, or that they, in fact, did deceive or mislead any person; or that such ballots were printed on card-board paper or any other kind of paper except that required by law; or that such tickets were commonly called "spring-back" tickets; or that said tickets so voted in any way destroyed the secrecy of the ballot; or that said ballots facilitated double voting; or that more than one ballot was voted by any one person; or that there were more ballots counted than there were persons voting; or that there were 100 more ballots voted than there were persons voting; or that such tickets promoted or tended to promote fraud; or that such ballots were in any way in violation of law; or that such ballots, or any number of such ballots, were illegally received or counted for me; or that any legal voter was deceived or thereby prevented from voting for you. And I deny that your name could not be securely placed over my name on said ticket; or that you lost 100 legal voters, or any other number of legal voters, therefor. Upon the contrary, I allege and will prove, that said ballots so received and counted for me were in all respects according to law, the same having been "printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments," except those in common use in printing.

4. I deny that Republican inspectors at said election refused to receive the votes of 200 qualified voters, or any number of qualified voters of said district, who presented legal ballots containing your name for Representative in Congress, or that you lost any legal vote or votes thereby. Upon the contrary, I allege, and will prove, that all qualified voters in said district who presented legal ballots in the precincts where they were entitled to vote were permitted to vote and that the ballots of all such persons were received and counted by the Republican inspectors in said district for whomsoever voted.

5. I deny that in all or in any of the election precincts in said district my agents or supporters circulated spurious or fraudulent tickets, in exact similitude of the Democratic ticket except that my name was printed therein instead of yours; or that any qualified voter was deceived or misled thereby; or that 300 electors, or any other number of electors in said district, by reason thereof, voted for me who intended to vote for you, or that thereby any qualified elector in said district voted for me who actually supposed he had voted for you, or that you lost any legal votes thereby, or that any such tickets were voted at all in said district; upon the contrary, I allege, and will prove, that in Hancock County in said district there were a large number of Democratic voters, to wit, three hundred, who desired to vote for me, but who were unwilling to vote for any other Republican candidate, and that such friendly Democrats of their own motion and at their own expense, without my knowledge, procured printed the tickets of which you complain, and circulated them for several days prior to and on the day of election, and that the circulation of such tickets, both before and on the day of the election, was well known, and particularly to all electors in said district who voted such tickets.

6. I deny that 200 qualified electors or any other number of electors in the city of Indianapolis, or elsewhere in said district, who desired and intended to vote for you were deterred or prevented therefrom because of threats and menace by Republican policemen, deputy United States marshals, or any other person or official, or that 200 qualified electors in said district, or any other number of qualified electors in any part of said district, refrained or refused to vote because of threats and menaces, as alleged by you in your notice, or that any threats or menaces were made in said district at any precinct thereof, by any Republican official or other person in my interest, or that deputy United States marshals were appointed in said district on account of said election, or that any deputy United States marshal in any way interferred with said election or any qualified voter in said district or any part thereof; upon the contrary, I allege and will prove that in said district, and in each and every precinct thereof, a fair election was held, and that no qualified elector thereof was deterred or prevented from voting for you by any official or other person, or by any threats, menaces, or other means.

7. I deny that Republican officials or others working in my interest took from the Marion County jail and the station-houses in the city of Indianapolis 100 prisoners, or any other number of such prisoners, and caused them to vote for me by reason of threats and menaces, or by any other undue influences, or that such prisoners were not legal voters, or that fifty-seven paupers or any other number of paupers were taken out of the Marion County poor-house by Republican officials or other persons and unlawfully voted for me for Congress, or that such paupers were not legal voters, or that thereby 35 persons or any other number of persons were taken out of the city hospital of the city of Indianapolis by Republican officials or others and unlawfully influenced to vote for me for Congress, or that such persons were not legal voters.

8. I deny that persons working in my interest imported 200 persons, or any other number of persons, into said district who were not entitled to vote therein, or that any such persons voted for me for Congress, and I deny that 100 other persons, or any other number of persons, voted for me in said district for Congress at election precincts in which they were not entitled to vote, or that any such votes were received and counted for me.

9. I deny that the election in said district was in any way unlawfully interfered with by 100 Republican officials of the United States Government, or any other number of such officials or other persons, or that such officials exercised any unlawful control over said election, or that they attempted to overawe the lawful electors of said district to secure my election, or for any other purpose.

10. I deny that any money or fund was raised by assessment or otherwise upon Federal office-holders by "J. A. Hubbell's committee," or by any other committee, or by any person, for unlawful use in said district, or that any money was unlawfully or corruptly used in said district by such officials or other persons to promote my election, or that 500 more votes or any number of votes more were received by me in said district because of corrupt or unlawful interference or because of corrupt and unlawful use of money, or that there was any corrupt or unlawful use of money on the part of any one working in my interest in said district. Upon the contrary, I allege, and will prove, that you, by your agents, supporters, and friends, used large sums of money in each and every precinct and county in said district, to wit, the sum of $25,000 in said district unlawfully and corruptly, and with the avowed purpose of promoting your election to Congress, and which money so unlawfully and corruptly used did, in fact, secure you 1,000 votes you would not otherwise have received, and which votes, but for such unlawful and corrupt use of said money, would have been lawfully received and counted for me.

11. I deny that any ballots were rejected at any election precinct in said district on account of the middle initial letter of your name being wrong, or that the electors, if any who voted such tickets, intended to vote for you for Congress, or that such tickets, or any other tickets containing your name for Congress were unlawfully rejected at any precinct in said district, or that the returns made from the several election precincts in said district are not true and correct returns as made of the legal ballots voted in said district at said election, or that said returns are in any way unlawful. And now, by way of counter-charges, I allege and will prove:

1. That you fell behind your party ticket at the said election in each and every county in the said Congressional district for the following among other reasons: (1) Because of the general belief—whether true or not—that you possess large wealth and that you can command large sums of money and are indifferent about its use to further or promote your ends; (2) coupled with this general belief was the further belief—whether true or not— upon the part of many, if not general, that you secured your nomination as a candidate for Congress in said district by the corrupt and unlawful use of money, and that you defrayed the expenses of a special train to convey the delegates selected in Marion County to represent that county in the convention which nominated you in Shelbyville, and that at said convention, as well as going to and returning therefrom, much dissipation was indulged in, which was or became well known to the electors of said district to your unpopularity and injury; and for the further reason that while making your canvass in Shelby County as such candidate you habitually associated and mingled with what was known in said county as ringsters and ring candidates, and that large crowds would accompany you in said county when you were making said canvass, who indulged in much dissipation, all of which was well known and believed in said county to your political injury.

2. I allege and will prove that the ballots voted for you in each and every precinct in Shelby County, in said district, and which ballots were the only ballots received and counted for you in said county, were not in accordance with law, the same not being "printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments," but was in fact a less width than three inches, to wit, two and a half (2½) inches in width, and that said ballots so received and counted for you contained distinguishing marks not in common use in printing, but were designed for the purpose and did in fact deceive and mislead the electors in said county and did destroy the secrecy of the ballot, in violation of the constitution and laws of said State.

3. I allege and will prove that at least one hundred persons voted for you at the several precincts in Shelby County who had not been citizens and residents thereof for six months prior thereto, as by the constitution and laws of said State required.

4. I further allege and will prove that at least 100 persons voted for you, whose ballots were counted in the several precincts of Shelby County, who had not resided in the township where they voted respectively for sixty days prior thereto, and that at least 100 more persons voted for you, whose ballots were counted in the said precincts, who had not resided in the precincts where they voted respectively for thirty days prior to said election, as required by the constitution and laws of said State; and that at least 100 more persons voted for you in said precincts in Shelby County, whose ballots were counted, that were not of lawful age, being under the age of twenty-one years.

5. I further allege and will prove that in the east precinct of Shelby Township, in Shelby County, in said district, the election board did not comply with section 4712 of the revised statutes of 1881 of said State, by reason of which violation of law there were ninety-four votes unlawfully canvassed and counted for you by the county board of commissioners of said county that should not have been canvassed and counted.

6. I further allege and will prove that in the east precinct of Noble, in the west precinct of Hendricks, and in the south precinct of Liberty Township, in said Shelby County, section 4713 of the revised statutes of 1881 of said State was violated, by reason of which violation five hundred ballots were canvassed and counted for you that should not have been canvassed and counted by the county board of canvassers of said county.

7. I further allege and will prove that the returns and tally-sheet from Moral Township, in said Shelby County, were altered and changed by persons in your interest after the same had been returned to the county board of canvassers by the precinct inspector, to wit: Said tally-sheet was changed by changing the figure 7 to a 9, which change was made with the corrupt intent to defraud me out of 150 legal votes, received and counted for me by the precinct election board in said township, by deceiving the county board of canvassers of said county, and of thereby inducing them to reject the votes so received and counted for me in said township.

8. I allege and will prove that in each and every precinct in the several wards in the city of Indianapolis, in Marion County, Indiana, your agents and supporters used large sums of money corruptly and unlawfully to promote your election, and that by reason thereof at least 500 persons were induced to vote and did, in fact, vote for you that would not otherwise have voted for you, and which persons, but for said corrupt and unlawful use of money, as aforesaid, would have voted for me.

9. I allege and will prove that in Hancock County, in said district, 100 paupers in the county poor-house of said county were taken out by Democratic officials, and by threats and menaces and by other unlawful influences were induced to vote for you, and that the ballots of such persons were received and counted for you at the several precincts in the city of Greenfield, and that such persons were not legal residents of the township or precinct where voted.

10. I allege and will prove that in each and every precinct of the several counties in said district your agents and supporters had large sums of money for the unlawful and corrupt purpose of influencing the qualified electors of said district to vote for you, and for the corrupt and unlawful purpose of securing the votes of persons not qualified to vote, all of which was well known to you, and that said corrupt and unlawful use of money, as aforesaid, did, in fact, secure you at least 1,000 votes in said district you would not otherwise have received, and which votes, but for said corrupt and unlawful use of money, would have been received and counted for me.

11. I allege and will prove that your agents and supporters caused to be printed and circulated in the city of Indianapolis, Indiana, spurious tickets—that is to say, tickets, as alleged by you, "in exact similitude of the Democratic ticket," except that on said spurious ticket my name was printed thereon instead of yours—which spurious tickets were printed and circulated by your agents and supporters in the several precincts in the said city among your own supporters and friends for the purpose of exhibition to my supporters and party friends for the unlawful and unfair purpose of prejudicing such persons against me, and to thereby prevent them from voting for me, as they otherwise would have done, and that by reason of such spurious tickets, so printed and circulated, as aforesaid, and for the unfair purpose aforesaid, I lost at least 50 votes that would otherwise have been given to me and counted.

12. I allege and will prove that the ballot-box in the 2d precinct of the 12th ward in the city of Indianapolis, in said district, together with the certificate of returns and tally-sheet, and the ballots received and counted at said precinct, and which were all enclosed in said box, was taken to the office of the Democratic township trustee of Center Township, in Marion County, and that the said box and contents disappeared or was removed from said office in an unlawful manner, and has never since been heard of, to my knowledge, and was conveyed to said office through some influence and in some manner unknown to me, and that at said precinct there were 291 ballots received and counted for me, and only 192 ballots received and counted for you, and that the disappearance, loss, or removal of said ballot-box aforesaid was caused by some person unknown to me, but was for the corrupt and unlawful purpose of preventing the canvass of said vote so certified, as aforesaid, by the county board of canvassers of said county; and I further allege and will prove that at the time the removal or loss of said ballot-box became known it was also known that there had probably been received and counted for me in said district about 100 more votes than you had received.

13. I further allege and will prove that there were received and counted for you in the several election precincts in Marion County 12,300 void and illegal ballots, for the reason that said ballots were not "printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments," as required by law, but was, in fact, of a greater width than three (3) inches, to wit., of the width of three and one-half ($3\frac{1}{2}$) inches, and because said ballots contained distinguishing marks in this, to wit, said ballots were printed on paper so thin and porous that the names and heading thereon could easily be seen through and on the backs thereof.

14. I further allege and will prove that the ballots received and counted for you by the election board in the several election precincts in Hancock County, in said district, were not "printed on plain white paper of a uniform width of three (3) inches, without any distinguishing marks or other embellishments," as required by law, but was, in fact, of a less width than three (3) inches, to wit, of the width of two and one-half ($2\frac{1}{2}$)inches, and that said ballots so received and counted contained distinguishing marks, as I am informed, but the particular kind of distinguishing marks is now unknown to me.

Wherever the allegations contained in the counter-charges hereof are so general and indefinite as not to inform you of the grounds upon which I rely to defeat your contest, I expressly reserve the right to amend such counter-charges at any time before the completion of taking the testimony in said case, as authorized by law and the practice in such cases.

Wherefore, and by reason of the matters and things among others set forth, I aver that at the said election in said district, at the time aforesaid, I was duly and legally elected a Representative to the Forty-eighth Congress of the United States from the seventh Congressional district of the State of Indiana, that the governor of said State duly issued to me a certificate thereof, as by law he was required to do.

Respectfully,

STANTON J. PEELLE.

December 30, 1882.

I, William E. English, contestant in the foregoing entitled election contest, hereby accept service of notice of the above and foregoing answer to my notice of contest, and hereby acknowledge that a copy of said answer was left with me this 4th day of January, A. D. 1883, all of which I accept without waiving any objection thereto.

Contested election for a seat in the 48th Congress from the 7th Congressional district of Indiana.

vs.
STANTON J. PEELLE.

Whereas in this case it would be inconvenient for the said Stanton J. Peelle, the contestee, to attend to the taking of testimony until after the adjournment of the present session of Congress, he being a member thereof, and he having requested a postponement of the taking of testimony in this case, the said William E. English, the contestor, and the said Stanton J. Peelle, the contestee, have mutually agreed, and do hereby mutually agree, that the time for taking the testimony in this case shall be postponed to the first day of next September, when the said contestor shall take his evidence within forty days from that date, and the said contestee his evidence in the next forty days thereafter, and the said contestor his evidence in rebuttal in the next ten days thereafter, so that the whole shall be taken within ninety days from said first day of next September, instead of within ninety days from the time of serving the answer of the contestee, as provided by the act of Congress, each of said parties hereby waiving the taking of evidence within said last-mentioned period, and agreeing that no objection shall be made or advantage taken because of not taking evidence within that period, and hereby agreeing that the same may be taken within ninety days from said first of September, 1883, in the same manner and shall have the same effect as if the same had been taken within ninety days from the time of service of said contestee's answer. Witness our hands this 20th day of January, 1883.

STANTON J. PEELLE.

Seventh Congressional district of Indiana.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH, CONTESTANT, v.
STANTON J. PEELLE, CONTESTEE.

It is mutually agreed by and between the contestant and the contestee above named that, for the mutual convenience of both parties, the time for the taking of testimony in said case shall be ninety days from the 10th day of September, 1883, and that the said contestant shall have until October 20th, 1883, within which to take his testimony in chief, and the said contestee shall have forty days from said Oct. 20th, 1883, within which to take his testimony, or so much thereof as he may require: Provided, That if the said contestee consumes less time than forty days in taking his testimony, then, and in that case, the said contestant hereby agrees to commence at once to take testimony in rebuttal, consuming the ten days allowed him by law therefor, so as not to take time beyond the assembling of the Forty-eighth Congress; and it is further mutually agreed that the depositions to be taken shall be taken before notaries public.

The said depositions to be used as evidence at the hearing and in the trial of the above entitled cause and contest by and for the said contestee.

The taking of said testimony will be adjourned from day to day until the same is completed.

Dated this the 2d day of November, 1883.

STANTON J. PEELLE.

I acknowledge service of the above and foregoing notice.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

MOSES G. MCLAIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES, attorney for Mr. Peelle:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Moses G. McLain; age, 39; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What office do you hold?—A. Clerk of the Marion circuit court.

Q. Otherwise, clerk of Marion County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what this paper is that I hand you?—A. It is a certified copy of the vote cast for candidate for Representative in Congress at the general election held on the 7th day of November, 1882.

Q. Certified by whom and how?—A. Certified by me, as clerk of the Marion County circuit court, under the seal of the court.

Q. I will ask you if you have compared this with the original returns?—A. I have compared that with the original returns made by the board of canvassers of the county, and also by the precinct inspectors of the several precincts of the county.

Q. State whether that is correct.—A. I find that this is correct ——

(Mr. English objected to the answer as incompetent, for the reason that the document will speak for itself.

Mr. HINES. The document does not show for itself except by certificate.

The WITNESS (continuing). That the returns made by the precinct inspectors and the returns made by the board of canvassers are identically the same.

Mr. HINES. We introduce this paper as a part of the deposition of Mr. McLain, and ask that it be marked as Exhibit No. 6, and, independently, we introduce it on the strength of the certificate.

(The paper was marked as Exhibit No. 6, and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are clerk of this county, you say. Were you the clerk at the time this return was made?—A. No, sir

Q. Then the return was made to your predecessor in office?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you compared the number of votes, as you state them here to be, for each precinct, with the return of the board, and with the return of each precinct inspector for each precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the way through—every item here?—A. Yes, sir; we took them out and had the tally-sheets and the returns there. You see they are put away in boxes and filed separately.

Q. Did you do that, or your deputies?—A. I had two deputies there, and I stood by and saw it done.

STATE OF INDIANA,
Marion County, ss:

Be it remembered, that among the papers and records on file in my office in relation to a general election held on the seventh day of November, A. D. 1882, it appears that Stanton J. Peelle, William E. English, and Robert W. Medkirk, as candidates for Representative in the 48th Congress of the United States from the 7th Congressional district, in the State of Indiana, each received in the several voting precincts, in said county of Marion, the number of votes set opposite their respective names, as follows, to wit:

STATE OF INDIANA,
Marion County, ss:

I, Moses G. McLain, clerk of the Marion circuit court, within and for said county and State, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing contains a full, true, correct, and complete statement of the number of votes received in said county and State on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1882, at a general election held on said day, by Stanton J. Peelle, William E. English, and Robert W. Medkirk, respectively, as candidates for Representative in the 48th Congress of the United States, from the seventh Congressional district in said State of Indiana, as shown and as fully appears by the returns made to my office by the board of canvassers of said county, on the ninth day of November, A. D. 1882, on file in my office, and as compared with and correctly shown by the original returns made by the several precinct inspectors in said county, also on file in my office, and that said vote is identical with the vote returned by said board of canvassers.

In witness whereof, I hereunto subscribe my name, and affix the seal of said Marion circuit court, at my office in the city of Indianapolis, this 6th day of November, A. D. 1883.

[SEAL.]

MOSES G. McLAIN,
Clerk Marion Circuit Court of Marion County, Indiana.

Q. Do you, of your own personal knowledge, know that these correspond with the specific return for each precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did compare each precinct yourself?—A. Yes; I was standing there over the table.

Q. Did you compare the figures yourself; did you look at them yourself, or did you take the statement of your deputy?—A. I looked at the figures and checked.

Q. I believe you are a Republican?—A. There is no question of that, sir.

Q. And you were elected by the Republicans at that election?—A. Yes, sir; by the people. I got a good many Democratic votes, otherwise, I was elected by the Republicans.

MOSES G. McLAIN.

C. F. HOLLIDAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES, attorney for Mr. Peelle:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. C. F. Holliday; Indianapolis is my residence; my age is 39.

Q. State where you were and how you were engaged on the day of the State election, in the city of Indianapolis, in 1882.—A. Most of the day, in fact all morning and most of the afternoon, I had charge of the poll-book of the ward and checked off the voters as they came up, to see whether they had voted or not.

Q. How large a portion of the day were you there?—A. I must have been there two-thirds of the day. It was in the 2d ward; I do not know what precinct it was. It was at the corner of Ash street and Home avenue.

Q. What is your business?—A. At that time I was the agent of the "Great Eastern" line. Now I am with the board of trade, as assistant secretary.

Q. I will ask you to examine two tickets, one headed "Republican ticket" and the other "Democratic ticket," and to state what you know in reference to those being voted on that day?—A. Both of these tickets were voted there that day; I know that, but I could not tell who voted the ticket, except from the general knowledge I had of the person, that he was a Democrat or Republican. I could not tell whether it was a Republican or a Democratic ticket looking at it when folded.

Q. I will ask you if you made any attempt to distinguish them?—A. No, sir.

Q. So as to mark them?—A. No, sir. That was my first entrance into politics and will be my last.

Q. How near were you to the persons when they were voting?—A. I was leaning over the chute as they walked up the chute.

Q. About how many feet distant from them?—A. It could not have been any feet at all, hardly. It could not have been over a foot or two—hardly two or three feet from the center of the chute to the outside of the chute anyhow, I should not think.

Q. In what manner were the tickets commonly carried by voters?—A. They were folded; sometimes they kept both edges extended before you, and you could see what ticket they had in their hands. You could not always see the ticket before the judge put it in the box.

Q. And you say you were not able to distinguish one ticket from the other by heir appearance, when folded?—A. Not when it was in a man's hand—no, sir.

(The tickets were introduced in evidence as Exhibits A and B, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and will be found attached to the same.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are near-sighted, are you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are very near-sighted?—A. I am, when I have not got my spectacles on. I do not go very much on my eyesight.

Q. Did you, whilst standing there challenging, attempt or try to tell the voters from the tickets, or, did you observe the tickets that they had, as they had them?—A. I seldom looked at a man's ticket. Sometimes I saw it as they came up, and sometimes I did not.

Q. If you saw these tickets, the Democratic and Republican, could you tell one from the other when they were folded and held up, as the inspector held them in his hand?—A. Could I tell them?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. As the difference between the Democratic ticket and the Republican ticket?

Q. Yes, sir. As the inspector held them in his hand and when he dropped them into the box?—A. No, sir. As I said, the only way I could tell them was that you could generally tell whether a man was a Republican or a Democrat from checking on the poll-books.

Q. Could you tell these tickets if you would take them in your hands and feel them?—A. Why, I undoubtedly could. I always have been able to heretofore, generally, I think.

Q. You always have been able heretofore?—A. Not always. It is my impression that I could nearly always generally tell the ticket. It has been too long ago to remember exactly about these two tickets. I could tell, taking them in my hands, that there was a difference in the feel of the ticket.

Q. Did I understand you to say that you did not attempt, on that day, to distinguish those tickets, or tell one from the other?—A. That was not my business at all to distinguish the ticket. I was simply there checking off the names. I did not make it my business to look at a man's ticket as he comes up to deposit it.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You had your glasses on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with your glasses on your eyesight is good?—A. It is, in reasonable distance.

Q. In that distance it is very good, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; it is very good.

Q. I will ask you if, prior to the election of 1882, you were not able to distinguish the tickets on account of the difference in the width, and also as to the weight of the paper?

(Objected to as leading)

A. I could only give my impression now. I think I have been.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What election was that?—A. He said on previous elections.

Q. What previous elections could you so distinguish the ticket?—A. I suppose he said the elections since I voted in this town.

Q. Can you name what election it was that you could distinguish the ticket?—A. I remember the election; it was the election between Mr. Porter and Mr. Landers, and Mr. Garfield's election.

Q. How could you distinguish the tickets at that election?—A. I am just giving you my impression now; I cannot give you anything positively. There has always been an impression that there was a difference between the Democratic and Republican tickets, but it is simply an impression. It is an indistinct remembrance, I might say.

Q. Can you give the grounds for that impression?—A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. You cannot tell which was the thickest ticket at that election that you have referred to?—A. No; I cannot.

Q. Did you ever know election tickets to be on as heavy material before as that upon which the Republican ticket is printed, and shown to you; and, if so, at what election and by what party were the tickets used?—A. No; I could not answer that.

C. F. HOLLIDAY.

Exhibit A to deposition of C. F. Holliday.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit B to deposition of C. F. Holliday.

WILLIAM WALLACE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES, attorney for Mr. Peelle:

Q. State your name, age, residence, and occupation.—A. William Wallace; 58 years old; Indianapolis, Indiana; lawyer.

Q. How long have you resided in Indianapolis?—A. Since September, 1837.

Q. I will ask you if you have, since you became of age, generally voted at the different elections in Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir; all of them, I believe. I do not know of any that I have been absent.

Q. I wish you would examine the four tickets that I now present to you, one marked "Republican ticket," and headed "National Candidates, James A. Garfield for President," and one marked "Republican ticket," "State ticket, for governor, Albert G. Porter," and one marked "Democratic ticket," headed "For governor, Franklin Landers," and one marked "Democratic ticket, for President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and I will ask you to state if you recognize those tickets as being such as were used at the several elections where those candidates were voted for.

(Mr. English objected to the question as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir. I take these tickets to be the tickets voted at the elections for which the names are given; the candidates for governor at the governor's election and at the Presidential election of 1880.

(The tickets were introduced in evidence as a part of the deposition of Mr. Wallace, and marked Exhibits C, D, E, and F, respectively.)

(Mr. English objected to the introduction of the same as incompetent and immaterial.)

Q. You may look at what is marked Republican ticket, Exhibit A, and Democratic ticket, Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you if you recognize these as tickets that were voted at the election in 1882?—A. That kind of a ticket, yes, sir. There is no doubt about it.

Q. You may explain in your testimony, or describe in your testimony, the heading of the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit D?—A. That ticket has the words "Democratic ticket" printed across the national flag. The flag and the words are diagonal—not at right angles.

Q. You will compare that ticket with the Republican ticket, marked as Exhibit C, that was voted the same year, as to any characteristics that strike your mind.—A. There are no distinguishing characteristics except the peculiar heading the Republican ticket has.

(Mr. English objected to the answer of the witness on the ground that the ticket will speak for itself.)

A. The printer could better tell what kind of type that was, than I can, only it is unusual type, but still it is plain type, but still unusual. I suppose there is a distinct name for it.

Q. And the Democratic ticket, about in the center of it, where it reads "For sheriff, Daniel A. Lemon"; what would you call that——

Mr. PEELLE. Scroll.

A. A printed scroll around the name of the governor, Franklin Landers, and a printed scroll——

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. (Continued) in the middle of the ticket about the center of it around the name of Daniel A. Lemon for sheriff.

Q. What, if any, differences are there in the character and width of the paper used in the respective tickets?—A. That Democratic ticket is a little darker, but I do not know whether that would be a fair—that has been used.

Q. The Democratic ticket is a little wider, a quarter of an inch, is it not?—A. I would call it a quarter of an inch wider——

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, for the reason that the ticket will speak for itself.)

A. (Continued) a little more than a quarter of an inch.

Q. And as to the character of the paper?—A. Well, the paper of the Republican ticket is a little smoother than the paper of the Democratic ticket. It seems to be a little whiter than the one presented in evidence. That may be attributed to the fact that one seems to have been handled a great deal more than the other.

Q. What difference is there, if any, in the thickness of the paper used?—A. There is not much difference in the thickness of the paper. This Republican ticket seems to be glazed or enameled a little, and the other does not. The Republican ticket is a purer white, as shown here, than the other. That is all. The Republican ticket may be a little thicker paper than this. I guess it is.

Q. As to the National tickets for the same year?—A. Well, there are no distinguishing marks at all. The paper is the same, but it is a quarter of an inch, at least, may be a little more, wider than the Republican ticket.

Q. When you say the paper is the same, what do you mean?—A. Did I say the paper was the same?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I did not mean that, because they are not the same. They are, obviously, not the same. The Republican ticket has the peculiar type by which the ticket is designated at the top "Republican ticket." There is nothing unusual about it except the type. I cannot give the technical name for it. The Democratic ticket is fully a quarter of an inch wider than the Republican ticket, and an inch and a half longer.

Q. As to the thickness of the paper, you may describe that.—A. The Republican ticket is a thicker paper to the touch and to the feeling. I think that is obvious, and, as to these two shown, it is the whiter ticket, and not so dark as the Democratic ticket.

Q. I will ask you to take this ticked headed "Republican ticket," voted for President in 1880, for James A. Garfield, and also the Republican ticket voted in the November, 1882, election, and state the difference, if you can, between the quality of the paper in the two tickets.

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial for the reason that the ticket will speak for itself; and for the reason that the witness has not shown himself to be an expert.)

A. I think it is the identical paper.

Q. Is there any difference in the weight of the paper?—A. I should think not; it is as thick paper. This National ticket of 1880 has been used and is a little more pliable than this (?) which has, evidently, not been handled much.

Q. State if you were at the polls at the election in this city in 1882.—A. I was.

Q. What precinct did you vote in, if you know?—A. I voted at one of the precincts in the second ward in Indianapolis; the precinct in which I resided.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket that you hold in your hand is folded, as ordinarily folded by the voters when they are going to the polls, it could be told from the Democratic ticket voted at that election, and which you now have in your hand and have identified in evidence.—A. I think not by sight; it could by feeling.

Q. State if you have been able to distinguish and tell the difference between the tickets at previous elections by the thickness of the paper, or the width of the tickets.

(Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.)

A. I could not testify about a matter which I have never thought anything about or took any notice of; I never paid any attention to it at all, consequently I could not testify.

Q. You have just examined that ticket voted for Franklin Landers for governor in 1880, and also the Republican ticket voted for Albert G. Porter in 1880; I will ask you to state, when those tickets are folded, whether or not you would be able to tell one ticket from the other in consequence of the width of the tickets.

A. I don't think I would have my attention called especially to that fact; if I was called to notice the difference it is very possible I might be able to do it, but just as they are ordinarily voted, or as I cast a vote, and as I notice votes being cast, I would not see any, and I don't now see any unless my attention was called to it. There is no difference between these two tickets.

Q. What ones do you mean?—A. The tickets cast at the election in 1882. Those tickets are clean, and have not been handled, and the mere color—the ordinary observer would not notice any distinguishing color to them. I could not see it.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you referred to certain marks that you call distinguishing marks, scrolls, &c., on those tickets a while ago, they were the tickets voted prior to 1882, were they?—A. Yes, sir; they were the tickets voted at the October election, 1880.

Q. Those marks you referred to were on the face of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When those tickets were folded you could not see those distinguishing marks in any way?—A. I think not, sir, unless my attention would be specially called to it, and I have not examined with reference to that.

Q. I call your attention to two tickets now, both headed "Republican ticket," and I ask you which of those tickets were voted at the November election, 1882?—A. Why, they both seem to be the regular Republican ticket; I do not see any difference in the names.

Q. Or the quality of the paper?—A. As to the quality of paper, they are the same.

Q. (Mr. WILSON.) I now hand the stenographer the ticket headed "Republican ticket," which I have just shown to Mr. Wallace, and ask him to mark it as Exhibit Q.

(Shown to Mr. Wallace, P. C. Hendricks, notary, which is done.)

Q. Were you in the precinct in which Mr. Holliday acted, or did you hear his testimony?—A. I heard a few questions; I did not hear it all.

Q. Did you act as challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you stand at the chute and watch the vote?—A. No, sir; not at the chute; around at th outside.

Q. Did you try to ascertain whether or not you could distinguish those tickets when folded, and when handled as they are when voted—I mean these Republican tickets?—A. Only by touch.

Q. Did you try at the door where the box was and watch the box to see if you could tell one of them from the other?—A. I think not, sir; I made no special effort in that direction.

Q. Was your attention directed to that matter whilst they were voting at the chute at all?—A. No, sir; in no sense of the word except in the matter of feeling the thickness of the ticket. My attention was called to that matter early in the day.

Q. Thickness of what ticket?—A. The difference in the two tickets. The Republican ticket was thicker to the touch. You could distinguish it very easily by feeling.

Q. The Republican ticket was much thicker than the Democratic ticket?—A. Well, it seemed to be.

Q. If they were folded and presented to you and you were allowed to see them without touching them, do you believe that thickness was such that you could tell one from the other, looking all around them?—A. I think not, sir; not unless I had the ticket in my hands. I don't think you could distinguish between them. The question was asked me as of the ordinary voter and whether in the ordinary observation used at an election.

Q. You could distinguish them by touching and handling them?—A. I think there is no doubt about that.

Q. If you were inspector, could you, in handling the tickets, tell the difference?—A. I think I could, sir; whoever takes the tickets in his hand may have made the distinction, but in no other way.

Q. You don't testify as an expert here?—A. No, sir; in no sense of the word.

Q. You do not know the technical names of this paper upon which this Republican ticket is printed?—A. I do not, sir; I am only testifying to what I see and have seen.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. There is no doubt about that; I think that will be conceded; I am not so much of a Republican but that I can tell the truth if I am called upon to testify.

Q. You say that the first tickets shown to you were used in the Presidential election of 1880; you believe they were the tickets used and voted at that election?—A. Such tickets?

Q. Such tickets, of course, I mean.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know that of your own knowledge?—A. I would not have described those tickets unless I had seen them; but when I see the ticket it refreshed my memory, and I then remembered the fact that they were the kind of tickets used.

Q. Do you recognize those tickets by the names upon them or by the character of the paper, &c., when they are shown to you?—A. By the general features of the ticket and the general character, take it all the way through.

Q. I do not know as I exactly understand you; it is altogether, with the names?—A. Altogether, and with the names too.

Q. Is it not true that the ticket that is called the Democratic ticket, headed with Franklin Landers for governor, is very much faded in color and torn and badly used?—A. The back of that ticket seems to have been in some way or other dirtied, by handling or in some other way; if you notice it, it is not a clean ticket.

Q. And it is torn?—Yes, sir.

Q. And the edges are frayed?—A. Yes, sir; they seem to be.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit Q, shown to Mr. Wallace.—P. C. Hendricks, Notary,

JAMES T. LAYMAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. James T. Layman; age, 39 years; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. State your business?—A. Merchant.

Q. State what official position, if any, you hold or have held?—A. I am a member of the board of aldermen.

Q. How long have you been in that position?—A. I have been a member of the municipal government since either the spring of 1877 or 1878; I have forgotten which.

Q. I will ask you to take this ticket which I hand to you, headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket or a ticket similar to the one voted in 1882 in this city by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket, or a ticket similar to the one voted by the Democrats in 1882 at the November election?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. State if you were at the polls on the day of election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. Precinct No. 2, sixth ward.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity at the polls?—A. I believe I was a member of one of the committees.

Q. Were you inside or outside?—A. Outside.

Q. I will ask you to state if you observed the tickets as they were being voted there by the voters when voting?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. State if when this Republican ticket was folded by the voters as they are ordinarily folded when voted, if you could tell or distinguish it from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded?—A. By looking at that?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. In the sense in which that question was asked you did not observe the tickets as they were folded?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do not you think if you were standing right up at the box and the voter came up with his ticket exposed and your attention had been called to the difference in the thickness of these tickets; that by looking at them carefully and watching them as the inspector would put them in the box and as he would hold them up in his fingers by the end, in this way [indicating], do not you think you could tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket?—A. I do not, unless there was some distinguishing mark about it.

Q. Could not you tell by the thickness and appearance?—A. I could not without touching it.

Q. Then you could tell them by handling them?—A. I could by touching them.

Q. You think your sense of touch would be better than your sense of sight?—A. Yes, sir; I think it would.

Q. Could you tell them by handling?—A. I think there is some little difference in the paper.

Q. What is the difference?—A. I think that is a little thicker [referring to the Republican ticket].

Q. You could tell by handling that one was a little thicker than the other, and when seen closely in that way that there was a difference; do not you think there was a difference to the eye, and that you could tell that difference?—A. I was not an expert to watch the tickets closely.

Q. I am asking you the question upon the theory that you did watch them closely that way; with such difference that you could tell by handling, could you not, by watching them carefully, tell one from the other?—A. I do not think I could, sir.

Q. If you had been acting as inspector at that election and were to handle the tickets as they came in, you think you could tell the difference, do you?—A. I think I could; yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State whether or not, in elections prior to 1882, you were or were not able to tell the difference in tickets voted in this city by handling them?—A. I think there has always been some difference in the paper by handling.

Q. State whether or not there has not been a difference in the width of the tickets prior to the election of 1882 in this city?

(Mr. English objected to the question as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether, if the tickets are printed upon a different paper, although they have the same general characteristics, you would not be able to distinguish them when folded?—A. On the same kind of paper?

Q. The paper with different characteristics; if the paper were a little heavier than the other, or one paper a little thicker than the other?—A. I do not think I should notice that when folded.

Q. In handling them, how would it be?—A. No, sir; I think not, unless I would see the face of it.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You would have to see the paper to distinguish in this case?—A. See the face of the ticket.

Q. So that if one should have these characteristics which Mr. Peelle described, you could not distinguish it under the circumstances he described.—A. Unless the paper was so thin you could see under the ticket, you could not.

Questions by Mr. HINES:

Q. Suppose the ticket of one party is printed upon a plain white paper, and the ticket of the other party is printed upon plain white paper and of a different weight and thickness; I will ask you whether in handling those tickets, knowing that fact, you would not be able to tell them ordinarily?—A. Yes, sir; I think I would.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And hold office in this city as such?—A. Yes, sir.

JAMES T. LAYMAN.

I. S. GORDON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. HINES, attorney for Mr. Peelle:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. I. S. Gordon; my age is 3[illegible], and my residence is 613 North Illinois street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. Wholesale saddlery hardware.

Q. How long have you been engaged in this business?—A. Ten years.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you attended the election in November, 1882, in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct or ward?—A. It is the eleventh ward, and the precinct I do not remember. It is on Ohio street, between Pennsylvania and Meridian streets.

Q. Were you at other precincts that day in the city?—A. Yes, sir; I was at one other.

Q. I will ask you to take this ticket which I now show you, headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and state if that is the ticket or the kind of ticket that was voted at the election in 1882, in November?—A. I should say it was. I do not know whether these names here are all right or not. I did not read it from the beginning.

Q. It is your impression that that is the kind of ticket that was voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now the ticket headed, "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the kind of ticket voted by the Democrats in 1882?—A. I should say it was.

Q. Did you observe the tickets on election day?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket that you have in your hand is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when they vote them, if you could distinguish that ticket from the Democratic ticket similarly folded.—A. Not in the hands of anybody else—of the voter.

Q. That is what I mean. Standing at the polls and looking on as men vote with their tickets folded, going to the polls to deposit their ballot, could you tell one ticket from the other?—A. Standing at the side of the chute, I could not. I tried to that day two or three times, and I could not tell them.

Q. You could not tell one ticket from the other when they were folded in the hands of the voter?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You could tell the difference in these tickets by handling them?—A. If I felt of them I could tell them.

Q. How could you do that?—A. One is a little stiffer than the other. There is a little difference.

Q. And when folded it is thicker?—A. Yes, sir; a little thicker.

Q. And when folded it makes a larger bulk, that Republican ticket does?—A. I do not know that I am prepared to say that.

Q. You say it is thicker than the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those two tickets, the Democratic and Republican, are the same length?—A. I will have to look again—yes, sir.

Q. And the same width substantially? You say they are the same length and same width, and the Republican ticket is thicker. Handling them, you could tell the difference between the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, when folded, do you say there is no difference in the bulk of them?—A. Not that I could observe. I tried to keep track of certain parties when going into the chute, and tried to watch the vote, but could not tell from that how they voted.

Q. If your attention was called to it, and you were standing within two feet, and the tickets were held up, and you were to look at them carefully, you say you could not tell, from the appearance, one ticket from the other?—A. I could not.

Q. If you were to see the ends of the tickets could you tell the difference?—A. That I do not know. I do not know that I saw them in that shape.

Q. If they were folded with the ends to you could you tell the difference when you could see them distinctly?—A. I really do not know. Without seeing them folded and put in that way, I do not believe I could.

Q. Now, I call your attention to two tickets; one headed "Democratic ticket" and one headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you, are those the tickets voted at the November election in 1882 by the Democrats and Republicans, respectively?—A. Now, I would hardly be able to say whether these are the ones or not. I should say they were very similar, if I remember correctly about them. I could not have described them. I remember this type at the head of the ticket. I would not testify as to the heft or thickness of the paper for either one, as shown to me now, from memory.

Q. Those two tickets that I have handed you are similar tickets to the ones Mr. Peelle showed you that were made exhibits to Mr. Holliday's deposition?—A. I should say they were similar; so far as the thickness of the paper, and, in fact, the type of the Republican ticket—I can remember that type.

Q. I ask you to fold those tickets as they are usually folded by the voter?—A. They are folded in many ways.

Q. Fold it as if you were going to vote it. [Witness did as requested.] Now I show you those two tickets, and hold them in the ends of my fingers, and I hold them about two feet from you and show you their size and the ends—all around; do you say there is no difference in the thickness of those two tickets at the end, as shown you?—A. It would not be perceptible in the hands of the voter, to me. I know; I tried that.

Q. I ask you, in my hand, as I hold it here, cannot you see a difference in the ticket?—A. Not in this light.

Q. By that light? [Indicating.]—A. I do not believe I would notice the difference. That is, I do not believe I could distinguish it.

Q. Now, as I hold them that way, close to the end, folded, and show you the end, can you see any difference?—A. Yes, sir, I can, at this distance.

Q. At the distance of about two feet you can see a difference?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is the thickest?—A. The Republican ticket.

Q. Is that difference perceptible?—A. It is, right here.

Mr. WILSON. I offer those two tickets that I have just shown to the witness in evidence, and ask that they be marked Exhibits "R" and "S," to his deposition.

(The tickets will be found attached to this deposition so marked.)

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Those two tickets that Mr. Wilson just held up before you were both held up together, were they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you could more readily tell the difference between the two tickets when held up together, than you could when voted separately, as they are, could you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State also if, when the tickets were held up by Mr. Wilson, if you did not fold the tickets yourself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And, therefore, you knew at the time, because you had just folded the tickets, and had just handled them and handed them to Mr. Wilson, had you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. You are a Republican?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit S. Shown to Mr. Gordon.

JOHN L. MCMASTER, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John L. McMaster; age, 40; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. State your business.—A. Attorney at law.

Q. State what official position, if any, you have.—A. I have none as yet; I am the mayor-elect of the city of Indianapolis.

Q. State if you attended the election in November, 1882, in this city.—A. I was about the polls the greater portion of the day in my own precinct, and I think I visited two or three other precincts during the day in this city.

Q. Were you at any particular precinct very long at a time?—A. Not long at a time, except my own; I was there the greater portion of the day; that is, a precinct in the second ward.

Q. I hand you this ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket or a ticket similar to the ticket voted by the Republicans in November, 1882?—A. My recollection is that this is the kind of a ticket that was used by the Republicans.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted and used at that election by the Democrats, or a similar ticket?—A. I should think that it was, but my judgment about it is more from the names I see on it.

Q. State if, when the Republican ticket was folded, as it ordinarily is by a voter, if you could tell or distinguish the Republican ticket in the hands of the voter, when folded, from the Democratic ticket similarly folded?—A. You could not with the ordinary inspection of it in the hands of the voter.

Q. You could not tell by observation of the ticket, as folded, one from the other?—A. Not without a close i spection. I suppose if a person would get close to it he might distinguish it by the thickness of the paper in the hands of the voter, but by ordinary, casual inspection of it in the hands of the voter, folded as tickets are usually folded for the purpose of voting, you could not distinguish the difference.

Q. I will ask you what you may know about the difference in the tickets voted at elections in this city previous to 1882?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. My recollection is only general as to that. I could not go into particulars, but I know that there has generally been enough difference in the tickets so that by a close inspection of them you could probably tell the difference when they are folded.

Q. Both by the weight and the width of the tickets?

(Objected to, as leading.)

A. I do not know; yes. There is sometimes a difference in the width and sometimes a slight difference in the color of the paper or tinge of the paper, or something of that kind, by which the difference could be told.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you a candidate at that November election, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Your name is one of the names on that Republican ticket?—A. My name is one of the names on that Republican ticket.

Q. You said that ordinarily, in the hands of the voter, casually—just looking on—you could probably not tell the difference between this Republican and Democratic ticket. I will ask you, if you were standing right near the ballot-box by the chute watching carefully with the design and desire of ascertaining what ticket a man was voting, and if the voter came up and held his ticket in his fingers in that way [indicating] and handed it to the inspector, and the inspector were to take it in his fingers the same way and just hold it in his hand, could you not tell that that was the Republican ticket?—A. I don't know; I did not try to distinguish them in that way.

Q. I ask you what you could do?—A. I cannot tell which ticket that is that you have there.

Q. You cannot tell that?—A. No, sir.

Q. I hold these two tickets together, in that way [indicating].—A. You can press them together. I judge that the one next to you is the Republican ticket, and that the other is the Democratic ticket.

Q. How would you tell that difference?—A. You have them pressed together and there seems to be a difference in the thickness.

Q. Is there not a marked difference in the thickness?—A. There is a difference in the thickness.

Q. And cannot you tell that Republican ticket by handling it if you take it in your hand?—A. I think I could tell that from the other.

Q. And you could tell it by its thickness?—A. I could tell it from the handling because it is thicker paper; I could tell it from the thickness of the paper, but not from the general appearance of it, except from the thickness of the paper.

Q. If you had occasion to see a ticket of each kind unfolded, and watched them folded, and carefully looked at them being folded and ascertained definitely so that you could tell the difference with your fingers, and had then gone to the chute, and you were to see the ticket held as I hold this now [indicating], do you not think you could watch there and tell the Republican ticket as it was held by the end, before going into the box, by sight?—A. I don't think I could with any certainty; I just examined that ticket in your hand a moment ago.

Q. You could tell by feeling?—A. Yes, sir; I could tell it by feeling.

Q. How?—A. By its weight and thickness

Q. Then your eyesight would not be as valuable in the instance I have named, about telling that ticket, as your sense of touch?—A. I think not; you get very close.

Q. I am not very close.—A. I say if you get very close and can see the difference in the thickness of the paper.

Q. And if you familiarized yourself beforehand with them, do you say, standing close and looking on——

A. (Interrupting). I do not know that; I am unable to say, because I made no such test as that; I am simply saying that standing and looking at the voter coming up to vote his ticket with it folded as voters usually fold them, ready to go in the box, that from the mere outside appearance of the tickets you could not distinguish them.

Q. I understood you to state that? I asked you a different question.—A. I stated that I had made no such test as you mention.

Q. Did you watch the election there carefully that day; did you stand near the chute in the attitude I named?—A. I watched the election carefully; I did not lean up in the chute, or anything of that kind; I was personally interested in it; I was on the ticket, and I may say this, that I watched it with the care which the average voter about the polls would watch it.

Q. You did not watch it in the manner I named a while ago; to get up and try to ascertain what ticket a man was voting?—A. I did not watch it in that manner.

Q. You spoke of previous elections, and the tickets. Can you give us an instance where, at any previous election, a ticket of the same material and same thickness was used as this Republican ticket that has been shown you here that was used in November, 1882?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. No; I do not know that I can.

Q. Then you never knew a ticket as thick as this, and of this material, to be used by any party before at any election?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. Well, I don't know that I do.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. When Mr. Wilson took these two tickets in his hand and held them up before you there a while ago, about how far was he from you?—A. About three feet, I should think.

Q. I will ask you if, when he held the ticket up before you, it was not the fact that you could not tell one from the other except by taking the two together?—A. I could not tell until he took the two together and held them compressed in his fingers, and then I noticed that one was a thicker ticket than the other.

Q. Voters never vote them, do they, with two tickets in their hands, voting one and holding the other?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

A. I never have seen them do it in that way; no, sir.

JOHN L. McMASTER.

CALVIN L. DIVINE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. C. L. Divine; age, 51; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a printer.

Q. What particular position do you occupy as a printer?—A. I am superintendent of the Daily Journal.

Q. How long have you been in that position?—A. About ten years.

Q. Are you familiar with the different qualities and grades of paper?—A. Well, yes; somewhat.

Q. Take that ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A, to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and state whether or not you ever saw that ticket, or one similar to it, before.—A. I do not know; I suppose it is the ticket that was voted last fall.

Q. In 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct, second ward.
Q. Did you stand at the polls and watch that day?—A. Well, I was around three or four different polls that day; I did not stay long anywhere.
Q. State, if you know, what material that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. About 80-pound paper.
Q. What kind of paper is it?—A. News; 80-pound news, I would call it; you might call it book.
Q. Has it any other name that you would call it in the trade?—A. No.
Q. What is the color of that ticket?—A. White.
Q. Is it plain white?—A. Plain; it is not calendered.
Q. What is that kind of paper known as in the trade?—A. I suppose this would be called "book" or heavy "news;" I could not call it to mind just now; but I have seen a paper occasionally that would have an issue just like that.
Q. Take this ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and state the material upon which that ticket is printed.—A. I judge that is about 36 "news." It may run to 40.
Q. State what difference, if any, there is between the paper upon which that Democratic ticket is printed, and the paper upon which that Republican ticket, which you now have in your hand, is printed.—A. The only difference I see is that one is heavier than the other; a heavier grade.
Q. What is the difference in the color of the two tickets?—A. They are both white. Some paper is a little whiter than others. For instance, paper that is made in Pittsburgh is whiter than paper that is made some place else.
Q. What grade of white do you call those two tickets?—A. "News."
Q. What grade of white, I mean? Is it a tint of buff or a plain white?—A. Plain white paper. There is no tint about it; not any more than there is a difference in those two papers. I think it is in the water in which they were made. They are both plain white paper. In a roll or ream of white paper some may be a better or a purer white than others.
Q. Can the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed be used for lithographing purposes?—A. I do not know that I can answer that question. I do not know anything about lithographing.
Q. I now hand you a ticket marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, and headed "Republican ticket," being the national ticket voted for General Garfield in this city, in 1880, and I will ask you to state what kind of material that ticket is printed on.—A. It is plain white paper.
Q. What particular quality is it?—A. Well, it would be heavy "news" or "book" paper; very heavy "news."
Q. State the difference between the paper upon which that ticket is printed and the paper upon which the Republican ticket voted in 1882 was printed.—A. They are about the same quality of paper, and about the same weight.
Q. Is or not one a little heavier than the other?—A. Well, in fact I don't know that I could tell. If I had a piece of some size I might tell. This has been handled and broken.
Q. You mean the National ticket voted in 1880?—A. Yes, sir; I judge that they are both the same paper.
Q. Is there not a difference in the color of the paper?—A. Not that I can see.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked as Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the State ticket voted for Governor Porter and others in 1880; and I will ask you to state the material upon which that ticket is printed.—A. It is plain white paper.
Q. What particular grade of paper; is it "print," "book," or what?—A. I would call it "news;" it is not "book."
Q. That is "news" paper, you mean?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the finish of that paper?—A. It is uncalendered, plain white paper.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit E, to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the national ticket voted in this city in 1881, and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that is?—A. These two are the same.
Q. You say "these two;" what do you mean?—A. One is the Democratic, and the other Republican; I say they are the same paper. There is a slight difference in the color.
Q. You say the Republican State ticket of 1880 and the Democratic ticket of 1880 are the same?—A. Yes, sir; about the same quality of paper.
Q. Is that "news."—A. Yes, sir; that is "news" paper.
Q. I will now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit D, to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the State ticket voted for Franklin Landers in this city in 1880, and I will ask you to state the material upon which that ticket is printed, if you know?—A. That is plain white "news" paper.

Q. Tell what distinguishing mark, if any, there is on the face of that ticket, on the head of it, or any other place?—A. Any one could distinguish that to see the face of it, or the head of it, on account of the flag and flourishes.

Q. What kind of a heading is that?—A. It is a cut of a flag, with the words "Democratic Ticket" engraved with it. It is plain type worked in flourishes. The flourishes are put in there. The flourishes are type, and the other is a cut.

Q. Is that a wood-cut or an engraving, if you know?—A. It is a wood-cut. It is engraved. I judge that is a metal cut.

Q. State if there are any distinguishing marks around the name of Franklin Landers, such as are used in ordinary printing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are those marks?—A. Flourishes in type.

Q. Is that a necessary part of the printing of the ticket?—A. No, sir; it is not necessary at all.

Q. State if there are any distinguishing marks around the name of Mr. Lemon in there?—A. There are.

Q. What is that?—A. A flourish. They are put in there for some purpose. I do not know what. They are not necessary to the printing of that ticket.

Q. State if a "paster" could be placed over the name of Mr. Landers or Mr. Lemon's name on that ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.)

A. No.

Q. Why?—A. Because it occupies too much room. It is too wide for the ordinary paster. I should judge it was made for that purpose—to prevent a paster from covering the name up.

Q. How is the name printed on there; is it in a straight line or on a circle or curve?—A. It is curved.

Q. Is the name of Mr. Lemon curved or straight?—A. It is curved also; a half circle.

Q. I will ask you to state what kind of paper those several tickets that you have had in your hands are known to be in the trade?—A. Well, I should pronounce them all to be plain, white "news" paper, but of different weight.

Q. Would you call them all "news" paper?—A. Yes, sir; I would. The fact of the matter is the difference between "news" and "book" paper is—there are some newspapers that use heavier paper than that. The Evening News will use about a 25 or 30, and the Journal uses about a 40, and the Sentinel uses about a 36, I think.

Q. That Republican ticket voted in 1882; I will ask you to state about what the weight of that paper would be per ream of 500 sheets, 25 by 38 in size?—A. This is about what we call 80 pound paper. I judge it is that. This paper runs up as high as 120. I judge this is about an 80-pound paper. Of course I can not tell unless I would weigh it; but that runs up as high as 120.

Q. I will ask you to state what is known as plain white paper.—A. I do not understand the question?

Q. What is plain white paper?—A. I do not know that I understand what you are driving at.

Q. You know what white paper is, I believe you said. What is known and understood among paper and book men as plain white paper?—A. Well, any paper that is uncalendered, or anything that there is a single ply, but when you come to two ply, you would call it card-board, and three ply and four ply. After you pass from plain white paper it runs into card-board.

Q. Is that Republican ticket which you have in your hand, that was voted in 1882, calendered paper?—A. It is uncalendered paper. It is plain white paper.

Q. What is the weight of a ream of that paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed, voted in 1882, per ream, being 480 sheets per ream, size 25 by 38?—A. I judge that is about 36. It may run to 40. I used to handle this paper in large sheets, and with this small piece I do not know that I could guess at it on the pound. I think it is probably 40 pounds to the ream.

Q. You were at the election that day, you said, I believe, in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if a Republican ticket was folded as ordinarily folded by voters when voting, if you could tell or distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, thus folded, in the hands of the voters?—A. I think not.

Q. State if you made any effort that day to distinguish or tell the difference by the appearance of the tickets?—A. I did not. I do not remember anything of the kind.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Then in answering this question last put to you by Mr. Peelle, that is simply an opinion as to whether you could or not distinguish them. You did not make any experiment with them, and did not try?—A. I did not. I know I cannot tell now which is the Democratic ticket and which is the Republican ticket, looking there.

Q. One of them is partially concealed behind the other and you see only one side and part of the end.—A. I can pretty well see them both.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a printer; I am superintendent of the Daily Journal.

Q. You are foreman?—A. I am the superintendent of the concern—press room, stereotype room and mail room.

Q. Does the journal do any job printing?—A. No, not at present.

Q. How long have you been connected with the Journal in the capacity in which yau are acting now?—A. About ten years.

Q. Were you ever in the business of buying and selling paper?—A. I have bought a great deal of paper.

Q. Were you ever in that business?—A. I have been in the job printing department in the business; I have worked 35 years in the business.

Q. Were you ever engaged in the buying and selling of paper as a business?—A. No.

Q. Were you ever engaged in the manufacture of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did I understand you to say that this Republican ticket and this Democratic ticket were both printed on "news" paper?—A. "News" paper? Yes; I would call them both "news" paper.

Q. What is the difference between "news" paper and "book" paper?—A. Simply the weight and finish. Book paper is a better finished paper and heavier weight.

Q. How is that difference produced in the weight and finish?—A. I do not know; I never manufactured any paper. The only difference I know between them is that one is a heavier, finer paper than the other.

Q. You do not know how it is produced?—A. It is all the same paper, I believe, except on one the rolls are opened up and allowed to run a thicker paper.

Q. What is the stock that is used in manufacturing and making "news" paper?—A. I do not know that I could tell you the ingredients. Some of it is made of rags and some of it is made of straw. Good book paper is made of rags, I suppose, from what little knowledge I have of it. I never manufactured any paper. I do not know anything about manufacturing paper.

Q. How do you prepare the stock?—A. I do not know. You mean the straw that has been through the mill and sent out in pulp, and how it was reduced from rags to pulp. That is about all I know about it. I never was engaged in the business.

Q. I understood you to say that this Republican ticket was uncalendered. Now, as a matter of fact, is not that paper calendered?—A. No, sir.

Q. Neither side?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is calendering on paper?—A. Calendered paper is the hard finish that is placed on—the ordinary finish.

Q. How is it done?—A. I do not know.

Q. And you say there is no hard finish on either side of that paper?—A. I think not.

Q. Look at it carefully.—A. I have looked at it carefully, when I made my answer. I say that it is simply a heavier paper than the other.

Q. Uncalendered?—A. Yes, sir. I would pronounce it uncalendered. When I was buying that paper if a man would give me that for calendered paper I would not buy it.

Q. At what stage is book paper calendered?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know how it is calendered?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is calendered paper?—A. A hard finished paper; that is all I know. It has a glazed finish.

Q. All paper that is hard finished is calendered?—A. All that is glazed finished. If they are glazed they are calendered.

Q. Could not it be glazed with varnish?—A. I never heard of it.

Q. You say that all that is glazed is calendered.—A. I say that all hard finished paper is calendered—what they call calendered.

Q. Did not you say that all calendered paper was glazed paper?—A. All calendered paper is hard finished. I think I used the word "glazed" wrong. That is all.

Q. All that you know about calendered paper is that it is hard finished?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all that you know about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not know how that finish is secured or produced?—A. I do not.

Q. You do not know how it is acquired?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is "news" paper ever calendered?—A. I think not. I never saw any that was calendered.

Q. Is that Republican ticket "sized"?—A. No.

Q. No sizing in it?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Has that Democratic ticket any sizing in it?—A. I do not think there is. I would say "no."

Q. Is it not true that this Republican ticket is sized?—A. I think not.

Q. Not at all?—A. I think not.
Q. Do you know how paper is sized?—A. I do not.
Q. Do you know what sizing is?—A. I do not know that I do understand the question at all.
Q. You do not know what sizing is?—A. I do not know what you mean by it. I suppose you mean glaze.
Q. No, sir; I do not mean glaze. I mean sizing. I asked the question, and you say you do not understand the question.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I understand you to say that neither the Republican ticket nor the Democratic ticket is sized?—A. Not as I understand sizing.
Q. What is your understanding of sizing?—A. Calendering.
Q. Sizing and calendering are the same thing.—A. Something that is placed over the top of it—hardness.
Q. What did you say was the color of this Republican ticket?—A. White.
Q. Is there any bluing in that?—A. As I said before, I do not know. If I saw a ream of that paper—there might be a change, which is produced, as we understand it, by water; a different kind of water. Some paper we get will run white—a pure white—and there may be two kinds of color in that same ream. That paper is what is considered white paper.
Q. Is it not true that that paper is what is called "toned" paper?—A. No, sir. It was never toned intentionally. It has not been toned what we call intentionally; if it was, it was very poorly done.
Q. Then it is not toned?—A. I think not.
Q. Do you know how paper is toned?—A. I suppose they mix color in the water to tone it. As we call it, to tint it.
Q. To produce what is termed in the trade white paper, do you know what coloring matter is used?—A. I do not.
Q. As a matter of fact, is it—— A. (Interrupting) Made in the water. Perfectly clear water, with good material, makes white paper if they do not tint it. They will color the water if they want to tint it.
Q. Is it not true, on the contrary, that what you call white paper is secured by the use of bluing?—A. I do not know that. I never manufactured any paper. I do not know that I could answer that question at all, for I do not know how it is made. I could only give you my ideas of the way it is made. I know that we buy of that paper, and we have the excuse that the water was bad, or something that gave a different color.
Q. I call your attention to this material that I hand you here, and I ask you to inspect that, and I will ask you what that is; what do you call it?—A. I think that is about a two-ply cardboard; it feels altogether different from this other paper (Exhibit A). I think that is the very lowest quality of cardboard.
Q. You say this material is the lowest quality of cardboard?—A. Yes, sir.
(The paper shown to the witness was identified as shown witness, C. L. Divine, on cross-examination, and at the same time marked by me as follows: "Indianapolis, P. C. Hendricks, stenographer, Nov. 7, 1883.")
Q. You have spoken of the weight of paper. What would be the weight of that material that I have shown you, per ream, size 22 by 28, in your estimation?—A. I should think that was about 100 pounds.
Q. I will ask you what is the color of that?—A. It is white.
Q. Plain?—A. Plain white.
Q. It is paper, is it not?—A. No; it is cardboard, I think. I would call it cardboard.
Q. Is not cardboard paper?—A. Yes, sir; of course it is paper.
Q. Cardboard is paper; it is a kind of paper. Is that paper calendered or not?—A. I should judge it was calendered.
Q. You say it is calendered?—A. No; I would not call that calendered.
Q. Is it sized?—A. I think not.
Q. Neither sized nor calendered?—A. Not what I understand the sizing to be.
Q. I now show you a specimen of paper, and I will ask you what is that material?—A. It is called b otting paper.
Q. Is it white?—A. Yes, sir; I should call it white.
Q. Is it plain?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You said it was blotting paper. Is that paper?—A. I suppose that comes under the head of cardboard—soft card.
Q. You say blotting paper is soft card?—A. Its common name for it is blotting paper.
Q. Cardboard is paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON: I hand this to the stenographer and ask him to mark it for identification without now filing it as an exhibit, and to mark it as follows: "Shown to C. L. Divine on cross-examination, Nov. 7, 1883. and at the same time marked by me, the stenographer, as follows: 'Philadelphia.' Paul C. Hendricks, stenographer."

Q. What do you say is the weight of this material last shown to you?—A. I don't know that I could tell you. I do not know anything about the weight of that.

Q. You do not think you can tell anything about the weight of that?—A. We do not use it in our business; I do not know anything about it.

Q. Did you ever print a newspaper on material like that Republican ticket?—A. I do not know that I have; I cannot remember whether I have or not; we get hold of all kinds of paper; it is possible I have.

Q. Did you ever print a newspaper on material like that Republican ticket?—A. Regularly?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see a newspaper that was published that used that material—that stock?—A. Well, I do not know. I remember of "Bill Nye's Laramie Boomerang" being published on paper similar to that; something very nearly as heavy. I do not know how often it was publis ed. I remember of picking it up in the office once or twice, and our attention was called to that heavy paper on which it was printed. I do not know whether it was his regular edition that is printed that way every week or not.

Q. How many papers do you think you ever saw printed on that heavy paper?—A. I cannot tell. I have been in the newspaper business 35 years and I have seen some very heavy paper, and some very fancy paper.

Q. Did you ever print paper on such material as that?—A. I think not.

Q. Is there any paper in this city printed on as heavy paper as that—any newspaper?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. How many papers, weeklies and dailys, are published here—do you know?—A. I do not know.

Q. Are there not about 25 and 30?—A. I suppose there are.

Q. Did you ever know it in the history of any of these papers?—A. No, sir; it would cost them too much money.

Q. Is that an expensive paper?—A. I do not know whether it is so expensive. Newspapers, as a rule, get about as cheap as they can.

Q. What did that cost per ream—25 by 38?—A. I do not know what that would be worth. I suppose paper like that would cost—they could get a contract on that I should think for about 6½, if it run regularly and the office would take that paper and run it regularly. I suppose it would cost them 6½ cents a pound.

Q. What do you say is the cost of the material upon which the Democratic ticket is printed, 25 by 38?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. What they pay for it?

Q. Yes, sir; what is that worth, 25 by 38, the Democratic ticket that Mr. Peelle showed you?—A. Well, now, at this time I suppose that paper could be bought for 6 cents.

Q. And you say, in other words, that the cost of the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed is just about the same as that upon which the Democratic ticket is printed?—A. No sir; I said that was about 6½. I judge that would be about the price of it, and the price of the Democratic ticket 6 cents.

Q. They both sell for the same by the pound, or with the fraction of a cent difference?—A. I think there is one-half cent difference—maybe ¾, in the two papers.

Q. What would be the weight of a ream of the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I said I thought about 80 pounds.

Q. And of this Democratic ticket, 25 by 38—each one the same size?—A. I do not know.

Q. Is it not true that one of those papers is about three times as heavy as the other?—A. No, sir; it is not three times as heavy as the other. It is not quite twice as heavy again. It is not more than about once more.

Q. I will ask you, is not this Republican ticket printed on "plate"?—A. No, sir; I think that is not, to understand the question. That has been set up in type, and it may have been stereotyped afterwards, but no live man can tell that. They may have had so many of them to print that they had to stereotype a dozen to work from.

Q. You don't seem to understand what "plate" is. Do you know the meaning of the term in the sense of "plate" as plate paper. Sometimes billed as "plate" and sometimes billed as "plate paper," and catalogued as "plate paper." I will ask you what is plate paper?—A. I do not know what it is.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I do not know. I have been a Republican for a long time. I do not know whether I am now or not.

Q. Do you mean it in earnest when you say you do not know whether you are a Republican now or not?—A. I will tell you what I am. I am an out and out temperance man. That is my idea of politics. It is a dead sure thing that I am not a Democrat. I wish to be understood as saying that the Republican ticket voted in 1882 is "book" paper. I was in error in saying that it was "news."

C. L. DIVINE.

Specimen shown to C. L. Divine.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

(In pencil:) Shown to the witness, C. L. Divine, on cross-examination, Nov. 7, 1883, and at the same time marked by me, the stenographer, as follows: Philadelphia, Paul C. Hendricks, stenographer.

A. W. WISHARD, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. Albert W. Wishard; 29 years old; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Lawyer.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the November election, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. First precinct, 20th ward.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. All day.

Q. I will ask you to state if you noticed the voters as they had their tickets folded and would go the polls and deposit their ballots?—A. I did.

Q. Take this ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and state if that is the ticket that the Republicans used on that day, or one similar to it.—A. That is the kind of a ticket that was voted by the Republicans.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used and voted by the Democrats on that day, or one similar to it?—A. That is my recollection; that it was a similar ticket to that voted by the Democrats.

Q. What position were you in that day at the polls?—A. The earlier and better part of the day I was around the polls peddling tickets; from 10 o'clock to 4 I was Republican challenger.

Q. You are a Republican in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, it could be told by you or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded, as men were going to the polls to deposit their tickets?—A. The question is, as they were going to deposit their ballots?

Q. Yes, sir; as the tickets were ordinarily folded and voted when the voters go to the polls to deposit their ballots; could you tell that Republican from the Democratic ticket?—A. I could not.

Q. State if you made any effort that day to distinguish or tell one ticket from the other, by observation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you, or not, able to tell one from the other; as they were thus folded, I mean?—A. No; not as they were cast.

Q. Do you know the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. I do not know anything about the qualities of paper only as I see it.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you tell the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket when they are folded, holding them in your hands, with your knowledge—having compared them beforehand—having found out that one was on a different paper from the other?—A. I can if I have both tickets in my hands.

Q. If you have carefully considered the matter and studied those tickets and felt of them, do you think, at the polls, thus folded, the tickets should be held in the hands, you could tell whether it was a Republican or Democratic ticket from its weight and its stiffness and its indisposition to bend?—A. I might, from a careful examination and study of the difference between the tickets that day of the election, for the reason that I was challenger. and the practice and custom is that the challenger stands right at the end of the chute next to the ballot-box, and that the person that votes stands between the Republican and Democratic challenger when they cast their vote, and for that reason I made a careful examination of the two tickets, and I can take the two tickets in my hands and feel of them and test the paper, and tell the difference; but when the voter comes up and holds out his ballot and hands it to the judge, if I were two feet from him, or, in fact, if I were as close to him as I could well get in the distance that was allowed between the challengers and the inspector that received the ballot, I could not then distinguish between the tickets.

Q. You could not distinguish between them if you got a fair chance to see it if it was held up within two feet of you; held by the ends of the fingers and then passed to the inspector and held by him for a moment in his fingers; you could not tell whether it was the Republican or Democratic ticket?—A. I could not ordinarily. If I could see the distinguishing mark or see the face of the ticket I might.

Q. As folded and by the paper?—A. As folded and by the paper I could not tell the difference.

ALBERT W. WISHARD.

N. R. RUCKLE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. N. R. Ruckle; age, 45; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. Printing.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. I suppose, altogether, 23 or 24 years.

Q. What particular position do you hold just now?—A. I am superintendent of the Journal Company.

Q. What is the difference between the "Journal Company," and "The Indianapolis Daily Journal"?—A. They are two separate and distinct establishments altogether. They have no connection with each other.

Q. You have been a Republican in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit A, to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you if that is the ticket, or a similar ticket to the ticket voted in this city in 1882, by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used in this city by the Democrats at the November election, 1882, or one similar?—A. I do not know, sir. I did not see the Democratic ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked with the words "Democratic Ticket" in a flag, and marked as Exhibit D, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats in this city, at the State election in 1880?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Q. What kind of a heading is that on that Democratic ticket, if you know?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant, for the reason that the ticket speaks for itself.)

A. It is an engraved head.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked as Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the ticket used in this State in 1880 for governor and other officers, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at that State election, if you remember?

(Objected to as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.)

A. To the best of my knowledge and belief, that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the National ticket voted for Garfield in this city in 1880, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at that election, if you know?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, purporting to be the National ticket voted in this city in 1880, for Winfield Scott Hancock and others.—A. I cannot answer as to that, of my own knowledge.

Q. You do not know whether that is the ticket used, or not?—A. I cannot say, except what it purports to be; I have no recollection of it.

Q. Please examine that Republican ticket voted in this city in November, 1882, and state what material that ticket is printed on, if you know?—A. That is paper.

Q. What is it called?—A. I know what it was sold for by the man who sold it; it is supposed to be a cheap kind of plate paper, is what it was sold for.

Q. Is it a heavy or light grade of plate paper?—A. A light grade of plate paper.

Q. State what that is known as in the trade.—A. That is a pretty hard question for me to answer. A plate paper ought to be sized a little more on one side than the other. A regular plate paper, as it comes out of the mill, is sized more on one side than the other. This appears to be sized on both sides about alike. It is about the quality of heavy white book, extra material, sized and calendered both.

Q. State whether that is or not plain white paper.—A. It is white paper. I do not know what you call plain white, because every paper in the trade has some name to it, and has some way or other to distinguish it; and if you would ask a man for plain white paper he would not know what you wanted.

Q. Unless you would ask another question?—A. He would ask what you wanted to use it for—a book, or something else.

Q. Is it a fact or not that you would not be able to tell what a man wanted if he should come to you and ask simply for plain white paper?—A. If he would ask for plain white paper we would ask him what quality.

Q. Is it or not a fact that print, book, flat, and plate paper is plain white paper if it is not tinted or ruled?—A. We call everything white paper that is not tinted or ruled.

Q. I will ask you to state the kind of material that that Democratic ticket is printed on that was voted in this city in November, 1882.—A. I suppose that would be classed as an extra "news" or "No. 3 book."

Q. Would you or not call that plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; that is white paper, and it is plain.

Q. Would there be any difference in the use of that term between the Republican and Democratic ticket?—A. I should call them both white paper.

Q. What is meant by the term "plain white paper"?—A. I could not answer that. If a man would come in and ask for plain white paper we would give him plain white paper out of that of which we had the most in stock.

Q. State the kind of material that Republican ticket, being the National ticket voted in this city in 1880, is printed on.—A. It is about the same thing as that State ticket.

Q. You mean the Republican State ticket voted in this city in 1882?—A. No, sir. I do not think it is. It has been handled a good deal, and you can't tell whether there was much calendering on it or not.

Q. Could you state what difference, if any, there is between that and the Republican ticket voted in 1882?—A. Yes, sir. There is a difference in the quality of the material and a difference in the finish.

Q. What is the difference in the quality of the material?—A. I think one is a finer material than the other, and better sized.

Q. Which one is better sized?—A. I think this one [indicating].

Q. The Republican ticket voted in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how paper is made?—A. Not practically; no, sir.

Q. The Journal Company does a large publishing business, does it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been connected with that concern?—A. I have been, the last time, since September, 1877.

Q. You formerly owned the Indianapolis Daily Journal, did you not?—A. I formerly owned a controlling interest in the establishment.

Q. That was when the Journal Company and the Daily Journal were connected?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you do a large jobbing business in the Journal Company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of work do you do there?—A. We do a general business of all kinds.

Q. State if you do any work for the county offices, in furnishing duplicates and records for county offices.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls in this city at the election in November in 1882?—A. No, sir, except to vote.

Q. You did not stay at the polls?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you to take that Republican and Democratic ticket voted in this city in 1882, and look at the tickets and tell what difference there is in the external appearance of the two tickets, if any.—A. As they stand now there is an apparent difference in the weight.

Q. I mean simply in the color of the tickets and the external appearance.—A. There is a little apparent difference in color.

Q. What is the difference? Can you define it?—A. I cannot. There are different degrees of whiteness.

Q. Are there different degrees of white paper—plain white print paper, plain white book paper, plain white flat paper?—A. I do not suppose any two runs of paper out of the same mill are exactly alike. I suppose if you take a run of paper at one time and one at another, you may distinguish a slight difference between them.

Q. I will ask you if you remember election tickets to have been used in this city before on paper similar to that ticket upon which the Republican ticket voted in 1882 was printed?—A. I do not recollect any printed on exactly the same material.

Q. You do not recollect the same material?—A. No. sir.

Q. Do you remember the material upon which the Democratic ticket has been printed in years past, as compared to that Republican ticket or Democratic ticket?—A. I do not recollect clearly enough to specify the difference. I know they used different tickets at different times; but I cannot remember now.

Q. State if you can recall a time within the last ten years, in this city, when the Democrats used paper as heavy, or heavier, than the ticket upon which that Republican ticket is printed.—A. I think at one time they used heavy "news" paper for a ticket. I could not specify what time it was.

Q. Was it as heavy as that Republican ticket?—A. I cannot tell without comparison.

Q. What is your recollection of that?—A. It was about the same.

(Objected to—also the preceding question and answer—as incompetent and irrelevant.)

Q. What official position have you held in this county?—A. I was sheriff of the county.

Q. How long?—A. Four years.

Q. What years were they?—A. December, 1870, until December, 1874.

Q. Can you now recall, at the election in 1872, whether or not the Democrats had tickets as heavy as that ticket which the Republicans voted in 1882?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and as leading; and for the reason that there is no evidence that the tickets cannot be produced, and no effort shown to produce them, and this would be secondary evidence.)

A. I could not be certain it was that year.

Q. State what kind of material that Republican ticket voted at the State election in 1880, for Governor Porter and others, is printed on.—A. No. 1 white "book," I think. It has been handled some. It is pretty hard to tell what kind of a finish it has.

Q. You think it is No. 1 "book"?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. We would like to find out what year it was that the Democrats used as thick a ticket as that which you have described. Do you recollect who were the candidates that year?—A. My recollection is not clear at all of that matter.

Q. Do you think it was in the last ten years? May it not have been before the last ten years; may it not have been 12 years ago?—A. I will not be certain about it. I am not positively certain that it was not twelve years ago.

Q. Did you ever know any ticket printed on "plate," or plate paper, to be used at any election?—A. I do not think I did.

Q. Did you ever print a book on plate paper? I do not mean the engravings for illustrations in a book, but I mean the book itself. Did you ever print a book on plate paper?—A. We never did; no sir.

Q. I understood you to say that this Republican ticket is a quality of plate paper.—A. I could not answer as to that. It was bought as a cheap quality of plate. That is the name given to it by the man that sold it, to the best of my recollection.

Q. What would you say it was? Would not you say as a matter of fact it is "plate," or plate paper?—A. I am not an expert in papers, but I should say that it was nothing more than extra good, heavy-weight white paper.

Q. Does not paper, as a matter of fact, in the trade embrace card-board, card and blank plate, and every grade of plate?—A. We do not class cards and things of that kind as paper.

Q. Are not they paper?—A. They are paper in the sense that they are made from paper material. They are not known to us as paper.

Q. They are white?—A. Some of them are.

Q. And they are made from the same material that paper is made from?—A. Yes, sir; but by different processes.

Q. Made by different processes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is not plate paper made by a different process than "news" paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If card-board, or bristol board, or blank, as you describe it, is plain, and is white, and is made from the same material that paper is, would you call it plain white paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. What would you call it?—A. I would call that card-board, card-board. Card-board is generally built up of different thicknesses, and a mill that makes card-board will not make this kind of paper.

Q. Is it not true that card-board is filled up—a card, or single sheet—I will ask you about card; if that is not true as to card-board, speaking as ——A. [Interrupting.] My impression is that the materials are different. While they are generally the same, there is a different mixture and different adjustment of it.

Q. Is it not, in point of fact, that the material is the same but the difference comes in the degree or amount of calendering or pressure that is brought to bear?—A. No, sir; I think there is some difference in the material of the paper clear through. Each one is made out of a different grade than the other.

Q. Is there not a very inferior grade of card that is made out of the same material, in point of fact, out of which a grade of "news" paper is made; is not that a fact?—A. The cheaper grades are made of common material.

Q. In the higher grade, the card is made out of the same material out of which the cheaper grade of "news" paper is made?—A. I think they are made out of a better material.

Q. You think it is better material?—A. I think that the card-board is better material.

Q. Than any newspaper material?—A. I should think so.

Q. Even an inferior grade of card-board?—A. That is, white card. There is an almost infinite variety of cards that are made of all kinds of materia'.

Q. Is plate, or lithographic plate, made out of a superior or an inferior grade of paper to that of card-board?—A. The lithographic papers and cards both are made of the same material as ordinary print, except they size them differently. They are about the same grade as print paper, and the only difference is the sizing is put on differently.

Q. Do you say that this Republican ticket of November, 1882, is sized?—A. Yes, sir; that is sized.

Q. Is it calendered?—A. Yes, sir; that is sized and calendered paper. All papers are sized some, and all papers are calendered some, except the very commonest cards.

Q. Ordinary newspaper is not calendered in the sense in which this is calendered, is it?—A. I do not think it is.

Q. Is it not true that this went through, what is termed in the business, the calendering machine, and is not the machine made of a series of rollers, one above the other, where a tremendous pressure is exerted when the material is sent through, and is it not true that newspaper is put through such processes?—A. I never saw any mill where book paper was made. I cannot answer as to the process.

Q. Is it not true about that; that newspaper and certain grades of print paper, many of them, are simply run through what is called an iron roller—what is called a roll—as they pass off instead of being put through the calender machine?—A. I do not know anything about a paper mill; I understand that every paper goes through a calender roll.

Q. You may term that a roll if you please, but the calender machine is a different thing, is it not, from what you call a roll?—A. That I do not know.

Q. I will ask you if it is not true that a machine that makes print paper cannot make plate paper?—A. What do you call print paper? We call print paper common news.

Q. Newspaper?—A. For every different grade of paper you use a different machine; the common grades are made on an ordinary class machine, and better grades on a better machine; the mill has more to do with it than anything else—the material and the finish.

Q. The question I asked you was, whether or not it was not true that you could not make on the same machine that you made print paper this plate paper?—A. I do not believe you can.

Q. Do you say that the paper was sold to you as plate—as a quality of plate?—A. I did not buy it; I could not answer as to that.

Q. Were you present when that was bought?—A. I was in the room—in the house.

Q. Did you see the bill?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see the bill of that?—A. I suppose I have seen it.

Q. Was it not billed to your office as plate paper; I mean as plate?

(Objected to for the reason that the bill would be the best evidence.)

A. I could not answer that; it was probably a bill of so much paper of such a size and weight. It is not plate paper, I do not believe. I am not an expert on that question. As I understand, plate paper can only be made in a certain mill, and that was made in a "book" mill, I think. Plate paper is sized on one side more than the other, and this appears to be on both sides alike.

Mr. PEELLE. What ticket is that; Exhibit Q, is it not, to the deposition of William Wallace?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you say that is book paper?—A. It is pretty hard to say definitely about that.

Q. Is it not true that one side is sized more than the other?—A. If it is, it is very little.

Q. Is that not "toned" paper?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Look at this Democratic ticket marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you if that is toned?—A. No, sir.

Q. You think not?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is the difference in the color, if any, between these two tickets, the Democrat and Republican tickets?—A. This Democratic ticket probably had an extra bleach.

Q. Is not that color what you term in your business a dead white, or plain white; that Democratic ticket?—A. It is a white paper, and the white papers do not all agree in shade—even papers made out of the same material.

Q. I know that, and that is the reason I ask you about the tone.—A. Neither of these papers are toned, in the sense in which I would say toned, at all.

Q. Which is the whitest, the Republican or the Democratic ticket?—A. It is pretty hard to say. They are both white. It is hard to tell what whiteness consists of. So far as the color is concerned, the color appears to be about the same. There is a little difference in the finish of the paper.

Q. Is not plate paper or plate sold in your business as "plate"? Is it not bought and sold as "plate"?—A. Not any more than other papers are bought as "news" or "book, and each paper is bought by its own classification.

Q. And card is also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And card-board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if they are plain white, they are termed plain white?—A. I would not term card-board white paper.

Q. It is made of paper?—A. I would not call it white paper.

Q. Now, what is it that distinguishes that?—A. It is hard to tell what the difference is; I suppose they are both of a good deal the same material.

Mr. PEELLE. When paper is manufactured into card-board, it ceases to be called paper in the sense in which it is understood in the trade?

The WITNESS. We do not call it paper. It is billed as card-board, as every class of paper is billed by its own classification as "prints," "book," "news," &c.

Q. The Indianapolis Journal spoken of is the organ of the Republican party in this State?—A. I do not know anything about its being the organ. It is a Republican paper.

Q. Is it not to-day the organ of the Republican party?—A. I cannot to-day answer that question.

Q. You know Mr. Divine?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is connected with that paper?—A. Yes, sir; and I know it is a mighty good Republican paper.

N. R. RUCKLE.

L. G. DYNES, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. L. G. Dynes; age, 43; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a printer by trade, and a newspaper publisher.

Q. Do you publish a paper in this city now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the name of that paper?—A. The Indianapolis Gazette.

Q. Is it a Republican paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in the printing and newspaper business?—A. 25 years.

Q. And in that time have you handled, buying and selling, different grades of paper?—A. Yes, sir; to a considerable extent, I believe. I have always had a job office connected with the newspaper.

Q. Have you a job office connected with your paper now?—A. Yes, sir; a small one.

Q. I will ask you to take this ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and state what material that ticket is printed on, if you know.—A. I should call that plain white paper.

Q. Has it any other name, or designation, known in the trade?—A. I should designate it as "flat" paper, heavy "flat."

Q. What is heavy flat paper?—A. It is a sized and calendered paper, but better, really, than "news" or "book" paper. It is used for printing blank notes on and mortgages, &c., and tickets and blank books of some kinds.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket;" state what kind of material that is printed on, if you know. It is the ticket marked "Exhibit B" to the deposition of C. F. Halliday.—A. No. 2 book, I think.

Q. Is that a good quality, or a lower grade, or a better grade?—A. A good quality of book, sized and calendered, I think, although it has been handled so long that the calender does not show.

Q. State whether or not print, book, plate, and flat paper is or is not calendered.—A. Print?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think print is not calendered, although I have not handled any of that plate paper, to amount to anything.

Q. Is book and flat paper calendered or not?—A. There are some grades that are not calendered in book; I think the lower grade, No. 2, is not calendered; I do not know from manufacturing the paper; I only know from buying.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," voted in this State for Governor Porter in 1880, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and will ask you to state what kind of paper that is, if you can.—A. No. 2 book.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket" in a flag, purporting to be the State ticket voted in this city in 1880, for Franklin Landers for governor, and other candidates, and marked Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that is.—A. That is heavy "news" or "print"; I would like to examine that, however, by light [going to window]; I would say that that is a number 1 book, sized, but not calendered.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," purporting to be the National ticket voted in this city in 1880, for Mr. Hancock for President, and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state what kind of material that ticket is printed on, if you know?—A. No. 2 book.

Q. Sized or calendered?—A. Both sized and calendered.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and purporting to be the National ticket voted in the State for Garfield in 1880, and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state the material upon which that ticket is printed, if you know.—A. Flat paper.

Q. What difference, if any, is there between the material upon which that ticket is printed, and the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed, that was voted in this city in 1882?—A. I could not say that there is any difference, but that this National ticket, voted in 1881, has been handled a great deal.

Q. Is there any difference in the weight of the paper? and, if so, state it.—A. I do not think there is any difference in the weight. There may be a trifle. That has been handled so much that it is softer—it appears to have been.

Q. Is there any difference in the quality of the paper?—A. I think not. I think they are both flat.

Q. If there is any difference in the weight you may state it.—A. I think not.

Q. State, if you know, about the value of this paper upon which the Republican ticket was printed, that was voted in 1882, per ream, 25 by 38.—A. I think paper of that quality would be rated at about 16 to 18 cents per pound. I do not know what the weight of that paper would be. It would depend upon the size it was cut. Flat paper runs in many different sizes. The weight would depend on the size of the paper.

Q. What is the value of this Democratic ticket voted in 1882, size 25 by 38, per ream?—A. That would depend on the size of the paper, too.

Q. 25 by 38.—A. The price per pound was, no doubt, 12 to 14 cents.

Q. For that grade of book?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much that paper weighs per ream—that Democratic ticket, voted in 1882—25 by 38?—A. I think about 40 pounds.

Q. What will this Republican ticket weigh per ream of the same size?—A. I think about 80.

Q. Then you think that Republican ticket is on paper about as heavy again as the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. I will ask you to state now—there are the tickets voted in 1880 at the State election, and the National election of 1880, and the tickets voted in this city in 1882 for Congress, and I will ask you to state the kind of paper that these several tickets are printed on, as known in the trade.—A. White paper.

Q. What kind of white?—A. Designating them in a lot, I would just say plain white paper.

Q. When paper becomes manufactured into card-board, is it then called paper, or card-board?—A. Printers do not know it by any other name than card-board.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls much during the day?—A. I was there all day.

Q. In what capacity did you act?—A. I held the tickets and gave them out part of the time.

Q. State if you observed the tickets as they were folded and voted there by the voters as they are ordinarily folded. Did you observe them as they were going to the polls to deposit their ballots?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket which you have just had in your hands, voted in this city, November, 1882, was folded and in the hands of a voter going to the polls to deposit his ballot, it could be told by you from the Democratic ticket?—A. I made no such test as that, but I do not think I could.

Q. Did you or not, as a matter of fact that day, distinguish the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, when folded and being voted by the voters?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were at the polls there all day?—A. Part of the time at the chute.

Q. You may state, if you know, of any one who distinguished the Republican from the Democratic ticket at the time, similarly folded and in the hands of the voter going to the polls to vote?—A. No, sir; I did not hear anything of that kind.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. There lays before you on the table, just in the order in which Mr. Peelle called your attention to them now, the Republican ticket voted in 1882 by the Republicans, as Mr. Peelle stated, and the ticket headed "Democratic ticket" voted in 1882, as Mr. Pelle stated, and four other tickets, one a National ticket, voted at the Garfield Presidential election, and one of them a Democratic ticket with a flag at the head of it, &c. Do I understand you to say that those are all made on the same kind of material?—A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. Did you say that they were all known in the trade as plain white paper?—A. That is the way I know them. That is the way I understand them to be known. If they were all shown to me, as they are, in a lump, I should say they were plain white paper.

Q. Why do you say that?—A. Because they are white, and because they are paper, and because they are not ruled.

Q. Simply because they are white, and simply because they are plain and unruled, and simply because they are paper.—A. And made substantially of the same material.

Q. What is paper any way?—A. As I said, I am not an expert in paper-making, and am really unacquainted with the process by which paper is made. I understand it is made from pulp, and manufactured from linen rags or wood, &c., and straw, and we get different grades of print, and common news paper, and made from different materials. I understand the difference to be a great deal in the process of the manufacture of it.

Q. Is there not a broad difference in the character of the material used? Is there not a broad difference also in the character of the process through which it is put before it becomes paper?—A. I would only give that as an opinion.

Q. The experts never give anything but opinions and surmises; that is what they are called for.—A. If I give my opinion, I will say that there is a difference every way; a difference in the material that goes to make up the different quality of paper, and a still greater difference in the manner in which the pulp is treated. I understand that book paper is made by passing through a different number of machines, and perhaps through the same machine a second time would make a difference. I do not know that that is really the process.

Q. You say that card is much the same in your business as board?—A. As card-board.

Q. Is there not a difference in the ordinary card-board?—A. I do not understand that there is a difference between them.

Q. Is not lithographic plate much the same in your business as plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not advertised and catalogued as plate, as a matter of fact?—A. Just plate?

Q. Just plain plate.—A. No, sir; it is not to my recollection. I will not say it is not. I do not think it is.

Q. If you were going to an establishment to buy a ream of lithographic plate paper, as you term it, would you ask for plain white paper?—A. I would ask for plate paper.

Q. And if you were going to buy card-board, you would ask for card-board?—A. Yes, sir; and if I was going to buy news paper I would ask for news paper: if I was going to buy book, I would ask for book paper.

Q. And if all these were white, you would call them white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if they are plain, they are plain white, are they not?—A. Yes, sir; I expect so.

Q. And if they are paper, they are plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified a moment ago that what you called this Republican ticket was flat paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please explain to us what flat paper is.—A. Flat paper—I suppose the dealers call it flat paper to distinguish it from folded paper. I think likely that is their idea of it. It runs in glazed paper that we use in printing blank notes, and a better grade of paper than book paper, but, I should think, made of the same material.

Q. Is it not the fact that there is a broad distinction in the trade, so far as nomenclature is concerned, between what is termed book paper and blank flat paper, I mean?—A. I know this: If I would go to a paper-house and inquire for flat paper they give me this kind of paper.

Q. And they do not give you book paper?—A. They do not give me book paper, because I have not asked for book paper. They make the same distinction they would between book paper and news paper.

Q. Can you tell me how flat paper is made?—A. No, sir; not from experience.

Q. Do you know, as an expert, how flat paper is made?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know the processes through which it is put?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the difference between flat paper, as you term it, and lithographic plate?—A. Yes, sir; I think I do.

Q. What is the difference?—A. There is a different finish. One side has a finer finish than the other, while the flat paper is the same on both sides.

Q. The only difference between lithographic plate and flat paper, is simply that one is highly finished on both sides, and the other not so much on one side?—A. I think so; but in my business I do not handle plate paper so much. It is a rare thing when I handle plate paper, but flat paper I handle almost every week.

Q. You print visiting cards from flat paper, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. What do you print visiting cards from?—A. Card board.

Q. Don't you print them on what is known as blank?—A. No, sir. We print them on what is called blank card-board. When you come to card board, there are various kinds of card-board. Blank bristol, china, &c. We print them on bristol card board.

Q. Is it not known in the trade as bristol card board?—A. I suppose it is. It is catalogued as bristol card-board and china card-board. We have names for them.

Q. Did you ever see any card board as thin as that Republican ticket?—A. I do not think I ever did.

Q. Is it not true that there is a quality of bristol card-board that is thinner than that Republican ticket?—A. If there is, I never have seen it. I think that would be getting too fine for the use of cards.

Q. I will ask you if the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed does not cost about three times as much per ream as the material upon which the Democratic ticket is printed?—A. No, sir. I do not think there would be that difference. I think there would be something like double the difference on account of weight. There is a little difference, too, in the price per pound. Three or four cents difference.

L. G. DYNES.

F. J. VAN VORHIS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. F. J. Van Vorhis; I am 42 years old; I live in Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. How long have you been in the practice of law?—A. Three years, or four.

Q. What business were you in prior to that time?—A. I was a practicing physician.

Q. How long did you practice medicine?—A. About 15 years.

Q. What official position, if any, do you occupy, or have you occupied?—A. I have occupied the office of State senator for this county.

Q. When were you elected to that office?—A. In the fall of 1880.

Q. Have you occupied any other official position?—A. Nothing, except I was for a time a member of the common council.

Q. How long were you a member of the common council?—A. Two years—two terms.

Q. State if you attended the election in 1882 in this city, for Congress, and other offices.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls that day much of the time?—A. All day; yes, sir.

Q. What position did you occupy at the polls?—A. I was challenger of the ward in which I lived, the 6th ward.

Q. What precinct of that ward?—A. I believe it is No. 1. It is the south side of the ward.

Q. Did you see the voters voting that day?—A. Yes, sir; I stood at the head of the chute all that day.

Q. How far were you from the voters as they passed up to the box?—A. I suppose I was three feet from the box.

Q. The ballot-box?—A. Yes, sir; I was at the head of the chute, right at the wall.

Q. I hand you a ticket now headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket, or a similar ticket to the one voted in this city in 1882.—A. I think that is a copy of the ticket voted in 1882.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats that day, or a similar one to it.—A. I think it is.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded and in the hands of the voter going to the ballot-box to deposit his ballot, as tickets are ordinarily folded, whether or not you could tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket, when so folded?—A. Well, all that I could say is that I could not on that day. I could not tell one from the other when they were put in the box, unless I did it by some other means.

Q. By what other means were you enabled to tell?—A. Sometimes we could tell when the voter came up. We could tell when he let the ticket show and we could get a look at the kind of ticket he was putting in.

Q. Did you make any effort that day to see what kind of ticket was going in?—A. Yes, sir. We made a great many efforts to find out from parties how they voted, and we could not make it out.

Q. You could not tell from the tickets as they were held and voted by the voters how they were being voted?—A. Not with any certainty.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," purporting to be the State ticket voted in this city in 1880, and upon which your name appears as the candidate for senator, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if you recollect whether that is the ticket that was voted at that election.—A. That is the ticket, I believe, that was voted in the fall of 1880.

Q. I hand you now a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," purporting to be the State ticket voted for Franklin Landers for governor, and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at that election.

(Both questions objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I believe it is.

Q. State about the difference in the width of those two tickets.—A. There is about a quarter of an inch difference. The Democratic ticket is about a quarter of an inch wider than the Republican ticket.

Q. State if, when those tickets were folded and in the hands of the voter and being voted, you would be able to tell one from the other on account of the width.—A. I do not know certainly whether I would or not, unless I could see them together; then possibly I would be able to tell the difference.

Q. On account of the width or otherwise?—A. On account of the width.

Q. I now hand you a ticket purporting to be the Republican ticket voted for General Garfield in 1880, and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state, if it is your recollection that that was the ticket used at that time.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," purporting to be the national ticket voted for General Hancock, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at that election by the Democrats, if you remember.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. State the difference in the width between that Republican ticket and the national ticket voted in 1880.—A. Something less than a quarter of an inch.

Q. Which is the widest?—A. The Democratic ticket.

Q. State if there is any difference in the length of those tickets.

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the difference in the length?—A. About an inch and three-quarters to two inches.

Q. Which is the longest ticket?—A. The Democratic ticket.

Q. State if those tickets, when folded and in the hands of the voter being voted, could be distinguished one from the other; and, if so, how.—A. I think I would be able to distinguish them by the difference in the width.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understood you to say that when the Republican ticket, voted in the fall of 1882, and the Democratic ticket voted there, were folded, you could not tell the difference between the two as easily as you could the tickets voted at the Presidential election for Garfield and the Democratic ticket—between the tickets alleged to be voted—that you could not tell one from the other. Suppose the two to be folded exactly the same size, you could not tell the tickets voted at the Presidential election one from the other, and the two tickets voted in the fall of 1882?—A. I say I could not tell the difference as I stood at the polls that day. I could not tell the difference, not very readily.

Q. Did you do so at the other election, the Presidential, election in 1880?—A. I cannot say that I did distinguish. I say now I think I possibly could do so by the difference in the width.

Q. Suppose they were folded both the same width, so far as the width of the ticket when folded is concerned, could you then tell the difference?—A. The width of the ticket makes one longer when folded.

Q. Is it not true that the Republican ticket voted in November 1882, is double as thick as the Democratic ticket voted at that same election, when both of them are folded?—A. I do not know that they could be said to be double as thick; it is some thicker.

Q. Would you not guess it was double as thick; hold them both in your hands?—A. Hardly that, possibly so.

Q. And you could not tell the difference between those two?—A. Not by the thick ness, I would not be able to; I am talking about what I did; I was not able to distinguishthem by the thickness. I could not distinguish the Republican ticket folded; that is, with any certainty as to what kind of a ticket a man was voting, unless I got inference from some other source.

Q. Did you carefully examine and compare this Republican and Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I handled them.

Q. Suppose you took those tickets and folded them close, folded them carefully and inspected them that way, and folded them and compared them until you had learned as much about them in that way as possible, and you were to go to the polls and take the stand you did, right at the box, and after so studying and familiarizing yourself with them; you went there for the purpose of watching to see if you could tell them with that sort of knowledge before you, and with that sort of an investigation before you, and with that intent in going to the polls, do not you believe you could tell that Republican ticket if a man held it in his fingers by the end, and gave you a chance to look all around, and handed it to the inspector, who held it over the ballot-box?—A. I think if a man were to give me a chance to examine, as you do there, and held it for the purpose of letting me see it, I might do so; but as they were ordinarily voted that day, by a man coming up with his ticket in his hand, I would not be able to do it.

Q. You could tell the difference in the tickets by handling?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. When I take hold of them as you hand them to me here, I am able to tell one from the other.

Q. You could discriminate by handling and touching what you could not by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do not you believe that the inspector could, under similar circumstances, standing where he did, tell the difference when the ticket was placed in his hands?—A. I do not know. Possibly he might be able to.

Q. If you were inspector could you not have done it?—A. I do not know. I think it is possible I could.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if at elections in this city prior to 1882 there has not always been some difference in the thickness and in the width of the tickets by which, on close inspection—such an examination as Mr. Wilson has been speaking about—you could not have detected one from the other?—A. I think there has been rarely a year when there has been an election when we could not have detected the tickets on close examination. We could not have taken the tickets and folded them without seeing the face of them, and have told one from the other in an examination of that kind. That is a rare thing, and I do not now know, even with these tickets, whether I would feel sure unless I had made some special examination beforehand, whether I could have told the difference.

Q. As a matter of fact, has there not always been some difference since you have been in this city, in the quality of the paper, either in its thickness or in its width?—A. They have never been exactly the same, so far as my observation goes.

Q. And upon close and critical examination you could see a difference?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you ever know an election where the tickets were as different as in the fall of 1882?—A. I think there is more difference, and more striking, between those than between those tickets voted in the fall of 1880.

Q. I am not talking about the face of the ticket.—A. I am talking about the side of the ticket as it would be folded.

Q. You mean to say there is that difference between the ticket voted in 1880 and the difference between the ticket voted in 1882?—A. I mean in folding, when they were voted. I would be more certain to distinguish between the tickets voted in 1880, as they came up on account of the width.

Q. Did you ever know an election to take place here where the tickets in point of stiffness contrasted with the tickets voted in the fall of 1882?—A. The Republican ticket is a stiffer ticket than has been usually used.

Q. Did you ever know a ticket as stiff when folded or as large and stiff as that to be used before?—A. I do not know that I ever did. I do not recollect that I ever did. I am not sure that that ticket is not as stiff—I mean the Republican Presidential ticket voted in 1880.

Q. That is not half as long a ticket as the ticket used in the fall of 1882?—A. No, sir. But you asked me in regard to the stiffness.

Q. I ask you as to stiffness, bulk, and all.—A. Of course the ticket is longer.

FLAVIUS J. VAN VORHIS.

By agreement of the parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Thursday, November 8th, 1883.

THURSDAY, November 8, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

JOHN A. HENRY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. John A. Henry; Indianapolis, Ind.; I am 35.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Practicing attorney in this city.

Q. For how long?—A. About ten years and upwards.

Q. State if you were in this city at the time of the November election, 1882.—A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. I was at that time living in the 3rd ward, in the north precinct—I forget the number of it—and during the day my time was divided between the two precincts of the 3rd ward; part of the time at one and part of the time at the other; most of the time at the lower precinct.

Q. Were you at one or the other all day?—A. Yes, sir; except a short time at noon. The principal part of the day I was at one or the other of the precincts.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there that day?—A. No, sir, not in any official capacity, except as one of the noble army of Republicans.

Q. What particular part did you take at the polls?—A. I assisted in the distribution of tickets. I supplied the voters with tickets, and looked after the votes, and attended to getting them in, and looked after votes that might be challenged, and things of that kind.

Q. Did you act as challenger some of the time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you notice the tickets as they were voted by the voters?—A. Yes, sir; I tried to.

Q. I now hand you the ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket, or a similar ticket to the one voted by the Republicans at that election?—A. It looks like the ticket.

Q. I now hand you the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used and voted by the Democrats on that day, at that election, or a similar ticket?—A. To the best of my recollection it is.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and purporting to be the State ticket voted for governor, and other offices in this State, and marked as Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used on that occasion, in 1880.—A. I presume it is. I cannot testify definitely upon the subject; it looks like it; it might have been; I presume it is.

(Mr. English objected to all of these old tickets as incompetent, and irrelevant, and immaterial.)

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," printed with the words "Democratic ticket" across a flag, and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election.—A. That ticket I remember very distinctly.

Q. Why?—A. From the heading; and I remember the campaign very distinctly; and I remember the distinguishing mark at the head of the ticket.

Q. What is that?—A. The flag, with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across it, and also in the manner in which the name of the candidate for governor is printed upon the ticket.

Q. Look down the ticket to Mr. Lemon's name for sheriff.—A. That I do not recollect as well as the other. I am satisfied this is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," purporting to be the National ticket for this State in 1880, for the Garfield electors, and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used on that occasion.—A. It looks like the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," purporting to be the National ticket for the Hancock electors in this State in 1880, and marked as Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used on that occasion.—A. I should say it was, upon seeing the ticket. I think I remember it.

Q. I will ask you if, when that Republican ticket that I have handed to you, that was voted at the November election, in this city, for Congress, in 1882, was folded and in the hands of the voters, as they are ordinarily folded and voted, you could tell it from the Democratic ticket voted at the same election?—A. I can only speak from my own experience. I tried, in a number of cases, to see what ticket certain gentlemen were voting and I never was able myself to determine, although I observed closely from the time the party would start to the chute until he would get up to the box; and, to the best of my belief, I do not recollect a single instance in which I was able to distinguish the character of the ticket the party was voting from its appearance; not having the opportunity to examine them closely, but simply seeing them in party's hands and observing it as he was going up.

Q. As ordinarily voted?—A. Yes, sir. Of course some men go to the polls and do not fold their ticket at all, and you could see easily what ticket they were voting but those who folded their tickets, and with any apparent effort at concealment, it was impossible, so far as my observation went, to distinguish the tickets of one party from the other.

Cross-examination, by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you act as challenger there that day?—A. No, sir; I did not. I do not think I ever did in my life. In all the elections I have ever been connected with we usually select certain parties to do that work. At the same time, I would communicate with the parties and tell them to challenge.

Q. You handled Republican tickets that day?—A. Yes, sir. I handled a great many of them.

Q. You gave your attention pretty exclusively to Republican tickets?—A. Yes, sir; certainly. I was a Republican. As a matter of course I did not distribute any Democratic tickets, but I had a great many of them in my hands, and saw them frequently.

Q. If you fold those two tickets in your hands after having previously examined them, could you tell that Republican ticket by handling and feeling it?—A. I could tell that Republican ticket from the fact that it seems to be printed on a better quality of paper, as our tickets always have been.

Q. Was it not stiffer than the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; and looked heavier than the Democratic ticket, owing to that fact. It was a littler stiffer.

Q. Is it not two or three times as heavy?—A. I cannot tell you. I am not a judge of paper. I am not a judge upon the subject. I can hardly give an opinion. My own opinion would be that it was as thick again probably.

Q. Just about double?—A. Yes, sir; I do not know whether I am right in that. It is a heavier quality of paper; usually paper runs by the pound. I could not say to give an opinion.

Q. Would not you think when one was double as heavy as the other, and with the finish that was on that ticket (Republican ticket) that you could tell one from the other by feeling in your hands?—A. I could tell one from the other, you might say by feeling, on account of the fact that one was printed on a little better quality of paper than the other. That is the way I could distinguish them.

Q. Could not you tell that from the stiffness of the tickets?—A. Certainly, if you have a chance to take the two tickets and hold them in your hands. As a matter of course you can tell.

Q. In other words, you cannot, by sight, do what you could by feeling in your hands?—A. No, sir; if you give me a chance to examine them I could tell them very readily.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Have you been, in this city, prior to the election of 1882, able to tell the difference between the tickets voted by the different parties?

(Objected to as incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant.)

A. I would say, in answer to that, that there has never been a time since I have had anything to do with politics but what I have been able to tell the difference between the tickets by feeling them. I mean the difference between the Democratic and Republican tickets. Our tickets have always been on a better quality of paper than the Democratic tickets. I do not know why it was. I never could tell by the appearance of the tickets, but I could always tell by taking the tickets in my hands.

Q. State whether you could, or not tell the difference between the tickets in the elections prior to 1882, on account of the difference in the width of the tickets?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I remember the tickets used to be printed different widths until the law fixed the width. Of course you could tell.

(The first question and answer on re-examination being read to the witness by the stenographer, the witness continued as follows:)

A. I know it was frequently talked about at the polls, and the reason usually given upon the subject was, that the quality of paper that the Republicans used for tickets was a better quality of paper, and more easily preserved on election day and kept better and nicer. That was the reason.

Q. What was said, if anything, about the use of that kind of tickets on account of damp, wet weather?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. The tickets would preserve better and were not so liable to be creased and crumpled if they were damp or to become separated, or anything of that character, in the hands of the men that handled them at the polls. The men were not careful sometimes. I know when I was chairman of the central committee here that matter was talked over at that time, and we used them at that campaign.

Q. You were chairman of the city central committee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of tickets being printed on paper similar to the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, at any election prior to 1882?—A. My recollection about the matter—of course I cannot recollect about the printing, but my recollection is that we used always paper similar to that, only this is a little bit heavier than the ticket we used before, as to weight.

Q. State the difference, if any there is, between that Republican ticket and this national ticket voted for Garfield in 1880.—A. In looking at them there does not seem to be so much difference; there is not much difference. I never observed them closely nor particularly; I say now that they are about the same.

Q. The national ticket has been handled a little more?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is more ruffled?—A. Yes, sir; I never observed them before.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you ever know, in the history of this town, so far as you can recollect, a ticket to be used by any party which, when folded, made a bulk as large as that Republican ticket that was used in the fall of 1882?—A. I cannot say that I have a recollection of a ticket as heavy as that was, that was used, except the Garfield ticket in 1880, which seems to be as heavy, but it was not so large and would not make so much bulk.

Q. It is not half as large.—A. It is about half as large.

Q. And when folded it would not be but half as large?—A. About.

Q. Did you ever know any party, at any election in this city, to use tickets that, when folded, would make as big a bulk, and would be as stout and large as that ticket used by the Republicans at the November election, 1882?—A. I cannot say that I have any recollection of any ticket that would make quite as large a bulk.

Q. You say you have always been able to tell the difference in the tickets?—A. Yes, sir; by feeling. When the voters would come to the polls we would frequently talk about the tickets and about the quality of the paper used.

Q. And you could tell them by feeling?—A. I never have seen the time in my experience at the polls when I could tell what ticket a man was voting; I have heard men talking about it, but I never was able to determine myself. When the ticket was exposed in some way, or the heading was exposed, we could see. The custom was for both sides to watch the tickets as they were voted, more or less.

Q. Have you not heard people around the polls say that they could tell the difference?—A. I have heard men on both sides talk very learnedly as to how particular men voted.

Q. Have you not heard people say, down here at the last election, at your very precinct, that they knew the ticket a man was voting from the appearance of the ticket—at the last Congressional election?—A. I would say no, sir.

Q. Did you not hear a good deal of talk?—A. I heard a good deal of talk with reference to one side of the question, and that there were certain gentlemen who had formerly been Republicans who were supposed to be working for Mr. English, and I heard a good deal about the votes—a great deal as to the number of votes they were putting in for Mr. English, and the means they used to do it. There was more talk about the means they were using to do it than anything else. That was at the lower precinct.

Q. Please give the names of those gentlemen.—A. Of those gentlemen?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. My recollection is that one of them was Mr. James Armstrong. He was not only working for Mr. English, but for the whole Democratic ticket that day.

Q. I will ask you again. You did not answer the question. You volunteered another statement. Did not you hear Democrats and Republicans, but principally the Democrats, talking about that Republican ticket there at your precinct on that day; that they could tell what ticket a man was voting, and that he was voting the Republican ticket, by the appearance of it?—A. I say again, no.

Q. You did not?—A. I did not. I do not remember of having heard a man say that he could tell by that means.

Q. Did not you hear there a great deal of criticism on account of the character of the Republican ticket, on account of its thickness and stiffness and appearance?—A. I heard talk about it being thicker.

Q. Did not you hear a great deal of criticism on account of its appearance, thickness, &c.?—A. I would say no, in answer to your question. The Democrats were criticising it on account of its weight and congratulating the Republicans with providing themselves with that kind of a ticket for the reason they could be distinguished. I would say that the only talk I heard about the ticket was from the fact that it was heavier than the other.

Q. You have been an active Republican politician in this city?—A. I have, sir.

Q. And very active, and you have been chairman of the Republican Central Committee?—A. Yes, sir; I have been chairman of the Republican central committee.

Q. And you were an active Republican politician in that November election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are now holding a Government appointment in Washington City?—A. Yes, sir; law clerk of the Post-Office Department.

Q. You have been in office in this city for a good time?—A. I was in the city attorney's office three years.

Mr. PEELLE. As city attorney?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; for three years. I went out in January, 1882.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Mr. Wilson asked you if this ticket, when folded, would not make more bulk than any ticket you have seen before. I will ask you if that would not depend upon the length of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I so stated in my answer; that it was larger than the Garfield ticket of 1880.

Q. That is, you mean longer?—A. Yes. sir.

Q. And wider, is it not?—A. I did not notice the width. There is not much difference in the width. It is a little wider.

JOHN A. HENRY.

HENRY JAMESON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. Henry Jameson; 35 years old; 346 N. Illinois st., Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a physician.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have never taken much part in politics?—A. Not particularly more than to vote.

Q. State if you were at the election in this city in November, 1882.—A. I was.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. I was at the fifth ward, at the corner of Illinois street and North.

Q. I will hand you this ticket marked "Republican ticket" and Exhibit A, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if this is the ticket, according to your recollection, that was voted at that election.—A. It is.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, purporting to be the ticket voted in 1882 at the same election, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used on that occasion.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded in the hands of the voter, as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters, whether or not you could tell one from the other.—A. I do not think you could tell with enough certainty to swear that one was the Republican and the other was the Democratic ticket.

Q. I mean, could you tell by observation of the ticket in the hands of the voter what ticket a man was voting?—A. If it was in the hands of another voter?

Q. Yes, sir; in the hands of the voter, I mean.—A. I think not, sir. If it was in your hands and you examined it closely, you might possibly suggest that that was the Republican ticket, simply because the paper seems heavier; but I think probably not with enough certainly to be absolutely certain.

Q. That would be by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But by observation of the ticket in the hands of the voter when he came up to deposit his ticket?—A. I do not think you could tell the difference.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you make an effort that day, November 7th?—A. Not specially. I do not know that I did.

Q. Were you challenger there?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not stand by the chute and watch the vote?—A. Not as challenger.

Q. Did you stand right up at the ballot-box any time that day?—A. I was there at different times; an hour or two hours during the day.

Q. How close were you to the ballot-box?—A. I was as close as a man gets standing at the chute.

Q. Was there not a row of men on each side of the chute between you and the voters?—A. Yes, sir, usually; but I was among them and talking to them.

Q. Could not you tell these tickets if you had examined them carefully at the polls, and they were handed to you and you felt of them, one and the other, and, after looking at them, could you not have told the difference?—A. I say if they were in my hand and I had taken the ticket and felt of it. The Republican ticket seems to be printed on paper that is a little heavier. I do not know how much heavier, but it is a more consistent paper and a heavier paper.

Q. Look at them there now, and I will ask you if it is not double as thick?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or three times as thick?—A. No, sir. I should say this is about a 30-pound paper, and the other a 45. That is, of course, only a guess. It is not three times. I am positive of that, because I know enough about blank papers to know that much. I know 60-pound paper is exceedingly heavy paper, and a 30-pound paper is a light paper.

Q. Would not you say that Republican ticket is more than a 40-pound paper?—A. I said it was more than 40; I said it was about 45.

Q. Is it not over a 60-pound paper?—A. I think not, sir.

Q. Is it not over a 70-pound paper?—A. I think not.

Q. Is it not over 75?—A. If it is not over 70, it is not over 75. So far as that is concerned, that is only guess-work, by looking at papers and being somewhat familiar with papers of this character used in printing catalogues, and I am positive it is not over 75, and not over 70 pounds. My opinion would be that that was a 45 or 50 pound paper, 50 pounds at the outside, and the other a 30 or 35 pound paper. There is one thing that I am absolutely certain of, and that is that it is not three times as heavy as the paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed.

Mr. PEELLE. You are not an expert as to the weights of paper?

A. No, sir; I only know by general observation.

Q. You have been in this city how long?—A. Off and on all my life I have resided in this city.

Q. You have attended elections and voted often before, have you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not central committeeman in your ward at that time?—A. I think not. I was central committeeman when I lived in the 11th ward, not in the 5th.

Q. Did you ever know a ticket of the bulk and size of the Republican ticket to be used by any party at any election in this city before?—A. I do not know of their not having been used. As a matter of fact I would not know, and it would not be natural for me to know whether the ticket was just that weight or not. I have seen tickets, I think, of that consistency, used at elections here.

Q. Did you ever see one that was as bulky and as heavy?—A. I think I have.

Q. What election?—A. That I could not say exactly. I simply state that my general recollection is that election tickets are usually printed on paper of about that consistency. I believe that this ticket (Democratic) is on paper that is flimsier than usual.

Q. In point of fact you say that you think tickets have been used heretofore generally as thick as this Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir. I will not swear to it, but I have seen, I think, election tickets on several occasions that more nearly approached that than this (Democratic).

Q. Name any election.—A. I will not name any special election. I will name any one of the elections—almost any one of the elections. I mean that the tickets would be more bulky to fold than the fold of this ticket.

Q. What ticket?—A. I said that would be bulkier in fold.

Q. Within what time?—A. Since 1878.

Q. Through all the elections since that time? When; what election? If you can tell what it was?—A. As I said before I cannot state at what particular election. I could not do that. I remember though, that during the elections when I was slightly interested in the 11th ward, when the tickets were, in some instances, printed upon a smooth calendered white paper and much more nearly the weight of this Republican ticket of 1882 than the Democratic ticket of 1882.

Q. What election was that? The State election?—A. This?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir. And I do not, of course, confine myself to State elections. My recollection is in connection with city elections.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and headed by Albert G. Porter, and I will ask you if that ticket is not, if anything, thinner and lighter than the Democratic ticket voted in November, 1882.—A. No; I think that is a heavier ticket. It is apparently thinner because it is a highly calendered paper.

Q. Is it thinner?—A. It is apparently thinner because it is calendered.

Q. Is it not thinner?—A. It is heavier. It may be thinner. It is a heavier paper than the other.

Q. I show you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," in evidence here as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, with a flag at the head of it, and I will ask you if that ticket is heavier than the Democratic ticket?—A. This seems to be about the same weight; about the same kind of paper.

Q. Is it as thick?—A. I think so. I think it is about the same weight.

Q. I show you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," voted for Winfield Scott Hancock and others, and I will ask you if that is heavier paper than the Democratic ticket voted at the November election, 1882.—A. It is heavier paper. It is a calendered paper, and that gives it the impression of being thinner. I should say it was about the same thickness, but it is a heavier paper.

Q. Take that ticket that you say is heavier, would its bulk be anything like that of the Republican ticket voted in November, 1882?—A. It would probably be a bulkier ticket, but not as heavy.

Q. Bulkier than the Republican ticket voted in 1882?—A. I do not want you to misunderstand me. I say that the ticket once folded, is a great deal bulkier than this Republican ticket.

Q. You refer to the national ticket voted for Winfield Scott Hancock when you say it is bulkier than the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; take the appearance in a man's hand—let me modify that. I am talking simply of the quality of the paper, and I would modify that statement this much—if it had as much surface. If it had as long a surface; if it was as long a ticket.

Q. I am asking you, taking it now as it stands.—A. Take it now as it stands, only being half as long, it would not be as bulky. I thought you were trying to get at the size of the ticket.

Q. No, sir.—A. No, sir; that has nothing to do with it. I can fold this ticket (Republican ticket voted in 1882) so that it will not occupy more than half the space of the other.

Q. Do voters usually do that?—A. Some do and some do not; that is a matter of taste; some voters do not fold them at all.

Q. Take the Republican ticket of November, 1882.—A. If you will permit me to do that.

Q. Fold them both alike.—A. No; I will not do anything of the kind. Voters do not do that. I simply say I can fold this ticket so as to make it more bulky than the Republican ticket. I want to show you that the question of bulkiness has nothing to do with the weight of the paper. [Witness folded the two tickets.] I say that that ticket is more bulky than that; this Democratic ticket—the Winfield Scott Hancock ticket.

Q. You say that the Winfield Scott Hancock ticket is more bulky than the Republican ticket voted in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; as I fold it.

Q. As tickets are ordinarily folded, what would you say about it?—A. I will say that there is no ordinary rule for folding it.

Q. Have you folded those tickets in an ordinary way, or an extraordinary way?—A. I have folded them, in one sense of the word, extraordinary, but in a way that any voter might fold his ticket.

Q. You folded that ticket by pressing and creasing and bending the Republican ticket voted November, 1882, and the other you just bundled together and did not crease at all.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at this Republican ticket voted for Garfield, and I will ask you if that ticket, when folded, would not make a ticket of the same bulk as the Republican ticket voted November, 1882?—A. It would not; because there is not the amount of paper in it. That depends solely upon the fold of the ticket.

Q. I will ask you then, whether or not, in the last ten years, there has been voted by either party, or any party, a ticket which, when folded, would be as bulky as the Republican ticket voted in 1882?—A. I did not say anything about the bulk, sir. I said there were tickets voted that were as heavy.

Q. My question is as to the bulk when folded.—A. I would simply say that that depends solely upon the fold. You cannot get at it specifically, to give the bulk for any ticket. I can fold one piece of paper very small, and take a piece of paper half as large and make twice as much bulk.

Q. You are supposing that about an average fold?—A. The average voter does not fold them any specific way. There is no rule. One man may fold his ticket lengthwise and make it bulkier, or he may fold it end to end.

Q. There is no uniform rule?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then by a non-uniform rule, has there, in the last ten years, been used a ticket showing in bulk of fold like the weight and dimensions of the Republican ticket?—A. That qustion cannot be answered. You can fold your ticket as you please. I can fold a small ticket so it will be bulkier than a large ticket. I say to you that this paper—the Republican Presidential Garfield ticket—is the same kind of paper this [indicating] is. It is a highly calendered paper, probably fifty pounds.

HENRY JAMESON.

D. W. COFFIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. D. W. Coffin; I am 42 years old; I live at 432 N. Pen sylvania street, Indianapolis.

Q. Your business?—A. Wholesale grocer.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. Eighteen years.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. Never.

Q. I will ask you to state if you attended the election in this city for Congress in 1882, and other offices.—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. In the 6th ward. I do not know what precinct; it was on the west side of Fort Wayne avenue.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. As challenger, or looker on?—A. I was there looking on.

Q. Were you there much of the time?—A. All day.

Q. Were you not acting as challenger that day?—A. No, sir; I did not act as challenger. I never acted as challenger at any time.

Q. I will ask you to take that ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and state if that is the ticket voted, according to your recollection, at that election.—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, voted at the same election by the Democrats, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket, according to your recollection, that was used there that day.—A. Yes; I think it is. I do not remember all the names on it. I know the majority of them, and they were the names that were voted for at that time.

Q. I will ask you to state if when this Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when in their hands, and they go up to the ballot-box and deposit their ballots, if you could tell one ticket from the other by looking at them at the polls.—A. I know I could not, because I tried to discover that thing that day. No, sir; I do not think I could. I was about there, and seeing a ticket folded I could not tell from the outside, or when it was folded, which it was.

Q. And you made some effort to do that?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. And you failed to discover what ticket a man was voting by observation, when the ticket was folded?—A. I could not tell. I remember one time of one man that I was very sure voted the Republican ticket. I thought, from the appearance of it, that it was the Republican ticket, and had told some one I thought so, and afterwards it turned out that it was the Democratic ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You said that you were sure he voted the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the appearance of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the appearance of it?—A. It appeared like the Republican ticket.

Q. What is the appearance of that Republican ticket?—A. A piece of white paper folded up.

Q. Is it not a pretty stiff ticket?—A. Yes; the paper is stiff.

Q. It is a good deal thicker than the Democratic ticket, is it not?—A. I think it is a heaver ticket.

Q. Is it not two or three times as thick as that Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; it is not two or three times as thick.

Q. You say it is not double as thick?—A. No, sir; I do not believe it is double as thick; it is heavier paper.

Q. And has a much superior finish to it, has it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is stiffer, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it not that reason that guided you in trying to determine what kind of a ticket the man was voting?—A. No; I do not think it was.

Q. You did not pay any attention to that?—A. No, sir; I could not say that I did.

Q. You say you were not a challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those two tickets when you get them in your hands; feeling them when they are folded up?—A. I do not know; I did not handle any Democratic tickets.

Q. You did not investigate those very thoroughly then?—A. No, sir.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican.

Re-examination by PEELLE:

Q. What is the color of that Republican ticket?—A. They are both white.

Q. Plain white?—A. Yes, sir; I should think so; there may be a slight difference in the color.

Q. Is that what is popularly understood as plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir; I should take them both to be white tickets.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. In point of fact, is not that plate paper?—A. These tickets have been handled a great deal. There may be a difference in the color. I would not want to swear whether that was the color of the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket on the day of the election. I say they were both white. There is a difference in the color now, a slight difference, but whether that was the color exactly that day I would not want to swear, but I say they were both white tickets.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You mean difference in shade, when you say difference in color?—A. Yes, sir; there is an apparent difference in shade in these two tickets now.

Q. But they are both white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there is white paper of different shades?—A. Yes, sir; certainly.

DAVID W. COFFIN.

H. C. ALLEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. H. C. Allen; age, 39; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. How long have you been an attorney?—A. Since 1870.

Q. Have you ever held any official positions in this State?—A. I have been judge of elections, if that is an official position.

Q. State if you were judge of the election in 1882, of the Congressional election.—A. That is my recollection.

Q. I now hand you this ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that election, if you remember.—A. I recognize that as being just such a ticket as they voted.

Q. I hand you now a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket that was voted at that election, if you know.—A. That is my recollection; that that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, purporting to be the ticket voted for Franklin Landers and others in 1880, and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of Mr. William Wallace, and I will ask you if you recollect that as the ticket that was voted in 1880 at that election.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I would say that my recollection is not so good on this subject, but that my judgment is that that is the same ticket that was voted at that time.

(Objected to as not competent.)

(Continued.) In answer to that question I would say that my recollection is that that is just such a ticket as was voted at that time.

Q I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," purporting to have been voted for Governor Porter and others at the State election in 1880, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was voted at that election, if you remember.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is the same ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," purporting to be the national ticket voted for Winfield Scott Hancock in 1880, and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that election, if you remember.

Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I think it is.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and purporting to be the national ticket voted for the Garfield electors in this State in 1880, and marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted at that election.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if that Republican ticket that I hand you, voted at the election in this city in 1882, for Congressmen, when folded in the hands of the voter, as tickets are ordinarily folded, and taken by the voters to the ballot-box and deposited, could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket voted at the same election?—A. If I am to understand that the way they are ordinarily folded is to fold them up carefully and——

Q. As tickets are ordinarily folded by voters.—A. When folded up carefully, by sight they cannot be recognized; at least I could not recognize them by sight.

Q. Did you make any effort that day to recognize tickets by sight as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir; we did in commenting in sitting there and receiving tickets.

Q. You say you were not able to distinguish the tickets?—A. I was not able to by sight.

Q. I will ask you if any complaint was made to the board that day at all in reference to the Republican ticket, and if so, what?—A. I have no recollection of any complaint.

Q. Were the tickets counted without objection?—A. Yes, sir; they were.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What precinct were you at?—A. The 2nd precinct of the 2nd ward.

Q. Who was the inspector at that precinct?—A. My recollection at this election is that it was Mr. Thomas Endly.

Q. You were the Republican judge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you during the voting?—A. Usually I was standing near the window with my face outside, or looking outside. We were not always in the same position during the day.

Q. Could you tell these tickets by handling them when folded?—A. My recollection is that I could by giving them attention when I had them in my hands; I understand that you refer to the tickets voted for Congressmen.

Q. Yes, sir; the Republican ticket voted in 1882, I had reference to.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How were those tickets counted; were they taken out one at a time and counted or were they taken out and piled up and counted?—A. I do not recollect in regard to that. I know they were carefully and accurately counted.

Q. Is it not true, as a matter of fact, that these tickets were taken out and the Republican tickets were laid aside in a pile in given numbers—5s or 10s, or more—without even opening them in many instances to see what was written on the face of them?

(Objected to as not proper cross-examination.)

A. No, sir; that was not done.

Q. You say they did not lay the tickets aside at that precinct in the approach to the count; not in the count, but in the approach to the count, were not they laid aside in piles and separated in that way to a certain extent before counting them one by one?—A. Nothing, unless the man that was taking them out of the box should have shoved them aside in the box, aiming to use certain of the tickets.

Q. Then you counted them one by one?—A. Yes, sir; I think that is the way. I know we were very careful to count the tickets. Mr. Harper was one of the judges, and I know that everybody was satisfied with the count that was there.

Q. You heard of no objection that day to this Republican ticket?—A. There was none made to the board.

Q. Did you hear any objection?—A. You mean any remark?

Q. Yes, sir; criticism or objection—either remark, criticism, or objection?—A. Nothing made to the board. I do not know that I heard anything outside. There was no objection made about the ticket, unless it was joking remarks by persons about the intention of the party in having such a ticket.

Q. What were those remarks—made by who?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. What was the objection?—A. I do not recollect; there was no objection made to the board.

Q. What were the remarks?—A. My recollection is that if there was anything said at all it was remarks by men as to whether these tickets could be folded double or not, so as to open; whether they would open themselves.

Q. Whether they would spring open?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they objecting to them on that ground?—A. No, sir; they were not.

Q. Not to the board?—A. No, sir.

Q. Any outside objection?—A. Nothing at all but light remarks that we might have made at the time, and I do not recollect of any remark. If there was any objection made it was made about them; it was that way.

Q. That was all?—A. That was all. I am confident that was all.

Q. Could you look down in the ballot-box without taking the tickets out, and tell from the appearance of that Republican ticket that it was the Republican ticket, and discriminate from the Democratic ticket, if you could get a good look at the tickets that were voted?—A. I do not know; it would depend on the condition of the ticket; if it was unfolded I could, and if it was concealed, I could not.

Q. You could do it without seeing the names on the ticket?—A. I think I could if it was loose.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I ask you to take these tickets, one being the Republican and the other the Democratic ticket voted at the national election in this city, in 1880, and I will ask you to state the probable difference in the width of those two tickets.

(Objected to as not proper re-examination, and incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. There is probably an eighth of an inch difference in the width of the tickets.

Q. State if there is not a difference in the weight of the paper upon which those two tickets are printed, or the feeling of them.—A. There is quite a difference in the feel of the paper.

Q. Which is the better paper?—A. The Republican ticket is the stronger paper.

Q. I will ask you if that Democratic ticket, voted for Hancock in 1880, could not more readily be told and distinguished from the Republican ticket, voted in 1880 for Garfield, than the Republican ticket could be told from the Democratic ticket voted in 1882?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes; much more readily.

Q. Why?—A. One principal reason is on account of the width.

Q. Is there any difference in the color?—A. There is a difference in the appearance of the paper. A greater difference than there is in the other.

Q. Could you tell the difference in those tickets by feeling, the same as you could the tickets voted in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. State if in the elections in this city prior to 1882 there has or has not been a difference between the tickets voted by the different parties in this city, so that you could tell one from the other by feeling the thickness.—A. My recollection is that the tickets have always varied in one respect or the other, so that a man could detect them by examination and without seeing the face of the ticket.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Your recollection is that, by an examination of them, without seeing the face of them, heretofore you could tell and distinguish the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if that Republican ticket to which Mr. Peelle has called your attention, voted for Garfield, is not on a material very similar or similar somewhat to the Republican ticket voted at the November election for Congressman?—A. In the body of the paper and in the appearance of it it is very similar.

Q. Did you ever know a Democratic ticket voted at any election similar to anything like the thickness of either one of those two tickets?—A. I do not recollect in regard to that. I believe that the Democratic tickets have usually been on lighter paper.

Q. Then you have never known the Democrats to use a ticket as thick as this Republican ticket that I have just named?—A. I do not recollect now.

H. C. ALLEN.

GRANVILLE WRIGHT, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Granville Wright; 35 years old; residence, 375 North Delaware street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the election in 1882 in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. 2nd precinct of the 10th ward.

Q. What portion of the day was you there?—A. I was there the principal portion of the day—most of the day.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there as challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you look on at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you observe men as they voted?—A. Yes, sir; to some extent.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that election.—A. The same kind of a ticket.

Q. I how hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," purporting to be the ticket voted for Governor Porter, and marked as Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at the election in 1880.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed Democratic ticket, with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, purporting to be the State ticket voted for Landers for Governor, and others, in 1880, in this city, and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used on that occasion.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I remember that very distinctly.

Q. Why do you remember it distinctly?—A. On account of the flag and these hieroglyphics about Landers's name, and also Lemon's, and I remember the vote principally on those two, and against them, and I called the attention of some of them at the time I first saw them that I supposed on Lemon's name one of Harry Adams's pasters could not be placed over it without it being observed.

Q. Harry Adams was the Republican candidate for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir; and then on account of the width of it. I thought it was wider.

Q. I hand you a ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the national Republican ticket voted in 1880 by the Republicans for General Garfield. Please examine that, and state if that is the ticket that was voted at that time.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and purporting to be the ticket voted for the Hancock electors in this city in 1880, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that election. It is the ticket marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace.

(Objected to for the reasons stated in the objection to the previous question.)

A. I think it is.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket voted for Congressman in this city in 1882, when folded in the hands of the voter, as tickets are ordinarily folded and voted by voters, it could be told from the Democratic ticket voted at the same election, by observation, both being folded in the same way, or similarly folded.—A. Well, I do not believe it could be; I do not believe I made any attempts, but it would be some cause of the appearance of the ticket—it would require a close inspection.

Q. Could people standing at the polls and looking on, as tickets were voted, tell one from the other by observation?—A. I think not.

(Objected to as a matter of opinion.)

Q. I will ask you to take this ticket voted for the Garfield electors, and the one voted for the Hancock electors in 1880, in this city, and I will ask you to state whether or not, if you know, the Democratic ticket voted for Hancock in 1880 could or could not be more readily distinguished than the Republican ticket voted at that same election than the Republican ticket voted in 1882 could be distinguished from the Democratic ticket voted in 1882.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. This ticket voted for Hancock and English was readily distinguished from the Republican ticket voted the same year for the Republican electors, especially on account of, and, as I remember, that the Democratic ticket was somewhat wider than the Republican ticket, and then the appearance of the paper. The paper seemed to be a little poorer quality of paper.

Q. State which of those tickets would be the bulkiest when folded.—A. The Democratic ticket.

Q. State what difference there is, if any, if you know, between that Republican ticket voted in 1882, and that national ticket voted in 1880.—A. Well, they are the same, or nearly so.

Q. That national ticket has been handled the most, has it not?—A. Yes, sir; it seems to have been.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What precinct was that?—A. Second precinct of the 10th ward.

Q. In what capacity did you act?—A. Not in any capacity.

Q. You were not challenger?—A. No, sir; I was committeeman for that ward.

Q. Could you not, if you got a fair chance to see the Republican ticket as it went into the ballot-box, standing close to it, tell that Republican ticket that day?—A. I can explain the reason why, at times, I could tell—for this reason, I had had something to do with the printing of the tickets, and for that reason I was more familiar with their appearance than anything else.

Q. That is one reason you could tell the difference.—A. No; I did not say that I could tell the difference only once in awhile, and I would have to be right close and give it a pretty close inspection to tell anything then.

Q. That is, by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could tell by touching and handling, then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you had something to do with the printing of those tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you have to do with the printing?—A. Nothing with the printing except that I was present at the time most of them were printed; I had nothing to do with the paper or I did not know anything about that or anything of that kind, only I saw the tickets as they were being printed.

Q. Where were they printed?—A. At the Journal Publishing Company, I believe.

Q. Who was present when they were being printed, if you know?—A. I do not recollect as to that now.

Q. Can you name anybody that was present?—A. I think Mr. Hasselman.

Q. Anybody else?—A. Well, the hands were there and the persons employed and some others, but I do not recollect now.

Q. You think yourself and Mr. Hasseman were the only two?—A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. You do not recollect who the others were?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect now who the others were, but I expect I could think them up.

Q. How many were present, if you know?—A. I could not tell you that.
Q. Over three or four, aside from the hands?—A. I do not know certainly; it seems to me like there was two or three most of the time.
Q. You cannot remember any of them except Mr. Hasselman?—A. I think Mr. Ransdell was there at times.
Q. Mr. Daniel Ransdell?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Chairman of the Republican county central committee?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.
Q. I understand you to say that you had nothing to do with the selection of this paper?—A. No, sir.
Q. You do not know why it was selected?—A. No, sir.
Q. You do not know when it was selected?—A. No, sir.
Q. How long were you over there whilst they were being printed?—A. I was in and out and I do not know how long they had been printing before I came, or I do not remember now. It seems to me like it was along towards evening before they got through.
Q. Were you superintending the printing?—A. No, sir.
Q. You had nothing to do with the printing?—A. No, sir.
Q. Were you connected with that establishment?—A. No, sir; not at all.
Q. What is your business or your office?—A. I am deputy city attorney and deputy prosecuting attorney.
Q. You have held that place for a long time?—A. Yes, sir; between seven and eight years.
Q. And you are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Had you any particular reason for being there while the tickets were being printed?—A. No, sir; only we wanted to see that no tickets were carried away. That was all.
Q. State, if at elections in this city prior to 1882, you could or could not tell one ticket from the other by sight or by feeling?
(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)
A. I could by feeling.
Q. Could you, at the election in 1880, for President Garfield and Hancock, tell the difference between those two tickets by sight and feeling?—A. My best recollection is I could by feeling, and that this Democratic ticket was something of a yellowish cast—that it was not a pure white.
Q. State if there is not a more striking difference between those tickets voted in 1880, at the State election, than there is between the tickets voted in 1882.
(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)
A. There is more difference between the appearance of the tickets voted at the State election.
Q. Of 1880?—A. In 1880 than at the election for Congressman in 1882.
Q. Who were the candidates for Congress in 1882 in this district?—A. William E. English on the Democratic ticket, and Stanton J. Peelle on the Republican ticket.
Q. Do you know who the candidate was on the National ticket—the Greenback ticket?—A. I do not recollect now. I believe we had a National party, but I do not recollect who it was.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say there is more difference between the Republican and Democratic State tickets voted in 1880 than there is between the two tickets voted in 1882?—A. I said I could recognize them more readily.
Q. On the backs of them or the face?—A. The backs of them I am speaking about.
Q. Is it not true that the Democratic ticket of 1880 is just simply faded and folded and rubbed and soiled?—A. I am stating my recollection at the time; that the Democratic ticket was on a poorer paper and it had something of a yellowish cast.
Q. Is the yellowish cast you refer to the yellowish cast that characterizes it now?—A. No. I think if you take a rubber and erase the dirt that you could see it.
Q. Is it not true that these tickets are both white?—A. I am not a judge as to that.
Q. What do you say is the appearance of that now, as to weight and thickness?—A. That Republican ticket is a better quality of paper.
Q. Is it not about the same weight as the Democratic ticket?—A. I do not know anything about the weight. I am speaking about how it appears to me.
Q. How does it appear to you about the weight?—A. I do not know anything about that. I am not a judge as to weight.
Q. I did not ask you as an expert, I ask you as a man that has some knowledge. I will ask you if the tickets voted here in 1882 are not more marked in their difference, as to weight and stiffness, than the two voted in 1880?—A. I think so.
Q. The Republican ticket is much thicker than either one of the tickets voted in 1882?—A. There is more difference in the weight of the ticket. The Republican ticket is thicker than the Democratic ticket.

Q. And stiffer, too, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In answer to Mr. Peelle's question on re-examination you say you were there to see that nobody got any of these tickets.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you object to anyone getting the tickets?—A. Because it is usual, as everybody in politics knows, not to let the tickets out until the morning of the election.

Q. So you did keep these tickets until the morning of the election?—A. No, sir; I did not keep them.

Q. Were they kept?—A. I presume they were. I did not get any.

Q. You went there for the purpose of watching them?—A. While they were being printed so that they might not be carried away.

Q. You wanted them kept until the morning of the election?—A. Just the same as we usually do in other elections.

Q. Did you ever know a ticket of that bulk, weight, and dimensions when folded, to be used at any election in this city or in this county, at any time in the last ten years, as that Republican ticket that I have in my hand that is marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday?—A. I do not recollect as to that.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Is not that national ticket voted for Garfield?—A. It is very nearly the same, I think.

Q. I will ask you if it has not been usual for both political parties in this city, in preparing tickets, to carefully watch them and guard them so that they may not be counterfeited?

(Objected to as incompetent, &c.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That has been rulable with all parties?—A. It has always been rulable with them so far as I have been able to observe, and I have had an opportunity to observe a number of years.

G. S. WRIGHT.

GEORGE WALLACE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. George A. Wallace; age, 33; residence, 66 Fletcher avenue, in this city.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. I am, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if you were at the election in this city in 1882 for Congressman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the candidates for Congressman on the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. Stanton J. Peelle on the Republican, William E. English on the Democratic.

Q. Who on the National?—A. The National I have forgotten.

Q. State if you ever occupied any official position. Did you occupy any official position that day?—A. I was one of the clerks of the board.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct and 20th ward.

Q. Did you see the tickets that were voted at that election?—A. I saw some of them.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that election at your precinct that day.—A. So far as I am able to determine, it is. It looks like the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted and used by the Democrats that day at that precinct.—A. So far as I know, it is. I am not able to remember all that was on it.

Q. You say you observed some of the tickets as they were being voted that day?—A. I did.

Q. As well as your being the clerk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when the Republican ticket is folded and in the hands of the voter and being voted as they are generally voted, whether you could tell one from the other by observation, by sight.—A. I was not at that time able to determine any man's political opinions by the ticket he presented. We were some five or six feet from the window, and of course I noticed a number of the tickets that were given in, and I know I was never able from the appearance of the ticket to tell what a man's political opinions might be, or what ticket he was voting, unless I knew from some other source.

Q. What is the color of those two tickets?—A. One of them is rather a dirty white, and the other is white and a little bit purer.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Which is the purer white?—A. I should pronounce the purest of these two the Democratic ticket.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I hand you a Republican ticket, and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, purporting to be the national ticket voted for the Garfield electors in 1880, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket voted on that occasion.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I am not prepared to say positively. I presume it is; but I do not recollect just the names that were on that ticket.

(Answer objected to as incompetent, &c.)

Q. Do you remember the quality of the paper that the ticket was on at that time?—A. There was a ticket something similar to that.

Q. I hand you now a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and purporting to be the ticket voted for the Hancock and English electors, and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that occasion, or one similar to that.—A. I am not able to state positively. That is, I do not remember.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," purporting to be the State ticket voted for Governor Porter and others in this State in 1880, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used by the Republicans on that occasion, if you know.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I am not prepared to say about that.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket" with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, purporting to be the ticket voted for Franklin Landers for governor, I and will ask you if that was the ticket that was voted in 1880 by the Democrats—it is the ticket that is marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I would make the same answer to that that I did to the other. I do not now remember distinctly enough to testify. I remember of having seen a ticket similar to that, but I cannot exactly locate the time or place.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You were clerk there?—A. I was.

Q. Your duties were to sit inside of the room, and you say you were 5 or 6 feet from the box where the votes were being cast?—A. I should say I was some little distance.

Q. You went there early in the morning, as soon as the polls were opened, and went to work?—A. As soon as the window was open and the vote began I commenced my work of registering the names.

Q. You were not challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you were not upon the outside much?—A. No, sir.

Q. Could you tell one of those tickets from the other by handling?—A. By handling and looking at both I could discover a difference in my hand, but by using my sense of sight I could not.

Q. Could you tell by looking at them particularly a foot and a half from them; if you were inspector there, do you think you could have told; by handling those tickets there all the morning, do not you think by afternoon you could have told those Democratic and Republican tickets if they were folded?—A. I do not know what I could have done if I was inspector, but I am inclined to the opinion that by handling the tickets I could tell very readily, but as to whether I could identify them by looking at them separately or not I do not know. It is possible after he had handled them all day and watched them very closely he might be able to discover a difference, and possibly could.

Q. Was there any objection made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I have no remembrance of any objection at all. If there was any I am not aware of it.

Q. Did the count of the tickets correspond with the names registered?—A. As I remember, they did.

Q. What is your recollection, if you have any, as to the difference in the tickets voted in this city prior to 1882, as to your being able to tell one ticket from the other?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and for the further reason that it is not proper re-examination.)

A. From personal knowledge I know there was a difference in the tickets, but I am not able to tell what that difference was or in what it consisted. There always has been a difference between the two tickets.

GEORGE A. WALLACE.

I. N. PATTISON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. I. N. Pattison; age, 43; residence, Grand Hotel, city of Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am city treasurer at present.

Q. You are a Republican, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the election in this for Congressman in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Who was the candidate on the Republican ticket for Congress in 1882?—A. Stanton J. Peelle.

Q. Who was the Democratic candidate for Congress in 1882?—A. William E. English.

Q. Do you remember who the candidate was on the Greenback ticket?—A. No; I do not.

Q. Did you attend the election in 1882 in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—First precinct, 17th ward.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. Not exactly; no, sir.

Q. Were you at the palls during the day?—A. I was.

Q. How much of the time?—A. All day.

Q. At the same precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the members of the respective parties at that precinct?—A. I did.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in this city at the national election in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

X. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans in this State in 1880 voted for governor and other officers.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats in this city at the election in 1880.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats in the city in 1880 for the Hancock and English electors?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, with the name of General Garfield and others on it, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted at the national election in this city in 1880 by the Republicans?

(Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if that Republican ticket voted for Mr. Peelle for Congress in this district in 1882, when folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters, whether you could, or could not, tell or distinguish it from the Democratic ticket when folded, by sight?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. You could not?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you mean to say that the Republican ticket voted in 1882 is on the same kind of paper that the Democratic ticket is on?—A. I did not say anything about the paper. He did not ask me.

Q. I ask you; do you mean to say that they were, so you could not distinguish them?—A. They were both white.

Q. Are they the same thickness?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are they the same weight?—A. I did not weigh them. I suppose that Republican ticket is the largest.

Q. Would not you say that the Republican ticket was at least twice as heavy?—A. No; I do not think it is.

Q. You do not think it is even twice as heavy?—A. No; I do not think it is.

Q. It is heavier, is it not?—A. It is somewhat heavier.

Q. Then there is a difference in the heaviness of the two?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. That distinguishes one from the other, does it not?—A. No, sir; not when it is folded; it would not.
Q. If it is thicker when it is not folded, it is thicker when it is folded?—A. The paper?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. Well, I should think so.
Q. Then it is distinguished from the other by its thickness?—A. Yes, sir. But it might be a little bit thicker when it is folded and you could distinguish the difference very easily. But simply as those tickets are used and a person walks up to the ballot-box to put them in when there is no question of that kind raised or thought about, it is a different thing.
Q. Mr. Peelle says, "as tickets are ordinarily folded." Is there any ordinary way of folding tickets when you go to vote them?—A. Oh, not any particular way. The generality of people fold them the same way.
Q. The generality of people fold them about the same way?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then there is no general way of folding them?—A. No, sir; I would not think so.
Q. If the generality of people fold them the same way, is there not a general way of folding them?—A. Well, no; I would not think that would constitute the meaning of generality, because you cannot tell. There may be one-third fold them one way, and two-thirds the other way, or one-fourth one way and three-fourths the other way.
Q. Would you not say, if two-thirds folded them in one way, that that would be the generality, about?—A. No, sir; I would not.
Q. Would not that constitute a majority?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then there is a way by which the majority of people fold their tickets?—A. Well, I would think that there was.
Q. If you were to inspect that ticket carefully and ascertained its character and did that with the purpose of trying to see what ticket a man was voting, and after so doing a man would vote a Republican ticket, and you handled it, could you not tell that it was a Republican ticket from the handling of it?—A. You mean by the feeling of this ticket?
Q. Yes, sir; by its weight, thickness, and finish?—A. Yes, sir; I could if I would start out to do it.
Q. You mean to say that after such an experience in such capacity, and discrimination by feeling and handling, if you were to stand close to the box when the voter would take his ticket and hand it to the inspector and he would hold it up in that way [illustrating] that, by watching him, you could not tell that it was the Republican ticket?—A. No, sir; I could not; I tried that that day; I could not do it.
Q. Why did you try it?—A. Because I wanted to see.
Q. Why did you want to see?—A. That is my business, why I wanted to see. I could not tell the difference, one from the other.
Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And have on hands at present a contested election case growing out of this same campaign?—A. No, sir.
Q. Out of the subsequent campaign—the last election?—A. Yes, sir; there is no question in regard to the ticket in it. It is simply a question as to whether certain territory is within the boundaries of the city or not.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That is the only question there is in it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you to take these national tickets, one for Hancock and the other Garfield, voted in 1880, and I will ask you to fold those tickets and look at them and state whether there is more or less difference between those two tickets than there is between the two tickets voted for Peelle and English for Congress in this district in 1882.
(Objected to as not proper re-examination and leading and incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.)
A. If the Republican ticket was as large as the other there would be the same difference.
Q. What is the difference in the width of those national tickets that I hand you about the difference?
(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)
A. From a quarter to half an inch.
Q. Is there any difference in the color?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Could you tell one of those tickets from the other by sight, on account of color?—A. Yes, sir; I could. One is a clear white and the other is a cream.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that that national Republican ticket, voted in 1880, is a clear white?—A. Yes; it looks like that to me.

Q. Is that clear white; is it not, on the contrary, not a clear white?—A. I will not turn right around and say it was not when I just said it was.

Q. I want you to look at that carefully. A man sometimes makes mistakes about colors.—A. Of course it is white; nothing else but white.

Q. Lay it by the side of your cuff. What is the color of your cuff?—A. They are both white.

Mr. PEELLE. One is a little clearer than the other.

The WITNESS. That is all the difference I see.

Q. Is not that national ticket, voted in the 1880 campaign, faded in color?—A. It is not any more faded than the other. That was the natural color of it, I presume, at the start.

Q. I ask you again, is not the material which goes into that national Democratic ticket of an inferior quality, as compared with the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I am not an expert on the material of paper. I cannot tell you anything about that.

Q. I will ask you again if that is not of such material that it is liable to, and has, faded from what it formerly was very much?—A. I cannot say anything about that. I do not know anything about what it is made of. It may be all rags or straw, for all I know.

I. N. PATTISON.

E. J. CONWAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your age and residence?—A. 31 years; 264 South Delaware street.

Q. What is your business?—A. Deputy sheriff at presene.

Q. What has been your business prior to that?—A. I was with Mr. Adams. At the time of this election I was a machinist by trade, and was working at my trade.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. At the Nordkye and Marmon Company.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. This time about five years.

Q. State if you were at the election in this city in 1882 for Congressman and other candidates?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Seventeenth ward, second precinct.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you observe those tickets that were voted there that day?—A. Yes sir.

Q. State if you know John P. Frenzel of the Merchant's National Bank.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he come there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may just tell what he came down there for and what occurred while he was there that day.—A. Well, there had been a great many Germans come there and offered to vote, who had taken out papers—the majority of them were issued that day or the day before the election.

Mr. WILSON. If you know that, of course it is all right, but we do not want you to testify to anything that is hearsay.

The WITNESS. I will not tell anything that I don't know. I know that they were issued that day and the day before; some of them I saw. Our attention was called to that and there were some of those votes challenged, and the first I noticed of Mr. Frenzel, and I did not know him at that time, but I have got acquainted with him since, at least, I know who he is; he came there and the first I noticed of him he came up on the west side of the chute and says, "Here, gentlemen! You are allowing these people to keep a good many of our votes out," and he says, "What you want is some one here to assist in getting them in," and, he says, "I propose to see that those men get their votes in." I looked up to see who it was, and several others did, and somebody laughed, and just at that time they had two or three Germans in the chute, and there was a question about them being voters there, and they sent for a man named Chris. Schuttle to swear them in, and Schuttle came over and said he would swear them in, and I asked Mr. Schuttle if he knew them, and he said he did, and I pointed to one of them and asked hime what his name was, and he said he did not know, and there was a kind of a laugh raised and Frenzel staid around a little while and went away.

Q. Was there any disturbance while Mr. Frenzel was at that poll that day?—A. I would not call it a disturbance. There was a good deal of hilarity around there, with the fellows talking and laughing in a good natured kind of a way, most of it. I would not consider it a disturbance. It was about like there is usually at an election.

Q. Did any Republican at that precinct frighten and scare away Mr. Schuttle, the man that was there to swear in votes?—A. No, sir. He refused to swear in the vote after that, of his own accord, so far as I know. He saw that it would not very well do to swear in a vote after he said that he did not know the man and could not call his name to me. Mr. McDonald was there at the time and he went on to give us the law on the question, and went on to say if Mr. Schuttle knew the man, even if he did not know his name, he would be entitled to vote anyhow.

Q. Entitled to swear him in, you mean.—A. Yes, sir. In the mean time there were other parties came into the chute and wanted to vote, and those men were taking up the way, and I asked them to step aside and let the other men vote until their cases were disposed of, by swearing in, or something.

Q. Was there anything like "bulldozing" by any Republican or policeman there that day, and if so, state it?—A. There was more "bulldozing," if you term it "bulldozing," after the man's vote was refused, and he was challenged, and the judge would not take it. The judge there told him to step aside and let others vote. Some one would say "step out of the chute," or something of that kind. That is about all the "bulldozing" I know of.

Q. There was no disturbance there that day?—A. There was not a fight, or anything of that kind about the place.

Q. Were those men that were challenged there that day or not sworn in and voted?—A. There were some men sworn in there and some that did not think their claims were as good as they ought to be, and they did not press their vote. They could not get anyone to swear them in. They had one German that was drunk swearing in votes awhile, but they barred him out. After that they did not fare so well.

Q. State how long Mr. Frenzel was down there that day.—A. From what I saw of him—I was there and had the book, and there was a crowd around there all day, and he may have been there longer, but to my knowledge of seeing him, he was there I don't suppose more than half an hour. He was there in the afternoon.

Q. Did you have the poll-book that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you challenging any?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if that Republican ticket voted at your precinct when folded, as voters ordinarily fold them when they vote them, could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket voted at that precinct, both of which you have just examined?—A. Do you want to know as far as I know?

Q. Yes, sir. By observation, looking on.—A. Whether it could be told or not? It might by others, but I could not tell.

Q. When it was folded, as they are ordinarily folded by men in going up the chute, could you, by observation and by sight, tell one ticket from the other?—A. No. The only way I could distinguish them was in the ticket being folded. If this end, "Republican ticket," part would be exposed in any way of course I could see then, but from the general appearance of the ballot I could not tell.

Q. If you could see the heading of the ticket when it was folded you could tell one from the other?—A. Yes, sir. I knew the difference in the heading. I could see those under lines, that scroll, in two or three instances. I noticed that. That is the only thing. Of course I could tell a Republican ticket if I saw it voted open, or a Democratic ticket either, but to fold them up and look at them I could not tell the difference.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were there any policemen around that voting precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were they? What were their names?—A. Tim Splann was there awhile, and Len Crane, Sam Gerber, and there may have been one or two others for a short time. I don't recollect.

Q. Was Splann on the police force?—A. He was captain of police at that time.

Q. What were the politics of those policemen, if you know?—A. I guess I can say that I know. They were Republicans, so far as I know.

Q. Do you know why so many policemen were there at that precinct?—A. No. They were not there that I know of in any official capacities.

Q. They were not there in any official capacity?—A. I think not. I don't know that they were. But Crane and Gerber both had taken quite a part in the primaries and the canvass in that ward during all the election, and I was led to believe that at least Crane belonged in the ward. I knew that Gerber belonged in the twenty-fifth.

Q. Gerber did not belong in that ward?—A. I think not.

Q. Crane did not belong in that ward?—A. I think he moved just before that election. I think he was there for awhile in that campaign; that is, between the county nominations and the election, he was a resident in the ward.

Q. Was it not true that Crane's residence was in the twenty-fifth ward at that time?—A. It might have been. I don't know.

Q. Was not Captain Campbell down there too?—A. He may have been. I don't recollect now whether he was or not.

Q. You think they were acting in unofficial capacities?—A. I think that from the part they took in the canvass through the ward during that campaign, and they were at our primary; and that is what led me to believe it, because Len Crane said something at one time that I recollect of about not being allowed to be a delegate in the convention on account of being a policeman. That led me to suppose that he belonged or lived in the ward.

Q. They took equally as active a part that day as they did before?—A. They were around the polls all day keeping order.

Q. Why did they have to keep order there that day, so many of them?—A. Not any more so than they were on the police force—than the police force were at the polls at other elections.

Q. Do you know of any other precinct that had as many policemen as this?—A. I was not in any other precinct; I don't know what they done about policemen.

Q. I will ask you, as a matter of fact, did not some of those gentlemen that you have named—policemen acting in unofficial capacity—threaten to arrest Mr. Schuttle there that day?—A. No, sir; I will answer that directly; I don't know that they did.

Q. Did not you hear them make some threats?—A. Threaten to arrest Schuttle?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Q. Did not you hear of them threatening to arrest the other gentleman that was swearing in votes that you spoke of?—A. Who was the other gentleman?

Q. The man that you said was drunk.—A. Wahle?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I will answer that; no.

Q. Do you know whether they did threaten to arrest any of these men or not; did you hear the policemen say anything of that kind?—A. No, sir; I heard of no threats of the police threatening to arrest any one.

Q. Did you hear anybody threaten to arrest any of them?—A. No, sir; I believe the only man threatened with arrest there was myself.

Q. Did not they threaten to arrest Mr. Frenzel there and threaten to put handcuffs on him?—A. Not that I know of; I did not hear of any threats of that kind. I was this ignorant of Mr. Frenzel and who he was at that time that some one said he was Mr. English's brother-in-law. That is all I know about Mr. Frenzel at the time.

Q. Is he?—A. I don't know; that impression was all around there.

Q. What sort of a looking man is Mr. Frenzel?—A. A tall, fresh-faced looking young man, with a light moustache, and wears a plug hat usually. He stays over here in the bank; he is school commissioner, I think.

Q. Don't you know that Mr. Frenzel is no relation to Mr. English?—A. I don't know anything about it.

Q. You say that there was no trouble and everything was quiet, and there was no disorder, and nobody threatened to be arrested there—no Democrat at that precinct?—A. I say I heard no threats by any policeman, or anybody else threaten to arrest any Democrat there that day.

Q. You say you heard of no policeman or anybody threaten to arrest anybody and there was no trouble and everything was quiet that day. What is the name of the German that you say was drunk?—A. John Wahle.

Q. What do you mean by saying that he was barred out. How was he barred out?—A. They refused to take his oath any longer.

Q. Who refused?—A. The judges.

Q. They claimed, or did you say he was drunk?—A. I say he was drunk and I guess they will say so. They did so at the time.

Q. Is that any reason for refusing to let a man swear in votes?—A. I was not the judge. I did not have anything to do with that. If the judge of election saw fit, it was no business of mine.

Q. Was there anybody but Mr. Heatherington made that refusal?—A. Mr. Bryce called attention to the fact. I don't know whether Captain Maloney sustained him in it or not.

Q. Mr. Bryce is the Republican member of the council?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Heatherington was the Republican inspector?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were the Republican challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are now deputy in the office of Mr. Hess?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Hess has had trouble about the same ticket and has been threatened with a similar contest as Mr. Peelle and Mr. English are engaged in now?—A. That was all settled before I had anything to do with it.

Q. He had a contest of that kind on hands at one time?—A. I guess it was not anything about this kind of a ticket. I guess it was the shortness of the vote or something of that kind.

Q. You say Mr. Hess's contest was not over the character of this ticket?—A. That is my impression. It was because they claimed that he did not have enough votes. That is my impression. That question may have been raised.

Q. Can you tell this Republican ticket, when folded, by handling it, from the Democratic ticket?—A. I expect I could, if I handled both of them, and my special attention was called to it.

Q. Is it thicker?—A. It may be. I have not handled it.

Q. Look at it. You have given your judgment about it.—A. Look at it, or handle it?

Q. Do both. They are there.—A. Yes, sir; it is some thicker.

Q. Is it not twice as thick?—A. I don't know.

Q. What would you say about it, in your opinion?—A. Do you want to know whether it is twice as thick?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I say I cannot say whether it was twice as thick or not. It is some thicker.

Q. You would not give any opinion as to how much thicker it is?—A. No, sir.

Q. The paper is stiffer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or the material is stiffer?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Have you attended elections in this city before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Acted in any capacity?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As challenger?—A. Not directly; as I did at this time.

E. J. CONWAY.

W. H. RIPLEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. W. H. Ripley, Indianapolis, Ind.; 32 years old; No. 409 N. Penn. st., in this city.

Q. What is your business?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. Are you the author of a law digest of Indiana decisions in this State?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you practiced law in this city?—A. In this city since the spring of 1874.

Q. Were you at the election in this city in 1882?—A. I was.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct of ward No. 6.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you at the polls much of the time?—A. I was there about half the day.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the respective parties that day?—A. I saw a great many tickets as they were balloted and put in the box—a great many open and a great many folded.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you if that is the Republican ticket voted at that precinct.—A. Yes, sir; it looks like it was a duplicate of the tickets voted at that time.

Q. I now hand you a ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket that was voted at that precinct that day, or a similar one.—A. To the best of my judgment it is a copy or duplicate of the ticket that was voted by most of the Democrats at that time.

Q. State if when that Republican ticket is folded in the hands of a voter as they go to the box to deposit their ballots whether or not you could tell or distinguish that ticket from the Democratic ticket similarly folded as men were going up to deposit their ballots, by observation and sight.—A. When folded and held in their hand going up in the chute?

Q. To vote.—A. And given to the judge and inspectors. I was unable to decide which was the ticket—whether it was a Democratic or Republican ticket.

Q. By looking on?—A. By looking on. Of course if it was open so that I could see it, that was another thing, but when folded up so I could not see anything on the inside I was unable to determine which ticket it was. I know I tried on several occasions to pass judgment on the ticket, and there was always some one disagreeing with me at the time. Some said it was one ticket, and some said it was not.

Q. You could not tell by sight one from the other when folded?—A. I could not. I know I tried it.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you not, in point of fact, state in that precinct that day that this and that man had voted the Republican ticket, and was not that judgment based upon the appearance of this ticket?—A. No, sir, I did not; but in the presence of others I asked if that was not such and such a ticket.

Q. Why did you think it was such and such a ticket?—A. Because, before the polls opened I thought it could be determined, but I found that I was continually being misled.

Q. Why did you think before the polls opened that you could tell?—A. Because I saw the two different tickets and held them in my hands, and I thought it could be determined when folded.

Q. That was because one ticket was thicker and heavier then, and was not that what you thought in your examination before the polls opened?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell the difference by handling?—A. If I could have had them in my hands I could have told the difference.

Q. After you familiarized yourself by handling, if you took the Republican ticket alone in your hand could not you tell by the stiffness and bulk?—A. Yes, sir; if all the tickets were alike. These two tickets I could.

Q. Were there any other tickets there?—A. I think that there were other tickets there, but I am not positive about it. I do not know whether they were all printed of the same character or not.

Q. You think that there were different Democratic tickets there?—A. I think that there was. I am quite sure that there was a ticket there combined with the Greenback candidates. That is my impression; that there was a mongrel ticket.

Q. Democratic and Greenback?—A. I think so; it is my impression; at least there was a mongrel ticket of some kind—a combination ticket.

Q. Who had any such ticket as that?—A. I do not know who they were; I do not know which side had it.

Q. You know there was a mongrel ticket at that precinct?—A. What I would call a mongrel ticket.

Q. Printed on a whole ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not know who had those tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I will ask you if your attention had been called directly to the difference between these two tickets and you had taken them and sat down at a table and considered and folded them and examined the difference between the two and inspected the fold of them and examined them carefully, and had gone to the polls and stood right by the end of the chute next to the box, within a foot or a foot and a half of the voters as they passed up and held their tickets up and went up and put them into the hands of the inspector and he held it up and turned it around folded, do not you think you could have told that Republican ticket when the voter voted a Republican ticket, and do not you think you could have told the Democratic ticket when the voter voted a Democratic ticket?—A. That would depend upon how the tickets were folded. If they were both folded alike I doubt very much whether I could have told them.

Q. You could tell them by handling?—A. Yes, sir; I am quite sure about that. I know it was tried during the day several times. I said, "that was a Democratic ticket, I think," or "that was a Republican ticket;" and we had a great many disputes there during that day.

Q. In point of fact they were trying to tell, and they claimed that they did know, the difference as they were voted?—A Like there is at every election.

Q. Generally they were claiming at that election that day that they could tell how men were voting by the appearance of the tickets, for the same reason that in the morning you said you thought you could tell?—A. I think there were observations of that kind, and there were disputes there during the day. I know there was discussions of that kind, but the greater part of the discussion was in the fore part of the day.

WARWICK H. RIPLEY.

A. J. TREAT, being first duly sworn testified, as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. A. J. Treat; age, 44; residence, 297 North Meridian street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. Merchant tailoring.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. About twenty years.

Q. You are a Republican I believe.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the election in this city in 1882?—A. I was.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Eleventh ward, on Ohio street between Pennsylvania and Meridian streets.

Q. Were you there much of the day?—A. I was there a good deal.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted by the respective parties that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used and voted by the Republicans on that day.—A. I believe it was.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that was the Democratic ticket voted that day for members of Congress and other candidates?—A. To the best of my recollection it was, sir.

Q. Did you observe these tickets as they were folded and being voted by the voters that day?—A. I saw them folded and being voted.

Q. State if this Republican ticket that I hand you, when folded by the voters as tickets are ordinarily folded, could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket similarly folded, when being voted?—A. You mean folded up.

Q. Yes, sir; when folded up and being voted; if you could tell one from the other, by sight.—A. I do not think you could.

Q. Did you make any effort that day to distinguish one from the other?—A. I did not; no, sir.

Q. Were you, as a matter of fact, able to distinguish one from the other that day as they were folded, by sight?

(Objected to as incompetent, &c.)

A. I don't believe I could have told, as they were being voted, what tickets they were at all. When I saw people putting them in the box I could not distinguish between the two tickets at all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. I understand you to say you did not make the effort that day to tell one from the other.—A. I did not say that. I said as the votes were voted I could not distinguish them at all. I did not make any extra effort. Of course, I was not there to see how they were voted.

Q. You were not challenger, and did not make any extra effort?—A. No, sir.

Q. You think you could not tell?—A. I do not think I could tell.

ATRALER J. TREAT.

CALVIN F. ROOKER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. C. F. Rooker; age, 59; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. State your business.—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. I should think that I was.

Q. Who was the Republican candidate for Congress, and who was the Democratic candidate?—A. Stanton J. Peelle was the Republican candidate and William E. English was the Democratic.

Q. Do you know who was the candidate on the national ticket?—A. No. We did not bother with him.

Q. Were you at the polls during the election?—A. My recollection is that I was there all day.

Q. Were you there as a challenger?—A. No, sir; I was just a volunteer, for the good of the cause.

Q. State if you saw the tickets voted as they were ordinarily folded and being voted there that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take this ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and state if that is the kind of a ticket that was used there that day by the Republicans.—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket. I have some of them in my office yet.

Q. I hand you the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the kind of a ticket voted by the Democrats that day.—A. Yes, sir. I think it is. It looks like it.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, if you could tell or distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket similarly folded, when being voted.—A. I do not believe you could, unless they were right up to see it done.

Q. I mean could you, after they were folded and in the hands of the voter, and the voter was coming up through the chute to the box to deposit his ballot. Could you tell by sight one ticket from the other?—A. I do not think I could from the way the voters vote. They generally fold their ticket and compress it so tight and take it in their hands and go up to vote.

Q. What is the color of those two tickets?—A. I should call them white.

Q. Plain white?—A. Yes, sir; I should call them plain white paper.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. That Republican ticket is much thicker than the Democratic ticket, is it not?—A. Well, it is thicker than the Democratic ticket, but I never made the discovery or never noticed it, or thought about it, until some time after this election.

Q. Then you did not pay any particular attention to those tickets on the day of the election?—A. I paid particular attention to our ticket, to get in all the votes I could.

Q. Exactly; but the point was, did you pay particular attention to the character of the Democratic ticket by way of contrast to the Republican ticket?—A. No. I did not pay particular attention to the kind of paper the Republican ticket was on. I did not notice it was unusual, or anything of that kind.

Q. You were not the challenger?—A. Well, I think I did some challenging, but I was not what would be called the challenger.

Q. Did you make any effort that day in watching the voters to ascertain, from the appearance of the tickets, what party they were voted for?—A. No. I do not think I could have done it.

Q. Do you think you could have told that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket from the handling of them, if you were to handle them?—A. I presume if I had ever noticed them I could have told the difference in handling them in the paper, but not by seeing them voted.

Q. If you had familiarized yourself with the character of those tickets before the vote commenced by a careful inspection, and gone where the box was, within a foot or a foot and a half of the voter as he put his ticket in, and watched him for the purpose of trying to tell one ticket from the other, could you have seen and told one ticket from the other then, do you think?—A. If I had known beforehand?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No; I do not believe I could.

Q. You could tell it by the handling, but you could not by sight?—A. No, sir; I could not from sight.

Q. Do you wear glasses all the time?—A. I do not wear glasses outside, but I have got in the habit of letting them stay on my nose, and do not notice them, but I always look over them, when I am outside, but when I am on the street on an occasion like that I do not have my glasses on.

Q. You did not have your glasses with you that day?—A. I think I did have them with me, but I did not have them on. I can see better off that distance than I can with them on.

Q. Close at hand you can see better with them on than off?—A. Yes, sir; in writing.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. In looking on at the polls was your eyesight defective?—A. No, sir. I can see anything of that kind. It is when I am writing or reading that I need them.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. You bet I am a Republican.

Q. And always have been?—A. No, sir; I voted for William H. English for Congress. I believe I was a delegate in the convention that nominated him.

Q. You are a pretty earnest, active Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was years ago when you were in the southern part of the State that you voted for Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir; I have always voted the ticket since I have been a Republican—well, no, I will qualify that a little—I have scratched here lately, and I expect to do it again if the Republicans do not nominate the best men.

Q. You have been a prominent Republican and an active Republican?—A. Oh, yes; in Congressional and National politics I expect to vote the Republican ticket unless something unusual happens, but in these local politics, unless they nominate a straight up and down man I will not vote on either side.

CALVIN F. ROOKER.

W. A. VAN BUREN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. W. A. Van Buren; age, 29; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. How long have you practiced law in this city?—A. I came here in the fall of 1879, and I was with Mr. Wallace as student for a year and a half, and then I opened my own office.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882?—A. I did.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there—as challenger or otherwise?—A. I was at the polls and held the poll-book, and did some challenging.

Q. Were you there much of the day?—A. I was there all day long.

Q. State if you noticed the tickets that were voted that day by the Republicans and Democrats for Congressman and other candidates.—A. I saw both tickets.

A. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans that day.—A. That is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats that day.—A. Yes, sir. That is the ticket as I remember it.

Q. What ward and precinct were you at?—A. Tenth ward, north precinct.

Q. Did you observe the tickets that day as they were folded and voted by the electors?—A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. State if that Republican ticket when folded as ordinarily folded and voted could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when folded, by sight.—A. I could not tell any difference whatever, when the tickets were folded, as to which was the Republican or which was the Democratic.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the national election in 1880?—A. I was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was voted by the Republicans at the national election in 1880.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. That is the ticket.

Q. State what difference there is, if any, between that paper upon which that ticket is printed, and the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed that was voted is 1882.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and leading.)

A. If there is any difference in these tickets?

Q. I mean in the weight of the paper and its thickness?—A. I should state that this State ticket of the election of 1882, the Republican ticket, was slightly heavier than the other ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I ask you now to look at this ticket, marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday in 1882, and the Republican ticket voted at the same time, and I will ask you if those tickets are not different in their weight and in their bulk, and in the exture of the paper?—A. The Republican ticket is undoubtedly heavier than the Democratic ticket.

Q. They differ in that respect then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it twice as heavy?—A. I cannot say whether it was twice as heavy or not.

Q. What is your opinion about it?—A. My opinion is it is just about twice as heavy.

Q. Is it not a good deal stiffer?—A. It is stiffer.

Q. And those two tickets are about the same width and length, are they?—A. I should think this testimony would be better brought out by experts themselves than my testimony on this question.

Q. I ask you are they not about the same width and length?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then there is a difference between those two tickets, and, as I understand you, you say that you could not see any difference between those tickets—the language was, "no difference between those tickets when they were being voted by the voters, as the voters ordinarily vote them."—A. That is what I said.

Q. I ask you then, is it not true if you had had your attention called beforehand to the difference between the tickets carefully and you had gone to the polls and stood, for example, as challenger, to watch and see, could you not have told that Republican ticket if folded when the inspector held it in his hands so you could see the ticket all around, and the end; if you could see it in that way, could you have told the Republican ticket then?—A. In reply to your question I will say that I took particular pains during that election, as I held the book and I wanted to know whether the vote was Republican or not and I could not.

Q. Then you could not tell the difference when you looked in that way; then when one ticket is twice as heavy as the other and a great deal stiffer than the other, and is bulkier than the other, I understand you to say, though there is this difference in the thickness and stiffness that you have described, that still, standing where you were and where you did stand, you could not tell the difference between those tickets by sight?—A. I could not.

Q. Could you tell the difference in those tickets by handling them?—A. I could.

Q. Although folded?—A. You mean when the tickets were folded and I had them in my hands?

Q. If you held the Republican ticket in your hand could you tell it was the Republican ticket?—A. When it was folded up?

Q. Yes, sir; on that day if you had one handed to you could you tell from its thickness and stiffness that it was a Republican ticket?—A. I will say this, that if I knew that to be a Republican ticket and had previously held a Democratic ticket folded in the same way and knew that one was a Democratic ticket and the other was a Republican ticket, I could tell which was a Republican ticket.

Q. You mean that if you had previously ascertained the difference in that way, that subsequently if you had had one of the Republican tickets handed to you folded, you could tell that was a Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Q. If you had been inspector you think you could have done the same thing?—A. I think if I had taken particular pains to examine the tickets before I knew which was Republican and which was Democratic, and had then ascertained, I could have told by the difference in the thickness of the ticket as I could by the difference in the paper in the first place, and I knew that the thick ticket was a Republican, and the thin ticket a Democratic, I could undoubtedly tell which was the Democratic and which was the Republican.

Q. I will ask you if you did not hear at that precinct that day people around there saying that that was a Democratic ticket, or that that was a Republican ticket, and was not that statement based on the difference in the appearance of the tickets when they were folded as they were being voted?—A. I do not recollect any such conversations or any such statements.

Q. You do not recollect any such statements at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint from the Democrats on account of the character of that ticket?—A. On the day of the election?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not remember any.

Q. You heard nothing said about it at all?—A. I do not remember any complaint being urged against the ticket.

Q. No comments about its thickness?—A. I do not recollect any; and in explanation to that answer I will say right here, that there were only a very few workers at our polls; I think one or two Democratic workers there, and two or three Republicans, and they were very quiet, and there was no discussion at all, and everything went on quietly, and there was no complaint, and I do not think there was but two Democratic workers there all day long.

Q. Do you recollect the names of those Democrats?—A. Yes, sir; Captain Payne was one of them.

Q. Who else?—A. It was when I was somewhat of a stranger in the ward there, and he was the only one I was acquainted with.

Q. Who was the Democratic judge there?—A. That I do not recollect.

Q. Is it not true that your memory about what took place there is pretty uncertain and pretty vague at this stage anyhow?—A. Well, as there was not very many incidents that took place there of any nature whatever, I would have to have a pretty good memory to remember things that did not take place.

Q. Is it not true that there were Democrats, and you said there were, and you did not remember them; it is not facts that did not occur, but facts that did occur that I am asking you about.—A. What is your question?

Q. I asked you who the Democratic judge was.—A. I have said that I did not know.

Q. I then asked you who the Democratic workers were, and I believe you have said you recollect one, and one you do not recollect.—A. If I mistake not, that was the first time I had done anything in that ward, having lived in the 16th up until very near the time of the election.

Q. You were challenger there?—A. Yes, sir; I was challenger.

Q. And you was a stranger in the ward?—A. I was not the challenger, as I said in my answer, the principal part of the day. I was to stand alongside of the men who did the most of the work with the book, and I was located up by them, so I could hear the name as it was being called, and check off, as we do in the elections.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Take this ticket headed Democratic ticket, and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket, as you recollect, voted by the Democrats for President in 1880.

(Objected to as leading and suggestive, and not proper re-examination.)

Q. You can answer what is your recollection about that ticket.—A. My recollection is that that was the Democratic Presidential ticket, but I do not recollect the names of all the electors; but I notice several.

Q. That is your best impression about the matter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to take this Republican ticket that you had a while ago and fold it and state the difference in the width of those two tickets as near as you can.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. You mean to measure these?

Q. Yes, sir; the difference in the width of the tickets about as near as you can get at it with your eye.—A. I would say an eighth of an inch.

Q. Is there any difference in the color of those two tickets, the back sides, I mean?—A. There seems to be a tint on this Democratic ticket.

Q. State if there is not more difference between those two tickets voted for Garfield and Hancock, in 1880, by sight than there is between the two tickets voted for Congressmen in this district in 1882, which you have examined.

(Objected to as leading, incompetent, and irrelevant, and not proper re-examination.)

A. I would say that this Presidential Democratic ticket of 1880 could be more readily distinguished from the Republican Presidential ticket of the same time—more readily than between the Democratic and Republican tickets of the election of 1882.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How is it that you say you know that is the Democratic ticket that was used in 1880?—A. Let me see that.

Q. I ask you, without looking at it, how do you recognize it or identify it?—A. I identify it from the familiarity with some number of the names on there.

Q. Not from the fact that you recollect this was the kind of material used at that election, or the kind of paper, but from the names on the ticket?—A. I recognize it from the names on the ticket.

Q. You recollect that Hancock and English were the candidates for President and Vice-President in 1880. Then, as to their names or others, you think that is the ticket that was used, but you do not recollect that this was the kind of material of the paper that was used; have you any recollection of the kind of paper or the width of the paper, or anything of that kind that was used at that election?—A. I do not recollect; only I would say if that ticket was put in my hands now that that is a similar ticket to those voted.

Q. Is not that because you would not indulge the presumption that some one would go to work and get up a ticket that had all these characters on, and is it not simply because it has all these names on it that you think that is the ticket? Is not that the reason?—A. I will say to that, as I said before, I would not go into the discussion of the paper or tint, or anything else, but I would say that is the Democratic ticket that was voted there that day.

Q. But to go back to the beginning; is it not simply because their names are on it, and you do not believe there would be a forgery, is the reason you reach that conclusion, and it is not because you recollect the character of the ticket so far as the width and appearance of the material are concerned?—A. Well, perhaps it may be that. That is the general appearance of the ticket.

Q. Do you recollect what kind of a ticket was voted in 1880 at the national election by the Democrats at this time, independent of this question? Do you bear any recollection and memory of the character of the ticket voted in 1880?—A. Candidly I remember a difference in the tickets on that day, and I recognize——

Q. That is not an answer to my question—A. I recognize those two tickets which you placed in my hands, of course, from the names that are on them there, and from the general character of them both. I remember, as I said before, a dissimilarity in the tickets, but as to remembering distinctly whether there was a tint, I cannot say as to that now.

Q. Did you recollect that there was a difference in the width of the tickets until Mr. Peelle told you to compare the tickets?—A. No.

Q. Did you recollect that there was a difference in the character of the paper used?—A. I did; I am certain of that. I undoubtedly did.

Q. You recollect that there was a difference in the paper used?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you say that there is a greater difference between the Republican ticket as used and voted at the national election for Garfield, and the Democratic ticket as then used, than there is between the two tickets voted here at the November election in 1882.—A. I say in the first place—these exhibits—there is a much more fully defined difference and distinction in the tickets then than there was in the tickets used in our State election.

Q. Are those exhibits that you refer to and have in your hand labeled "national tickets," and in that voting are they the tickets used?—A. They are so similar that I would say that they were.

Q. You say that the exhibits are different without saying that the tickets are. Why do you say that the tickets used in that election are more different, and the difference could more easily be determined in the tickets handed you than the Republican ticket in the last election, both being folded as voters ordinarily fold them?—A. The distinction in these tickets, both Republican and Democratic, and national tickets, is more easily distinguished.

Q. I will ask you is not this national Democratic ticket that you have in your hand faded and yellow?—A. It is yellow.

Q. Don't you say that that is the result of age?—A. I would say that it would perhaps require an expert on paper to answer that question. I would say that paper that I have kept for that length of time does not get yellow.

Q. You say that that paper is not in any sense faded or discolored by time?—A. It is soiled; it is undoubtedly soiled; but whether it is faded or not—white paper will not fade. The question is would it grow yellow with age.

Q. Answer the question; I say faded and discolored by age.—A. If it had been faded it would be whiter now than it was when it was used.

Q. How is white paper made, and what is white paper; I will ask you that question?—A. White paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. White paper is made from cotton rags, I suppose.

Q. Is there any bluing in it?

Mr. PEELLE. The witness has not said that he was an expert.

Mr. WILSON. He was pretending to be an expert.

Mr. PEELLE. Not at all.

The WITNESS. I suppose there was a bleach in the rags.

Q. I am not asking you about bleaching; I am not asking you about any alkali; I am asking you if bluing is not used to make white paper, and is not all white paper so produced by the use of bluing?—A. I do not know.

Q. Then you do not know what white paper is in that sense, or what is used to produce white paper?—A. I only know from the common experience I have had with white paper that it don't grow yellow in two or three years.

Q. But news paper don't grow yellow in two or three years, does it?—A. Papers, o course, grow dim with age. I can, of course, only give my experience. Old books, of course, are yellow.

Q. Does old news paper get yellow in that seuse quicker than old books, and don't they get yellow in that way from age?—A. I suppose a very inferior quality of news paper will grow yellow earlier.

Q. Is not that ordinary news paper that the Democratic ticket is printed on—that national ticket of 1880?—A. I would say it was a better quality. It is "challered" or "channeled," or something of that kind.

Q. Is it not yellowed by age, in your opinion, too?—A. I do not think that paper is yellowed any with age.

Q. Then that is the natural color, that appearance it has, and you think it is exactly what it was two years ago when it was voted, in point of color, if it does not yellow with age at all?—A. Except from the soiled marks on there, and the general appearance of it being worn. I base my answer from taking a piece here away from the edges where it has not been handled. I have made my answer that I thought the paper was undoubtedly soiled, but whether it was faded, as you express it——

Q. Or yellowed or colored from age; I understand you to say that it is not, and that has made no difference in it?—A. It has a general old appearance, undoubtedly; but I do not think the paper where it has not been soiled has changed its appearance.

Q. You think, then, that age has not changed the appearance of that paper, is my question, and your statement—I do not hardly understand it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That age in 1880, at that election and to the present time, that quality of paper you say was not changed in appearance; didn't I understand you to say that the paper got whiter as it gets older?—A. If you did, I would like to have my answer read. You asked me if it had not faded, and I said if it had faded with age it would be whiter now than it was when it was voted.

Q. Do you mean that it was faded or folded?—A. I mean faded.

Q. The edges of that national Democratic ticket are somewhat frayed and torn on one side?—A. Yes, sir, they are.

Q. It looks like it has been handled, and doesn't it look old?—A. It does.

WILLIAM A. VAN BUREN.

WILLIAM N. HARDING, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. William N. Harding; 33 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. How long have you been in the practice of law in this city?—A. About four years, I believe.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. I am.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you did occupy any official position that day.—A. I did not. I was not appointed by the central committee or anything of that kind, or the county commissioners.

Q. You were not on the board?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or a member of the committee?—A. No, sir.

Q. What part did you take at the polls?—A. Part of the time I challenged, and I held the position as challenger and did some challenging.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Thirteenth ward, south precinct. The number of it I do not know. The other part of the time I was at work around the polls.

Q. State if you saw the tickets that were voted there that day by the different parties.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used that day by the Republicans.—A. I think it is.

Q. I hand you now a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used that day, if you recollect.—A. I have no recollection of that ticket. The names of the candidates were upon that ticket. It looks like the Democratic ticket that was voted at that time.

Q. That day did you observe the tickets as they were being voted, when they were being folded by the different voters; did you observe the tickets in standing there as they were being voted?—A. I was a casual observer of the tickets as they were being voted.

Q. And you were challenger there?—A. Part of the time.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters, if you could tell or distinguish that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded, by sight?—A. I do not remember that I could. I do not recollect of an election that ever occurred that I could distinguish the tickets from each other as they were folded and being voted.

Q. By sight?—A. By sight.

Q. Did you, in fact, make any effort at that election to tell how people were voting by just looking at them as they were voting?—A. I presume I did; I always do.

Q. Did you or not distinguish that ticket from the other as they were folded at that election?—A. I did not, that I recollect now.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say you were a casual observer?—A. Yes, sir; I was a casual observer as to the voters as they went up in the chute. I was very zealously at work there.

Q. Did you make any particular effort to determine what ticket a man was voting by the ticket, and did you have your attention directed to it, and did you try that?—A. I will say this: that there never was an election that I did attend that I did not make that effort.

Q. But you never have been able to tell the difference yet?—A. I have been able to tell the difference—at least I have been able to tell a difference. This is the way tickets are folded. I will tell you how that difference consists. I remember, in my experience since I have been a voter in the last several years, that the ticket has been a little wider—at least I think it has been generally a little wider—than the Democratic ticket as a rule. There has been a distinction of that kind to me for several years.

Q. Did I understand you to say that there never has been a time that you could not distinguish them and that you could distinguish them?—A. I do not think that either way. I said there never had been a time but what I had zealously watched tickets as they were put in.

Q. I asked you, has there ever been a time when you could distinguish them?—A. After they were folded up?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not think there ever was a time, unless I would see the ticket being folded.

Q. Not from the character of the ticket, there never was a time?—A. Now, wait, and I will explain that. I said that as a rule for the last several years there was a difference in the width of the tickets, and if I would see a ticket folded at that time and see it being folded I could probably distinguish between the Republican and Democratic ticket.

Q. That was because the Republican ticket was a little wider, you say?—A. Yes, sir; I think the Republican ticket has been a little wider.

Q. Could you tell that difference when the voter was voting and had it in his hand without watching him carefully; simply the difference in the width of the ticket, being an eighth of an inch, and the ticket on the same kind of paper otherwise, and folded exactly alike and voted, do you think you could tell the difference between the Democratic ticket and the Republican ticket?—A. Not if it was folded. I do not think I could. I said at the time it was being folded.

Q. Now, I will ask you is not that Republican ticket there a good deal thicker and a good deal stouter and a good deal more elastic and a good deal heavier than the Democratic ticket?—A. It is considerably thicker.

Q. More elastic, is it not?—A. More elastic.

Q. Heavier, is it not?—A. I think it is heavier.

Q. Is it more than double as heavy?—A. I will say it is heavier.

Q. You do not know how much heavier?—A. I could not say how much heavier.

Q. Are not those differences sufficient to enable you while looking carefully at his hands after you had familiarized yourself with the difference in the tickets, is it not such that, seeing the end of a ticket as the ticket went in the box, to say that it was a Republican ticket with the springy capacity, or when not springy, its breaking capacity; could not you tell the difference that way?—A. In the position that I occupied on that day, I don't think I could.

Q. Could a challenger tell the difference through handling them and seeing them?—A. The challenger did not handle the tickets, as I understand it.

Q. Could the inspector tell the difference from seeing and handling those tickets on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think so. I think to handle the tickets there is a difference in the texture of the tickets.

Q. With all of those differences so perceptible, as you say, to the touch and handling, you could not, when you had a fair chance to look at them folded, tell the difference, with the aid of your sense of sight?—A. As I remember my experience now at the polls that day, I will state that in the position that I occupied as a challenger, and noticing the voter as he went up to the polls with his ticket doubled up that I could not tell the difference. I will say this farther, that I had the ticket in my hand handling it when I said before I thought I could have told the difference.

Q. You think if you had handled it before and then looked on you could have told the difference?—A. I could not say. I think if I had handled one ticket, and then handled the other ticket, I could have told the difference.

Q. You could have learned the difference?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. After having learned the difference by that inspection, you could not by sight afterwards tell the difference?—A. I think the difference in thickness is so slight it is not perceptible after the ticket is doubled.

Q. I will ask you to look at these two tickets that I have in my hand, folded as they are, and is there any difference in the two tickets? Which is the Republican ticket?—A. I think that is the Republican ticket [indicating].

Q. Yes, sir; that is correct.—A. I saw you fold it up.

Q. No, sir; I did not fold it up; it was folded laying just as I picked it up.—A. I can see the different springy part; I can tell the difference on close sight.

Q. If there is that difference in the thickness when unfolded, would there be the same difference in the thickness when folded?—A. There will the same difference, but not so perceptible.

Q. Would it not be more perceptible when folded, because isn't the bulk larger? Take two similar tickets, and one is doubled up and so is the other, and see if the difference is not more perceptible to sight when it is doubled up than otherwise?—A. Yes, sir; that is true.

Q. Therefore. when you double that Republican ticket up in eight plies, and the Democratic ticket in eight folds, there is a marked difference when you press them together?—A. On close sight there is.

Mr. PEELLE. Looking at them together?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at those two tickets about the distance of two and a half feet. Is there quite a difference still?—A. Let me hold them.

Q. Yes, sir; I will let you hold them. Hold them so the light can fall on them, and not so it will be in the dark, and press them together at arm's length, and I will ask you now is there not a very perceptible difference when your attention is directed to that matter in that way?—A. I cannot say there is a very perceptible difference.

Q. Can't you see the difference?—A. I can see a slight difference, perhaps two feet from me in my hands holding them.

Q. And in my hands, the way I hold them the same distance, you would see the same difference, held at the same distance from you?

(No response.)

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are announced as a candidate for prosecuting attorney?—A. I hope to be the next prosecuting attorney.

Q. You are a candidate before the coming Republican convention for prosecuting attorney?—A. I am a candidate for the nomination, if I can get it at the next convention in this county.

Q. You take a good deal of interest in politics?—A. I always have.

WILLIAM N. HARDING.

ALFRED R. HOVEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Alfred R. Hovey; my age is thirty; my residence is in the twelfth ward in this city.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. Where are you practicing law?—A. In this city.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Well, it has been a little more than five years. I was admitted to the practice in the Federal court. I did not have much practice for the first couple of years, or such a matter.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. I never have.

Q. You are a Republican in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You never have occupied any official position?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was you not attorney once for the county?—A. My partner and myself were appointed by the county commissioners in this county in the fall of 1880 to defend the paupers in the criminal court; such persons as were not able to employ counsel, and we held that position two years.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct of the twelfth ward.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted at that precinct by the Democrats and Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any particular business that day there?—A. I was Republican clerk of the board that day.

Q. State if you saw the tickets as they were being voted and handed in to the inspector.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you this Republican ticket, marked Exhibit A to the deposition of

Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted at that precinct for Congressman and other candidates.—A. Yes, sir; that is just like the tickets that were voted.

Q. I hand you now this ticket, headed Democratic ticket, and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state whether that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that precinct.—A. It is exactly similar to those that were voted there.

Q. State if. when that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when voting, if, when so folded, you could tell or distinguish that ticket by sight from the Democratic ticket similarly folded.—A. I know I tried often on the day of the election to distinguish which ticket was being voted, and I could not do it.

Q. State if there was any complaint made to the board on that day about the character of the Republican ticket by anybody.—A. I never heard one word spoken about the difference between these tickets until after the electon was over and the count had.

Q. Did the count at that precinct correspond with the number of names on the poll-book?—A. It did within either one or two. There was a discrepancy of one or two votes there, I think.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say you never heard of any complaint about the difference in those tickets until after the election was over?—A. I never heard any person say that there was any difference, or speak about there being any difference, between the tickets.

Q. Your attention was not called to the fact that there was any difference by any person?—A. I never talked with any one about it.

Q. You never heard any one speak of the difference and you never spoke about the difference to any one and you never heard of the difference until after the election was over and the count had?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were a clerk sitting inside?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican and the partner of Mr. Harding, who has just testified?—A. Yes, sir.

ALFRED R. HOVEY.

By agreement of the parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Friday, November 8th, 1883.

FRIDAY, November 9, 1883—2 o'clock p. m.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

JOHN H. BOWLBY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John H. Bowlby; 42 years old; 263 South Pennsylvania street.

Q. What is your business?—A. Railroad conductor.

Q. What road have you been connected with?—A. I have been on the I. B. and W. for 13 years.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city last November for candidates for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Seventeenth ward; second precinct.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What portion of the day were you at that precinct there?—A. I was there all the morning; in fact all day, except about two hours, when I was away.

Q. What did you do when you were there; did you act in any official capacity in any way, or simply work at the polls?—A. I just worked there at the polls.

Q. Handling tickets, were you?—A. I had Republican tickets, that is all.

Q. That is what I mean. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used by the Republicans at that precinct, or a similar ticket.—A. I do not know hardly whether that is the ticket we used that day or not.

Q. What is your recollection about it?—A. The heading seems to be; it is the same kind of a ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used by the Democrats at that precinct as you recollect it, if you have any recollection upon the subject.—A. Well, I could not say. In fact, I did not handle any Democratic tickets that day. My impression is, it is that kind of a ticket.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when they vote, whether you could tell that Republican ticket from the Democrat ticket when similarly folded in the hands of the voter when looking on, by sight.—A. I do not think I could by looking on.

Q. State if there was any disturbance at that ward that day when you was there, and if so, what it was?—A. Nothing more than usual; not to my knowledge, that is nothing out of the way.

Q. Was there any arrest made there or any threatened arrest of anybody made by by the police down there?—A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Do you remember a gentleman down there by the name of Schoettle, who was swearing in Democratic votes that were challenged?—A. Chris. Schoettle was swearing in some votes. He keeps a saloon across the street there.

Q. Was he there all day?—A. He was there off and on. His place of business is upon the opposite corner there, and he would go home and come back every little bit.

Q. He went backwards and forwards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember that day of a Mr. Frenzel, from the Merchants' National Bank, coming down there?—A. No; I do not know him. I would not know him, I do not suppose, if I would see him.

Q. You do not remember of having seen him there?—A. No, sir.

Q. If there was any disturbance there that day, were you in a position to know it?—A. I should think I would be. I generally stand there all day, and I have for the last six or seven years.

Q. You say you heard of no disturbance there?—A. No, sir; I was trying to think. Martin Powers had some disturbance with a fellow, but whether it was at that election or not I cannot tell. That is the only disturbance I recollect of, to my knowledge, of there being down there. It appears as though some fellows—— I do not know whether it was on that election. I was just trying to think, but that is the only disturbance I ever saw there.

Q. What was the character of the disturbance?—A. I cannot tell now exactly what. It happened there by Bryce's bakery, where they were inside the yard, I think, where the wagons drive into the stables.

Q. Do you remember the character of the disturbance, what it was and what it consisted of?—A. I do not recollect at all. Martin Powers struck some one or else some one struck him, one or the other, but I forget which it was.

Q. State if there were any policemen at that precinct that day.—A. The policemen interfered, and took—I will tell you who it was; it was this Bill—telegraph repairer that used to live by me there. I think he is on the Vincennes road, as line repairer.

Q. Is he the man that got struck?—A. That is what I was saying. I do not know whether he struck Powers or whether Powers struck him. At any rate, the police took him to the station-house or took him away. I was trying to think whether it was at this election or not, but that is the only disturbance I remember of seeing there.

Q. Were there any policemen at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what part the policemen took there that day. What did they do there that day?—A. I did not see them take any part, that is, any political part.

Q. State what they did, if anything.—A. They stood around there all day.

Q. If they did anything other than stand around there to preserve the peace you may state it.—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. State if the police challenged any votes there that day at that precinct.—A. Not that I recollect of.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How many policemen were there there?—A. I think there was two.

Q. Was there not more than two?—A. The captain was there awhile. He drove down there.

Q. And were those two all that you recollect of? Who were those two?—A. I can not call their names. I never can call names very well. In fact, I am not well acquainted with none of them by name. Campbell was there off and on.

Q. And Crane—was he there once in a while?—A. Crane—I do not know by name. I know him by sight, I expect.

Q. Do you know Mr. Gerber, a policeman?—A. No, sir.

Q. Captain Splann, was he there?—A. He is a large man, is he not? I am not particularly acquainted with Captain Campbell, but I know most of them by sight.

Q. You say some of these policemen were around there all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were thepe to keep order?—A. I suppose that is what they were there for.

Q. Was there any particular need of having order kept at that precinct?—A. I did not see anything out of the way.

Q. Was it not true that they threatened to arrest Mr. Schoettle if he did not quit swearing in votes, and did not they stop him, and was there not a space of time there for, say, an hour or so, when a Democratic vote was not sworn in, although there were Democrats there to be sworn in and who were challenged?—A. He challenged them——

Q. Was it not true that for an hour or more there was a period when there were

Democrats who had been challenged but wanted to vote, and they were not sworn in, and could not be swore in, and they threatened to arrest a man that undertook to swear them in? Is not that true?—A. Not to my knowledge. In fact, I do not know whether they were Democrats or Republicans, or how they were voting, any of them.

Q. Was not that true that there was an hour there that the men on one side wanted to vote and they were challenged, and nobody swore them? Is not that true?—A. I could not say that it was.

Q. What is your answer to the question that any one threatened, I asked you. Did not some one threaten to arrest Mr. Schoettle, if he swore in votes there? Did you hear anything of that kind? Did you see anything of that kind?—A. There was one man there that they threatened to arrest, and that was Philip Dohn, the furniture man.

Q. They did threaten to arrest him?—A. Just outsiders spoke like that; I did not see any policeman threaten to arrest anybody.

Q. The question did not relate to policemen. Did you hear any one threaten to arrest Mr. Schoettle or any one there that swore in votes? That is the question. You said the police were there, but the question is, did any one threaten to arrest Mr. Schoettle?—A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Did they threaten to arrest any one that offered to swear in Democratic votes there? Did you hear anything of that kind?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect it.

Q. Is it not a fact that they did threaten to arrest Mr. Frenzel, of the Merchants' National Bank, and to handcuff him at that precinct on that day?—A. I did not hear anything of the kind, not while I was there.

Q. You said you heard something about threatening to arrest Mr. Dohn. Do you knew what that was for?—A. Some one said that he did not have no right to do what he did. I have sworn in votes there myself at every election all day, and I have been threatened with the same thing.

Q. What was it that Mr. Dohn did not have a right to do—swear in votes, or did he not have a right to vote?—A. Some says he did not have a right to swear in any, and some says he did.

Q. You heard of some threat to arrest him?—A. Yes, sir; from outsiders, that is.

Q. You heard that from the outsiders?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you mean by outsiders?—A. Men that has got no authority to arrest anybody; that is, outside of policemen.

Q. You heard of threats as coming from others than policemen. Do you know what sort of votes they were that Mr. Dohn was swearing in?—A. No; in fact I did not see him swear in any.

Q. Do you know Mr. Dohn's politics?—A. I cannot say that I do.

Q. Is he not a Democrat?—A. I know he votes the Republican ticket most of the time, and part Democratic ticket sometimes.

Q. Was he not on that day working for the Democrats, as you were working for the Republicans?—A. Mr. Dohn?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Then you neither saw or heard any trouble at that precinct at that election? I understood you to say that.—A. Not to my recollection.

Q. And you heard of no trouble at that precinct, from the police or anybody else at that precinct, at that election?—A. No; just as I stated before, that I could not tell whether that was before that or not.

Q. I mean with the exception of the arrest of Bill Powers and some one else that got into trouble; aside from that, did you hear of anything else, or see anything else, in the way of arrest or threatening or trouble?—A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. Were you at any other precinct?—A. No, I was not at no other precinct than there.

Q. As a matter of fact, did not these policemen there that day take part in that election?—A. No, sir; I cannot say that they did.

Q. Not at all; did not they take part in the previous organization, preliminary to the election there in that ward?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. You said you handled the Republican ticket that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not recollect whether that is the ticket or not; do I understand you to say that?—A. I said I did recollect the same kind of a ticket that we had.

Q. You said you did not handle the Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those two tickets by handling them; now, when they are folded?—A. I do not know that I could; I never tried it.

Q. You never tried to tell the difference between them, did you?—A. No, sir; not by feeling them.

J. H. BOWLBY.

JAMES A. WILDMAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. My name is James A. Wildman; my age is 49 years; my residence 415 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. I am. I am so taken and received.

Q. And you are postmaster in the city of Indianapolis, at present?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What official positions have you held in this State?—A. Auditor of State, at one time.

Q. Any other official positions in other counties?—A. Yes, sir; I was auditor of Howard County.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882; the Congressional election?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct of the sixth ward.

Q. What portion of the time were you there during the day?—A. I was there a good part of the day. I think I was there when the polls opened. I am certain I was.

Q. Did you act in any particular capacity that day?—A. I do not know that I did. I do not know whether I was one of the challengers that day or not. I do not re member about that now.

Q. State what portion of the day you were there.—A. Well, my recollection is, I was there when the polls opened, and remained, perhaps, about an hour, and came down to the office and staid awhile, and went back and remained until noon, and then, I think, I went to dinner and perhaps came to the office awhile, and went back and remained a good portion of the afternoon. That is about the way of it.

Q. Did you observe the tickets that were voted there that day?—A. Yes, I observed the tickets in a general way.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used and voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday; I will ask you to state whether that is the ticket used and voted by the Democrats at that precinct?—A. I did not see much of that ticket. Yes, that is my understanding that that is the ticket they had that day.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, and headed "For governor, Franklin Landers," and marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats in this city, in that State election, in 1880.

(Question objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. That is my recollection of that ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words, "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked as Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace. I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at the State election in 1880.

(The question was objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I guess it is.

(The answer was objected to as incompetent.)

Q. I hand you now a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words, "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket used at the national election by the Democrats, in 1880, if you remember?

(The question was objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I think it is, although I do not recollect of seeing the ticket.

(The answer was objected to as not responsive to the question.)

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words, "National candidates, James A. Garfield, for President," and marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace. I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at the national election, in 1880, by the Republicans.

(The question was objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; we used this one.

Q. State if that Republican ticket that I hand you, voted at the Congressional election of 1882, when folded and in the hands of the voter, as tickets are ordinarily folded and voted, could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when folded.—A. I do not believe it could.

(Answer was objected to as incompetent, being a matter of belief, and is not admissible as evidence.)

Q. State if at that election you did or did not distinguish the Republican from the Democratic ticket when it was folded and in the hands of the voter.

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that he has stated that he did not notice the Democratic ticket that day, and objected to for the further reason that it is lead ing and suggestive.)

A. I did not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I see you looking at those tickets with your glasses on; what age did you say you were?—A. Forty-nine years old.

Q. Do you use your glasses when you have to read?—A. Sometimes.

Q. Did you use them that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you see better with your glasses on?—A. I guess I can when it is a dark day.

Q. It is dark here, is it?—A. Not very dark.

Q. You can see better with them on in a light day?—A. Perhaps I could see this paper, but I could not read the names very distinctly without glasses.

Q. I will ask you if that Republican ticket is not 2 or 3 times as thick as that Democratic ticket—twice as thick any way—used in the fall of 1882?—A. The question asked me was if that could be distinguished from the other in the hands of the voter, and I said I did not think it could be.

Q. What is the difference would you say in the thickness of the two tickets?—A. I cannot tell you what the difference is.

Q. Is not that Republican ticket fully double as thick?—A. I do not know that it is; it is heavier paper.

Q. Is it not double as heavy?—A. I do not know that it is; it may be.

Q. What did you understand by that much of Mr. Peelle's question which is embodied in this expression, "When a ticket is folded and in the hands of the voter as it is ordinarily voted and ordinarily folded?"—A. I understoyd that to mean just this, that men when they vote as a usual thing fold their tickets, and different persons have different ways of presenting their tickets. I mean when they are folded up in the ordinary way that men have a ticket in their hands and when they go to hand it to the inspector of the election.

Q. Do you understand that the ticket is invisible or visible when the voter votes it?—A. Sometimes it is visible and sometimes it is not. Even if it is visible, I think it would be difficult when a person was standing outside of the chute to tell when they had their tickets in their hands and deposited them with the inspector; it would be a hard matter to tell whether a man had a Democratic ticket or a Republican ticket in his hand, unless it was because this ticket appears to be a lighter ticket than the other.

Q. I will ask you to take into consideration the appearance of it and the bulk of it, and state whether or not as a matter of fact, if you were standing right where the challengers usually stand or standing along the chute, if a voter came up with a ticket not hid in his hand, but four-fifths of it showing, and gave you an opportunity to see it, and then it was passed to the inspector and by the inspector held between the ends of his fingers, whether or not you, standing there, could have told that Republican ticket?—A. I do not believe that I could unless my attention had been called then to the fact. If I was looking to find a difference, and my attention had been called especially to see whether I could detect any difference or not, I might possibly have noticed in the shade of the paper. One appears to be a little lighter than the other, and I might, if my attention had been called to it, but I do not think it could be done.

Q. You do not think that the weight and bulk of that paper would give you any aid in determining it?—A. I do not believe it would unless my attention had been called at that time.

Q. If your attention had been called——A. If my attention had been called, and I was close enough it might have been detected in that way.

Q. Could you tell the difference by handling the tickets?—A. Yes, I think I could.

Q. As a matter of fact, did you stand close to the chute and watch on that day, and had your attention been called and were you watching?—A. I was by the chute and watching a good part of the time.

Q. Had your attention been called to the difference between them?—A. I do not think it had. I do not think the question of the tickets had been discussed in that precinct.

Q. Was not the matter of the tickets commented upon by the Democrats and objection made to the tickets?—A. It may have been. If it was I did not hear it. I did not hear any discussion about it.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if the ticket shown you marked "Democratic ticket," and headed, "For governor, Franklin Landers," and Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, was not the ticket voted by the Democrats at the election in 1880. I will ask you how you determine that ticket? Is it by the flag on the face of the ticket, or is it by the general appearance of the ticket and its color?—A. How I determine this ticket here?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. It would be the general appearance of the ticket and the names on the ticket.

Q. That is, the names on the ticket or the flag. Does the material on which it is printed, or the color of the ticket give you any aid in coming to that conclusion?—A. Which? That that is the ticket?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No; I do not believe they do.

Q. Look at the back of the ticket.—A. That is pretty dirty.

Q. Is not that ticket furthermore faded, or rather is it not discolored by time as well as by dirt?—A. Perhaps it is. I think it is more than likely that is true.

Q. Was not the ticket that was used at that election on plain white paper?—A. You mean the D mocratic ticket?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I suppose it is the same kind of paper that this was when it was fresh [referring to Democratic ticket] and had the same color that this had when it was clean.

Q. It is a supposition then?—A. That was back in 1880, and, as I remarked, I did not handle a great many of those tickets.

Q. You would call that paper plain, ordinary news paper upon which that Democratic ticket of 1880 is printed, would you not?

(Objected to as not proper cross-examination, for the reason that the witness is not an expert, and has not said that he was an expert on paper.

A. I suppose it was recognized as that when it was fresh; it is not so very white now.

Q. I ask you to take the Republican ticket, voted at the same election in 1880, headed "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I ask you to feel it and look at it, and see whether or not that ticket is not glazed.

(Objected to as not proper cross-examination.)

A. I am not an expert about glazed paper.

Q. Look at it.—A. I do not know whether it has been glazed or not; I could not say that the paper has been glazed; it is a different feeling paper from the other.

Q. What is the difference; smoother?—A. The other paper appears to be lighter paper; I think it is very smooth.

Q. Look at it in the light and see if you cannot see a glossy finish on that Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it has that appearance.

Q. Tell me what is the difference in the width between that Republican ticket voted at that election and that Democratic ticket?—A. I could not tell without measuring them.

Q. I want you to do that.—A. I could not do that unless I had a rule.

Q. You can tell the difference substantially?—A. Have you got a rule?

Q. No, sir.

Mr. WILSON. Has anybody got a rule?

The WITNESS. There is a slight difference in the width. You cannot tell very well from these tickets.

Mr. WILSON. I wish to make a statement——

Mr. PEELLE. To which I object.

Mr. WILSON. I have objected to the introduction of the Democratic ticket, headed "For governor, Franklin Landers," but as the ticket is already in, I now call the attention of the witness, on cross-examination, to the ticket which is headed "Democratic ticket," with the flag on it, "For governor, Franklin Landers," reserving the right, as the court cannot rule on the admissibility of the evidence offered by Mr. Peelle, to move to have this evidence rejected in the event the other evidence goes out.

Mr. PEELLE. I make no objection whatever to the introduction of this ticket in evidence on behalf of the contes ant.

Q. Look at that ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," with the flag on it, and I will ask you now is that the ticket that was voted at that election in 1880 for governor—the one that I have handed you?—A. I shall answer that as I did the other; I suppose it is. I judge, that as those names that appear on this ticket were the candidates upon the Democratic ticket at that election, that that is true.

Q. Is it not true that that paper is a good deal whiter than the paper of the ticket to which Mr. Peelle has called your attention, headed "Democratic ticket," with the flag on it?—A. It appears a fresher ticket.

Q. Now look at the backs of them; do you not think the color is different, as if one of them had been exposed and been discolored by exposure and time a good deal more than the other? I call your attention to the backs of them particularly.—A. One is a dirtier ticket than the other.

Q. Is there a difference in the color? Is there not a faded appearance of discoloration by time as well as dirt on that ticket that is marked as Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. That ticket looks to me like it had been exposed and badly cared for in some way or other and had not been carefully laid away.

Q. Would you say that paper of that quality would discolor from the lapse of time?—A. Indeed I do not know. I should judge if that paper were laid away, from the lapse of time and exposed, it would discolor; but I am not an expert in the paper business.

(The ticket shown the witness was introduced in evidence as a part of the cross-examination, and marked as Exhibit Z.)

DAVID F. SWAIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. David F. Swain; 38 years of age; residence, 744 North Alabama street, Indianapolis, Indiana. My place of business is number 60 East Market street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. The insurance business.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the insurance business in this city?—A. About five years.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election of 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. I did, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was in the second precinct on the north side, tenth ward.

Q. Were you there much of the day during the election?—A. I was there all day from the time the polls opened until they were closed, unless with the exception of intervals.

Q. Did you act as challenger or handle the poll-book?—A. I did. I acted as challenger part of the day, checking on the poll-book.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed Republican ticket, marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket or a similar ticket to the one used by the Republicans at that precinct on that day.—A. That is the ticket or a very similar ticket to the ticket voted at our precinct. I think that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday. I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used and voted by the Democrats at that precinct that day.—A. That is my recollection that there was such a ticket as that.

Q. State if you noticed the tickets as they were being voted there by the voters that day when folded.—A. I did.

Q. State if when that Republican ticket that I have just handed you is folded as tickets are ordinarily or usually folded by voters, you could tell or distinguish it from the Democratic ticket when folded with the names inside; whether it could be distinguished.—A. Well, I do not think it could, as my recollection is. I made an effort that day to keep the run of the votes in that way, but I failed to do it.

Q. State if at elections previous to 1882 you had been able to distinguish tickets one from the other as they were being voted.—A. Not to my recollection.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Please state how the voting is done at the precincts in this city or how it was in 1882. Describe the location of the ballot-box and the location of the chute that you referred to and how the voter approached the box to deposit his ballot.—A. Well, in different precincts of course they are arranged somewhat different as to the location of the ballot-box probably, but in the precinct in which I vote the ballot-box was on the table near a barricaded door; that is, where the door was partially filled with boards, and the door was open and the voter was required to pass through a chute, probably 8 or 10 feet in length, but which was shorter on the side next to the door, at the end next to the door, so that the voter after voting cold step out.

Q. An aperture there for him to step out?—A. Yes, sir; an opening for him to pass out of the chute.

Q. That aperture is just wide enough for one man to go through after depositing his ballot?—A. Yes, sir; that is, it was there, but I suppose another man could crowd in, but it would not be very convenient.

Q. Now, the chute is somewhat in the shape of a hopper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; rather wider at the top than at the bottom.

Q. The boards come up and make a chute about 4 feet high as inclosed?—A. Yes, sir; probably so.

Q. The ballot-box is in the building, at the door or at the window or the aperture there, sitting so when the voter goes up the chute he can hand the vote direct to the inspector and the inspector can drop it in the box.—A. Yes, sir; but the opening in the box was far enough back from the door so that the voter could not reach in the box and he would hand his ticket to the inspector.

Q. The inspector stood in full view of the crowd?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men can stand each side of the chute?—A. Allowing 18 inches to a man and 10 feet long, about six or seven men can stand on a side.

Q. Usually, and at that election there were six or seven men standing on each side of that chute?—A. Yes, sir; at times they were. It was full at times.

Q. Usually they stood there anywhere from three to six or seven?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were watching the vote as a rule?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Challengers and such like on each side?—A. Interested parties.

Q. I understood you to say that you made an effort that day to tell what a man's politics were by the ticket he was voting, but you found out that you could not rely upon it.—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. What led you to try that?—A. It was an effort to see how the vote was running.

Q. What called your attention to it first?—A. Just curiosity to know how the Republicans or Democrats would vote, and about what portion were being voted.

Q. How did you try and determine from the ticket?—A. I would try and determine from the general difference in the appearance of the ticket.

Q. There was a difference in the appearance of the ticket?—A. By close examination you could tell, especially if you take them together in your hand you could tell the difference.

Q. Did you not in point of fact that day claim there that you could tell what a man's politics were from the ticket he was voting, and did you not hear declarations of that sort all along?—A. I have no recollection of using that statement, not unless they should see the ticket there in some man's hands.

Q. I will ask you, did you hear a statement about that on that day there?—A. I have no recollection of hearing it. If it was, it was discussed in an unimportant way.

Q. You think it may been discussed in an unimportant way?—A. Yes, sir; it may have been discussed.

Q. You know of no one else except yourself that was trying that experiment?—A. No, sir; I know of no one. It was a matter of my own personal curiosity.

Q. Is it not true, as a matter of fact, that the Republican ticket is a great deal heavier than the Democratic ticket?—A. There is some difference in the heft of the tickets.

Q. Would you not think it was double as heavy?—A. No; I would not think it was double as heavy.

Q. You would not think it was double as thick?—A. It may be. I am not a paper man, and I cannot tell.

Q. Is there any difference in the finish of the two tickets?—A. Yes, sir; there is some difference.

Q. The Republican ticket—what is the character as to smoothness?—A. It has a more polished surface on the paper and is more solid.

Q. Would you not say there was a difference in the tint of the paper and color of the paper?—A. By close examination you can distinguish a difference.

Q. The Democratic ticket was wider?—A. My recollection was on election day that it was not so wide as the Republican ticket.

Q. What do you say about these exhibits to which Mr. Peelle called your attention, and which were offered by him as exhibits to the deposition of C. F. Halliday to both the Democratic and Republican tickets; what would you say to be the difference in the color of those; is not the Democratic ticket whiter?—A. Yes, sir; it does look whiter—those tickets do.

Q. Did you handle any Democratic tickets that day?—A. No, sir; but I had them in my hands.

Q. What did you do with them?—A. Sometimes we have tickets scratched, and if we cannot get all the ticket voted we would get what we could, and if a man wanted a Democratic ticket we would try to get him to put some Republican on the Democratic ticket and get him to vote it that way.

Q. You were handling Democratic tickets with the pasters on them?—A. Which we put pasters on.

Q. So you had Democratic tickets on which to paste names which you were handling that day with your Republican tickets?—A. Yes, sir; we had them both.

Q. You had both of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were handling both of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anybody in particular that you were working for there on the Republican ticket and using that Democratic ticket in that connection; any one man on the Repulican ticket to whom you gave particular attention, and that you were particularly interested in?—A. I could not say definitely about that.

Q. What is your best recollection?—A. My recollection is in talking to a Democrat, when he would mention that he was not very much pleased with any one man on his ticket, I would suggest that he vote for the man on the opposite ticket, and we could do that without marring his ticket.

Q. The question was not whether you were trying to get a vote for any particular man but whether as a matter of fact there was any one Republican you were particularly interested in and working for on that day, any man that had your preference or any difference in friendship, and if you had any one on that day?—A. I have no definite recollection about any weak man on our ticket, and we usually try to help them particularly.

Q. Was you working for the weak men on your ticket particularly?—A. I was working for the weak men.

Q. Not the strong ones?—A. Not the strong ones. I had no personal interest in any man on that ticket, as I had been a candidate before the convention a short time before, and I did not get the nomination.

Q. The Republican convention?—A. Yes, sir; I had no personal interest in any man on that ticket that day, but was working for the general good of the cause, as the saying is.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. When you answered, awhile ago, that upon close examination and inspection, you could tell one of those tickets from the other, did you mean by sight or by feeling, when you made that answer?—A. It was better told by feeling.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit G to deposition of David Swain.

ROBERT E. SMITH, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Robert E. Smith; 45 years old; residence 172 N. Delaware st., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am practicing law.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Since 1867.

Q. How long have you been in the city?—A. Since 1870, in this city.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city November 7, 1882?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. It was at a precinct in the 11th ward, where the fire department headquarters are; I think it is the 1st precinct now.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket used on that occasion, if you know?—A. It was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used by the Democrats at that election, if you know?—A. I think it was.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, with the words following: "For Governor, Franklin Landers." I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used by the Democrats at the State election, in 1880?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and leading.)

A. That is the ticket.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer this ticket in evidence, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to the deposition of this witness. The ticket will be found in evidence, and attached to this deposition and marked as Exhibit G, the contestant objecting to its admission as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit P, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used by the Republicans in the State election in this city, in 1880?

(Objected to for the same reasons above stated.)

A. It is.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, and headed, "For President, James A. Garfield," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used on that occasion?

(Objected to for the same reasons above named.)

A. That is the Republican ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked as Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used at that election, in 1880, by the Democrats?

(Objected to for the reasons above stated.)

A. That is the ticket, Mr. Peelle.

Q. Take in your hands again that Republican ticket voted at the Congressional election in this city in 1882, and state if that ticket, when folded as voters ordinarily and usually fold their tickets to vote, could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when folded, both being folded with the names inside.—A. I could not distinguish it at that time. I remember very distinctly that I was trying to keep the run of the votes in that way, and I could not do it.

Q. Were you acting in the ward as challenger?—A. I was general challenger on the committee, and was a member of the Republican executive committee in the ward, and was there watching more than anything else.

Q. State if you heard any complaint made about the character of the Republican ticket by any one.—A. In what way.

Q. Because of the ticket being on the kind of material it was, or paper?—A. I don't recollect now. I am not certain whether there was anything said about that ticket at that time or not.

Q. State if Ross Clark was at that precinct.—A. He was.

Q. State what objection or complaint, if any, Mr. Clark made to that Republican ticket that day?—A. I was not at the window all the time, but I don't remember of any distinct objection being made to that ticket. I don't remember of hearing of any at that time.

Q. State if, when you was there, there was any conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman with reference to that ticket.—A. Yes, sir; there was a good many conversations between Clark and Hasselman during that day.

Q. Did you hear a conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman with reference to this ticket, and the purpose for which it was gotten up; and if Mr. Hasselman made any remark about that in your hearing, you may state it?—A. I did not hear him make any remark about the purpose of the ticket, but, as I said to you, I was not at the window all the time.

Q. State if anything was said by Mr. Hasselman there that day to Mr. Ross Clark about the purpose for which that ticket was gotten up?—A. As I stated, I did not hear him make any remark about the purpose of the ticket at all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say you were on the challenging committee?—A. I was on the challenging committee and a member of the executive committee.

Q. How many men did you have on the challenging committee?—A. Four or five.

Q. What were their duties?—A. We had some to check the names as they were voted, and we had some that we would notify if we had an doubts about the eligibility of a voter to object and challenge his vote; and we had others to watch the proceedings around the polls; and we had another very important one to look after our colored men. We always have trouble with those colored men, and they most always challenge them at our poll irrespective of whether they know them or not.

Q. You said you heard Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman that day talking?—A. I did frequently.

Q. What were they talking about?—A. They were wrangling over a vote generally.

Q. Do you recollect whose vote?—A. No.

Q. You don't recollect any man's vote?—A. No, sir; they wrangled a good many times. I don't recollect any one vote.

Q. You don't recollect any one's name that they were wrangling over?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were they colored men?—A. Sometimes they were colored men.

Q. Is that all you heard between them—wrangling about votes? You did not hear a word about that ticket?—A. I don't remember of hearing anything about the ticket during the election.

Q. Didn't you hear Mr. Clark at that precinct at that election object to the character of those tickets, and get into a conversation or discussion with Mr. Hasselman about the ticket, and where they came from, and what it was gotton up for?—A. I said I did not remember that conversation, but as I said to you before, there were many times when I was not at the window. I was about the poll all day.

Q. Did you see Senator McDonald drive up there, or did you see him at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear him say anything about that ticket at that precinct that day?—A. I don't recollect whether he made any remark about the ticket or not.

Q. Did you see him go to the window at that precinct, and as a matter of fact, did not he go to the window at that precinct and talk about this ticket to the inspector and others, and object to the character of the ticket?—A. As I say, I don't remember of him doing that. He may have done it.

Q. Is not that the precinct where Senator McDonald votes?—A. Yes, sir; he was not there very long. He was there two or three times during the day.

Q. Did you say you were not there when he was there?—A. I said I remembered of him driving up to the polls, I think in the forenoon and afternoon both.

Q. Were you there when he went up and talked with the officers, or did you see him go up and talk with the officers?—A. I don't recollect. I heard him talking very frequently to his challengers and men that would meet him at the curb-stone, but I did not hear anything that was said, because I did not go there to see him.

Q. He seemed to take a good deal of interest in that election?—A. Of course he did.

Q. You don't know what he said?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not see him go up to the ballot-box?—A. I remember once I saw him go toward the window.

Q. How far were you from the window?—A. I was around the corner at our side.

Q. What distance?—A. I cannot say exactly; perhaps two rods.

Q. You did not hear what he said?—A. No, sir. I was not around there trying to catch what they were saying. I did not do that.

Q. Do I understand you to say that you never heard any comments or complaint about this ticket?—A. As I said distinctly, I don't recollect during the election there of hearing any one say anything about it, or make any complaint about the character of that ticket.

Q. Did you hear any Republican speak of the character of the ticket?—A. I spoke of it myself.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said it was stiff.

Q. What else did you say?—A. Nothing.

Q. Did you call Mr. Hasselman's or anybody else's attention to the peculiar character of the ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not talk with Hasselman there?—A. I talked with him very often, but not about the ticket.

Q. Did you say anything about the elasticity or springy character of the ticket?—A. No, sir. I simply made the remark that that was a stiff ticket.

Q. Who did you make that remark to?—A. I don't know that I made it to any one particularly. That was when I first got hold of it in the morning.

Q. Didn't others comment on that ticket?—A. I don't recollect of their commenting upon it.

Q. As a matter of fact, do not you know that that ticket was talked about and criticised all over this city from the time it made its appearance at the polls up to the present time?—A. I don't know that. I know since the election there has been a great deal of talk back and forth about that ticket, but during the election I don't remember of hearing anything said about it except what I said myself, and that was that it was a stiff ticket.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That talk has principally been by those who have been defeated upon the Democratic ticket in this county?—A. A good deal of it.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Have you heard any Republican condemn the character of the ticket?—A. I have not heard any Republican condemn it.

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

Q. Do you know who challenged these Republican voters about which Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark were speaking?—A. Oh, there was quite a number that did challenging on the Democratic side.

Q. I am talking about the Republican side.—A. I don't think there was a voter challenged by any of our men. I don't know of any.

Q. As a matter of fact, did not Mr. Hasselman and others challenge colored voters there that day that had Democratic tickets in their hands?—A. They may have done it, but I don't recollect it.

Q. And they may have talked about the ticket when you did not hear them?—A. I have heard so much of it since that if there had been any conversation in my hearing during the election, I think I would remember it. Of course there may have been, but my best recollection is that I did not hear it.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you if you can state the names of the colored men that were challenged there?—A. I cannot state their names.

Q. Do you know any of them?—A. I know them when I see them, but I don't recollect their names. There were quite a number of them, and we always have to swear them in; the Republicans do at every election.

Q. Who was inspector at that precinct?—A. I think Mr. James C. Yohn was at that election.

Q. Who is James C. Yohn?—A. A resident of that precinct, and he has been a resident of Indianapolis ever since I have been here.

Q. How old a man is he probably?—A. I should think him very near 60. I think he was. I don't know his age.

Q. State if during that election Mr. Yohn by signs, winks, nods, or by the manner in which he held his ticket, gave any sign to the challengers outside by which they might know what kind of a ticket was being handed in to the inspector.

(Objected to as leading and not proper or lawful re-examination.)

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge or recollection.

Q. I mean did you notice anything of that kind?—A. I did not notice that, but there only being three or four on that executive committee, I would think if there had been such an arrangement I should know of it.

Q. Was there any arrangement, agreement, or understanding that Mr. Yohn should be guilty of anything of that kind as inspector at that election?—A. There was not to my knowledge, and I don't believe he would be a party to any such an arrangement.

(Objected to as not being responsive to the question.)

ROBT. E. SMITH.

CHARLES A. DRYER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Charles A. Dryer; age thirty; residence 268 Central avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am an attorney-at-law.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. About seven years.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you attended the election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at any of the wards or precincts in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was at several. I was particularly at the 6th ward and 2nd ward; at both precincts of the 6th ward, and at the southern precinct at the 2nd ward.

Q. As a matter of fact, I believe you voted at Irvington?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What portion of the time were you in the city here that day?—A. I was here from one o'clock until the time the polls closed.
Q. Did you take any particular part at the election in this city?—A. I was at the polls doing what I could for the Republican ticket.
Q. Did you observe the tickets as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Take this ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked "Exhibit A" to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and state if that was the ticket used by the Republicans in this city on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked "Exhibit B" to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state whether that was the ticket used by the Democrats?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.
Q. State if that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters, if it could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded, both being folded with the names inside, by sight.—A. No, sir; I do not think it could in the hands of the voter.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Where did you reside at the time of the election?—A. I resided at Irvington.
Q. How far is that from the 6th ward?—A. It is about four miles, or four and a half.
Q. How far is it from the 2d ward about the same distance?—A. About the same.
Q. You say you came in at one o'clock that day and stayed until the polls closed?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you went around to those precincts that you have named?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you do any challenging that day?—A. Not in the city, no, sir; I was not on any challenging committee.
Q. Did you handle Democratic tickets that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you handle Republican tickets?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets, and did you by handling them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Those tickets are different, are they not?—A. Yes, sir; somewhat.
Q. Is there not a good deal of difference?—A. It is owing to what you mean by "a good deal." I can say there is a difference in handling the tickets. One is stiffer than the other.
Q. And thicker than the other?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. More polished and harder than the other?—A. I do not know about the "polish" part, but about the stiffness, it is stiffer than the other.
Q. Stiffer, harder, and thicker; this Republican ticket has those characteristics?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are a Republican, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

CHARLES A. DRYER.

D. V. BURNS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. David V. Burns; 42 years old; 440 North New Jersey street, Indianapolis, Indiana.
Q. What is your business?—A. Practicing attorney.
Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Since 1867.
Q. Have you ever occupied any official position in this county?—A. Yes, sir; I was the district attorney, at one time, of this judicial district, and for a few months I was on the superior bench.
Q. Were you on the superior bench by appointment or election?—A. By election.
Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, November, 1882?—A. I was.
Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was at the south precinct of the 6th ward; I believe that is number 2, but I am not sure about the numbers.
Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. I was one of the judges.
Q. I hand you a ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Republicans at that election, or a similar ticket?—A. I think that is the ticket.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that election.—A. The ticket has every appearance of being the same that was used at that time. The names are the same.
Q. State if when these tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when they go to deposit their ballots in the box, if you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight, by looking on at the polls while they were being voted.—A. Do you wish me to give my opinion now, or my recollection of the facts as they were then?

Q. Your recollection of the facts as they were then.—A. As to whether or not I could tell, when they were folded?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. By a critical inspection the difference can be told now the distance of some two or three feet away, but I should say no.

Q. The tickets are ordinarily voted with only one to be observed, are they not?—A. At our polls the Democratic politicians were on one side of the chute and the Republicans on the other, and each had their hands full of open tickets, and as the voter came up, one side or the other, or both, handed him a ticket which he had folded in his hand when he came to vote, and by the time he reached the box with it himself he ordinarily held it in his hand. I recollect quite well that I received a number of the tickets, and when I had one in my hand I could tell the difference, but I have no recollection of being able to tell the difference unless it was handed to me. A large number were handed to the voter open, after he entered the chute, from one side to the other, and as to those, we could tell from the fact we saw who handed them to him, and we saw the heading.

Q. The tickets, as they were ordinarily folded in the hands of the voter and being voted, could you tell one ticket from the other by the external appearance of the ticket when folded, by sight?—A. I have not charged my memory particularly with that. Judging now from the appearance of these tickets I should say not until he had approached sufficiently near to the inspector and handed it to him.

Q. And then you could tell the difference by feeling?—A. Yes, sir; I could tell by feeling it.

Q. Have you ever been judge or inspector of an election in this city before that?—A. Yes, sir; I was, in 1880.

Q. At the State or national election?—A. At both, I think. I am sure I was at the State, and I think I was at the national.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," printed across a flag, and with the words "For governor, Franklin Landers," and marked Exhibit Z to the deposition of Mr. Wildman, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that State election in 1880?—A. I think that is the ticket; that has every appearance of being the same.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

Q. I hand you a ticket headed the "Republican ticket," of the same year, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that election in 1880.

(Objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.)

A. I should think so.

Q. Take both of those tickets in your hands and state what is the difference in the probable width of those tickets.—A. The Democratic ticket is about three-eighths of an inch wider.

Q. Look at the difference in the color of those tickets and see if there is a difference in the color of them.—A. The Republican ticket is a little dirtier now than the Democratic ticket. The Democratic ticket seems to be more porous; it is not so finely finished.

Q. That Republican ticket has a finer finish on it, has it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a smoother surface?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when those two tickets were folded, if there would not be a more marked difference between them to the ordinary looker on at the polls than there is between the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882, similarly folded.—A. The difference in width is noticeable. Yes, sir; there is a difference in the finish that is noticeable. I am unable to say as to that. The Republican ticket of 1882 is more, by reason of its thickness, than the Democratic ticket, whilst that of 1880 Republican ticket is not so white as the other. The difference between them is of a different character.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket" with the words "For President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket used at the national election in 1880?

(Objected to.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket" with the words "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and I will ask you if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at the national election in 1880, if you recollect?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial,)

Q. I recollect the names. I do not just now so well recollect the character of the ticket. In the absence of anything to the contrary, I should say that was the ticket.

Q. Note the difference in the length of those tickets, in the width and in the color; what is the probable difference in the width of those two tickets?—A. Three-sixteenths of an inch.

Q. Is there any difference in the length, and if so, how much?—A. About an inch and three-quarters, or an inch and seven-eighths.

Q. Which is the longer?—A. The Democratic ticket.

Q. Is there any difference in the color of those two tickets?—A. The Republican ticket is finer paper and the thicker paper, and I think a little whiter.

Q. Fold those two tickets as tickets are ordinarily folded and voted by voters.—A. I have folded them.

Q. State if you could distinguish one of those tickets from the other as readily as you could the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882 by handling them.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there not a more marked difference between those two tickets voted in 1880 at the national election, to the best of your recollection, to the lookers-on at the polls, the tickets being in the hands of the voters, than there are in the Congressional tickets voted in 1882?—A. As ordinarily folded there is, in this, that the Democratic Presidential ticket would have a greater bulk to it, in that it is wider and longer than the Republican ticket at the same time, whilst these of 1882 are of the same width and fold up about the same size.

Q. State if those Republican tickets voted in 1882—state the length of those two tickets—that is, if there is a difference in the length of the two tickets voted in 1882.—A. The length and the width are exactly the same.

Q. State if this Democratic ticket voted in 1880 and this Republican ticket voted in 1880 at the State election could be distinguished by handling or by feeling?—A. Yes, sir; the Republican ticket has a finer finish.

Q. Could an inspector when receiving those ballots tell one from the other?—A. I could myself, and I did.

Q. You say you did as inspector on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir; I was judge, but very frequently we interchanged there, and I acted as inspector a good part of the day. It is not the duty of the judge to receive the tickets, but I relieved the inspector a good deal, and did receive the tickets.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Now, I call you attention to the Democratic ticket voted in November, 1882, and the Democratic State ticket with Franklin Landers at the head of it with a flag, and the Democratic national ticket, for President, Winfield Scott Hancock, the same being all introduced here as exhibits, and I will ask you to say if those tickets are not all of them on substantially the same character of paper?—A. The Democratic State ticket of 1880 and that of 1882 are substantially alike. The Democratic national ticket of 1880 is not quite so heavy; I think it is not quite so heavy, but if it is it has not so much finish in it as either of the others.

Q. I will ask you if they are not specifically alike? Of course the finish of the Democratic ticket you see is a little bit discolored, but aside from that I will ask you if the quality of the paper is not about an average newspaper?—A. I am not familiar with the technical terms that those who examine papers would use, but the National ticket has not the amount of finish in it, or it has not the weight to give it a stiffness like that of the State ticket.

Q. Has it not been handled a good deal more?—A. Yes, sir; I think it has been handled more, and still it is easy to determine that the original had not the same quality of stiffness. I am not accustomed to handling paper of that kind a great deal.

Q. Is it not true that the number of names on the Democratic national ticket is probably a quarter less than the State ticket that was used in 1882?—A. There are not near so many names—I judge about half the number.

Q. About half as long?—A. Yes, sir; nearly two-thirds as long. The names are larger on the national ticket.

Q. I call your attention to the Republican State ticket used in the "Garfield" campaign, which is already in evidence, and to the Republican ticket used at the State election in 1882 at the fall election; and I call your attention to these three tickets I have named, both the Republican State ticket used in the November election, 1882, the Republican State ticket used in 1880, and the Republican national ticket, the "Garfield" ticket; and I will ask you if those three tickets do not vary more decidedly than the three Democratic tickets to which I called your attention awhile ago, both as to quality, as to thickness, as to size?—A. Yes, sir; taking the three, I think there is more difference.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you the width of the Democratic ticket with the flag at the head of it; I would like you to take this rule I hand you and say what is the width of it by this rule.—A. Well, the width of the Democratic State ticket of 1880, provided this rule is correct, is about $\frac{1}{32}$ of an inch less than 3 inches and $\frac{1}{8}$, that is, if it was $\frac{1}{32}$ of an inch wider it would be 3 inches and $\frac{1}{8}$ in width.

Q. Measuring by the rule, you say that is the width of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please measure the Democratic State ticket used at the November election of 1882, and tell us by that rule what is the width of that ticket.—A. That ticket is scant 3 inches.

Q. Now measure the Democratic national ticket voted for Hancock and English, and what do you say is the width of that?—A. The ticket is two inches and seven-eighths.

Q. Now take the Republican ticket voted for Albert G. Porter for governor, already in evidence, and measure that by the same rule, and say the width of that.—A. That is two inches and eleven-sixteenths.

Q. Take the Republican national ticket voted for Garfield, and let me see how wide that ticket is by the same rule.—A. That is the same—two inches and eleven-sixteenths.

Q. Now take the Republican ticket used at the November election, 1882, and tell us what is the width of that?—A. Three inches.

Q. I ask you to take the Democratic ticket voted at the November election, 1882, and the Republican ticket voted there, and place one on top of the other, and say what is the difference in the width of the two tickets.—A. There is no difference in the width or length; no appreciable difference.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the tickets voted November, 1882, by the Democrats and Republicans, and I will ask you to look at them in my hands. I hold both of them in the middle, folded; which is the Republican ticket?—A. I am now making a critical examination at the distance of about three feet.

Q. Which would you say is the Republican ticket?—A. The one in your right hand. I was looking at the end of it, and I could see that it was thicker.

Q. You were looking at the little end as folded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hold, then, the sharp end first folded, and I ask you now, holding them again the same distance, which is the Republican ticket, and I will put them under the table and shuffle both of them, and now I hold them, showing the long edge to you, and I ask you which is the Republican ticket?—A. It is now little more than a guess, but I should say that the Republican ticket is in your left hand.

Mr. PEELLE. I suggest that you hand it to him to see; let him answer the question as to that.

The WITNESS. The difference in appearance is not very great from this distance; and as they are now folded I see the side and the edge of that one without looking at the ends of them, but as you put them before, by critical examination I am able to distinguish.

Q. Now, touch the ticket that you say is the Republican ticket.—A. I was mistaken on that; I made a mistake. I said it was little more than a guess—at any rate, as they now appear to me—and I was mistaken, I see, by the feeling.

Q. As a matter of fact, you can tell by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How?—A. The Republican ticket that has been shown to me is thicker.

Q. Is it not about as thick again?—A. I cannot tell you anything about that.

Q. Do you have to use glasses?—A. No, sir; not for anything of that kind. I now state that I see no difference, and I say I am about three feet away, and sitting as I do now I see no difference in the thickness of the paper at the end; but take the ticket as folded together, with the number of folds they have, I say that, with my knowledge especially upon the subject, that the Republican ticket is stiffer and thicker, and for two years I have had some knowledge of the subject; and I can say if I were to look at them ordinarily, without any previous knowledge in regard to them, I think from this distance I would not be able to distinguish any difference.

Q. But with your knowledge before, and having your attention called to it, can you tell the difference?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. By sight?—A. I can now, in a critical examination of the ends of them, as you now hold them.

Q. This room is a large room that we sit in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This room is fully 40 feet long and 25 feet wide?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There are two rear windows, and all the light you get is from my right?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There are two rear windows?—A. Yes, sir; and all the light we get is from those windows.

Q. And it is a cloudy day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is now by my watch ten minutes after four?—A. Twelve minutes after four.

Q. Upon what day?—A. The 9th day of November. I would say that we are sitting some 12 feet from this west window, and we have as good a view from it as from any one window.

Q. The light shining, as I am sitting here, from my right?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say, with a previous knowledge and critical examination, sitting three feet away, you could tell one ticket from another seeing the ends of the tickets?—A. Folded in the number of folds that that is it makes eight thicknesses, and when the ends of both are exposed to me I can tell the difference by a careful examination by the thickness of the paper.

Q. That ticket is folded the same as tickets are usually folded?—A. That is about the way tickets are ordinarily folded. Those are folded nearly as voters would take their tickets and fold their tickets, and folded about the size and shape tickets are ordinarily folded.

Q. You would say, then, that the judges and inspectors handling tickets could tell the difference between those two tickets?—A. If he desired to make a careful examination of them, and had time, and they were presented to him in that way, I should think he could, at least I could, and by feeling it could tell at that time.

Q. At any time you could tell by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were judge that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sitting in a room back of the ballot-box?—A. Part of the day I occupied the position of inspector right next to the window, and received tickets. Doctor Ward was our inspector, but he seemed quite contented to be relieved, and I preferred to be a little active, and so I received the tickets.

Q. Were you upon the outside among the voters any great length of time during the day?—A. Not any very great length of time. Ordinarily when I acted in a position of that kind I hold myself aloof from the voters. If I was outside at all in front I did not mingle with anybody or handle tickets.

Q. When you acted in the capacity you did there you took no part in the outside politics?—A. No, sir.

Q. In 1880 do you recollect whether the Democrats or Republicans were in power in the city of Indianapolis?—A. I think the Republicans were.

Q. Do you recollect the character of the police force, as to whether it was appointed by the Democrats or Republicans in 1880 at the time of that November election?

(Objected to as not cross examination.)

A. The police force was chosen by a police board elected by a Republican council.

Q. What was the difference between the thickness of the Democratic ticket used in the November election, 1882—or, did I ask you that——A. [Interrupting.] Yes; you did, and I was unable to make any answer.

Q. Wouldn't you say, handling them, and examining them, and feeling them, wouldn't you say one ticket was double as thick as the other; double as heavy as the other?—A. That is, each of the State tickets of 1882? My eye is not critical enough to enable me to judge of the relative thickness of the two tickets by looking at them as to the weight of paper. I have never had any experience, and so I cannot tell.

Q. Wouldn't you say that one was double as heavy as the other, or double as thick?—A. I am unable to answer that.

Q. Do you read with spectacles?—A. Yes, sir; I read with spectacles for the simple purpose of resting my eyes. My glasses don't magnify any, and my sight is no better during the time I wear spectacles, but I can endure longer.

Q. Do your eyes give out when you do not use spectacles?—A. Yes, sir; that is, I can take spectacles and read for a greater length of time by using them; but if I take up a book or paper when my eyes are fresh and rested I read just as well. I do not know why it is. I had my eyes examined by an oculist, who recommended these kind of glasses that do not magnify, but they do focus the light in such a way as to rest my eyes.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have always been a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if the light in here is sufficient to enable you to distinguish or to examine the papers that Mr. Wilson has been handling so that you could say that you could be satisfied with the examination you have made?—A. Yes, sir; the light is sufficient to enable me to testify, so far as that is concerned, with all the accuracy I am capable of.

Q. State if the light in this room now, and at the time you have examined about these tickets, is not poorer than it is ordinarily in a room where the inspectors and judges sit when receiving the ballots?—A. I do not know how the rooms are ordinarily. Where we received them it was through an open door, so the light in that case was perfect; but in this case the light is quite enough for this purpose.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Is there not a difference between the amount of light in this room and the amount of light you had outdoors, or did you have outer doors on the day of the election?—A. It is not so light here as it was there, but for the purpose of the examination I have made I think this light is sufficient.

Q. Is not this a very large room; is it not a hall?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is used as a hall?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is the Young Men's Republican Club Room?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you last passed judgment on the ticket held in my hand, stating that the ticket in my left hand was the Republican ticket, was not the ticket in my left hand on the opposite side from the window—in other words, upon the dark side?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You would therefore see the Republican ticket in his hand plainer because of the Democratic ticket being behind the other?—A. I saw the ticket in the right hand a little more distinctly than the one in the left hand.

Q. And you were mistaken in the guess on the tickets three feet away?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. They were in the shadow?—A. Yes, sir; they were in the shadow one way you held them.

Q. And immediately upon touching them you knew the difference?—A. Yes, sir.

DAVID V. BURNS.

JOHN R. CLINTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John R. Clinton; 44 years, nearly; I reside in this city, and have for a good many years.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. I believe I have always been considered so.

Q. And are at present cashier in the county treasurer's office?—A. No, sir; at present I am employed in the auditor's office; I was in the treasurer's office.

Q. How long were you cashier in the treasurer's office?—A. Two years and three months.

Q. You are now deputy in the auditor's office in this county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you were in this city at the time of the Congressional election November 7th, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the Republican candidate for Congress?—A. You were.

Q. Who was the Democratic candidate?—A. Mr. William E. English.

Q. Who was the national candidate on the Greenback ticket?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. At what precinct and ward were you that day?—A. I was in the second precinct of the 22nd ward. Our precincts were right opposite each other in a small, narrow street, which made it all together.

Q. Were you challenger?—A. No, sir; I was one of the committeemen.

Q. Did you have any particular work that day?—A. I will not say I did any particular work, but I had a good deal of general work—looking after the details of the work.

Q. Did you observe the tickets as they were voted that day by the voters?—A. Not particularly. I observed the tickets as they were voted, but not particularly.

Q. Did you examine the Democratic and Republican tickets that day?—A. I do not know that I did examine them during the day.

Q. State if there was any complaint made at your precinct that day about the Republican ticket in any way?—A. I do not recollect of any complaint being made. There may have been, but I do not recollect.

Q. You say there was no complaint made there that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. Not that I remember of. If there was any complaint I did not hear of it.

Q. State if during that day you were able to distinguish or tell one ticket from the other in the hands of the voter when folded with the names inside as they were being voted?—A. No, sir; I think not. I know my attention was not called to it at any time during the day.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

J. R. CLINTON.

DAVID B. SHIDELER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. D. B. Shideler; I reside in this city; and I am nearly 46 years old.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am styled manager of the Equitable Life Insurance Society of the United States of America.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position here or elsewhere?—A. No, sir; not here. I have in another county in this State.

Q. What position?—A. I was township trustee for six years in Grant County.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir; of Democratic origin.

Q. You were on the Repnblican ticket at the last election as one of the candidates for Representative from this county?—A. Yes, sir; my name was there.

Q. Did you attend the election last November?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was at the 3rd precinct of the 11th ward.

Q. Did you occupy any position there that day?—A. I was reckoned as one of the challengers, I believe they call them.

Q. Did you observe the tickets as they were being voted that day?—A. I tried to.

Q. Take this ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked "Exhibit A" to the deposition of Mr. Holiday, and state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans that day.—A. I should say it was.

Q. Take this ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked "Exhibit B" to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats that day.—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. State if, when those tickets are folded with the names inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when being voted, you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight as they were being voted?—A. No, sir; I could not. I tried all day to distinguish every ticket that went in, but I failed and could not do it.

Q. Could you tell the difference by feeling the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever attend any election in this city prior to 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you able then to distinguish, by feeling the tickets, the difference between them?—A. Well, I do not know as to that. In 1880 I was able to distinguish by sight.

Q. What ticket were you able to distinguish in 1880 by sight?—A. The State.

Q. Or national election?—A. At the national election.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words, "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used by the Democrats at the national election in 1880?

(Objected to as irrelevant, immaterial, and incompetent.)

A. Well, yes, I should say it was the ticket.

Q. I now hand to you a ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that occasion?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those two tickets the ones you had reference to when you said you could distinguish one from the other in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You could distinguish them by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you by touch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?—A. I occupied the same position in 1880 at the national—and I occupied the same position in 1880 at the national election that I did in 1882. The tickets came in folded twice, as a rule, and that made them four thicknesses, and the difference in the length made a difference in the width which is discernable as far as a man could see the paper, that is, if they were folded. Now, if they were folded three times, making eight ticknesses, then it would be thicker, but not so wide as the other.

Q. Would it still be as distinguishable?—A. Yes, sir; on account of the numerous thickness of the paper; and also there would be some difference in the width. Folding that ticket twice it is almost a round fold, and that one twice it is about $\frac{7}{8}$ of an inch wide.

Q. It gives to one a round appearance and the other a flat appearance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For governor, Albert G. Porter," marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was voted at that election in 1880, if you remember?

(Objected to for the reasons heretofore given.)

A. I think it is one like it.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "For govenor, Franklin Landers," and marked Exhibit Z to the deposition of Mr. Wildman, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted in 1880?—A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. Do you recognize that flag on the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if those two tickets, when folded as tickets are ordinarialy folded when voted, could be told, one from the other, as they were being voted?—A. I should say now that they could, but at that particular election I chanced to occupy a position in which I tried to be as non-partisan as possible, and I gave very little attention to it.

Q. What position did you occupy?—A. I had the honor of being U. S. marshal.

Q. You gave no attention to the tickets at all?—A. No, sir; I tried to see the thing done fair, and tried to keep down the little disturbances that sometimes come up.

Q. I will ask you to state whether there is or not a more marked difference between the national tickets voted in 1880 for President than there is between the two tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882 in this city—I mean marked difference when folded?

(Objected to as immaterial, irrelevant, and incompetent.)

A. I should say that to the sight the difference is more marked on account of the difference in the length of those making a material difference in the width when folded.

Q. What would you say as to the difference in the feeling of the tickets compared with the tickets of 1882?—A. It would seem as though the Republicans in 1882 had got the Democratic paper of 1880 pretty near.

Q. You mean the Republican paper in 1880, don't you?—A. I beg your pardon. I thought that was the Democratic ticket; it was the Republican. You asked me if it is more marked.

Q. Yes, sir; how is it as to the touch and feeling of the tickets as compared with the tickets in 1882 when folded?—A. I don't think it is more marked. I believe the question was if it was not more marked?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Not as to the feeling of the paper. I do not think that the difference is more marked when folded on account of the width than the others.

Q. What is the difference between the thickness of the national ticket voted for Garfield in 1880 and the Republican ticket voted in 1882 by touch and feeling?—A. the difference in the width?

Q. The feeling and the thickness?—A. The Republican ticket of 1882 is a very slight shade heavier paper than the national ticket, and but very little.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You stated in the election in 1880 you undertook to act, as far as possible, non-partisan, particularly because you were a U. S. marshal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not a regular United States marshal?—A. No, sir.

Q. Deputy; appointed for how long?—A. For that day.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. In the United States?

Q. In this city?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I do not know.

Q. Was not there about one hundred or one hundred and fifty special deputy marshals?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I have not the slightest idea as to the number. I never knew.

Q. You were appointed by Dudley, U. S. marshal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any disturbance at that precinct that day?—A. No, sir; nothing serious.

Q. Do you have any serious disturbances at that precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. Either before, or since, or at all?—A. I may have known a little quarreling or jawing, and there was a little that day, and I thought it my duty to take one young man by the arm and lead him off to one side and tell him he had better be still.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you whether, when that Republican ticket was folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by the voters, could you tell that or distinguish that ticket, and, referring to the Republican ticket of November, 1882, is it not true when a ticket is folded in that way it is substantially concealed by the hands of the voters when they go up to the polls, and don't most of them put their tickets in their hands when they go up to vote [indicating]?—A. Men vary in voting, the same as in anything else. As a rule, I would say the average voter folds his ticket and holds it between his thumb and first finger in that way [indicating], an inch or an inch and a half of the ticket sticking out.

Q. That is about the way [indicating]?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Showing the end and part of the side?—A. Yes, sir. Some, however, come up with the ticket entirely concealed in the hand.

Q. If that is true, how could you tell by the length, as you said a while ago, that the Democratic ticket used in the election of 1880 from the Republican ticket, as you said you could?—A. When it passed from the hands of the voter to the inspector, as a rule, the entire ticket is exposed, and especially when the inspector places it at the opening in the top of the ballot-box and holds it until the clerk records the name and then shoves it in.

Q. Therefore it is not when a ticket is folded in the hands, as the voter ordinarily folds them, that you have a chance to see what kind of a ticket it is?—A. It is more when it passes from the hands of the voter to the inspector.

Q. I ask you the question again as to the character of the ticket when it is folded in his hands as a voter ordinarily folds it?—A. Well, now, mark you, that the length of the ticket before it is folded governs the width of it after it is folded, and if I see but the end I see the width of the ticket, and then know that is is a long ticket as well as if it was opened out and held before me. Here, take these tickets [indicating]. If I hold those tickets in my hand so that nothing but the end shows it shows the width after they were folded, so that it is not necessary for me to see the entire ticket to judge of its length and thus determine as to its length when it was not folded.

Q. Then it is necessary that the ticket shall be folded a given way in order to distinguish it?—A. No, sir; I should say folded in the usual way.

Q. I ask you if it was folded in the usual way when a voter undertook to conceal his vote by folding it so that it would be of the same width as the other ticket, you could not then determine from the outside appearance?—A. If it is the same width it is thicker.

Q. And then you can tell by the thickness?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if the Republican ticket folded at the election in November, 1882, is not thicker than any ticket that you ever saw voted by any party at any election in this city.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Did you ever know a thicker ticket than that ticket voted at the November election, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I knew one as thick, but it was not in this county.

Q. What county?—A. Grant County.

Q. Who voted that?—A. The Republicans.

Q. How long since?—A. I do not know that, but I should say it was twelve years ago.

Q. About twelve years ago you think you know of one instance where the Republicans used a ticket as thick as this Republican ticket voted and used here in the fall of 1882?—A. Yes, sir. I should say so.

Q. Was that county a Republican county twelve years ago?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. Yes, sir. I have known them to vote colored tickets too—red and pink.

Q. That was when the law permitted any color?—A. Yes, sir. At that time the law did not specify as to what kind of a ticket they should have. They could have it on pasteboard if they wanted it, or on a shingle.

Q. I will ask you if you can distinguish the Democratic ticket from the Republican by feeling it—the ones that were used in the fall of 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How can you do that?—A. The Republican ticket is on heavier paper, and more solid. What they call a finer, smoother finish, I do not know, for I never dealt in paper.

Q. Is it not thicker?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not about twice as thick?—A. No, sir; not quite. I do not think it is. I do not think that. I never weighed it to see, but I should say that two Democratic tickets would outweigh one Republican.

Q. Would you not say the ratio was about 40 to 90 between the difference in those tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not think so?—A. No, sir; that would be pretty near double. I do not know. I expect a paper man could tell you exactly, but I cannot.

Q. You were speaking just now of the difference in the appearance of those tickets used heretofore, the national Democratic and national Republican of 1880. I will ask you if the difference in those tickets does not grow out of the fact, principally the difference in the length, and that the Republican ticket is a great deal stiffer and thicker, and very much like the Republican ticket in color used in this election in 1882; take the national Republican ticket and the national Democratic ticket, and don't you say it was because one differs in length from the other?—A. Yes, sir; but when folded it was wider.

Q. Is not that Republican ticket on very stout material, much stouter than the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it is what I would call heavier paper than the Democratic ticket.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Was there any complaint there about the character of this Republican ticket by anybody?—A. About ten o'clock, perhaps, in the forenoon, ex-Senator McDonald came to the window with one of those tickets in his hand, and showed the inspector, or called the inspector's attention to, the character of the ticket, and asked them to keep a watch out, and he pronounced them the "spring-backs," and showed us a new trick—it was new to me—how they could be manipulated and two or three voted together and spring open.

Q. Is that the only complaint you heard of?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any one vote two tickets at that precinct?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know how your vote corresponded with the number of names on the poll-books?—A. No, sir; I never heard but what it was the same.

D. B. SHIDELER.

A. W. HATCH, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE;

Q. State your name, age and residence.—A. A. W. Hatch, and I am 26 years old; my residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you resided here?—A. I have lived here 11 years.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am an attorney at law.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in 1882, in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. We call it the southern precinct of the 10th ward; I do not know what number it is.

Q. Did you occupy any official position that day?—A. No official position. I was one of the challengers.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. I was there all day.

Q. Did you see the tickets that were voted there that day?—A. I did, sir; I did not challenge all day, but I was there at the polls all day; I challenged part of the day.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct on that day?—A. I should think so; yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that precinct on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I should suppose so.

Q. Did you handle both of the tickets there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are usually folded or ordinarily folded by voters and being voted, if you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight standing by and looking on as challenger?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any effort to do so?—A. I did with one voter that I recollect of.

Q. Who was that?—A. That was Mr. Samuel Beck, of this city.

Q, Why did you make an effort to do that?—A. At that time the temperance question was an issue and I was a little curious to know how he would vote, he being a very strict Methodist and a very strong temperance man and living near me at the time, and I always supposed and understood him to be quite an ardent temperance man.

Q. Did you distinguish how he voted that day?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you make the effort?—A. Yes, sir; I tried to.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Could you tell one of those tickets from the other by handling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you undertook to watch to see how Mr. Beck voted, because of your knowledge of his temperance views; was the temperance question involved?—A. Well, yes, it was; it was quite a factor in the canvass, as I understood it.

Q. It was a very active question in the canvass and a leading question?—A. It was one of the leading questions.

Q. He was a Methodist?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew his well-known temperance views, and you wanted to see whether his temperance views would permit him to vote that ticket?—A. Yes, sir; that is the recollection I have about it, and what called my attention to it.

Q. Didn't you know he was a life-long Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; he had always been a Democrat.

Q. And you were watching to see how the temperance vote was going in the campaign?—A. I did that with him; I noticed the same thing when he voted at the township election.

Q. The same question was presented at the township election?—A. Yes, sir; it was one of the questions that we considered in both of those elections.

Q. Was it not a leading question in that campaign as to how the temperance and anti-temperance people were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir; I think it was.

Q. Could you describe what constituted the anti-temperance people in that campaign?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Were not the Germans?—A. Yes, sir; as a rule, they were anti-temperance.

Q. Were not the negroes?—A. Anti-temperance?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I could not say as to that; I never talked with a negro in my life on the question.

Q. You have always taken an active part in politics here?—A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And do you not know, as a matter of fact, that there was dissension among the negroes on the temperance question?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. No; I do not recollect of any particular dissension in that regard.

Q. Don't you know they were not inclined to vote the Republican ticket, and that that very reason was a matter of apprehension among the Republicans here, who were afraid they would lose the negro vote on account of the temperance question?

(Obiected to as not cross-examination.)

A. No, sir; I don't recollect that; I know there was a good deal of talk as to how the colored people would vote at that election.

Q. Didn't it grow out of the temperance question?—A. No, sir; I do not think it did; I know I never heard the temperance question discussed in connection with the negro vote; I never did; that is news to me.

Q. Were there not many Republicans who were inclined to vote the Democratic ticket on account of the temperance question in that campaign?

(Objected to.)

A. I expect there was.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if the only way the question came up in the last campaign on behalf of the Republican party was not that the Republican party in its State platform simply favored submission of the prohibitory amendment to the people for their determination?—A. Yes, sir; that is what I understood to be the question at that time on the temperance question.

Mr. WILSON. You are a Republican?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

A. W. HATCH.

By agreement of both parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Saturday, Nov. 10th, 1883, at 2 p. m.

SATURDAY, November 10, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

EEWARD F. CULLEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Edward F. Cullen; 33 years old; residence, No. 57 West Maryland st., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. Plumber and gas-fitter.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. I have been here in business for myself for going on three years.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. Yes; I was in the post-office about three months.

Q. How long ago was that?—A. I went out of the post-office just after Mr. Wildman's appointment; two months after his appointment I left the post-office on account of my health.

Q. Since that time you have been in the plumbing and gas-fitting business?—A. Yes, sir; I was in it before I went in the post-office.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was in the second precinct of the 16th ward.

Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. I was acting as committeeman.

Q. In that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do any challenging that day?—A. I challenged some that day.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I saw some of them. I do not know as I saw all of them. I was there pretty near all day.

Q. Did you see them as they were being voted by the voters and observe them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to Mr. Holliday's deposition, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that election at that precinct.—A. Yes, sir; I think that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was used and voted that day by the Democrats at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I think those are the same two tickets that were used at the polls that day.

Q. State if, when that Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded by voters when they vote, if it could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket by sight, both being folded with the names on the inside.—A. You could not distinguish them unless you would happen to see the man fold them before he went up. You could not tell the difference between the tickets after they were folded and passed to the ballot-box and to the judge's hands. If the head of the ticket, for instance, this part [pointing], was on the outside, you could see that through, and that was about all that you could tell. If they were folded up and that side opposite from you, you could not tell any difference.

Q. The tickets, as ordinarily folded in the hands of the voter and without any previous knowledge of the politics of the man and without seeing him fold his ticket, you could not tell?—A. I do not think you could.

Q. Did you or not?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Where were you at the polls at that day?—A. I was on the west side of the chute.

Q. How did the voters ordinarily fold their tickets when they would go to vote them?—A. They fold them up so that they will go through about an inch opening.

Q. How did they carry them?—A. They carry them in their hands; sometimes it is clear shut up like that [indicating].

Q. Clear shut up so that nothing is seen but the little end and just part of the end?—A. Yes, sir; and of course when it goes down the inspector holds it like this [indicating].

Q. But the voter, as he ordinarily votes his ticket, holds it in his hand so that the ticket is substantially concealed?—A. Not entirely so.

Q. I do not mean entirely, but the main portion is concealed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And could he not hold it in his hand so that you could not see the ticket at all?—A. Yes, sir, of course; until he passes it to the inspector.

Q. Couldn't you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Yes, sir; you can do that very readily.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if you have been able, at elections previous to 1882, to distinguish the tickets by handling them?

(Objected to as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant.)

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Mr. Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at the national election in 1880?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that election, if you remember.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to fold those two tickets as they are usually folded by voters, and state if you can tell the difference between those two tickets, when folded.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if those two tickets are folded and in the hands of the voter coming to the polls as tickets are ordinarily folded, if you could tell by sight one from the other in the hands of the voter?—A. No, sir; you could not do it.

ED. F. CULLEN.

WILLIAM H. MORRISON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Wm. H. Morrison; 267 North Mississippi street, Indianapolis, Indiana; thirty-five years old.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am traveling agent for the Indianapolis Journal Company.

Q. How long have you been in that position?—A. Twelve years.

Q. Do you occupy any official position in this city?—A. I am a member of the city council.

Q. How long have you been a member of that body?—A. Something over four years.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. Twelfth ward, and I was at both precincts.

Q. Were you challenger any portion of the day?—A. No, sir.

Q. What part were you taking at the polls?—A. I was looking after the voters.

Q. As a worker?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when the Republican ticket is folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters, if it could be told from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded, both being folded with the names upon the inside, by sight; if you could distinguish one from the other when they were folded?—A. That would depend upon the distances.

Q. I mean from the external appearance of the ticket, just by looking on and seeing the ticket as it was voted and folded in the hands of the voter; could you tell one from the other?—A. You could not, without a very close observation.

Q. What would enable you to distinguish or tell one from the other?—A. It is this way with me when I am about the polls: I am always looking after the interest of my party, and I generally fix the ticket so I will know the way the ticket is folded.

Q. I ask you, with no previous knowledge of how the ticket got into the hands of the voter, or how he voted it?—A. I do not think you could tell very much about it.

Q. Could you tell the difference in the tickets by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been able to do that at elections prior to 18-2?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; always.

Q. State if at any elections prior to 1882 you were or were not able to tell the difference between the tickets by feeling.—A. I always have been.

Q. Did you attend the national election in this city in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at the national election in 1880 for James A. Garfield for President.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. It has been a good while ago; I think that is the ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words, "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that election, if you remember.—A. I am not able to state in regard to that; I think that is the Republican ticket.

Q. I will ask you to take that national Republican ticket and that Republican ticket voted in 1882, and state what difference there is, if any, in the feeling of the paper and in the weight of the paper, and in the thickness.—A. There is a very slight difference, a slight difference. This is a little the heaviest—that used at the November election in 1882.

Q. Have you any knowledge, as an expert, of paper?—A. Very little; no, I would not consider myself competent to testify in regard to that; I have been connected with those folks a good while, but I do not have much to do with that part of the business.

Q. Was there any complaints made at either precinct in the 12th ward that day about the Republican ticket, and if so, state what it was, about the character of the ticket?—A. None at all; no.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You heard no complaint at all?—A. None at all.

Q. You were one of the workers there, were you?—A. I was.

Q. How many workers did you have there that day at your precinct with you?—A. At both precincts—I was at both of them—I think we probably had twelve or fifteen.

Q. Twelve or fifteen men at work there?—A. Challengers and all?

Q. Challengers and watchers.—A. Yes, sir; and we had wagon men and everything of the kind and all arranged to get the voters out.

Q. To get them to vote?—A. Yes, sir; to look after them and to watch that election.

Q. You think at each precinct there was a working force of how many?—A. Not that many at each precinct.

Q. About how many at each precinct?—A. Probably one precinct had a few more than the other.

Q. Which had that?—A. Number two.

Q. How many were there?—A. I would think there was probably seven.

Q. How many at number one?—A. Five or six.

Q. Those men were Republicans and working in the interest of the Republican party as challengers, and seeing that the Republicans got in their votes, and serving the cause to the best of their ability?—A. Yes, sir; they went about it not only at that election, but it is generally the case there; we aim to do that.

Q. Are you certain there were no comments on the character of those tickets at either precinct, that you heard?—A. Not a word; I did not hear a man say a word.

Q. Did you say anything about it yourself?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you notice the difference between the Democratic and the Republican ticket?—A. Of course I saw the tickets; I generally have some of both tickets.

Q. You did not notice the difference yourself?—A. I knew when I took hold of a ticket that the Republican ticket was somewhat heavier than the other.

Q. It was not such a thing that you paid much attention to?—A. No, sir.

Q. You made no comment on it that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. No one else commented upon it?—A. No, sir.
Q. And you heard of no objection at all?—A. No, sir.
Q. You are connected with the Journal Co.?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. They printed these tickets?
(Objected to as not cross-examination.)
A. Yes, sir; I think they did.
Q. You are a pretty zealous Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State what force the Democrats had at work at those precincts in that ward.—A. They had an equal number at least; I think they had a few more at that election.
Q. At the election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it not usually the case that they have more workers at the precincts in this city than the Republicans have—I mean in Republican wards?—A. Well, I think that is customary.
Q. And in the Democratic wards the Republicans are apt to have more men at work?—A. They frequently exchange men, and send some one over to help the brethren out when they do not have sufficient.
Q. And everybody was there about the same as they were before?—A. I think it was a little in excess of what it was before at that election on that day on the part of the Republicans and the Democrats—on both sides.

WM. H. MORRISON.

WILLIAM L. TAYLOR, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. I am twenty-nine years old, and I live in the city of Indianapolis; William L. Taylor is my name.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am an attorney.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words on it, "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if you have seen that ticket before.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that ticket used at the State election in this city in 1880?—A. It was.
Q. Where did you get that ticket?—A. I got it from my trunk.
Q. How did it get in your trunk?—A. I am in the habit after each election, on the day of each election, of taking all the kind of tickets that are voted and taking them home, and keeping them and filing them away, and those tickets were done the same way.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" written across a flag, and marked Exhibit D to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used at that election.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you seen that ticket before?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know where it came from?—A. It came from my trunk.
Q. How did it get in there?—A. I put it there on the day of the election like the ticket to which I have just testified—the Republican ticket.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace. Was that the ticket voted at that election in 1880?—A. That was the ticket voted in that precinct.
Q. Have you seen that ticket before?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where?—A. I got it also at the precinct, with the two tickets just mentioned.
Q. State how it came in your trunk.—A. I put it there on the day of the election in 1880.
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words, "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked as Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket used on that occasion.—A. I do not remember; I am not sure. I will say that I filed a good many political documents at that time, and these tickets that I have just testified about having gotten there were all together, and I put rubbers around them; and in looking through my trunk the other day I found them and gave them to Mr. Peelle.
Q. State whether it is your recollection or not that those are the tickets that were used at that election in 1880.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What do you say as to that Democratic ticket marked Exhibit E to the deposition of Mr. Wallace, with the words, "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock"?—A. I cannot say that; I do not know.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You live in this city?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you are a law partner of Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir.

WILLIAM L. TAYLOR.

JOHN L. MOTHERSHEAD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John L. Mothershead; forty years of age; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am a manufacturer.
Q. What kind of a manufacturer?—A. Iron.
Q. Have you ever occupied any official position in this county?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. State what.—A. County treasurer.
Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. What position did you occupy that day?—A. At the polls?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. I was challenger.
Q. What precinct?—A. The first precinct of the ninth ward.
Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted?—A. I did.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at your precinct that day.—A. I think it is. There was a similar one to that voted.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state whether that is the ticket used by the Democrats at your precinct on that day.—A. I think it is.
Q. I will ask you to state if, when those tickets were folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, you could tell by sight one ticket from the other; or, in other words, could you tell the ticket a man was voting when folded in his hand when going to the polls, by sight?—A. Not as they were ordinarily carried.
Q. Could you tell the difference by the feeling of them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Tell if, in elections prior to 1882, you have been able to tell the difference in the tickets by the feeling of them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any complaint made at that poll that day about the character of this ticket?—A. No, sir; none that I heard.
Q. Did you stand there as challenger all day?—A. Yes, sir; except at dinner-time.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you a county officer in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were county treasurer at that time?—A Yes, sir.
Q. Were you connected with the Republican county central committee at that time?—A. No, sir.
Q. You took an active part in politics?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you were challenging earnestly and zealously at that precinct?—A. I do not say how zealously or earnestly, but I was endeavoring to see that only legal voters voted.
Q. You say you endeavored?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any illegal votes cast there?—A. Not that I am aware of.
Q. What is your politics?—A. Republican.

J. L. MOTHERSHEAD.

WILLIAM R. MYERS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence?—A. William A. Myers; 47 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am at present secretary of state.
Q. When were you elected secretary of state?—A. At the November election, 1882; I believe on the 7th day.
Q. When were you qualified as secretary of state?—A. I went into office on the 17th day of January, 1883, and I do not remember but what I was sworn in some days previous to that.
Q. I hand you this piece of paper, and I ask you what it is?
(Paper handed witnses.)
A. It is a certificate which I made showing the votes in the counties of Marion, Hancock, and Shelby at the November election, 1882, in this seventh Congressional district, at which Stanton J. Peelle, William E. English, and Robert W. Medkirk were candidates for Congress.
Q. Is that certificate made as it purports to be, from the records on file in your office?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.
Q. Elected secretary of state as a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I now hand this certificate of Wm. R. Myers, secretary of state, to the notary, and ask that it be identified as an exhibit to the deposition of the witness.

The certificate will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof and marked Exhibit H.

W. R. MYERS.

Exhibit H to deposition of W. R. Myers.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

STATE OF INDIANA,
Office of the Secretary of State, ss:

I, W. R. Myers, secretary of state of the State of Indiana, do hereby certify that at a general election held in said State on the seventh day of November, 1882, for Representative in the Forty-eighth Congress from the seventh Congressional district, composed of the counties of Marion, Shelby, and Hancock in said State, the following were certified to my office by the clerk of the circuit court of the respective counties as the votes received and canvassed for the respective candidates, as appears from the records now on file in my office, that is to say:

Counties.	Stanton J. Peelle.	William E. English.	Robert W. Medkirk.
Marion	12,940	12,300	390
Hancock	1,694	2,129	66
Shelby	2,817	2,935	79
Total	17,451	17,364	535

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State of Indiana, at the city of Indianapolis, this sixth day of November, A. D. 1883.

[SEAL.] W. R. MYERS,
Secretary of State.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit H to the deposition of W. R. Myers, Nov. 10, '83, P. C. Hendricks, stenographer.

HORACE MCKAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age and residence.—A. Horace McKay; 41 years old; residence 156 Ash street, city of Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am collector of internal revenue in this district.

Q. What proportion of the internal revenue of this State is collected by you?—A. About 70 per cent.

Q. What will that amount to annually—revenue in your district?—A. I could only approximate it; it would be between $4,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position in this county and State?—A. Nothing except member of the council.

Q. How long were you member of the council?—A. Three years.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Eighteen years.

Q. What was your business prior to being appointed collector of internal revenue?—A. Prior to that time I was investing and real estate agent principally.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct?—A. The first precinct of the second ward.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. I think it is similar to the ticket that was used.

Q. I will hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that precinct that day?—A. I think it is, as near as I can recollect.

Q. Did you occupy any particular position at the polls that day?—A. I was there all day in the capacity of challenger.

Q. Were you the challenger?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What portion of the day were you challenger?—A. All day, or nearly all day.

Q. State if when those tickets were folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded by voters, you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. I don't know that I understand your question; you mean by voters up the chute?

Q. Certainly; as they were being voted by voters, and as they were folded and in their hands, could you tell what ticket a man was voting by the external appearance of the ticket?—A. Well, I could not; I tried pretty hard, but could not do it very well. There is this about it: a voter coming up there to vote would be met very often by a man and handed a ticket—each man generally had tickets in his hand—and by the time he started up the chute with one of those tickets folded in this way (indicating) you could not tell whether it was either one of those that were given him that was voted, or one that he had before he came there. Of course, a man starting up the chute with those tickets, sometimes he would drop the Republican ticket and sometimes the Democratic.

Q. Without any previous knowledge of the politics of a man, and without seeing him fold the ticket, and seeing his ticket in his hand after it was folded, could you by sight tell one ticket from the other?—A. No, sir; I could not without a close inspection. As I understand you, you say in an ordinary inspection as a man comes up the chute.

Q. Have you been at elections in this city prior to 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I have attended every election in the city since I have been here.

Q. State what your recollection is, if you have any upon the subject, as to whether or not at elections in this city prior to 1882, you have or have not been able to tell the difference in tickets at elections by the feeling of them.—A. By close inspection I think I could almost always tell the tickets, of course getting hold of the two tickets with a close inspection.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked as Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the national ticket that was used in 1880.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. I hand you now a ticket marked Exhibit E, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used at the national election in 1880?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Q. I will ask you to fold those tickets as they are ordinarily folded when voted, and state, if when they are folded as voters ordinarly fold them, if there is any difference in the width of them?—A. Yes, sir; there is a difference in the width and length both.

Q. State if you could tell those two tickets one from the other by sight, when they were being voted, if you had previously examined the tickets carefully.—A. If a man could see both of those tickets and have hold of those tickets, he could tell them apart; one is a long ticket, and the other is a short one.

Q. I will ask you if, as a matter of fact, there is not a more marked difference between those two tickets voted at the national election in 1880, by sight, than there is between the tickets voted in 1882?—A. There is, in my opinion; there is no question about that.

Q. State if the difference is as marked in the feeling of the tickets voted in 1882.—A. Yes; it is different paper; you could tell by the feeling of them very readily.

Q. Which is the most marked difference, and where is the most marked difference, between the tickets voted in 1882 and the tickets voted in 1880?—A. I could tell those easier than I could these in 1882.

Q. By feeling and touching the tickets in 1882 there is a more marked difference than in 1880?—A. I mean just the other way; I mean the national tickets; I can tell those tickets by the feeling; that is what you asked me.

Q. Was there any complaint made at your precinct that day as to the character of that Republican ticket in 1882?—A. I do not remember now of any.

Q. Do you remember how the tickets as counted corresponded with the number of names on your poll-list?—A. No; I do not remember that, but I think there was. I do not remember that at all; I was not inside.

Q. State if there was any instances there in which two tickets were voted folded together.—A. I do not remember of any.

Q. I now ask you to take this ticket, headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked as Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted and used by the Republicans at the State election in 1880?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I think it is.

Q. I hand you now a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, and with the further words "For governor, Franklin Landers," and marked Exhibit Z, to the deposition of James A. Wildman, and state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at the State election in 1880?

(Objected to for the reasons above stated.)

A. I think it is.

Q. I will ask you to fold those two tickets as votes are ordinarily folded when being voted, and state if there is any difference in the appearance and width of those tickets, especially in the width?—A. Yes, sir; there is a difference.

Q. State if you could tell the difference between those tickets by feeling?—A. Yes, I think I can tell by feeling; I could by sight I know.

Q. State if there is not a more marked difference between those two State tickets, voted in 1880, by sight than there is between the two tickets voted in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I think there is.

Q. By looking at them by sight when folded?—A. Yes, sir; there is, I think.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When were you appointed collector?—A. The 15th day of July, 1882.

Q. You say you do not remember any complaint being made at that precinct by any one of the character of this Republican ticket; I will ask you, do you not recollect that Senator McDonald drove up there in his buggy and walked up close to the chute and a crowd got around him and he took those tickets out and most earnestly protested against the use of them and spoke of them as "spring back" tickets, and went on and denounced them at that precinct on the morning of the election, not long after the polls were opened?—A. No, sir; I do not remember of seeing Senator McDonald that day. It might have been, but I do not recollect him.

Q. Were you a member of the election board at that precinct that day, or were you one of the judges or inspectors?—A. No, sir; I was outside.

Q. You were upon the outside?—A. Yes, sir; all the day; I don't say I was at dinner time; I was at dinner about 30 or 40 minutes probably.

Q. That Republican national ticket to which Mr. Peelle called your attention marked Exhibit F to the deposition of Mr. Wallace is gotten up on very stout material, is it not?—A. What do you mean by stout; thick?

Q. Yes; thick and compact, and finished so as to give it an elastic character.—A. Well, I don't know, comparatively speaking; you would have to compare it with something weaker than that to call it stout.

Q. As compared with the Democratic ticket at that election?—A. Yes, sir; it is heavier than the Democratic ticket, I believe.

Q. What difference is there between that Republican ticket used at that election—the national ticket—and the Republican ticket used at the November election, 1882, as to material?—A. I am not judge enough of paper to tell much about that.

Q. I am just asking you as to the elastic character—the thickness, finish, and polish?—A. This Republican State ticket has not been handled as much as the national ticket, so it is pretty hard to tell; you cannot compare these because they are not all the same.

Q. From the mere appearance of the paper, what would you say was the general difference, if any, between the two Republican tickets; the one used in November, 1882, and the one used at the national election by the Republicans in 1880?—A. I don't believe from handling there is much difference.

Q. There is a great difference in length?—A. Yes, sir; of course.

Q. There is considerable difference in the width?—A. Yes, sir; certainly a difference in width and length.

Q. Looking at the Republican State ticket to which Mr. Peelle first called your attention, marked Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace, I ask you to look at that paper and say whether or not it is on a slick and glossy material back and front?—A. It is a smooth ticket I see by the finish.

Q. It is a smooth ticket and a good deal narrower than the Republican ticket that you say was used in November, 1882, is it not?—A. Yes; it is narrower.

Q. I call your attention now to three tickets: the Democratic ticket, with the flag on it, marked Exhibit G to the deposition of David Swain, and the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, the three tickets having been used; the flag ticket in 1880, Exhibit B in 1882, at the November election, and the national ticket in 1880. Making allowance for time, I will ask you if there is not uniformity in the character of the material upon which they are printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Substantial uniformity now?—There is a difference in the width of the national ticket and the other two.

Q. The other two are about three inches wide, are they not; about the same width?—A. There is a difference between those voted in October and November; a slight difference, perhaps an eighth of an inch, between the two State tickets.

Q. Do you call that an eighth of an inch?—A. It is a little over a sixteenth; it is very close to an eighth; it is just exactly an eighth. There is a difference of exactly an eighth.

Q. My question was as to the substantial difference, if any, between the quality of the material upon which they are printed.—A. I am not judge enough of paper to say.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you a similar question about the other ticket?—A. He did not ask me anything about that.

Q. What do you say about the appearance of them?—A. If they are different, so far as the quality of the paper is concerned, I cannot tell you anything about that; I do not know anything about that.

Q. Is there not a more marked difference in the quality of the three Republican tickets voted at the corresponding times than there is between the three Democratic tickets that are there on the table before you?—A. I cannot tell about the quality.

Q. What about the appearance; how do they appear to you?—A. These taken together—of course that is the way you want me to take them?

Q. Yes, sir; the Republican tickets taken together, as to the appearance and quality.—A. Yes, sir; those two of the Republicans are alike, and these two are almost alike; there is about an eighth of an inch there.

Q. I am asking you about the appearance of the quality of the paper.—A. The trouble is here, that you have one substantially new and one very old; I cannot tell. Of course one is lighter paper than the other.

Q. Speaking of the color?—A. Yes sir.

Q. Then you cannot answer those questions?—A. No, sir; I do not feel competent to answer as to the quality, for I never dealt in paper.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if there were any tickets voted together?—A. He asked me if I knew of any; I do not know of any.

Q. You were not there when they were counted?—A. No, sir; I went away as soon as the polls closed.

Q. Therefore, you do not know anything about that?—A. No, sir.

Q. I understand you to say that at the time you were there acting in the capacity you have described, you were United States collector?—A. Yes, sir; you understood me so.

Q. Did not Mr. Peelle recommend you to that office?—A. What office?

Q. United States collector?—A. I do not know whether he did or not.

Q. You do not know even whether he favored you?—A. I do not know that I need to answer that question. I do not know anything about his recommendation.

Q. Did he promise to recommend you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him to recommend you?—A. No, sir; I never did. You can put Mr. Peelle on the stand and ask him the same question.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your appointment is one that is controlled and recognized as being controlled by the Senator?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint, or hear anybody intimate that anybody had voted more than one ballot there?—A. I did not.

HORACE MCKAY.

HUGH J. DRUMMOND, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Hugh J. Drummond; my age is 41; my residence is 277 South Missouri street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I work at Drew & Wasson's, shipping and collecting.

Q. What is their business?—A. The coal business.

Q. How long have you been in the coal business?—A. The first day of May of this year.

Q. Have you any trade or profession?—A. Yes, sir; I am a baker by trade.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Twenty-three years.

Q. State if you attended the Congressional election in this city in 1882, in November.—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The 1st precinct of the 16th ward.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. As a worker and challenger. I challenged that day for Mr. Astley, whose brother Sam died a short time ago, and he was sick.

Q. What portion of the time were you there?—A. I was there from the time the polls opened until probably one o'clock, and then I went and got dinner, and I was there until they closed.

Q. How long were you at dinner?—A. Probably half an hour to an hour.

Q. Was there any complaint made there that day about this Republican ticket by any one? and, if so, state.—A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Was you in a position to know and hear if there had been any complaint made?—A. Well, standing there I would have heard of it, I think.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted by both parties there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far were you from the ballot-box?—A. I suppose probably three feet or three and a half.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used and voted by the Republicans on that day at that precinct.—A. I believe that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that was voted by the Democrats at that precinct on that day?—A. I presume it is; yes.

Q. I will ask you to state if, when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are usually and ordinarily folded by voters, you could tell or distinguish by sight, as the voters were going to the box to deposit their tickets, one from the other.—A. You mean when they were voted?

Q. When the tickets were ordinarily folded, could you tell by the external appearance of the ticket what ticket a man was voting?—A. I never could.

Q. Did you make any effort to do that that day?—A. No, I did not. That is the first time I have ever challenged. I have been on election boards a good many times, and there are so few Republican voters down there that I generally know who would vote the Republican ticket, and I made no special effort, and I never was able to distinguish one ticket from the other, that I know of. In fact, I never charged my memory with it, and did not do anything of that kind.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

HUGH J. DRUMMOND.

By agreement of the parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Monday, November 12, 1883.

MONDAY, November 12*th*, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

HENRY SALISBURY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your age, name and residence.—A. Henry Salisbury; age, 63; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. How long have you resided in Indianapolis?—A. I have been here since 1869.

Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. Paper manufacturing.

Q. What is the name of your firm?—A. The Salisbury & Vinton Paper Company.

Q. Have you been in that business since you have been in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business were you in prior to that time?—A. Before I came here I was in the same business.

Q. Where were you engaged in that business?—A. Springfield, Massachusetts.

Q. Engaged in the manufacturing of paper in Springfield, Mass.?—A. Yes, sir; my mill was not there, but I resided there, and did business there.

Q. Were you ever engaged in the business of paper dealing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you engaged in that business?—A. Nine years.

Q. What kind of paper did you handle as a dealer?—A. Nearly all grades of paper—fine papers and coarse papers.

Q. What kind of paper do you manufacture in your mill in this city?—A. Principally "news."

Q. Do you manufacture any other kinds?—A. Some little "book."

Q. How high a grade of "book" do you make?—A. About medium quality; not a very high grade.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit A, to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it carefully and state what kind of paper it is printed on, if you can?—A. I should call that a "book" paper.

Q. About what weight would you call that, say 19x24, five hundred sheets to the ream?—A. I should think about forty pounds.

Q. About forty pounds, 19x24?—A. Somewheres about that; I cannot tell it exactly.

Q. Take its size 25x38, five hundred sheets to the ream, and how much more would it weigh than that?—A. Nearly twice as much more.

Q. You think about eighty pounds?—A. About eighty pounds.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," which was put in evidence in this case by the contestant, on the cross-examination of William Wallace, and which is marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it carefully, and compare it with the ticket you have in your hand and state what difference, if any, there is between the paper of the two tickets?—A. I should say it was a little better grade of paper, perhaps.

Q. What ticket is that; the one I handed you last?—A. Yes, sir; possibly.

Q. Which is the better grade?—A. I should call that one the nicest paper of the two.

Q. That is the ticket marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way is it a better grade?—A. It is a little better quality, and possibly a little better stock; more in its color than its stock.

Q. What difference do you think there would be between the weight of a ream of that and the weight of a ream like that which I first handed you, the same size?—A. There would be very little difference, I should think, from the feeling of it; possibly it is a little mite the heaviest of the two, I judge.

Q. The one marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how much heavier would you think it a ream?—A. Perhaps ten pounds, I cannot say exactly; It might not be as much as that.

Q. I now hand you a ticket, which has been considerably handled, headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, with the words on it, "For President, James A. Garfield," and I will ask you to examine that and state, as near as you can, the kind of material that ticket is printed on?—A. I should think it was a rag paper, made of rags; that is the material that it is made of.

Q. What particular kind of paper?—A. That is book paper.

Q. What is the difference between the weight of that ticket, if any, and the ticket you hold in your hand, especially the one first handed you and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday?—A. I should say there was about twenty pounds, 25x38.

Q. I will ask you to state, when that paper is in sheets 19x24 or 25x38, what it is known as in the trade?—A. It is known as "book" paper.

Q. What is the color of that paper—I mean those tickets voted in 1882?—A. It is what they call white paper.

Q. Is it, or not, plain white paper?—A. I should say it was plain white paper.

Q. I believe you are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir; not a very violent politician.

Q. You never occupied any official position?—A. No, sir.

Q. You never was a candidate for office?—A. No, I think not.

Q. I now hand you a ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. C. F. Holliday, and headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. I should call that a "book" paper.

Q. Is there any difference in the finish of the two Republican tickets I handed you, one being introduced in the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and the other in William Wallace's deposition?—A. Very little. Perhaps that one marked Q is a little finer.

Q. That one marked Q to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. Yes, sir; there is very little difference in the finish.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not bristol board or card-board is known as paper in the trade, and handled and sold as such?—A. Not as paper, and yet it is paper; but is known by name as bristol-board or card-board.

Q. I will ask you to state if at the mill in this city, of which you are one of the proprietors, you can manufacture book paper as heavy as the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed—I mean the one marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, that I first handed you?—A. Yes, sir; we could.

Q. What is the finish of those two tickets, the first one I handed you?—A. It is calendered paper; nothing fine, but a good, fair quality of calendered paper.

Q. Would you say it is what is termed super-calendered?—A. No, sir; I should not say it was.

Q. Is it sized?—A. It is sized, probably.

Q. What is the process of calendering paper?—A. Simply running through heavy iron rollers.

Q. State what difference there is, if any, in the process of manufacturing the paper upon which those Republican tickets are printed, and the process of manufacturing the paper upon which that Democratic ticket is printed?—A. I would not suppose there is any difference.

Q. Is there any difference in the material, the stock?—A. No, sir; not much, I do not think; simply a lighter weight.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, the stock is the same and the process of manufacturing the same, except that the heavier tickets are run through the rollers a little more to put a finer finish or calender on?—A. That is all.

Q. State if that paper upon which that Democratic ticket is printed has been calendered?—A. It has been calendered, but not so much.

Q. State, now, if either of the tickets that I handed you are what is termed "toned" paper.—A. I hardly understand the word "toned" used in connection with paper, unless it means color.

Q. Has there been any coloring of those Republican tickets I handed you—any coloring matter put in them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. Probably there was a little bluing used in giving them their shade.

Q. State if in the absence of bluing, paper could be made as white as that paper upon whith the Republican tickets are printed?—A. It is possible. It may be with some fancy stock, but the tendency is to yellow, unless it is shaded with bluing.

Q. Would you say there was or was not bluing used?—A. Yes, sir; I should say there was.

Q. In those two Republican tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was you in this city at the time of the Congressional election last November?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward, if you remember?—A. I live in ward 5.

Q. Did you spend any time at the polls other than simply as a voter?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you if from your experience in the handling of paper, and in the manufacture of paper, this ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday and the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, being the Republican and Democratic tickets voted in this city at the Congressional election, 1882, could, when folded as tickets are ordinarily folded in the hands of the voter, be told or distingished by sight, one from the other—a man having but one ticket, of course, in his hand at the time of going to the polls to vote?—A. I should not suppose there would be any noticeable difference. I should not suppose there would be.

Q. As an expert in the handling of paper and manufacturing of paper, could you when those tickets are folded separately and voted separately, retain the distinction in color in your eyes sufficiently to detect or distinguish one from the other, as they were being voted?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you manufacture plate paper at your mill?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not manufacture lithographic plate?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can a mill that manufactures print paper manufacture lithographic plate?—A. Not without some additional machinery.

Q. Can the same machinery manufacture lithographic plate that manufactures print paper?—A. The same machinery would be carried to a certain extent, but they would not put the finish on without additional machinery.

Q. You manafacture principally what kind of paper?—A. News paper.

Q. How much book paper do you suppose you manufacture a year?—A. I do not know. We do not make a great deal. Occasionally we get an order, but not much.

Q. Then you do not manufacture very much book paper?—A. Not very much.

Q. Did you ever manufacture any book paper as thick as that [indicating]?—A. I think we have. I think we have made some about as thick as that.

Q. When?—A. Some few years ago; I do not know exactly when it was.

Q. To whom did you sell it?—A. I think it went to St. Louis, if I remember aright.

Q. Is it not true that Bristol board is manufactured thinner than that Republican ticket?—A. I do not think I ever saw any thinner; I do not know; it may be.

Q. What is book paper made out of?—A. Made of rags and other materials—maybe wood and straw mixed with the rags.

Q. How is blotting paper made?—A. It is made of soft stock, and not calendered hard.

Q. What is used to produce the soft character?—A. Usually cotton waste. There is some use woolen waste, but usually cotton waste.

Q. I call your attention to the specimen there which I hand you, and ask you what it is?—A. It may be card, or it may be collow paper or card. I do not know which it is. It may be book paper—whatever it is made for I do not know.

Q. What is it called in the trade?—A. What is what called?

Q. That specimen you have there.—A. Whatever it was made for; I do not know what it was made for.

Q. What it was made for determines the name of it?—A. Usually.

Q. Therefore, if you were to make lithogrephic plate paper and print a book upon it, you would style it a book paper?—A. Certainly.

Q. And if it had been made for plate, you would style it plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; certainly.

Q. And if it was made for the purpose of printing tickets on, you would call it ticket paper?—A. I do not know about that.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that specimen in evidence as a part of the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury, and desire that it shall be marked as an exhibit by the stenographer.

The paper will be found attached to the deposition of Mr. Salisbury, and marked as Exhibit U.

Q. I call your attention to another specimen, and ask you to examine that and state what it is called in the trade.—A. I do not know. I never handled that kind of paper.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that specimen as an exhibit to the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury, and ask that it be marked by the stenographer. The specimen will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit V.

Q. I call your attention to a specimen of paper there, and I will ask you what it is?—A. I should call that book paper.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that specimen in evidence as a part of the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury, and desire that it shall be marked by the stenographer. The paper will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit W.

Q. Please look at that specimen and tell us what it is.—A. That may be a book paper, or it may be what they call a light flat cap paper, I should think.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that specimen in evidence as a part of the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury, and desire that it be marked by the stenographer. The paper will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit X.

Q. Did you watch the election of the 7th day of November, 1882?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not observe that day the difference in the paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those two tickets Mr. Peelle called your attention to—the Democratic and Republican tickets—by feeling them?—A. I do not know that I can. I do not remember now.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. If they were folded up, could you tell the difference between them in handling them; can you tell which is the Republican and which is the Democratic ticket by holding them in your hands, by feeling them when folded?—A. There is a plain difference in the feeling of them, one being thicker than the other.

Q. I believe you stated that your manufacture of paper consisted principally of news and book paper in your experience?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is as a manufacturer, therefore, of news and book paper that you answer that this Republican ticket is printed on book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And beyond the domain of book paper you do not profess to be an expert as a manufacturer, as I understand it?—A. No, sir.

Q. But you are familiar with all kinds of paper from handling it as a dealer?—A. Yes, sir.

W. C. DAVID, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. W. C. David; 38 years old; residence, 131 North Meridian street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your trade or business?—A. At present I am employed with the collector of internal revenue.

Q. Did you attend the election in this city in 1882?—A. I did, sir.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what precinct and ward did you attend the election in this city?—A. I think it is the second precinct, here on Ohio street, between Pennsylvania and Meridian, in the 11th ward.

Q. Who was inspector at that precinct?—A. Mr. Kitz, the township trustee.

Q. State what portion of the day you were there.—A. I was there nearly all day, probably from ten o'clock in the morning, all day, until the closing of the polls. I may have left for dinner; it is likely I did.

Q. Did you act in any capacity as a challenger or worker there?—A. I was a worker at the polls.

Q. Did you see the tickets and observe them or not as they were voted by the voters there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint made there by any one about the Republican ticket in any way?—A. In what particular way?

Q. Any complaint or objection to the character of the Republican ticket.—A. No, sir; I heard none.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day, if you know.—A. It looks as though it might be the same ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that precinct on that day?—A. It resembles the ticket used on that day.

Q. State if those tickets are folded separately with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily, or usually, folded by voters when they vote, you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight as a voter would go up to the box to deposit his ballot?—A. I could not.

Q. State if you made any effort that day to tell how men were voting by the appearance of their tickets?—A. I presume I did. I usually do in standing around the polls endeavor to ascertain what ticket a man is voting when he is going up the chute if I can.

Q. Were you or not able to do that that day in any instance?—A. I was not; not from looking at them.

Q. State if any complaint was made to the board that day about the character of the Republican ticket by any one that you know of.—A. I heard none.

Q. State if you know of any one who cast more than one of those votes at a time there—voted two ballots.—A. I know that I went up to the chute with two tickets folded up, but they were not voted.

Q. Was your attention called to it?—A. It was, sir.

Q. How did that occur?—A. It was when I first went to the polls in the morning, and I had no tickets in my possession, and I asked some person—I don't know who it was now—that I met at the corner to give me a ticket, and he handed me, as I supposed, one; and, glancing at it casually, I ascertained that it was the Republican ticket, and I folded it up and went up to the chute and gave my name, and handed the ticket to Mr. Kitz, and then went down the chute; and when I reached the foot, Mr. Kitz remarked, he says, "Will, you have got two tickets folded here"; and I turned around and went back, and he handed me the tickets, and there were two tickets folded together.

Q. What remark did you make to him at the time?—A. The Democratic challenger spoke to me and says something like, "That won't do," or some such remark as that, which I did not like very well, and I simply turned to him and said, "I think you ought to make no remarks, for if that had gone into the box I should have been the loser and you the gainer." That was the Democratic challenger. I think it was Mr. Meyers; and I said if that had gone into the box he would be the gainer, and I the loser, as my vote would have been thrown out.

Q. The two tickets being folded together?—A. Yes, sir; they were folded lengthways.

Q. When your attention was called to it you folded one up and handed it in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The township trustee knew you very well?—A. Oh, yes, sir; he has known me for years.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. I have lived here since 1859, with the exception of the time I was in the Army.

Cross-examination, by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What official position did you hold at that time?—A. I held no official position at that time.

Q. What official position did you hold prior to that time?—A. Up to 1878 I held a position under the United States marshal, General Spooner. I was with him twelve years.

Q. You retired in 1878?—A. I think it was 1878, or the early part of 1879. When Dudley came in I went out.

Q. What position do you hold now?—A. Clerk in the collector's office of internal revenue.

Q. Can you tell one of those tickets from the other by handling them?—A. No, sir; I do not think I can.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You do not remember of having handled them to see?—A. I made no effort to detect them in that way.

WILLIAM C. DAVID.

W. C. NEWCOMB, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. W. C. Newcomb; 51 years old; residence, 107 St. Joseph st., Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Flour and feed business at present.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir; always trained in that camp.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882, in November?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. In what precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct, Sixth ward.

Q. Were you occupying any official position there?—A. I was committeeman of the ward, and assisted the challenging committee at the election.

Q. What portion of the day were you at the polls?—A. I think I was there pretty near all day.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that day at that precinct?—A. It looks very much like it; I think that is the same ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that day?—A. I should think it was; it has that appearance.

Q. State if, when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when voted, if you could by sight tell or distinguish one from the other?—A. When they were being voted it was very hard to distinguish them. They are folded up and held in the hand so you cannot see the entire ticket; if you could get to see the entire ticket, as that is folded up in that way, you could tell the difference, but in voting there was several parties all day watching every one to know how they voted, and several times I could not tell what ticket they were voting, if I could only see part of the ticket.

Q. Could you, in fact, tell one ticket from the other when they were being voted?—A. No, sir; I think not; I could not, because I tried that day on several occasions to tell what ticket a party voted, and seeing a part of the ticket I could not do it.

Q. Was any objection made there that day to the character of this Republican ticket?—A. I think not.

Q. Did the vote as counted out at that precinct correspond with the poll-list?—A. I think it did exactly; there were two tickets, I think. I know there was two Republican tickets thrown out that were laid out that we supposed to be voted together, and I think it proved so, and on footing up and tallying I think there was one of each party voted that way, and we were satisfied they were voted togther, and laid them out until we got through, and in counting the tally-sheet we became convinced that they were voted double.

Q. And they were not counted?—A. No, sir; that is my impression. I am sure there was one, and I think there was one of each party.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets by feeling them and handling them?—A. Oh, yes; I could tell the difference by handling, because one was a good deal thicker and more of it than the other.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Have you or not been able to do that in elections prior to 1882 in this city?—A. There has always been a difference in them, and frequently a difference more marked in sight than this time. The tickets were the same length and width, and I have known before at almost all previous elections there was a difference in the width so one could tell from the thickness which ticket they were voting, but this time they were the same length and width, and it was very hard to tell unless you could make a close observation of the ticket.

W. C. NEWCOMB.

M. F. CONNETT, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—M. F. Connett; age, 33; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am city assessor at present.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Since September, 1871.

Q. How long have you been city assessor?—A. Since September, 1879.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct, 13th ward. I will say here that I am not positive about the number of the precinct. It was the north precinct of the ward, north of Vermont street—Vermont street being the dividing line.

Q. Who was the inspector?—A. The inspector was Thomas E. Chandler.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted at that election.—A. I presume that is the same ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that election.—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket, I think.

Q. In what capacity did you act in at the polls that day?—A. I was challenger for the Republicans.

Q. How much of the time?—A. All of the time.

Q. Were you there all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when those tickets were folded in the hands of voters, with the names on the inside, as tickets are generally and ordinarily folded when voted, if it could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket by sight?—A. I could not tell them when the voters would come to the chute—with this ticket?

Q. That is what I mean.—A. No, sir; you could not tell.

Q. Did you make any effort to do it?—A. Certainly; we always do. We never make much effort to distinguish what kind of a ticket a man was voting if we knew him to be a legal voter in the ward; but with strangers and men that are suspected of bartering their vote for money we are very particular, and try to find out what kind of tickets they vote.

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets from the feeling of them?—A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Have you been able at elections previous to 1882 to tell that?—A. I have always been better able to tell it than this last time from the simple reason that one party or the other would print their tickets on very thin paper—even thinner than that Democratic ticket—and had a habit of putting a very heavy impression upon it, so the ticket would be sometimes as readily read from the back as from the front. I have acted as challenger and filled that position there for eight years, and I did more of it this time than ever before, for if a man held his ticket close we could not tell anything about it. Of course, if he came up with his ticket held loosely you could tell; but there is not one man in a hundred that voted that way in our part of town.

Q. State how many precincts there were in the 13th ward at the November election, 1882?—A. Two.

Q. Did they ever vote by the precincts in that way before?—A. Not in that way. We voted at the April election by precincts, but we had three.

Q. Do you know Esador Dietch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he at work there at the polls that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same precinct where you were?—A. Yes, sir; he lives in our precinct.

Q. What is his business?—A. I guess he is kind of a broker; I always understood that that was his business. He deals in horses and buggies, and speculates.

Q. How far is his house from the precinct there—from the voting place?—A. It must be nearly a square –that is, to go in the front way; but to go in the back way it is not probably over half a square from the voting place.

Q. Did you observe Mr. Dietch that day?—A. Oh, yes; I noticed him very frequently. He is one of the most important workers on the other side, and I did not get away from him very far.

Q. Did he have whisky anywhere there that day?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. That was the report.

Q. State what you know about his having whisky there, or selling it or giving it away that day?—A. Some of our boys said they were getting their whisky there, and I told the old gentleman he would get into trouble if he was not careful; I am testifying to report; I do not know anything about that.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

Q. State what you know from what you saw there that day.—A. From my own personal knowledge I do not know anything; only I know they arrested him for giving away whisky.

Q. What do you know about his giving away whisky, or what did you see about that?—A. Personally I did not see his whisky; I do not know anything about it in that way.

Q. What did you say to him about it?—A. I told him the rumor was that he was giving away whisky, and I told him he would get into trouble, and he asked me if I would go to his house and have a drink, and I told him no, I would drink with the Republicans, and I told him I did not want to get him into any trouble.

Q. What do you know in regard to the boys that went to his house to get a drink?—A. I do not know whether they got any or not.

Q. What was their conduct when they got back?

(Objected to.)

A. We were all very boisterous over there on election day, and I do not know as I would care to testify about that.

Q. You say he was arrested there that day on that charge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he arrested there on that day on any other charge?—A. Yes, sir; he was arrested shortly after that for attempting to purchase a vote; that is what he was arrested for.

Q. Did you see the man it was reported he had bought?—A. Yes, sir; I saw the man taken out of the chute.

Q. Did he attempt to vote?—A. Yes, sir; he came up and gave his name, and we usually interrogate a man and ask him where he lives, if we do not know where he lives, and so I asked him, "Where do you live, sir?" and of course everybody always undertakes to answer for a man, and there was considerable confusion, and I insisted upon the question being answered, and he answered, "295 Bright street," and the man that lived at that number grabbed him by the collar and pulled him over the chute and said, "You don't live there; I live there myself," and in the excitement and hurry of the business I staid right by the chute and didn't follow them up. They surged on down Vermont st., and I do not know what finally became of it; but I know they took the old man off again.

Q. That was Mr. Dietch?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was that a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his name?—A. Lacy.

Q. What was his full name?—A. I do not recollect his first name. I always had known him as "old Lacy."

Q. Did you see Mr. Dietch trying to purchase that vote?—A. No, sir; the first I knew of it was when he was in the chute.

Q. All you know about it was what you heard on that score?—A. I did not see him purchase it; but I said he was arrested for attempting to purchase it.

Q. Do you know anything about the attempt to purchase it?—A. I know something about it.

Q. Can you tell one of those tickets from the other by feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

M. F. CONNETT.

GEORGE T. PORTER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. George T. Porter; age, 34; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am attorney at law.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the practice?—A. Six or seven years.

Q. You are the son of Governor Porter of this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you attended the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I do not know what precinct it was. It was up here on Ohio st., between Meridian and Pennsylvania.

Q. What ward?—A. I believe it is the 11th ward.

Q. Who was the inspector?—A. The inspector was Ernest Kitz, I think.

Q. Township trustee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there acting as challenger or worker?—A. I was acting as a citizen. I was not challenger, for I challenged nobody that I remember; but I was there most of the day, and was working in the interest of the Republican party.

Q. Did you handle the poll-book that day?—A. Yes; I had the poll-book much of the day that was prepared for the Republican canvass, I believe.

Q. You challenged no votes there that day?—A. Not that I think of. I do not think I ever challenged any voter, anywhere, at any election.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day, if you recollect.—A. It looks very much like it. I suppose it is.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day.—A. I presume it is; it looks very much like it.

Q. Did you observe the tickets there that day as they were being voted and folded in the hands of the voters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when the tickets were folded and in the hands of the voter, with the names inside as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded by voters when they vote, if you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight.—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any effort to do it?—A. Yes, sir; I did make some effort, and I found I was not sharp enough for it.

Q. You can tell the difference in the feeling of the tickets?—A. Oh, yes; one, I presume, is thicker than the other.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you if that is the ticket voted at the State election in this city in 1880?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I believe it is; the heading looks like it.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" written across a flag, with the further words "For governor, Franklin Landers," and marked Exhibit G to the deposition of David Swain. I will ask you if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I think it is. I recognize these flourishes around the names of Franklin Landers and Daniel Lemon.

Q. Do you recollect anything about the heading of the ticket?—A. Well, yes; the flag at the top I recollect, but particularly the manner in which those names were printed upon the ticket.

Q. Could you readily paste over those names?—A. Well, I suppose so; I did not try. It would take perhaps a rather crooked paster to go over the names.

Q. State the probable difference in the width of those two tickets.—A. Well, I should think there was something over a quarter of an inch difference.

Q. Fold those two tickets as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted. Fold them separately with the names on the inside. I now ask you to state if, when those tickets are folded, there is not a more marked difference between the appearance of the tickets when so folded than there is between the tickets voted at the Congressional election in November, 1882?—A. I should think so, on account of the difference in length when folded, provided one could see the length of the ticket when folded.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket" with the words for "President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at the national election in 1880?—A. I have no doubt of it; I recognize that heading.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the further words "Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E, to the deposition of William Wallace; and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats at that election?—A. That I do not recollect so well.

Q. I will ask you to fold these two tickets in the same manner that you did the other two, and state what the probable difference in the width of those two tickets, when folded, is?—A. I should think about $\frac{1}{8}$ of an inch or more.

Q. State if when those two tickets are folded and a looker-on can see the tickets, if there is not a more marked difference between those two tickets by sight than there is between the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882.—A. I should say there was.

Q. Can you feel a difference in those tickets?—A. Oh, yes.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLON:

Q. How old do you say you are?—A. Thirty-four.

Q. You state you could not see a difference between those tickets there that day?—A. No; I do not think I could.

Q. Was your attention called to that matter in such a way that you made a special effort?—A. I think I made an ordinary effort to see. I do not think I made a special effort to see.

Q. Is not your eyesight very bad?—A. No, sir; my eyesight is rather good I believe.

Q. You say you made an ordinary effort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you were challenger that day?—A. No, sir; I was not challenger.

Q. Is there any ordinary way of folding tickets?—A. No, I think not; some fold them one way and some another. Some fold them many times and some fold them few times. Some fold them wider and some narrow.

Q. You can fold tickets when they are different in length so that the width when folded would be the same?—A. I suppose so; I did not experiment with them.

Q. You did not try that just now when you looked back at the tickets voted in 1880?—A. No, sir; I folded them in the ordinary way in which I think they are ordinarily folded.

Q. What is the ordinary way?—A. To take a ticket and put the ends together and bend them again and again until the voter gets them to suit him.

Q. That would give a difference in the appearance of those tickets that Mr. Peelle called your attention to used in the national campaign of 1880, growing out of the fact that they were very different in length; are they not?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. Are you an expert on the subject of paper?—A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. You can tell these tickets used here in 1882 very readily by handling them and by feeling them?—A. At that Congressional election, yes, sir; I suppose I could.

Q. Is there an ordinary way of holding a ticket when a voter starts up the chute to put his vote in the box?—A. Oh, I don't know that there is.

Q. You do not think there is?—A. I say I do not know that there is. I suppose they hold them in different ways; some men might display their ticket, and some men might choose rather to put it where it could not be very readily seen; but the tickets can be seen when they are handed to the inspector of the election.

Q. After they pass out of the hands of the voter to the inspector they can be readily seen. Is it not true that in voting at this precinct a number of voters get in the chute and walk very slowly up the chute, and each one waiting for the one in front to vote and get out of the way?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the gentleman asks his name, and the men who have the poll-book on each side, Democratic and Republican, look through and find his residence and check him off; that is true, is it not?—A. That is generally the rule unless he is very well known.

Q. And then generally the officer who is in charge of the ballot-box, the inspector, announces the name to the clerks and they put it down?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That consumes time?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. The voting was pretty slow at that precinct?—A. I do not think it was very lively. I do not think that at any time there was a crowd in the chute. They came there rather slowly.

Q. I understand you to say you never challenged a vote in your life?—A. I do not think I ever challenged a vote in my life. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Do you recollect whether you challenged any at the last election?—A. I am pretty certain I did not at the last election. I did not know the politics. I did not prepare the poll-book or assist in its preparation, and I do not know who were the challengers for the Republicans on that day.

GEORGE T. PORTER.

W. C. WEST, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. W. C. West; 36 years old; I reside in the city of Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printer.

Q. With whom?—A. I have an office of my own—a publishing office—on West Washington st.

Q. What is the publication?—A. I have a general printing office, and publish a paper, the Grand Army Guide.

Q. How long have you been in the printing business and newspaper business?—A. Off and on since 1860, when I first commenced the business.

Q. Are you familiar with the different qualities of paper?—A. Some; yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in November, 1882, in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct and 21st ward.

Q. In what capacity did you act?—A. Clerk of the board.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted there that day and handed in to the inspector?—A. Some of them; yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. That is what they call No. 1 book paper.

Q. Is that a heavy or light grade of book paper?—A. Rather heavy.

Q. Is that what they call calendered?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats there that day?—A. I believe it is; yes, sir.

Q. What kind of paper is that ticket printed on?—A. What I would call No. 2 book paper.

Q. State if when these tickets are folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when being voted, you could tell or distinguish by sight one ticket from the other, so as to know how a man was voting?—A. You could not.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across the flag, and the words "For governor, Franklin Landers," and marked Exhibit Z, to the deposition of Mr. Wildman; I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats in the State election in 1880 in this city?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. I do not recollect distinctly, but I think it was.

Q. Do you remember that, and have you any recollection of it?—A. I could not say that I could say positively that was the ticket.

Q. State what kind of a heading that Democratic ticket voted in 1880 has; a lithograph, wood-cut, or printed heading?—A. I would call it a wood-cut, I think, or print both.

Q. The flag you would call a wood-cut?—A. That is made from a wood-cut in the first place and electrotyped from that.

Q. Examine the heading of the Democratic ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state what kind of a heading that is, whether a wood-cut or lithograph, or print?—A. That is just regular type, I should judge; I would not say for certain; it might be an engraving, but I do not know whether it is or not.

Q. Do you think that is a wood-cut? Do you know of type in use of that kind?—A. Yes; you can get type like that; they have a style of type of that kind; I am not positive it is type, but it could be electrotyped from that; but still there is a style of type of that kind in general use. But that is an engraving [referring to the other ticket].

Q. The ticket voted for Franklin Landers in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you say engraving you mean wood-cut?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Look at the scrolls around the name of Franklin Landers and also around the name of Daniel A. Lemon on that ticket with the flag on it, and state if that is necessary in the printing of the ticket?—A. No, sir; it is not necessary.

Q. I will ask you how the vote counted down there at that precinct corresponded with the poll-book?—A. I believe it did to the best of my recollection; that it tallied all right.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What were you doing there on the day of election?—A. I was clerk on the board.

Q. You say you have been in the printing business off and on since 1860?—A. Yes, sir; since I first commenced learning the trade; I commenced the business in 1860.

Q. As journeyman printer?—A. As a boy in the office—the devil.

Q. Did you not leave that and go into one of the county offices?—A. I left there and went into the army, and I was in the post-office awhile, and I came here to the city after the war in 1866 and worked at the business until 1870.

Q. From 1866 to 1870 you set type?—A. Yes, sir; carried on here, and had a job printing office from 1866 to 1870.

Q. From 1870, what were you engaged in?—A. After that I went in the sheriff's office under Colonel Ruckel.

Q. And staid there how long?—A. Until the spring of 1873.

Q. Then you went out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I was elected city marshal, and served until 1875.

Q. What then?—A. I was in the post-office for about a year and a half.

Q. And then when did you resume the printing business?—A. In 1877 I went to work for the Journal Company.

Q. Commenced setting type for the Journal in 1877?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you commence working where you are now?—A. Last February.

Q. So you have been a little more off than on in the printing business?—A. No, sir; I would not say more; about equally.

Q. You say you know something about paper?—A. I do not know that I said I knew anything about it. I think I do know something about it; yes, sir.

Q. You know how paper is manufactured?—A. No, sir; I cannot say that I do; I have seen it manufactured, but I cannot explain the process.

Q. Do you know anything about a white paper called lithographic plate?—A. But very little.

Q. Did you ever see a newspaper upon material like that Republican ticket—as heavy as that Republican ticket?—A. I could not say that I have; no, sir.

Q. You never saw it?—A. No, sir.

Q. What would be the weight of that paper upon which the Democratic ticket is printed on, and the one that was used November, 1882, sheets 25 by 38; how much per ream would be the weight of it?—A. I judge about 45, or probably 50 pounds to the ream.

Q. What would you say the weight of the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed, the sheets being 25 by 38; how much would it weigh per ream?

Mr. PEELLE. How many sheets in the ream, the same number of sheets?

Mr. WILSON. Yes, sir.

The WITNESS. That is No. 2; the No. 1 I would call about 65 pounds to the ream.

Q. Did you get to work on the outside much that day?—A. No, sir; I was not out that day; I was in the house that day.

Q. Can you not tell that Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by the feeling of them?—Yes, sir.

Q. By handling it and feeling it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. That is my politics.

Q. You have been a pretty active Republican, have you not?—A. No; not in late years; I have not in the last three or four years, I have not been very active. I have voted for nearly as many Democrats as Republicans in the last three elections.

Q. You acted with the board as clerk with the Republicans that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What tickets were voted at your precinct—were all the tickets of the Republicans voted at your precinct like this one I show you?—A. If I remember correctly, yes, sir; they were.

Mr. WILSON. That is Exhibit Q shown to William Wallace.

Q. Was all the Democratic tickets voted at your precinct similar to the one Mr. Peelle showed you?—A. If I remember correctly, I think that is the kind.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That ticket Mr. Wilson handed you marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace, I will ask you to take in your hands again, and I will also hand you the ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to examine those two tickets and state if there is any difference in them; I do not mean in the names on them, but I mean in the body of the paper and the width, &c.—A. I do not see any particular difference in those tickets.

WILLIAM C. WEST.

JESSE DE HAVEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Jesse De Haven, age 42, residence 34 Sinker street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am plasterer by trade, but at present I am weigher at the Eastern market.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Since 1866.

Q. Were you at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. I was; yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. In the 1st precinct, 23rd ward.

Q Did you act in any official capacity?—A. No, sir; I was just there at the polls at work during the day.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. I believe I was there from morning until night.

Q. I hand you ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that election that day?—A. I believe that was, so far as I know.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B" to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. I could not say to that. We could not get any of them. I saw them, but I could not say positive that that was the ticket. It was something like that.

Q. Did the Democrats have a heavier ticket than that at that precinct?—A. I do not know as they did. I could not say as to that.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were being voted by the different parties?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when the tickets were folded as they were being voted there, if you were able to tell one from the other by sight, when folded and in the hands of the voters, with the names inside?—A. As they were put in, of course a person standing at the polls could tell.

Q. I mean standing looking on, as men went up the polls, without any knowledge of their politics, but simply seeing the tickets then?—A. No, sir; I do not thiuk a person just standing looking on could at all.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Could you tell by handling or feeling?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have always been able to do that in this town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has there ever been an election in this town since you have been here that you could not tell by feeling of the tickets?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Mr. WILSON. You are a Republican?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

JESSE DE HAVEN.

By agreement of both parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Tuesday, November 13, 1883.

TUESDAY, November 13*th*, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

P. H. JAMESON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. P. H. Jameson; age, 59; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. State your business.—A. I am a physician.

Q. How long have you practiced?—A. 33 years.

Q. What portion of that time have you been engaged in the practice of medicine in this city?—A. All the time.

Q. State if you attended the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882—A. Yes. sir; I was there just long enough to vote.

Q. Did you see the tickets that were voted that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans that day?—A, I guess so; I think that is the Republican ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. It was similar to that; I do not know for certain; I did not look very closely at the tickets.

Q. State if, when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as they are ordinarily folded by voters, they could be told or distinguished one from the other by external appearance?—A. I think not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you mean when it is in the hands of the voter?—A. I mean when it is folded up tightly like a man folds his ticket when he wants to vote it.

Q. As a man folds it and holds it when he is going to vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell them by touching and handling them?—A. I do not know that I could.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Most generally; sometimes I vote for Democrats.

P. H. JAMESON.

JOHN MOUNTAIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. John Mountain; I am 30 years old; my residence is Carlos street, No. 60, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a member of the fire department.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time Mr. Peelle and Mr. English were candidates?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. 25th ward, third precinct.

Q. What position did you occupy that day?—A. Challenger.

Q. Were you on the police force that day?—A. No, sir; I was a member of the force, but I was not on the force that day.

Q. You were challenger there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans that day?—A. I think so.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir; I believe it is.

Q. Did you see and handle those tickets that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of the time were you at the chute as challenger?—A. I was there very nearly all the day.

Q. State if, when those tickets were folded in the hands of the voters, as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded, you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Did you make any effort that day to do it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, tell how a man was voting, at any time, from the kind of a ticket he held in his hand?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say you were a policeman the day before?—A. Yes, sir; I was a member of the force the day before.

Q. Were you a member of the force the day afterwards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was it that you was not a member of the force on that day?—A. I had leave of absence.

Q. Who granted you that leave?—A. The chief.

Q. Did you want a leave of absence?—A. Yes, sir; I asked for it.

Q. What for?—A. For the purpose of being challenger at the polls that day.

Q. Did you have your uniform on that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any badge on?—A. No, sir.

Q. You got special leave to act as challenger that day, and on the day before you acted as policeman, and on the day afterwards you resumed your duties, or on the following night?—A. The following night.

Q. On that night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The night of the election day?—A. No, sir; not the night of the day, but the next night.

Q. The night of the day following the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a regular policeman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are now in the employ of the fire department?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who appointed you?—A. The fire board.

Q. What party has the control over that fire board?—A. Mr. Reichwine, Mr. Thalman, and Mr. Yoke.

Q. Are they Republicans?—A. I believe so.

Q. What ward did you live in at that time?—A. The 25th ward—ever since it has been a ward.

Q. When you say that you could not tell those tickets, you mean you could not tell them by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell them by handling them?—A. You might tell them by feeling them, by the difference in the paper.

Q. When you say you could not tell them by sight, when folded, you mean when folded in the hands of the voter?—A. When they were in the hands of the voter I could not distinguish one ticket from the other.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That 25th ward is a strong Democratic ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And very few Republican workers down there?—A. We have very few scattered through the precinct.

Q. There is no politics in the fire board in this city?—A. No, sir; not in the way I am working now.

Q. They are of both political parties?—A. Yes, sir; there are men of both political parties right in our house.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were there not a number of Republican workers there on that day?—A. At our precinct on that day we had more than at any other precinct in the ward.

Q. How many did you have at your precinct?—A. About six or seven.

Q. Any of them policemen, or policemen the day before?—A. Not in our precinct.

Q. Were you the only man that had been connected with the police force that was there?—A. Yes, sir, I believe so; that had anything to do with political affairs. There were officers came afterwards there, but I do not know that they had anything to do. I did not notice them.

Q. Who were they, if you recollect?—A. The officers in the precinct?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think Connett was one of them—Bradley Connett.

Q. Didn't he stay around that precinct pretty much all day?—A. No, sir; he went from that precinct to another. That was his business.

Q. Were there any Republican officials there or deputies?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did not you see deputies there from the jail working in that precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. None at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not see any there?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say that is strongly Democratic?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the Democratic vote that day, if you recollect?—A. In the ward or precinct?

Q. In the precinct where you were.—A. I could not recollect that, but I was there that evening after the vote was counted. I could not recollect now what the majority was.

Q. Do you know what relationship the Republican vote that day at that precinct sustained to the Republicen vote at that precinct at the recent election since that time?—A. What difference there was in the majority?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; I do not know that I ever noticed that.

Q. How about the election next before that, when Mr. Kitz was elected?—A. I do not recollect now what the majority was that he had down there.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. The Democratic majority has been gradually decreasing down there on account of the large accessions to the Republican party from the Irish voters?—A. Yes, sir; to a certain extent. Take our councilman, for instance; we cut the majority down considerable and for certain men, but it has not done it for the whole ticket.

Q. There are more Irish voters in that ward than in any other ward in the city?—A. I believe there are; I am not positive about that, but I think there is.

Q. Did not a greater number of Irishmen vote the Republican ticket at the Congressional election in 1880 than had voted at the previous election?—A. No, I believe not; I believe at this last election they voted more for our councilman.

Q. I am speaking about the Congressional election of 1882. Were there more Irish votes for the Republican party in 1882 than there had been at previous elections?—A. Do you mean they voted for more of the ticket?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. They voted for more of the ticket in the Congressional election than in the city election.

Q. How was it as compared with the vote of 1880? Were there more Irish votes in 1882 than in 1880?—A. I could not tell.

Q. You do not know about that?—A. No, sir; I could not say about that.

JOHN MOUNTAIN.

ROBERT W. CATHCART, being first duly sworn, testified at follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Robert W. Cathcart; 40 years; residence, Indianapolis, Ind., for the last 3 years.

Q. What is your business?—A. The book business.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. Since 1856, except during three years in the Army.

Q. Have you been employed or engaged in this city in that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of books or papers do you handle?—A. Well, we handled the first two or three years—I was clerk then; part of that time I have been in business for myself.

Q. Are you familiar with the different qualities of book paper?—A. Not with all qualities, because I usually handle them—when I do handle them, only the cheaper goods. That is when I was with Merril some years ago.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to examine it carefully and state the kind of paper that that ticket is printed on, if you know.—A. I should say it was a cheap book paper; we have had what we call a No. 2, that has wood in it; I suppose this is about the same grade of book.

Q. Have you any paper in books in your establishment as heavy or heavier than that?—A. Yes, sir; in the finer grade of books, most all our books are heavier paper; this, I suppose, is used mostly for subscription books.

Q. Have you paper in books in your establishment heavier than that?—A. Yes; I would say most of our Christmas books are heavier than that; but they are finer books—finer stock.

Q. Have you made an examination and examined that paper in connection with books in your establishment?—A. I have examined the weight of it; we have some paper that is almost as heavy as cardboard in our Christmas books and illustrated books; the finer goods are upon heavier paper.

Q. I mean a book in which there is printed matter; not the illustrations.—A. We have both—illustrations, and the poem itself; for instance, where they want to make a thick book and only put in one poem.

Q. How much thicker is the paper you have in some of those books than this?—A. It varies a good deal; some is twice as thick as this, and some thicker; that is determined by the publisher.

Q. Have you writing paper in your establishment as heavy as that?—A. Yes; I should think it was quite as heavy as this.

Q. Did you examine some writing paper to see if it was as heavy as this?—A. Yes, sir; it is what we call 80-pound, but I am not able to say what the weight of this is; but we have what we call our 80-pound cream-laid, and it is as heavy, and I should think, heavier than this; it is the finest paper we handle.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you ever in the business of manufacturing paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Your business is dealing in stationery and books?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have what is called a book and stationery store?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would you think would be the weight of that Republican ticket, 25 by 38, 500 sheets to the ream?—A. It would only be a guess, because we do not handle flat paper. I would say in the neighborhood of 60 pounds.

Q. Do you handle paper of that character?—A. No, sir; we do not handle anything in flat papers at all. We do not handle this kind of papers. We handle writing papers and newspapers.

Q. Do you deal in lithographic plate?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have it?—A. We may have had it occasionally for orders.

Q. Do you know how it is made?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how it is finished?—A. No; I cannot say how it is finished.

Q. Do you know what use it is put to?—A. I suppose it is for lithographic purposes.

Q. You say you have some books on paper heavier than that; about what weight would you say the books were—sheets 25 by 38, to the ream—how much would you say they would weigh?—A. It would simply be as near as I could come to it. I would think I could safely say that we have it twice as heavy as that, and that would be 120 pounds if this is 60.

Q. And if it is 80, how much would it be?—A. Twice that.

Q. Then you think you have it weighing 160 pounds to the ream?—A. Yes, sir; if this is 80. I think it is too heavy for books.

Q. What sort of books are those; what books have you of that kind?—A. We have little books that Appleton gets out, and Bryant's books, and Longfellow's poems—a single poem with the book illustrated, one-half illustrated and one-half poem—and things of that kind. Of course, it is a great deal finer paper than this.

Q. Is it not the exceptional thing, and only rare, when books are printed on the material you have described?—A. Twice as heavy? That is much rarer now than it used to be, because the trade does not like it so. It is apt to break in the book unless it is very fine paper, and it tears out. If this quality of paper is twice as heavy it soon tears out. We buy few books twice as heavy as that.

Q. You say you have William Cullen Bryant's books?—A. I say we have some Longfellow's, and some Longfellow and Bryant's, and other books published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

Q. Are they separate poems or complete works?—A. Most of them are separate poems.

Q. Is it not true that books, when gotten up of the character you have described, are usually separate poems and that heavy material is used to give them bulk and elegance?—A. That is used in some Christmas books to give them elegance. It is used in the cheaper books to give them thickness.

Q. When a man is making a short book and wishes to have it look like a full volume, he would use some of that kind of paper?—A. Like cheap subscription books. Almost all subscription books are on paper like this.

Q. You say you have seen subscription books on the same kind of material as that Republican paper?—A. They are cheaper books.

Q. On the same material?—A. You mean in stock?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think it is the same. I think this has wood in it. It is a cheap stock.

Q. Cannot lithograph plate be made with some quantity of wood?—A. I cannot say about that.

Q. Is it not rare that books are gotten up of the character you have described here?—A. No; we sell about, I guess, one-fifth or maybe one-quarter of our fine Christmas books gotten up in this way.

Q. What would be the proportion of one-fifth of your Christmas books to the stock of books in your store that you sell right along?—A. Our Christmas trade is really our most extensive trade.

Q. I am talking about the general trade.—A. It would be in the neighborhood of one-sixth or one-eighth.

Q. Have you not got as many books in your establishment, separate and distinct books, printed on this cloth, for children, as you have on that heavy material that you describe, which you say is Christmas stock?—A. No, sir. We have only three kinds; I will say we have five linen books now.

Q. How many volumes to each book?—A. Of the linen books?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Each one is complete in itself. They are toy books.
Q. How many of a kind?—A. I could not say exactly. I would say not over three dozen of any one kind.
Q. And you have five kinds?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. These books are printed on stout material made of cloth and with a sort of a paper finish on the outside?—A. Some of them are paper finish and some of them are board finish.
Q. You have five kinds and about three dozen of a kind?—A. No, sir. I said not more than three dozen of one kind. We have about a dozen of a kind, probably. They are more expensive.

ROBT. W. CATHCART.

W. O. ANDERSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. W. O. Anderson; age, 44; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. State your business.—A. Wholesale paper business.
Q. Have you any one with you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the name of the firm?—A. It is the Hubbard & Anderson Paper Co., 127 S. Meridian street.
Q. How long have you been engaged in that business in this city?—A. About five years.
Q. How long have you been engaged in the paper business?—A. Something over twenty years.
Q. How long have you been engaged in the manufacture of paper?—A. Yes, sir; over eight years.
Q. Whereabouts?—A. In Richmond, in this State, and in Columbus, Ohio; also in Clifton.
Q. What grade of paper do you manufacture?—A. We manufactured newspaper principally, what we call "news," and manilas.
Q. Did you manufacture book-paper?—A. I was connected with a mill, as book-keeper that manufactured book-paper.
Q. Are you familiar with the different grades of paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is there any standard catalogue of papers?—A. Yes, sir; nearly every house has a catalogue of papers.
Q. What is the catalogue standard that you use in your business?—A. We have none printed in our business; we use the same catalogue of other houses, as a general thing.
Q. What house do you use?—A. We have the catalogues of Chatfield & Woods, of Cincinnati, and Bradley & Smith, of Chicago, and such houses.
Q. I hand you a catalogue marked "Price list of Chatfield & Woods, manufacturers of paper, Cincinnati, Ohio, for 1882." I will ask you to state if that is the price-list published by Chatfield & Woods, and which you have in your business?—A. That is the catalogue of Chatfield & Woods, and the papers are graded here just as we grade our papers.
Q. I will ask you to turn there to the grading of book-papers No. 2, and state the various sizes and weights of book-paper as shown by that catalogue.
(Objected to as incompetent; that the catalogue will speak for itself.)
A. I see them here from 22 by 32 to 28 by 38, which is the largest that is quoted here in that quality of book, and the weights vary from 30 to 60 pounds in this one.
Q. In those sizes?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is there any book-paper there heavier than that?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Please state what sizes and weights per ream.—A. There is No. 3 book here, 32 by 49, 70 pounds, and there is No. 1 book quoted, 25 by 38, 100 pounds to the ream.
Q. Is there a heavier grade of book-paper manufactured than that?—A. Than 100 pounds?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; sometimes, to order; it is not kept in stock generally by the house.
Q. I will ask you to turn in that book under the head of "Plate-papers," and state how plate-papers are catalogued, whether as simple "Plate," "Woodsdale Plate," or whether as "Plate-papers" and "Woodsdale Plate-papers"?—A. It is catalogued as "Eastern Plate-papers" and "Woodsdale Plate-papers," two different qualities of plate-papers.
Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence, as a part of the deposition of the witness, the catalogue that he has identified, and ask that it be marked as a part of his deposition.
(The catalogue will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibit No. 3.)
Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Halliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it, and state the kind of paper upon which that ticket is printed?—A. I should say it was a medium grade of book-paper.

Q. As to the number?—A. It is what we call No. 2.

Q. What is the weight, probably, per ream of that paper—size 19 by 24 and 25 by 38, respectively?—A. In 19 by 24 I should take it to be about a 40-pound paper, and just about double that in the other size.

Q. You think it would be about an 80-pound paper in 25 by 38?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a piece of writing paper and I will ask you to state what kind of writing paper that is?—A. It is what we call a tub sized and animal sized writing paper of a fair quality—a good quality. There are different grades of writing paper, as well as book paper.

Q. Are there any heavier grades of writing paper than that?—A. Very much heavier grades.

Q. What are the heaviest grades of writing paper per ream kept in stock?—A. In ledger papers they run—it is a class of work we do not keep in stock ourselves, but they run in similar sizes, probably 19 by 24 is from 80 to 120 to the ream.

Q. You mean pounds?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the probable weight per ream of the kind of writing paper I have just handed you, and which I take from the bunch of papers upon which the stenographer is taking this testimony?—A. That probably, in the size sheets it is, would be ten pound paper to the thousand sheets.

Q. I mean per ream 25 by 38; what would be the difference between the weight of that paper and the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. Probably it would be about 100 to 110 pounds.

Q. You mean the writing paper would run?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is writing paper of the same thickness heavier than book paper?—A. Yes, sir; This being heavier than writing paper, it is a different material and is heavier when folded; that is, the same thickness sheet would weigh more than the same thickness of book paper.

Q. What difference is there between the thickness of that piece of paper I handed you, and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. There is very little difference.

Q. Is there any difference in the stiffness of the paper?—A. Yes, sir; The writing paper is the stiffest.

Q. Is there any difference in the spring of the paper?—A. I suppose it would be the same reason—the stiffer the paper, the more spring.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence this piece of writing paper which the witness has examined, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The paper will be found attached to the deposition as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. That is the kind of paper that the short-hand reporter is taking his notes of the testimony on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on.—A. I should consider that a No. 1 "news," or a cheap grade of "book."

Q. Is No. 1 "news" a good grade of "news," or a cheap grade, or medium?—A. No. 1 is a good grade of "news," and "No. 3 book" will run about the same.

Q. State if you handle plate papers in your business.—A. No, sir; we do not.

Q. Have you specimens or samples?—A. We have samples; yes, sir.

Q. And you are familiar, are you not, with "plate paper"?—A. To some extent.

Q. From your long experience in the handling of papers—"news" and "book"—you think the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed upon is a No. 2 book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a calendered paper?—A. It is what we call a "machine finished calendered."

Q. Is it what is known as "super-calendered" paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. What would be the difference between calendered and super-calendered paper?—A. You mean in value?

Q. In the appearance of the paper.—A. Super-calendered paper has a finer finish on it. It is finished different from the machine calendered; it is calendered a second time.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it, and compare it with the other Republican ticket that I showed you, that was made a part of the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and state what difference there is, if any, in the paper upon which these tickets are printed.—A. There is a difference in the color; it is about the same grade of paper with a harder finish.

Q. How is that harder finish given?—A. It is given by what we call "sizing."

Q. Is that ticket marked Exhibit A sized as much, or more?—A. It is sized more, and would be considered rather a better grade of paper, although the stock is not much better.

Q. Is there any difference in the weight of the paper, thickness, feeling, and stiffness?—A. There is very little; the stiffer paper would probably weigh a little more, a few pounds, but little in that sized sheet.

Q. What would you think would be the difference between the weight of that paper per ream?—A. I should hardly think it would be more than five pounds. It would be hard to tell when it runs as close as that. It is just about enough to be heavier.

Q. Which would weigh the most, the ticket I last handed you marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "National ticket," being the ticket voted by the "Greenback party" in this city at the November election, 1882, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and state the kind of paper that that ticket is printed on.—A. That is a light grade of cheap writing paper; what we call a light folio.

Q. What is the difference between a "news" and "print" paper?—A. It is the difference in the stock. One is manufactured from cheap rags and the other is manufactured from a better grade, and in the sizing of it. There is more care in the preparation; and cheap "news" has no sizing whatever.

Q. Then there is some sizing in that National ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if papers, news, print, book, flat, and plate papers, are, or are not, sized in their manufacture.—A. They are all sized; that is, unless it is a very low grade of book, that is not sized sometimes, but book papers, as a general thing, are sized.

Q. Is this Democratic ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, that I hand you, sized paper?—A. I should think there was some sizing in it.

Q. Is it calendered paper?—A. It is called machine-calendered, not a super-calendered.

Q. Is that Republican ticket, marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, sized in the same way, or different?—A. In the same way.

Q. Calendered the same way?—A. Yes, sir; calendered in the same way. It gets a better finish by being a heavier paper.

Q. That is, the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would you say would be the weight, per ream, size 25 by 38, of that Democratic ticket?—A. It would be from 35 to 40 pounds, not to exceed 40.

Q. I will ask you to take this catalogue, which has been exhibited to you, and made a part of your testimony, being the catalogue of Chatfield & Woods, and I will ask you to state the price of book paper, such as that Democratic ticket was printed on, as shown by that catalogue, in 1882, in November.—A. Eight cents, I should guess, is the price quoted in this catalogue

Q. Per pound?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I ask you now to refer to that catalogue and state the price of the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, in November, 1882.—A. The quotation given here in 9¼ cents.

Q. Then the same size per ream of book paper, such as that Democratic ticket is printed on, and of the book paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, size being 25 by 38, are worth, respectively, the Democratic 8 c. per pound, and the Republican ticket 9¼ cents per pound in 1882; or, in other words, you say there is a difference of 1¼ cents per pound in that paper in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As shown by Chatfield & Woods' catalogue and price list of 1882?—A Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer in evidence the ticket headed "National ticket," being the Greenback ticket voted at this election in 1882, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to the testimony of Mr. Anderson.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked "Exhibit No. 2"; being objected to by the contestant on the ground that there is no proof that that is the National ticket that Mr. Peelle says was used at that time, and for the reason that no witness has so testified.)

Mr. PEELLE. I will follow it up and offer evidence to prove that it is the ticket that was voted by the Greenback and National parties in November, 1882.

Q. Did you state whether the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed was a medium or a fine grade of book?—A. I stated it was a medium.

Q. State the color of the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed—I mean the original color before it was soiled.—A. Then it was a white paper. It has a bluish cast, but it is white paper.

Q. Is it what is known in the trade as a plain white paper?

(Objected to.)

A. White paper; yes, sir.

Q. What is plain white paper?—A. It is a paper that is bleached white with chemicals. It generally has in connection with it some shade of blue to kill a dead whiteness, and both are known as white paper and called white paper.

Q. Is blue used to kill a dead white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any bluing used in the paper on which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when you get into Bristol board or card-board, you would call it paper.—A. No, sir.

Q. What do you call Bristol or card-board?—A. We call them Bristol board and card-board.

Q. Then would or would not Bristol board and card-board be known to the business as plain white paper?

(Objected to.)

A. It would not be known as plain white paper.

Q. Would you call a blotting paper paper in the trade?—A. Yes, sir; I would call it blotting paper.

Q. Is it called anything else?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you gave your answer just now to the question of Mr. Peelle, which asked you to turn to the catalogue and tell the weights, &c., of the Democratic ticket and the Republican ticket, you answered according to your opinion?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Merely?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say that National, or Greenback, ticket was printed on?—A. It looks like a cheap grade of writing paper.

Q. Of what is it made?—A. In looking at it closely afterward I would not know but what it was—instead of being as I supposed—that it was a chemical straw paper. It is very highly sized, and it is almost impossible to tell just what it is.

Q. What is your answer to the question?—A. My answer was that it was a cheap grade of writing paper.

Q. What do you say now is the material upon which it is printed?—A. In examining it more closely, I am somwhat in doubt as to that. It may be a very thin grade of chemically-prepared straw paper. I can only tell by comparison. We have not been handling this paper.

Q. Did you ever handle any material like that?—A. Something that resembles it very closely in a cheap grade of writing paper. That is, a very highly-sized paper, and would answer the same purpose as a cheap grade of writing paper.

Q. What are the cheap grades of writing paper used for?—A. Mostly in printing pamphlets and insurance documents, and such things as that.

Q. You say that the cheap grades of writing paper are used for printing purposes?—A. Yes, sir; for printing purposes mostly.

Q. Is there anything else they are used for?—A. They are used sometimes where writing has to be done, and a copy is not expected to be taken from it.

Q. Can you write on it with pen and ink?—A. Just the same as any grade of paper.

Q. What is the stock out of which that National ticket is made, or the Greenback ticket?—A. That is just where I stated to you I was in doubt.

Q. Of what stock is book paper made?—A. Cotton rags.

Q. Exclusively?—A. Sometimes there are other ingredients, or wood pulp, and such things, sometimes in the lower grades.

Q. In the lower grades they mix wood pulp?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The higher grades are made of what, exclusively?—A. Of rags—the best grade.

Q. Does the same machine that makes print paper make book paper?—A. Yes, sir; as a general thing it can make it.

Q. I understand you that the same machine that makes print paper, can make book paper?—A. A fine grade of paper cannot be made from the same machine that makes a low grade of paper; still, a machine that will make print paper will not always make book paper.

Q. Will it make book paper?—A. Machines that are mostly used for print paper, will make book paper; yes, sir.

Q. What is the name of that machine that can do that?—A. We call it a "Fourdrinier" machine.

Q. How is print paper sized, when it is sized?—A. Print paper when it is sized, is sized in what we call the engines, at the tubs.

Q. In what stage?—A. As the rags are being prepared in the pulp.

Q. At what stage is book paper sized?—A. At the same stage with the exception of strictly No. 1, sized and super-calendered.

Q. At what stage is that sized?—A. That is sized after the paper is made—No. 1 is. That is very seldom done. It is first-class paper that requires that.

Q. Is print paper usually calendered?—A. Machine calendered; yes, sir.

Q. What do you mean by machine calendered?—A. Calender rolls that are on the machine. As the paper is being made it runs through these rolls. Most machines have two sets of rolls; for print paper they will use one set, and if they run into book paper they will probably use two sets.

Q. Is it not true that print paper is what they call machine finished?—A. Yes, sir; newspaper is machine finished paper.

Q. Print paper is what is called machine calendered paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the natural color of book paper stock?—A. I do not know as I understand you.

Q. I mean in the pulp; as soon as it is reduced to pulp.—A. After bleaching and all, it is white.

Q. What do you mean by bleaching?—A. Using chemicals that produce whiteness.

Q. Do chemicals produce whiteness?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What chemicals do you use to produce whiteness?—A. Chloride of lime mostly; that is the principal thing.

Q. You use that for white?—Yes, sir.

Q. For bleaching?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before that is done what do I understand you to say would be the natural color of the stock?—A. Before the bleaching is done?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Oh, it is a very dirty color. The manufacture of rags into book paper such as book papers are manufactured in the west, are manufactured from colored rags, not from white rags, as some think; and when they are beaten up I do know what color you would call it.

Q. According to the color of the rags, and the amount of dirt?—A. That would be the color of it; yes, sir. It is not white by any means.

Q. In manufacturing book paper you secure a white color by using chloride of lime as a bleacher?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that generally done?—A. Always done.

Q. Did you ever manufacture any plate?—A. No, sir; I never manufactured any plate paper.

Q. Did you ever handle much of it?—A. I was connected with the house of Chatfield & Woods for some time, and they were handling more or less of plate paper.

Q. Explain how plate paper is manufactured.—A. Western plate paper is nothing more than book paper, but put up heavier, as a general thing, and flat—sometimes sized and sometimes some extra sizing. Eastern plates are generally better finished and harder finished—sometimes one side finished and the other side left unfinished.

Q. Is it not true that western plate and eastern plate both have only one side finished?—A. Not necessarily so; no, sir.

Q. Is it not usually true?—A. I think not; so far as western plate is concerned. one side of the paper is, you might say, better finished than the other in all cases. It would happen so in heavier papers, and one side would show a better finish than the other, but it is not so intended in the manufacture.

Q. It is not so intended?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is not that one of the peculiarities and one of the purposes for which plate paper is made; that one side is highly finished and the other is not; and is it not used for engraving and do they not distinguish and discriminate in the finish of one side for that purpose; that it may be used with more facility and ease?—A. Still in the manufacture of western plate the same finish is done to that that there is to the book papers and no other.

Q. Look at the Republican ticket marked Exhibit Q, to Mr. Wallace's deposition and state whether one side of that paper is more highly finished than the other?—A. Yes, sir; one side is better finished than the other and book paper of the same weight would show the same finish.

Q. You say that "western plate" is nothing but book paper?—A. No, sir; that is all.

Q. And when you answer that this is book paper you can also answer that it is western plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; It could be sold for the same thing.

Q. In other words, western plate paper as you understand it, and book paper are one and the same kind of paper.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what firm manufactured that paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Would you call eastern plate paper a kind of book paper too?—A. I mean plate paper as a general thing, is made of better stock and has a better finish, and there is more care taken in preparing it. It has the same stock as No. 1 book.

Q. When you testified in chief, in answer to the questions in reference to the character of that paper, you never once said it was plate paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. You called it book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do Chatfield & Woods manufacture western plate paper?—A. I believe they do; I believe they have an interest in a mill that does. They are not the sole manufacturers of it.

Q. What mill is that?—A. Their's is called the Woodsdale Mills, and manufacture book paper, and what they call "western plate."

Q. What is the general use to which western plate is put?—A. Printing maps and such character of work as that.

Q. It is generally used for lithographic purposes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I will ask you about the color of that Republican ticket; Is not that what you call toned?—A. No, sir.

Q. You think not?—A. No. sir.

Q. How is toning secured?—A. It is a tint that comes by coloring matter.

Q. You say it is not toned at all?—A. No, sir; the bluish tint is never considered as toned paper, not unless it is a marked color. Tint paper has generally some other color, what is called "cream" or "rose."

Q. Is there a difference between what you call toned and the tint, in the sense in which you use the word "tint"?—A. No, sir; there is not a difference.

Q. Is there not in the trade, and known amongst manufacturers a difference between the two?—A. There is a toned paper sometimes made there what is called the natural color of stock, and in which the bluish tint has not been put in.

Q. According to the catalogue of Chatfield & Woods, which was introduced by Mr. Peelle, what would be the weight and cost, respectively, of a ream of such paper as you understand the Democratic ticket to be printed on, and a ream of such material as the Republican ticket is printed on—size of sheets in both cases, 25 by 38 inches?—A. The Democratic ticket I should consider a 40-pound paper, not to exceed that, and value as to Wood's catalogue, 8c per pound, and the Republican ticket would be 80 pounds, and the value as placed here, 9¼ cents per pound.

Q. There is the same number of sheets in a ream of each kind, as you understood it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any variance in the number of sheets to the ream, or is that a fixed quantity?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Five hundred?—A. Four hundred and eighty sheets to the ream.

Q. How about plate paper; does the same rule prevail there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same number of sheets to the ream?—A. Yes, sir; although some manufactories now are changing—that is recently—and putting up papers in a thousand sheets, but a ream is always 480 sheets.

Q. Have you bought or sold any plate paper recently?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you bought or sold any plate paper in four or five years, as you recollect it?—A. We may have taken some orders and filled them, but I do not recall any plate paper; still, the house may have taken some orders.

Q. Do you mean, when you say 80 pounds to the ream, that the sheets are 25 by 38 inches?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you referred to what you call book paper, looking at the catalogue of Chatfield and Woods?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In selling Woodsdale plate papers for book purposes, if you would so sell it, would you bill it as book paper?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. If we sold Woodsdale plate papers we would bill them as Woodsdale plate papers.

Q. That is the usual rule in the business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the rule when you was with Chatfield & Wood?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And yet you say there is no substantial difference?—A. What makes the difference are the sizes. The sizes of plate papers are larger than book—half sizes. When I was with Chatfield & Woods we always folded book papers; they are now putting them up flat, but at that time we always folded them; and plate papers are always put up flat on account of being printed on a full sheet, but the size of plate is what make them plate as a general thing.

Q. Do you say that this Republican ticket is plate paper?—A. No, sir; we consider that a book paper.

Q. I thought you said a while ago that book paper and plate paper are the same?—A. I say that may have been made and called a plate paper, although it would be just the same paper as a book paper.

Q. It would be the same paper?—A. It would be the same if it was sold as such, but if it was sold 25 by 38 the probabilities are that it was billed as book paper, and not sold as plate paper.

Q. Do not they bill and sell plate paper in quantities 25 by 38 sized sheets?—A. Not as a general thing, although it could be done in sizes and sold like that.

Q. Then it is the size that would determine, in your mind, whether it was sold as book or plate paper?—A. No, sir; not as a general thing. I would consider that that was sold as book paper and not as plate paper, although it could be sold as plate paper. I would never consider that it was sold as plate paper.

Q. That is plate paper [indicating]?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It has the characteristics of plate paper?—A. Of cheap plate paper. It could not be used in good work.

Q. In the better class of work for which plate paper is used you generally use eastern plate?—A. Yes, sir; as a general thing; but the Woodsdale people make a plate paper that is very much better than that.

Q. That is the house of Chatfield & Woods?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, it would be your opinion that Chatfield & Woods did not manufacture this?—A. No, sir; I do not say so. I guess they make a paper of a lower grade than that, and different, at that mill.

Q. You mean at the Woodsdale mill?—A. Yes, sir. They make different grades of paper at the Woodsdale mills; also book papers and plate papers of different grades.

Q. I call your attention to this specimen that I have shown you, and I will ask you what is the material out of which that is made?—A. Mostly wood pulp, I would say.

Q. What would you call that?—A. In this state, do you mean?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I would call that a board.

Q. What sort of a board?—A. I would call it a card-board.

Q. Please tell me what is a card-board and how it is made.—A. Card-boards are made very similar to paper, only heavier—two or more sheets run together.

Q. They are the same material as paper?—A. Yes, sir; but two or more sheets run together over one cylinder to another and pressed together in the process of manufacturing.

Q. The same material as used in making paper?—A. Yes, sir; the same material as is used in making paper.

Q. Did you ever know card-board to be made in any other way than to put two or more sheets together?—A. I have never seen the process of manufacturing card-board, but my understanding is that is the way in which they are made.

Q. Is there a Bristol board that is thinner than the Republican ticket shown you a while ago?—A. Not that I have ever seen.

Q. You think that is card-board that you have in your hand?—A. It is the character of card-board, although I never saw a board as heavy as that; but that in the size of a card sheet would be termed a card-board.

Q. Is not card-board finished different from ordinary paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is not?—A. No, sir; not necessarily so. Some are heavier finished than others; some are very well cut and highly finished.

Q. Have you got a card-board called "china"?—A. Yes sir.

Q. How is that finished?—A. That is generally a very thin sheet over a commoner grade of board; a cheap board with a thin sheet over it to give it a finish. It is a cheap board. The inside would be a cheaper grade of stock than the outside sheet would be, which would be a very thin one.

Q. Would not you call it paper, then?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is not sold as paper?—A. No, sir; it is not sold as paper.

Q. It is not catalogued or sold as paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is not known as paper in the trade?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is called card-board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And plate-paper is called plate-paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so all the way through?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And yet they are called paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And sold as such?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I offer in evidence on the cross-examination of Mr. Anderson the specimen last shown him, and desire to have it marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The specimen will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.)

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I now hand you a piece of white paper, and ask you to examine that, and state what it is.—A. It is a No. 1 book.

Q. Examine both sides of it carefully.—A. One side is better finished than the other.

Q. I now hand you another piece of white paper, and ask you to examine that, and state what it is.—A. That is a sized and supercalendered book.

Q. How much will that weigh per ream?—A. I should think about 80 pounds, 25 by 38.

Q. Yes, sir; 25 by 38.—A. It is hard to tell by handling one sheet—from 70 to 80 pounds.

Q. I ask you to take this ticket marked "Republican ticket" and Exhibit A to Mr. Holliday's deposition and state the difference between that paper and the paper now iny our hands.—A. But very little difference. If anything, the ticket is a little bit spongier.

Q. That thin paper is supercalendered?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And better finished than the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed, or not?—A. Yes, sir; a better finish.

Q. What would be the number of that paper?—A. I consider that a No. 1 paper.

Q. Is that, or not, a better quality of paper than the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. Better.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence this piece of paper, which the witness says is No. 1 book paper, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to the deposition of the witness.

(The specimen will be found attached to this deposition, as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibit 5.)

Q. I now hand you another piece of white paper and ask you to examine it and state what it is.—A. That is a sized and supercalendered No. 1 paper.

Q. How much will it weigh per ream, sheets 25 by 38?—A. About 70 pounds, I should think.

Q. How does that compare with the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. The paper of the ticket is a little heavier.

Q. How much difference would there probably be per ream?—A. I should think there would probably be about ten pounds.

Q. I will ask you to feel of the paper which you say, is what kind of paper?—A. Sized and supercalendered No. 1.

Q. What is the difference between the feeling of that and the spring and stiffness of that paper, and the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. It is stiffer paper.

Q. Which is stiffer?—A. The sample of the paper.

Q. The 70 pound?—A. Yes, sir; the sizing would make it so, and the finish of it.

Q. I now rehand you the piece of paper which I handed you a while ago, and, in connection with it, I hand you the sheet from which it was clipped, and without looking at the writing on the back of that, I will ask ——

A. That, I see now, is what we call plate.

Q. What kind of plate?—A. Eastern plate.

Q. That is an Eastern plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer now in evidence this piece of plate paper, which the witness says is plate ——

The WITNESS (interrupting). You cut it from an unfortunate place. The paper does not seem to be finished alike.

Mr. PEELLE (continuing), paper, and ask that the same be marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The paper will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 6.)

Mr. PEELLE. I withdraw the little bit of paper which I just handed you, and I now hand you another piece of paper—white paper, larger than the piece I handed you, and which you said was Eastern plate, and I ask you to state what that is.

A. That is an Eastern plate paper.

Q. What size is that paper usually sold in?—A. 19 by 24 is the common size.

Q. What would that paper weigh per ream, 19 by 24?—A. I should think about 40 to 45 pounds.

Q. What would that make it, 25 by 38?—A. From 80 to 90.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer the piece of white paper, which the witness says is "Eastern Plate" in evidence, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The same will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibit No. 7.)

Q. State if there are, or are not, heavier Eastern plate papers made than the specimen I have just handed you which has been made a part of your deposition.—A. Yes, sir; there are heavier.

Q. How much heavier?—A. Fifty per cent., if not more. I could not say, of course, how heavy they are made. I have handled papers fifty per cent. heavier.

Q. The same size?—A. Yes, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle's first question, or re-examination, was that he would hand you a piece of white paper and ask you to examine it and state what it was, and you stated that that was a No. 1 book. Upon a re-examination you came to the conclusion that you were mistaken.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came to the conclusion that it was what you would term plate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is a specimen of plate the same as introduced by Mr. Peelle and made Exhibit No. 7 to your evidence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is Eastern plate?—A. Yes, sir; that is Eastern plate.

Q. What did you say would be the weight of Eastern plate 22 by 28 inches to the sheet, per ream?—A. Twenty-five by 28.

Q. No, sir; I asked the question intentionally; 22 by 28 Eastern plate?—A. It varies in weights. There is no regular weight.

Q. What is the ratio?—A. Twenty-two by 28.

Q. Yes, sir; about what?—A. Fifty pounds would be probably an average weight. It would vary.

Q. You say you worked with Chatfield & Woods for a while?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They have in their catalogue a piece of Eastern plate paper No. 1, 22 by 28, 70 pounds; sized and supercalendered, 22 by 28, 80 pounds. Now, how about Woodsdale plate that they were interested in? What would you say would be the weight of that, 22 by 58?—A. They run the same weight as Eastern papers if they are ordered.

Q. What is the difference, if any, between No. 1 Eastern plate papers and Woodsdale plate papers, 22 by 28, in point of weight, would you say?—A. I would say, as a general thing, there would be no difference.

Q. Chatfield & Woods catalogue it "Woodsdale plate papers 22 by 28, 80 pounds; 22 by 28, 100 pounds; best Eastern plate 22 by 28, 70 pounds;" 22 by 28, 80 pounds"—excuse me; they commence with "22 by 28 Woodsdale plate from 50 to 100 pounds;" 22 by 28 is best Eastern plate, as I stated.—A. From 70, nothing lighter.

Q. Nothing lighter 22 by 28 than 70?—A. They give a great variety of weights in Western, styled Woodsdale, but still Chatfield & Woods furnish Eastern plate 100 pounds.

Q. The truth is, you can make paper about as thick as you choose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It can be made book paper weighing over 200 pounds to the ream, can it not?—A. 25 by 38 could be.

Q. And it could be made thicker a great deal than Bristol—some kinds of Bristol, and even thicker than some species of card-board, so far as that is concerned?—A. It could be made in the same way.

Q. It could be made thicker?—A. No thicker. It could be made as thick.

Q. I mean that it is possible to make a species of book paper thicker than a species of card board?—A. They can make them as thick.

Q. Cannot they make them thicker?—A. They can make a card-board as heavy.

Q. Are there not book papers that can be made thicker than some kinds of Bristol board?—A. The book papers are sometimes made as heavy, or heavier than the lightest card-board.

Q. And it is sometimes made heavier than the heaviest card-board?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is the average weight of card—I will turn here——. A. That does not give it.

Q. It would not give it?—A. No, sir; not the average weight of card-board.

Q. Why would it not?—A. It would give in Bristol 100, 120, and 140 pounds. That is the only grade it will give the weight of.

Mr. PEELLE. These go by numbers.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; the boards are made heavier; the weights are not given; they give it in plys.

Mr. PEELLE. They go by numbers, do they not?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say was the weight of Bristol, a moment ago?—A. 100, 120, and 140 are the common weights.

Q. What is the size?—A. 22 by 28.

Q. Have you not stated here that book papers reach way beyond those you have named—22 by 28?—A. I do know as I did with reference to book papers; I did with reference to plate papers. Book papers can be made that way; but they are not, as a general thing, made as heavy. Plate paper can be.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I understood you to say when book paper was made thicker than Bristol board, it was thicker than Bristol board?—A. I said it could be made thicker than Bristol board.

Q. And if is made thicker, of course it is thicker?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But that book papers are not so made?—A. Book papers are not so made, as a general thing.

JAMES C. YOHN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence?—A. James C. Yohn; my age is 65; my residence is Indianapolis, Ind., number 206 North Delaware street.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am now engaged in the book business with my son.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Forty-nine years last November.

Q. Have you occupied any official position by election or appointment?—A. Yes, sir; a member of the school board of the city, by appointment first and afterwards by election; and I am now one of the city commissioners by appointment. I never asked for any office in my life.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I generally vote the Republican ticket, but I frequently vote for the best man on the other side, as I understand it.

Q. Were you in the city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time Mr. English and myself were candidates for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity that day?—A. Yes, sir; I was inspector, and acted as such.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The 1st precinct of the 11th ward.

Q. Was that at the engine house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that at a precinct where a man named Ross Clark acted as Democratic challenger?—A. Ross was there almost all day; yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted there that day?—A. I took the tickets in as they were voted.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "State ticket; for secretary, Emanuel R. Hawn," and I will ask you to examine that and state if that is the kind of ticket used by the Republicans in that precinct that day?—A. I think it is, as far as I remember it; I have never examined it from that time to this.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer now in evidence this Republican ticket, which has been identified by the witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to the testimony of the witness.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "For secretary of state, William R. Myers," and I will ask you to state if that was the kind of a ticket that was voted by the Democrats there that day?—A. I suppose it is.

Q. Do you recognize it?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer that ticket in evidence as a part of the deposition of this witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.

Q. State if when those two tickets that you have just identified are folded in the hands of the voter, and being voted, you can tell or distinguish one from the other by the external appearance of the tickets?—A. I do not think I could.

Q. Did you, or not, that day distinguish or tell how a man was voting from the ticket he held in his hand; just from the sight of the ticket as he came up?—A. No, sir; from the fact that I did not care to know how men were voting, and I did not want to know.

Q. Could you tell from the difference in the tickets when you were feeling them?—

A. There is a slight difference in them, if I had wanted to find out that fact, but I never did, and I did not try to.

Q. You did not, as a matter of fact, tell or distinguish one ticket from the other by sight, as they were being voted and handed to you as inspector?—A. I might have noticed a vote where they were not folded.

Q. I mean by sight?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not by sight?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say you did a few by feeling?—A. Yes, sir; a few, where they were not folded closely; but where they were folded closely I could not tell one from the other, for the life of me.

Q. Were they folded closely?—A. Most of them; when a man comes up we would require him to fold his ticket. That is our duty as inspectors. Sometimes they came up with the ticket open and we would require them to fold it before they handed it to us, and I would see what the ticket was, and it would be folded sometimes right in my presence; but I never would take an open ticket.

Q. How did the vote of that precinct, when counted, correspond with the number of names on the poll-book?—A. It has been a good while ago, but my recollection is that there was one vote more than there was on the tally-sheet.

Q. Did you find any tickets there that were voted double?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket was that?—A. It was a small ticket; the Democratic ticket folded together.

Q. Was it a straight Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. What kind of a ticket was that?—A. It was a straight Democratic ticket, excepting the name of yourself for Congress.

Q. How was that name on the ticket, pasted or written?—A. It was pasted on.

Q. Was that double ticket counted?—A. It was not. With the consent of all concerned we just laid that ticket out to see how it would come out, and when we came out, my recollection is—I do not know whether it was 218 or 318—I do not profess to know, but there was just one over that way. I have not thought much about it since, but the impression I have, it was something and nineteen voters and there were eighteen tickets.

Q. And by the throwing out of that ticket, is it your recollection that the vote then corresponded with the poll-book?—A. Yes, sir; counting the two tickets as one.

Q. Were they, or not, counted?—A. No, sir; they were not counted.

Q. I wish, if you can, you would show exactly how they were folded.—A. I have a recollection of it, although I have not thought of that matter at all until just now, because I was not here when the matter was spoken of a year ago; I was in New York. The ticket was folded in that way [indicating]. Mr. Stout, as soon as he saw it, said it was a double ticket.

Q. The upper edge of the ticket was slightly turned down before it was folded?—A. Yes, sir. They were together very plainly, just in that way. It was all a plain Democratic ticket all the way down but your name, and that was "Stanton J. Peelle."

Q. Pasted in?—A. Pasted in there [indicating].

Q. In both tickets?—A. Yes, sir, on both tickets; and that is the way it stood. I took it right out so they all could see it, and I think Ross Clark was there; I am not sure whether he was or not, but Mr. Stout was there.

Q. He was the Democratic judge?—A. Yes, sir. He said "That will not do," and it was laid out carefully and the others were consulted, and they all agreed it was right.

Q. By unanimous consent of the board the ticket was not counted?—A. Yes, sir; it was folded up very closely. It was folded so closely that it passed my inspection. I may have taken it; I could not state; I may have taken it, or Mr. Lecklider might have taken it.

Q. Mr. Lecklider was Republican judge?—A. Yes, sir; I took the most of them, but I got so sick at the window, with the cigar smoke, that it made me deathly sick, and I had to go out and get some fresh air, and for that reason I refused to serve at this time.

Q. Have you frequently been on election boards in this city?—A. No, sir; I think that is the second or third time; perhaps three times I have served; not as inspector. I think I have served twice as inspector; maybe I have been four times—several railroad elections.

Q. In counting the tickets that were taken out of the ballot-box, how did you usually count them; did you count the straight tickets in fives or tens, or did you count them singly, one at a time?—A. We usually counted them one at a time; we took them out, and I first looked at them—no, I didn't—yes, I did; I took them out and handed them to Mr. Stout, who sat next to me, and Mr. Lecklider put them on the string, and Mr. Stout sat right by to see how I took them out, and I took them out one ticket at a time, and he was satisfied with them.

Q. You counted them out one at a time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they or not sometimes count straight tickets in larger numbers as they sort the straight tickets; count them in fives or tens?—A. We took these out and passed each one along for each one to see it and handed it right over; I do not know whether we did this in this case or not; I do not think we did; I know we did when Mr. Delzel was on the board.

Q. When was he on the board; at elections previous to this?—A. Yes, sir; I would take it out and I would hand it to Mr. Delzel, and at the same time we would tally by five; we considered it just the same, because we examined each ticket separately; I wanted to see that every man got his due.

Q. State if any complaint or objection was made there that day by Ross Clark, or any one else, to the character of this Republican ticket; and, if so, who it was and how it was.—A. I never heard Ross Clark make any complaint.

Q. Did you hear anybody else?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was Senator McDonald there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he do?—A. He came early in the morning, about half an hour after the polls opened; I do not know whether Mr. English was with him or not, but some gentleman was, and called me by name and called my attention to the ticket; that it seemed to be thicker than the other, and to see that those tickets did not go in double; that is the only request he made, and that is the only thing I did look after.

Q. What did he state to you?—A. He stated that the ticket that was being voted—he had just discovered it—the Republican ticket was a thicker ticket than the other, and to examine them carefully to see that they were not doubled in being voted and that there were no double tickets voted.

Q. You say he asked you that?—A. Yes, sir; he says "I have all confidence in you, but I want to call your attention to that fact"; that is the only thing I looked after. Sometimes a ticket would come up and I would suspicion it and I thought it was double, and one or two occasions we would require the voter to open that ticket and fold it up again; I did not open it, but in doubtful cases I asked Mr. Lecklider or Mr. Stout, or both, before I put it in the ballot-box, right before the voter, to see that it was not voted double, any ticket that I had any suspicion about; but there was none that were there that were counted, except the one that I spoke of, and I think you will find the tally-books will show that.

Q. Did Mr. Ross Clark get up there at any time during the day and make any complaint, or denounce the Republican ticket in any way?—A. No, sir; not in my hearing.

Q. If it had been done at the polls would you have heard it?—A. Possibly I would. I was not there all the time, however.

Q. State if, during that election, you gave any sign, wink, nod, or in any way held your ticket so that the challengers might know what kind of a ticket had been handed to you?—A. I did not.

Q. Was there any such arrangement or understanding between you and the challengers?—A. There was not; no, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did Senator McDonald say anything to you about the spring-back character of that ticket?—A. I do not remember of his using the word "spring-back."

Q. You do not recollect?—A. No, sir; he called our attention, and he called me by name, as being the first one at the window, to pay particular attention. I have heard the name "spring-back" used so often since that I am not sure about it, but I do not think that he used the word "spring-back."

Q. You thought several times they were being voted double?—A. Yes, sir; they were folded very loosely.

Q. And they were so thick?—A. Yes, sir; they were folded loosely. You know a man can bring up a ticket and make it larger than any other man; and they were folded very loosely; and I remember it from the fact of his calling my attention to it.

Q. Was Mr. Hasselman there?—A. Yes, sir; Ott Hasselman.

Q. When you testified as to how the tickets were counted, you testified as to what you in your experience have done?—A. No, sir; at that particular counting out.

Q. Your testimony is what you did?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you speak of the poll-book and the count corresponding, what poll-book do you refer to—the poll-book kept by the judges?—A. No, sir; the judges did not keep a book; it is the clerk's poll-book that we had, with the names of the voters and the number of the voters; I have not seen the book since, but my impression is that it was something in the eighteens or nineteens.

Q. And your recollection is it corresponded with the number of votes cast, less the double ticket that was voted for Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir; there was one ticket less.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That one ticket less you mean was the double ticket you spoke of?—A. Yes, sir; if we had counted that it would have been one over, but of course we did not count that.

Q. The count, then, corresponded?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You mean, as a matter of fact, that there was one vote less there than the number of names recorded?—A. Yes, sir; that is what I mean to say.

Q. After throwing out that ballot there was one vote less?—A. Yes, sir; that is my impression about it. I am not positive as to that, because I have never thought of the matter since. I think there was something said about it, but it was when I was in New York, and I did not think anything about it, and have never thought about it since. That is my recollection of the way that the matter came up, and I would say that Mr. Stout and all of us were satisfied it was done right.

Q. When a ticket was handed to the inspector he held it between his fingers?—A. I most always took it in my fingers.

Q. And the name was announced and the clerk would take down the name and the ticket would go in the box?—A. And I would always say "voted"; just a regular tally.

Q. During that time all the ticket could be seen by parties?—A. Yes, sir; I held the ticket to show the man that I was not trying to hide his ticket, and I would hold it there.

Q. Between your fingers?—A. Yes, sir; sometimes I would hold it in my hand. I have no particular way of holding it, but just catch it in that way. [Indicating.] I would hold the ticket in the manner in which the man handed it to me.

Q. Usually with the fingers?—A. Yes, sir; so I could just drop it. I suppose they could see it if they wanted to. I wanted the voter to see that I was not concealing his ticket. That was all I cared for.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Ross Clark and Ott Hasselman that day about this Republican ticket?—A. I did not. I heard them talking a good deal; Ross was talking pretty fierce for awhile. He got pretty angry towards the last, but I heard nothing at all as to that

Q. Did you hear Hasselman make any remark about the fact that this Republican ticket was a scheme, a job, or anything of that kind, for the purpose of beating the Democrats?—A. I did not.

Q. State the best you can what took place with reference to this ticket, if you heard anything.—A. I heard nothing.

Q. Would you have been able to hear it if it occurred?—A. It might have occurred outside and I not hear it. It did not occur in my hearing.

Q. How long did Mr. Hasselman stay around there?—A. He was there nearly all day.

Q. How far was he from you?—A. He was not around there all the time. Sometimes he was as far as from here to the fire.

Q. The challenger, as the challenger stood, would be how far from you: three or four feet?—A. Yes, sir; it was perhaps farther than that, and sometimes he would be closer.

Q. Closer than three feet?—A. No, sir; but I do not know whether they staid close together. They did not seem to be challenging much.

Q. Did the Republicans challenge anybody there, and, if so, who?—A. I do not remember.

Q. Do you remember whether the Republicans challenged any votes there that day?—A. I do not recolleet any; they may have done it.

Q. Did the Democrats challenge any votes?—A. Yes, sir; Ross Clark challenged several.

Q. Were they white or colored men?—A. They were mostly colored men. One white man he challenged.

Q. Did he afterwards vote?—A. The colored man did not. Dr. Walker made an affidavit, but he did not live in the precinct, and we could not take his affidavit.

Q. He did not live in the precinct?—A. No, sir; he lived just across the line. He said to us that he was a legal voter and he would make the affidavit, but Ross Clark raised the question that he was not in the precinct, and they wanted to know if that would not do, and I said, "No; what Dr. Walker knows I do not know, and I never did it in my life, and I would not do it now"; and we did not take his vote.

Q Did Dr. Walker swear in any votes that day?—A. No, sir; because he did not live in the precinct. He came in and made out an affidavit in good faith, and Mr. Stout was disposed to take it, but the law was right square on it, and Clark made the point, and we decided not to.

Q. Did Mr. John Spann swear in any votes that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think he did finally. I know he did.

Q. Do you know anybody else that swore in votes?—A. I think John Spann was the only one.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Is it not true that Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark were talking backwards and forwards at each other there all day?—A. They were talking and joking a good deal as they usually do.

Q. Do you recollect what they were talking about?—A. No, I don't.

Q. Could not they have talked and discussed that matter about the ticket out of your presence?—A. They might, certainly. I do not pretend to say, and do not say, that I heard all they said.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What was Ross Clark's manner that day in challenging?—A. It was very obnoxious.

Q. Was there any complaint or objection made to it by the Democratic judge? (Objected to.)

Q. Was there any objection to his course there made by the Democratic judge, Mr. Stout?

A. At that election or the one since?

Q. At that election.—A. At the last election Mr. Stout did not seem to like just the way he was doing, and reprimanded him very severely.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 2 to deposition of James C. Yohn.

AUSTIN B. PRATHER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. Peelle:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Austin B. Prather; 38 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Bookkeeper for W. E. Mick & Co.

Q. What is their business?—A. Real estate.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. I have resided here, I think, twenty years; 19 or 20.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. First precinct and 15th ward.

Q. In what capacity did you act on that day?—A. I was one of the challengers.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. I think the greater portion.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn. I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that election.—A I think it was, sir. It was.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of Mr. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day.—A. I think it is. It was.

Q. I hand you ticket, headed "National ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson, being the State or Greenback ticket, voted in 1882, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted there.—A. I have no positive recollection of this ticket, because I do not think I saw one that day.

Q. Were there any voted at that precinct?—A. I think there was one voted, but I did not see it. I do not think I saw a Greenback ticket that day. There was none that I know of around.

Q. I will ask you to state if, when these Republican and Democratic tickets are folded separately with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded, when voted they could be told or distinguished one from the other?—A. Well, I do not think they could.

Q. What do you say; could you by sight tell or distingnish one ticket from the other that day as they were being voted?—A. I do not think I could tell if a man came up to put in his vote; I do not think I could.

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact or not, tell how a man was voting from the external appearance of his ticket?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Well, I never paid enough attention to it to notice it.

Q. You never paid enough attention to notice?—A. That is, to notice the particular material of it.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Republican, generally.

AUSTIN B. PRATHER.

DERK DE RUITER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Derk De Ruiter; age, 39; 144 California street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. 18 years last month.

Q. Have you ever occupied any official position in this city?—A. No, sir; except member of the board of aldermen.

Q. How long have you been a member of that board?—A. Since two years ago the first of May; and I am still a member.

Q. What ward do you live in?—A. 13th.

Q. Did you live there at the time of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct of the ward?—A. The 2d precinct most of the time; although our voting places are right together, and I was from one to the other; they are just across the street.

Q. Who was the inspector at your particular precinct?—A. James A Isgrigg.

Q. What capacity did you act in that day?—A. Part of the day I was challenging, and sometimes superintending the wagon and sending out for voters, and such general work as is to be done.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used on that occasion by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket; we have a number of them in our house now; I can identify that very readily.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day?—A. That is my impression, that it is the same ticket.

Q. Did you notice these tickets as they were being voted that day folded?—A. I did, very closely.

Q. Could you tell what ticket a man was voting from the external appearance of the ticket when folded in the hands of the voter?—A. No, sir; I could not tell from the fold; I tried to find them out when I was challenger.

Q. Have you been able to do that at elections before?—A. Frequently.

Q. What is the color of those tickets?—A. My impression is they are white, unless I am color-blind.

Q. What is called plain white? –A. Plain white tickets.

Q. Did you make any effort to distinguish those tickets?—A. I did a great deal of challenging, and a challenger watches a ticket very closely.

Q. Did Mr. Isgrigg on that day so hold the tickets or give any nod or wink or other sign to the challenger on the outside, so they might know what kind of tickets had been handed to him?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Did you notice anything of that kind?—A. No, sir.

Q. If anything of that kind occurred there, you know nothing about it?—A. I think I should have known it if it had.

Q. Who is Mr. Isgrigg?—A. He is employed by C. C. Foster & Co., in the lumber yard.

Q. How old is he?—A. The man, I should think, would be about 50 or 55 years of age.

Q. How long has he lived in this city?—A. He lived here long before I came here. I do not know how much longer.

Q. Was there ever an election held at that precinct prior to 1882?—A. No, sir; under the first division we had three precincts; that was the township election.

Q. When was that?—A. That was the spring preceding this election the precincts were redivided.

Q. There were two in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many precincts were there in that ward in 1880?—A. In 1880 there was but one precinct.

Q. Then, you cannot tell how the vote of 1882 compared with the vote at that precinct, because there is no way of arriving at that?—A. No, sir; you could tell by the aggregate of the entire ward.

Q. State how the vote of 1882 compared with the vote in 1880.—A. The vote of 1882 in that ward; you mean aggregating the vote in the ward?

Q. Yes, sir; as you did not have precincts to correspond.—A. The aggregate vote of the ward, I think, was about 30 short of 1880.

Q. Do you remember how the vote stood in that ward in 1882 as compared with 1880 for Mr. Peelle for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; I can arrive at that very closely. I think it was probably a difference in the majority of Mr. Peelle. I think he carried the ward in 1880 by probably 15 to 20 more than in 1882; that is a rough guess. I am figuring somewhat by the head of the ticket.

Q. You cannot get at that in any other way except by the ward?—A. No, sir; we never held an election under that law before the township election, and there was hardly a two-thirds vote polled. It would hardly be a basis to go upon.

Q. What township election was that?—A. The township election preceding the election of 1882; April, 1882. We polled less than 600 votes when we usually poll very nearly a thousand.

Q. How was the vote in the last city election in October in that ward?—A. We had about 700 votes.

Q. How would that compare with the vote of 1882?—A. Well, it was less; we had less votes in the city election than in 1882.

Q. Was there less votes generally in the city here in October than in the election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; if I remember right, the aggregate vote was not as large as that in the fall of 1882.

Q. About how much difference?—A. That is pretty hard to get at. It seems to me we were over one thousand votes short in the city.

Q. Are you not mistaken?—A. I may be.

Q. Is not the difference four or five thousand less in the city election than in 1882?—A. I cannot now get at that from the figures. You mean this last city election; that the vote this time was less than in 1882?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. There was a considerable falling off in the vote, but to what extent I do not recollect.

Q. How was it in the precinct where you were?—A. There was a very decided falling off.

Q. How much falling off?—A. I think we had over 600. I think we had about 650 votes, and then there was a falling off of nearly 100 votes in our precinct.

Q. I will ask you to state if in the second ward, in which Mr. Wilson and myself both voted, there was not a falling off of over 200 votes in the city election of October last?—A. No; I think not quite 200; very nearly that. It was in the neighborhood of 200 votes short.

Q. In the second ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if in most of the wards there was not a heavy falling off.—A. There was a very decided falling off; yes, sir.

Q. Was there any more falling off in the vote in that precinct than in any other precinct in the city?—A. No, sir; I think not. We lost very heavy; we could not get out our vote. I think we polled nearly a full vote; we have only 350 or 400 in that precinct, and it is a compact precinct. The first precinct lies north of Vermont street.

Q. Who was inspector at that first precinct in 1882?—A. Mr. Chandeler.

Q. How did the vote in that precinct in the city election in October compare with the vote in 1882?—A. My impression is it was very close to it. I think in the south precinct you will find we lost more votes than at the north. We had a very large precinct, and it covers a very large territory.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you answered Mr. Peelle's question with reference to his vote in 1882 in that precinct, did you compare it to his vote at previous elections? Your answer was based upon the total vote of the ward?—A. Yes, sir; the total vote of the ward was what we were speaking of.

Q. So you do not know what the vote was in that territory covered by that precinct at his previous election?—A. No, sir; I do not know any way of arriving at it at all.

Q. The first Congressional election that was at that voting precinct and territory, was that in 1882; was the election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; that was the first election. You cannot compare it with any other election.

Q. You say when you were challenging voters you tried to find out what their tickets were?—A. We certainly did.

Q. What difference would that make in challenging a vote?—A. I presume the challenger understands the vote and what the difference is. Men do not particularly care to challenge their own party's vote. We leave the other side to do that.

Q. In other words, if a man came there that you were looking after and he had a Democratic ticket you would challenge him a heap quicker than you would a Republican?—A. I suppose the other side would take care of their own row. They always have taken care of their own row, and we have had a pretty hard time to do that in our ward.

(Question repeated.)

A. We simply suppose that the fellows on the other side would take care of the Republicans.

(Question repeated.)

A. Yes, sir; we would challenge a Democrat quicker than we would a Republican.

Q. If a colored man came in with a Democratic ticket and you saw it you would challenge him quicker than you would if he had a Republican ticket?

(Objected as not cross-examination.)

A. I think there was none in my precinct that voted the Democratic ticket that day.

Q. Why was that, if you know?—A. They probably had their own motives for voting; I could not say why they voted the Republican ticket; they usually do it.

Q. You say at that precinct——? A. (Interrupting.) There was none that I heard of; there was three or four in that North precinct.

Q. Do you not know as a matter of fact that at that very precinct there was a disposition on the part of the colored people, on account of the prohibition question, to vote the Democrat ticket?—A. No, sir; I do not know it.

Q. When you get hold of one of those tickets can you tell the difference between that and a Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; when I take hold of it.

Q. And you could not tell anything about it by sight?—A. There was no way to tell; they were the same size and color.

Q. You have been a pretty active politician?—A. I have, sir; but not so active as some and more than others.

Q. Have you not been as active as any of those gentlemen?—A. I have been on the board occasionally but not always.

Q. Have you not always been at the polls during elections?—A. Usually.

Q. And have always taken a hand?—A. I would not say always; I guess there may have been one or two elections I have missed in my life; but I am usually there.

Q. Could the inspector tell the difference in your opinion by handling these tickets?—A. I think he could when he got hold of the ticket; I could tell the difference by feeling, and that is the only way I could; and any inspector could tell the difference in the tickets by handling them. It does not make any difference how it was done; they never make paper of exactly the same texture, anyway.

Q. You say that was the Democratic ticket voted at that precinct that day that Mr. Peelle showed you?—A. I said that was my impression, so far as my recollection goes.

Q. Was it the only kind of a ticket headed Democratic that was voted there that day?—A. I am not certain that it was. There may have been a difference, but my impression is there was a plain one and a bogus one that had some names mixed with it—an occasional ticket, but I am not certain about it. My impression is there was.

Q. Was there any Republican ticket of that kind?—A. I do not know; it was said there was some names on Mr. Peelle's ticket, but I did not see any or I did not handle any; I heard them spoken of, but I did not see them.

Q. There was quite a falling off in the vote of 1883 from the vote in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; there was a falling off; there always is in the off year.

Q. Was it not greater this time on the Republican side than you have known for some time?—A. I think you will find that the 13th ward came nearer than any ward in the city to her full vote. I am satisfied she did, and nearer her Republican majority. Probably not one ward in the city came near giving her majority in 1880.

Q. Did you not say awhile ago there was a considerable falling off in the ward?—A. No, sir; not in the aggregate vote. I said there was a falling off in regard to the Congressional election and the last election. There may have been a falling off in the full vote, but not very much in the majority.

Q. I will ask you if it was not the fact that the Republican majority at the Congressional election at that precinct, in the second precinct of the thirteenth ward, was 83?—A. My impression it was 87. I have been saying it was 87.

Q. In 1883 was not the majority only 12?—A. We did not hold any election in 1883.

Q. City election?—A. In that precinct we never held a city election before, if I remember right, until this fall.

Q. I mean this fall.—A. Well, in that precinct I think we lost the precinct on most of the ticket. On councilman I know we lost it by 50 and we carried it for mayor by a very small majority.

Q. Then there was some falling off?—A. There was a great falling off between 1882 and this fall election.

Q. On the vote for mayor was there not only a majority of 12?—A. I think so. I think that is about it. If we carried it at all we carried it by a very small majority in that precinct.

Q. Did you have any policemen around this precinct where you were in 1883?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they take part?—A. I did not see any take part—you mean this election of 1883?

Q. No, sir; in 1882.—A. I thought you were speaking of November, 1883. No; I do not think of any that took part.

Q. Are you certain of that?—A. Mr. Thornton may have sworn in some votes, he usually did.

Q. Ben Thornton?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. A colored policeman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I ask you did not Ben Thornton swear in Republican votes there at the November election, 1882?—A. I do not know that he did. My impression is that he did.

Q. They were not swearing in votes there at the October election in 1883 at all—any policemen?—A. I do not remember of any policemen there swearing in votes. Thornton was not there, because he was assigned to duty elsewhere. He was keeping out of there.

Q. Was there any policemen there at all that day doing anything whatever in October, 1883?—A. No, sir; I think there was one or two policemen knocking around the edges a little, but what their politics were I do not know.

Q. They took no part?—A. No; I think not.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did Ben Thornton challenge any votes in 1882?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did any policeman make any challenge in that ward?—A. No, sir; I never saw a policeman challenge a vote in that ward.

Q. Did you ever see a policeman in this city when he was on duty challenging at the polls?—A. No, sir; the most I have seen is an occasion when a man came up, a colored man that was well known, and challenged—they frequently challenge the colored men—Mr. Thornton would swear them in, being the only property-owner qualified to swear in.

Q. Being the only colored man that owns property in that precinct?—A. I think so. Mr. Hill is another colored man that owns property; he use to swear in votes.

Q. In November, 1882, was there any other colored man there owning property but Ben Thornton?—A. No, sir; I think not. Mr. Hill owned property, but he was employed by the Democracy to swear in votes.

Q. Was Mr. Hill a Republican or Democrat in 1882?—A. Mr. Hill was a Democrat.

Q. Mr. Thornton is the only Republican colored man in that precinct that owns property?—A. He is the only one to my knowledge. I know of no other—you were speaking of my precinct. Mr. Thornton is not in my precinct; he is in the north precinct, but the voting places are so near together I was at both a part of the day. Mr. Thornton is not in my precinct at all, and did not swear any votes in that came there.

Q. Do you know of another colored man that owns property in the north precinct?—A. Outside of Mr. Thornton and Mr. Hill I do not know of any others. Oh, yes, I think two; there was one man named Simmons, an old preacher, but he never takes any part in politics, and he owns a house and lot. I never saw him take any part in politics or swear in any votes.

Q. Is Ben Thornton a policeman now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Metropolitan policeman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business are you in?—A. Grocery business.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. 191 Indiana avenue.

DERK DE RUITER.

THOMAS E. CHANDLER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Thomas E. Chandler, age 51; residence 284 West Vermont street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. About twenty-five years; since 1858.

Q. What is your business?—A. Machinist—manufacturer.

Q. Have you any partner?—A. Chandler & Taylor is our firm.

Q. Have you been in the manufacturing business, since you have been here, constantly?—A. We commenced in 1859.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. I was a member of the board of aldermen for three years.

Q. Is that all?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The first precinct of the thirteenth ward.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. I was inspector.

Q. Did you receive the votes as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," marked as Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Republicans at that election?—A. Well, sir, I think it is; I do not think I can remember all the names, but that is the appearance of the ticket voted in 1882.

Q. Would you say that is the ticket, or a similar ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket" and marked as Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of Mr. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket that the Democrats voted at that election?—A. I think it is, sir.

Q. When these tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, could you tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. Not unless they were held between me and the light; I could then, not otherwise. Now some men are careless in folding their tickets, and if they would fold their ticket and hold it between me and where I could see that the ticket is more transparant than the other then I might tell; if they were folded so that one thickness would project.

Q. Do you think you could do it with those two tickets?—A. I did not notice at this election, but I did at this last election; I could tell the tickets in that way; I do not know that my attention was called to it then. There was a difference when you look through them that way [witness held tickets between himself and the light] in that light; I do not know that I ever thought of this until this last election; I acted as inspector at the last election, and the difference in the tickets was talked of by the board, and we compared them at the light and we saw that we could tell the difference although they were alike when folded up.

Q. Take this Democratic ticket voted in 1882 and see if you could tell the difference.—A. I do not think I could tell the difference holding it away from the light.

Q. Could you tell them holding them between you and the light?—A. Yes, sir; one is more transparent. I think I could tell them in that way.

Q. When the tickets were folded as tickets are ordinarily folded, could you tell one ticket from the other by sight?—A. No, sir; not without feeling them.

Q. State if at that election you gave any sign, wink, or nod or held the ticket in any way so that the challenger would know what kind of ticket it was that you were handling.—A. I held no ticket unless it was challenged, and then I held it until the matter was settled.

Q. Did you have any arrangement or understanding by which you were to hold a ticket in such a way that they could tell which ticket it was by your holding it?—A. No, sir; none whatever.

Q. I will ask you how the tickets were counted that day?—A. They were counted by fives. We would take out the tickets and count and tally the straight tickets by fives, read off at first the whole Republican ticket, and then tally by fives, and then read off the whole Democratic ticket and tally by fives until we had all the straight tickets counted, and we would lay all the scratched tickets at one end until we got through with the straight tickets first.

Q. Was that different from the way they had been previously counted?—A. I do not know that. I never acted as inspector before, but I have been on boards once or twice before, and that is the way it was. We would count awhile on the straight Republican tickets, and then count on the straight Democratic tickets awhile, when the Republican tickets would become scarce on top, and then I would take the straight Democratic tickets and may be push the straight Democratic tickets out awhile, and when we got to the bottom of the box we would clear the box and take the scratched tickets.

Q. Then that is the usual way it has been?—A. I never knew of it being done in any other way except once, and then I was not on the board. I was acting as committeeman of the ward, and Jim Ryan was on the board and he insisted on them being counted and read out singly, every ticket, and the result of it was that the board gave out and had to get new clerks, and before they got through counting they were all so overcome for the want of sleep that they decided to stop counting that way, and counted by fives. That is as I understood. I was present part of the time.

Q. How was your ward redistricted at the time of the election in 1880? How many precincts were there in your ward in 1880?—A. We all voted at the same place in 1880.

Q. How did you vote at the April election, 1882?—A. In 1882 we voted at two precincts.

Q. Three or two?—A. Two.

Q. Was there not three there?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. How many precincts were there at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. I think there were two precincts at that time. We had a township election in 1881 or 1882, at the time Mr. Kitz was elected. I think we had three at that time.

Q. And then at the Congressional election in 1882 you had two precincts?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you never held any election in that ward with two precincts prior to the Congressional election of 1882?—A. No, sir; 1882 and 1883 were the only ones.

Q. How did the vote of the thirteenth ward in 1882 correspond with the total vote in 1880?—A. It was rather larger.

Q. Larger when?—A. In 1882 than it was in 1880.

Q. You mean the total vote, or simply the majority?—A. The total vote.

Q. How was the Democratic vote in that ward in 1882, as compared with 1880?—A. Larger.

Q. How much larger was the Democratic vote in that precinct in 1882 than it was in 1880?—A. Well, 30 to 40.

Q. Have you the exact figures?—A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Have you examined any figures before you came here to see?—A. Yes, sir; if they are reliable figures.

Q. Are they figures you made yourself?—A. Yes, sir; if the reports at that time were complete.

Q. Independent of any figures, state what is your recollection as to the vote of 1882 compared with the vote of 1880?—A. The vote of 1880 was the largest that had ever been cast up to that time, and the vote of 1882 exceeded it somewhat; 25 or 30 votes, probably; and the Democratic vote was increased in 1882 over the one of 1880, and the Republican just about the same as that of 1880.

Q. The Republican vote of 1882 was about the same as that of 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember how it stood on the candidates for Congress at that time?—A. I do not.

Q. State where you got the report of the vote of 1882 in that ward.—A. I saw it in the Sentinel.

Q. Did you compare it with the vote in the Journal?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you take the vote of 1880 and 1882 from the Sentinel?—A. No, sir; the other was from the Journal.

Q. The vote of 1880 was taken from the Journal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And 1882 from the Sentinel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Sentinel report purport to be the official vote?—A. Yes, sir; there was some 40 or 42 more Democratic votes than there had been in 1880, and the Republican vote was just the same as in 1880.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. In what you state about the vote in 1880 and 1882 you refer to the vote of the entire ward, or the vote of the precinct where you were inspector?—A. I speak only of the ward, not the precincts.

Q. And in 1880 there were three precincts?—A. No, sir; in 1880 there was one precinct.

Q. When was it there was three?—A. There was three at the township election. That was changed in the spring of 1882, in April, I think.

Q. How many precincts at the election for Congress in 1882?—A. Two precincts.

Q. Do you know what the Republican majority was at the precinct where you were inspector at the Congressional election in 1882—what the Republican majority was?—A. [Referring to book.] In 1882?

Q. At the Congressional election in 1882; yes, sir.—A. There was 234 Republican and 98 Democratic.

Q. What majority would that make?

Mr. PEELLE. On what candidate?

Q. I am speaking about the Congressional election of 1882.—A. I believe this was on Peelle and English.

Q. Tell us what the Republican majority was at your precinct at that election.—A. [Figuring.] 234. I do not know whether I understand my own figures or not. I did not tell you right there. The first precinct was 234 Democratic and 249 Republican. I think that is the right way.

Q. What was Mr. Peelle's majority? What was the Republican majority at your precinct at that election?—A. I would not attempt to testify on that, because I do not understand my own figures as I put them in here. I do not know which was which. I have 249 and 317 as the vote in the first precinct, making 566, which was just the same as the vote in 1880 in the two precincts. In 1882 the first gave 234 Democratic and the other gave 98 Democratic, making 332.

Q. I want to get at the Republican majority in the precinct of the thirteenth ward, where you were inspector.—A. I do not think I can tell you until I look up the paper. I think it was 249 in the first precinct, because it was a smaller precinct than the second, and for that reason I would think that was it.

Q. You think that was the vote of the precinct?—A. Oh, I am not sure about that. It may have been just the reverse. It may have been that 317 was the vote at that precinct; as I have it put down here it would be just the reverse from what I think it is.

Q. Were you the inspector of the election at the same precinct at the election held for mayor in the last month?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many precincts in the thirteenth ward at that election?—A. Two. There have only been two elections in which that ward has been divided into two precincts.

Q. Do you remember what the Republican majority was at that precinct at the last election?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know whether the Republican majority was more or less at the last election than it was at the preceding?—A. I know it was less. I think that the Republican majority for councilman was in the neighborhood of 150 in my precinct and the general ticket was 25 or 30 less at the last election held this year. There was a large majority in the ward, but in the other precincts it was just the reverse.

Q. Do you not know that the Republican majority at the election for mayor early in October, 1883, in the first precinct of the thirteenth ward, where you were the inspector, was only 196?—A. Perhaps that is correct. I am not sure about that.

Q. Do you not know that the Republican majority at the election in the same precinct of the same ward in 1882 was 151 for Mr. Peelle?—A. Well, I do not recollect about that, I am sure. I know it was a great deal larger vote in 1883 than it was in 1882.

Q. But you do know that the Republican majority was less at the election in October, 1883, than it was for Mr. Peelle in 1882?—A. I think it was, sir.

Q. You spoke about being able to distinguish the Republican ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 by sight when it was in a certain position.—A. Yes, sir; also the vote of 1883, the city election in the spring.

Q. I am asking you about the election in 1882.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you whether, in receiving these Republican tickets voted at that election, you did not hold them up between your thumb and finger when they were placed in your hands by the voter, and hold them in that position until the clerk recorded the name and then drop them in the ballot-box; hold them in such a position that they could be seen by bystanders and all persons that chose to look at them at the polls—bystanders and challengers?—A. I might have held some tickets that way. I have no recollection of it.

Q. You do not say you did not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is not that generally done by inspectors?—A. I think not, sir.

Q. How did you hold them?—A. I have frequently held a ticket in the mouth of the ballot-box when it was challenged, and I would hold it there and drop it if the challenge was withdrawn, and if it was decided to be all right. I invariably held my wrist on the box when I received a ticket and would hold it over the hole.

Q. Is that the way you did at that election?—A. I can not testify as to the way I held every ticket. I had no uniform way of holding tickets.

Q. Is it not true, in point of fact, in the early part of the day, when those Republican tickets were voted, you held them between your thumb and fingers in such a way that the bystanders could see the ticket—I do not mean the inside of the ticket, but see the ticket that you held between your thumb and fingers before it went into the box?—A. If you mean that I held the ticket in such a way that the bystanders could know what the ticket was, I say no.

Q. I have not asked you if you held it with a view of it being distinguished; I ask you as to the fact?—A. I do not know that I had any general rule about it. I might have held the ticket that way at times, and other ways at other times. I have no uniform way.

Q. I will ask you this question: Whether you could not by the feel of the Republican ticket tell what it was without it being opened?—A. I think I could.

Q. I ask you further: Whether in the count you say you took the tickets out five at a time out of the box each kind?—A. We counted them by fives.

Q. You say you counted them in bunches of fives; I will ask you whether you did not by feeling take out the Republican tickets in that way without opening them to see whether they were Republican tickets. In other words, did not you put your hands in the box and take out these tickets by feeling them—five at a time?—A. These tickets being folded, I can tell you what my practice was. The tickets being folded in the box, I would take a ticket that way [indicating] and unfold it, and look at the head of the ticket, and run it down to see if there was any paster on it or none of it scratched, and then I would see what the heading would be and if it was a straight ticket, and no scratches on it. I would take it between my fingers in this way [illustrating] and hold it open, and I would take up another ticket headed "Republican Ticket" and run over it the same way, and I would keep it the same way between my fingers.

Q. And in taking them out of the box did you go by your knowledge of the Republican ticket and take them out by feeling them and take the Republican tickets out, bunches at a time?—A. No, sir; I did not take out any bunches at a time. I only took them out of the box one at a time.

Q. But you could tell, as I understand you, when you came to a Republican ticket, that, by the feel of it, it was a Republican ticket?—A. I could tell it was a Republican ticket because of the difference in the paper.

Q. And that was before it was opened?—A. Yes, sir; I could tell before it was opened. I could at the last election, in the same way. If I recollect right, the Democratic ticket was a little heavier at the last election.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Is it not true that at all elections you have been able to do the same thing, and distinguish them?—A. Yes, sir; I have never acted as inspector except at two elections, I believe.

Q. You mean by feeling the ticket you could tell, where you had attended elections?—A. I have always been able to give my judgment upon it. I do not know that I have always been able to tell absolutely. I always thought I could see some difference in the tickets. There is a difference in the width of the tickets sometimes, and sometimes the paper. Where they are the same thickness, one has a little gloss upon it and the other has not, as one of those tickets [indicating] has a little gloss upon it and the other has not.

Q. The Republican ticket of 1880 has a little gloss upon it, the State ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. Is not this Republican ticket voted at the Congressional election of 1882 a much thicker and heavier ticket than any ticket voted at any election where you have been inspector?

The WITNESS. I never was inspector at any other election except in 1882. As compared with 1883 it is a heavier paper than in 1882. I do not recollect of my attention being called to the fact that they were more transparent than the others until the election of 1883, when I was on the board, and we talked about that at the time, I recollect.

T. E. CHANDLER.

SILAS L. HARVEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Silas L. Harvey; age, 39; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a deputy county clerk.

Q. How long have you been deputy county clerk?—A. Between fifteen and sixteen years, I think.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I was in the second precinct, ninth ward.

Q. In what capacity did you act that day?—A. I was assisting the challengers that day.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state whether that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when those tickets were folded in the hands of the voters, with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded, whether you could, or not, tell the difference one from the other by sight.—A. I never took any notice of that. I was not right at the window. I never noticed that. I do not know whether I could testify about that. I was off to one side with the poll-book.

Q. You were seeing them voting there, were you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As they were folded as men came up with the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether you were, as a matter of fact, at any time able to tell one ticket from the other by sight?—A. No, sir; not at a glance.

Q. You could tell by feeling?—A. Yes, sir; I could.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

SILAS L. HARVEY.

W. F. BROWDER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. W. F. Browder; 33 years old; residence, 94 Hoyt avenue.

Q. What is your profession?—A. I am a lawyer by profession, but at present I am assistant reporter in the supreme court.

Q. How long have you been assistant reporter?—A. This is the eleventh year.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. First precinct, and twenty-first ward.

Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. I was on the outside; I was not inside. I was watcher at the count, but not inside during the election.

Q. Did you challenge any that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted there that day.—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket voted there that day.—A. Yes, sir; that is the Democratic ticket used that day.

Q. I will ask you if when those tickets are folded separately with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded when they are being voted, could you tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. Sometimes we thought we could, but my judgment is we could not. We might pass judgment, but on investigation I found out several times when we thought men voted the Republican ticket that they did not. That was after investigation at the time.

Q. Did you or not as a matter of fact tell or distinguish one of those tickets from the other by sight, as they were folded with the names on the inside?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any effort to do it?—A. The only effort I remember of making to do it—of course we looked closely at the tickets when they were voted, to see if we could discover what tickets they were voting, but in the count that evening, I was one of the watchers, and in taking out the ballots, several times we guessed out loud what the character of the ticket was. I remember of guessing three times at it, saying "Here comes a good Republican ticket" or "Here comes a good Democratic ticket." Mr. Carlton was next to me, and he was guessing at the Democratic ticket and I was guessing at the Republican, but I missed it two out of three times, and Mr. Carlton missed it once or twice.

Q. That was as they were coming out of the ballot-box, being counted that night?—A. Yes, sir; when they were in Mr. Brundager's hands when he was taking them out of the box.

Q. How did the count correspond with the poll-book or register of names?—A. In our precinct?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. It was exact.

Q. Was there any complaint of any kind, and if so, state what, about the character of that Republican ticket that day?—A. I do not recollect of any complaint being made at all.

Q. Was there any objection made to the counting of that ticket to the board by anybody, and if so, by whom?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets by feeling them?—A. I can.

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets after knowing the difference, watching them by sight if you got a chance to see them?—A. Well, I do not know whether I could or not, but my subsequent experience as inspector down there has made me believe that it was an impossibility to tell the tickets as they were coming in. So many of them are discolored even where they are white and folded up closely you cannot tell even by holding them in your hand for a minute.

Q. By sight when you got a chance to look at the ticket carefully and to see plainly after knowing the difference, could you tell the difference by sight?—A. If I could hold the ticket up so that the light could shine through it I think I could tell any ticket.

Q. Could you tell this ticket by sight when it was folded up when you got a chance to look at it?—A. No, sir; I do not believe I could.

Q. You say you thought that day that you had but you found subsequently that you were mistaken. How did you subsequently find out that you made a mistake?—A. By asking the parties.

Q. And they said they had voted a different way?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took their statement as the basis of the statement that you made a mistake?—A. Yes, sir. I will explain how that happened. There would be a man peddling the Democratic tickets and he would hand him a Democratic ticket and there would be a man peddling the Republican ticket and he would hand him his ticket and the man would fold them both and frequently you could not tell which ticket he voted in passing up the chute and in that way we would think differently as to which it was and after it was all over we would endeavor to find out some one among us how the man voted.

Q. You made your guess as to the difference in the character of the tickets that night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you—in what sort of a room?—A. Right behind the inspector.

Q. In what sort of a room?—A. In a room about 12 by 13 or 14.

Q. What was the room used for before that?—A. The room is a front room of a dwelling-house.

Q. Did you use gas?—A. No, sir; we had three lamps.

Q. How often did you make guesses?—A. Well, only three times, I believe. There was a good deal of fun passing between Carlton and myself.

Q. What Carlton is that?—A. The bailiff in the court, John Carlton; just in mischief he would say, "Here goes a Democratic ticket; I know by the looks of it," and I guessed once or twice just for fun—three times I believe altogether, and missed it twice and was right once.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican, but sometimes I scratch—not often, though.

W. F. BROWDER.

By agreement of all parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Wednesday, November 14, 1883.

WEDNESDAY, November 14, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

CHRISTIAN E. ZIMMERMAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Christian E. Zimmerman; 53 years old; residence, 309 East Merrill street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Cabinet-maker by trade.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. I did part of the day.

Q. What portion of the time were you there?—A. I was there in the after part of the day.

Q. Were you a looker-on at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there as worker in any way?—A. Not particularly; not specially.

Q. Did you notice the tickets as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir; I saw the ticket.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Republican Ticket" and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that day.—A. To the best of my recollection that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that day, or a similar ticket.—A. I think it is. I think I have the tickets filed away at home of both political parties. I usually do that.

Q. What precinct and ward did you attend?—A. Twenty-second ward, north precinct. I do not know whether it was the first or second.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded such as I have shown you, voted in November, 1882, at the Congressional election, as tickets are usually folded by voters, if you could distinguish one from the other.—A. I could not at the time.

Q. Could you when they were voted tell one from the other by the appearance of the ticket without any previous knowledge of the way men voted or who gave them the tickets?—A. I do not know as I could without studying the matter. Simply as a by-stander, I do not think I could.

Q. You say you made no special effort that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was your attention called to the ticket in any way that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any complaint made at the poll, to your knowledge, of the character of that ticket?—A. Not that I heard of. I did not hear of any complaint at all until some time after this contest was commenced.

Q. State if your attention was called to the ticket on the day of the election; that the Republican ticket was on heavier paper than the Democratic ticket.—A. No, sir; I did not hear anything of that.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that that is the ticket that was used by the Republicans on that day?—A. I think so; I am not positive.

Q. Was there any other tickets used by the Republicans there?—A. I could not say whether there was or not. I do not remember. To the best of my recollection that is the only ticket I saw.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets by feeling them?—A. I do not know; I suppose I might.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. I am a Liberal; I am not a high Republican.

Q. What do you mean by being Liberal?—A. I vote as I please.

Q. How were you voting in November, 1882?—A. If it is a pertinent question I will answer it.

M. PEELLE. Just as you choose.

Mr. WILSON. You can do as you please about answering the question. I do not mean what men you voted for; I mean what party you voted with.—A. I generally voted the Republican ticket so far as the ticket is concerned.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. But you have voted for Democrats frequently?—A. Yes, sir; I have sometimes.

Q. In other words, you vote for the men?—A. If I think it is policy to do it.

Q. Did you ever hold any office?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you ever a candidate for any office?—A. No, sir; I never held any office—no civil office.

CHRISTIAN E. ZIMMERMAN.

HENRY C. BUDDENBAUM, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Henry C. Buddenbaum; age, 49; and residence, 396 East Ohio street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am now following street sprinkling.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I came to this city in 1850.

Q. You are a German, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I acted as inspector of the first precinct of the eighth ward that day.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted there that day?—A. I handled most of them that were voted there.

Q. I hand you ticket marked Exhibit A, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that day, or a similar ticket?—A. Yes, sir; a similar ticket.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that precinct that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded as tickets are ordinarily folded and handed in, if you can tell by sight one from the other?—A. No, sir; not until I get my hands on them.

Q. Could you tell the difference by feeling?—A. One was heavier than the other.

Q. Have you ever been inspector before?—A. I think I have acted as inspector or judge for at least five or six years at every election.

Q. Have you been able at elections prior to 1882 to tell the difference in the feeling of the tickets?—A. Sometimes I have paid attention and sometimes I have not.

Q. I will ask you to state while you were acting as inspector there if you gave any sign, nod, or wink, or in any way held the tickets by which the bystanders, and challengers especially, could tell what kind of a ticket had been handed to you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any such arrangement by which you were to hold the tickets so as to let the challenger know what kind of a ticket was being voted?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. I mean when you were there was there any such arrangement?—A. No, sir.

Q. State if you did or did not give any sign, nods, or winks by which the people could tell what kind of a ticket it was that was being voted.—A. I did not.

Q. Was there any complaint made there that day about the character of the Republican ticket to the board in any way?—A. None about the tickets.

Q. Were they counted without objection, or not?—A. They were counted without objection.

Q. What was the difference between the count, if any, and the number of names reported on the poll-list?—A. As near as I can remember, we came out even.

Q. There was not two tickets folded together by either party?—A. I would not swear to that, for I do not know but on one or two occasions there would be one or more tickets, but I do not think there was on that.

Q. Your best recollection is they came out even?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my recollection, although that could be found if it was necessary.

Q. Was Mr. Payne one of the clerks there?—A. At that time?

Q. Yes, sir; Democratic clerk I think?—A. I thought it was Mr. Hugo, if I remember right.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How old are you?—A. I am 49 now.

Q. Do you always wear glasses?—A. Yes, sir; except when I sleep.

Q. You cannot tell those tickets by sight you say, unless you get hold of them, and then you said you could tell the difference?—A. We thought we could. This is the way I want that understood: we think we are getting hold of it at nearly every election—you get hold of the ticket you can have an idea, but whether you are sure of it you do not know.

Q. When a voter would hand you a ticket to put in the box how would you usually hold it—hold it between your forefinger and thumb over the hole to drop it in?—A. Most generally. If there was any challenge I would wait for the challenge to be settled, and I would hold it right over the hole.

Q. Could they whilst they were recording the name of the voter and whilst thus held—could not the challengers see the tickets from where they were standing very plainly?—A. Generally both of them.

Mr. PEELLE. You could tell the Democratic ticket from the Republican ticket as well as you could the Republican ticket from the Democratic ticket by feeling, could you not?

The WITNESS. Just about; yes, sir; I think I could.

Q. Did you say there was no Democratic ticket voted there pasted over the Republican ticket?—A. I did not say on this occasion.

Q. Have you ever seen any such a thing?—A. I have either one way or the other; I do not recollect which it was now; I do not think it was on this election; I do not think that that had anything to do with this case.

Q. You do not recollect whether it was a Republican ticket pasted over a Democratic ticket or whether it was a Democratic ticket pasted over a Republican ticket?—A. I do not recollect that distinctly; I remember we had a good laugh over it.

HENRY C. BUDDENBAUM.

C. B. WING, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. C. B. Wing; my age is 30 my residence is Cincinnati, Ohio.

Q. You are the same C. B. Wing who has testified in this case in behalf of the contestant some weeks since, are you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. The paper business.

Q. As a manufacturer or dealer?—A. Myself do you mean?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not manufacture anything; I am just a salesman with Chatfield & Woods. That is all.

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe, in politics.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State the kind of paper you sell for Chatfield & Woods.—A. Well, I would have to take a catalogue and go over them.

Q. Just generally.—A. I sell news paper, I sell book paper, plate paper, writing paper, Bristol board, cover paper, and I could name a hundred if you wanted me to.

Q. I hand you a book marked "Price-list of Chatfield & Woods," purporting to be a catalogue which has been marked Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson. Take that and examine it and see if it is the catalogue published by Chatfield & Woods.—A. Yes, sir, it is.

Q. In your testimony on behalf of the contestant some weeks since, I believe you stated that it was your impression that Western plate papers were shown in the catalogue as being "Woodsdale plate."—A. I believe that is what I said; I did not say that exactly. I said to the best of my recollection that we catalogued it as "Woodsdale plate." You asked me if we do not say Woodsale plate paper, and I said I did not think we did, and I thought we said Woodward plate in the catalogue.

Q. I will ask you to examine the catalogue and see how it is catalogued.—A. It is Woodsdale plate papers.

Q. It is catalogued as Woodsdale plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you the ticket marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to take that and examine the paper and see if it is the paper that you said upon your former examination was what was known and handled in your business as Western plate paper?—A. You mean to say that is the same ticket you handed me before?

Q. The same kind of a ticket, of course.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of paper is that?—A. It is what I would call Western plate paper.

Q. Are there any book papers manufactured similar to that plate paper you spoke of?—A. In my testimony the other day I gave that.

Q. [Question repeated.] Whether or not there are any book papers made that are similar to that Western plate paper?—A. My testimony was the other day that we made this paper, if I can recollect right, out of the same stock that we made plate paper of.

Q. Book paper, you mean?—A. Yes, sir, book paper; but we take more pains in making a Western plate sheet than book. It is all made out of the same class of goods, and with the printer it would not make so much difference if the sheet was thin. It don't vary very much; but where it was used by lithographers it would, and for that reason we took the pains with it that we did. That was my testimony the other day.

Q. State if there are book papers made by Chatfield & Woods as heavy as that, or heavier?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If book papers are made as heavy as that, I will ask you to state what difference there would be, then, between that paper and the book paper?—A. Only just a difference of quality; there would be no difference in the weight or make, only that we should take more pains in making the plate.

Q. In what way would you take more pains?—A. As I said in my other testimony, we would beat the stock up more, and take more time for preparing the stock.

Q. Do you manufacture, in your mills, a heavier paper than that paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much heavier?—A. 40 or 50 pounds to the ream.

Q. Book paper?—A. No, sir; not book paper.

Q. I mean, do you manufacture a quality of book paper that is heavier than that paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. Well, no; do you mean as a regular thing?

Q. No; I mean do you manufacture any book paper heavier than that paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. We have made 22 by 28, 80 and 90 pound book per ream.

Q. How much would that be 25 by 38?—A. I would have to figure that up.

Q. About how much?—A. About 120 pounds.

Q. Would not it be more than that, too?—A. Not if it was 80-pound paper; if it was 90-pound paper it would be more. We seldom make any of that kind. We do not make anything of that kind regularly, but once a year or once in two years a man may want that kind of paper, but he generally buys plate paper.

Q. What would be the weight of that paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, sized 22 by 28?—A. I said in my other testimony it was about 70 pounds.

Q. What would be the weight of it 19 by 24?—A. About 50.

Q. What would be the weight of it 25 by 38?—A. I think I said 108 pounds or 109 pounds. I figured it out for you in my last testimony.

Q. Will you modify that now?—A. No, sir.

Q. State if there is any indigo in that paper, or bluing.—A. There is not any indigo in it.

Q. What do you call it?—A. Ultra-marine blue.

Q. Is there not some of that in it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it put in there for?—A. If we did not put some bluing in we could not get any color. If it was not for that it would be a regular yellow paper.

Q. What do you put that in for—to make it white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell from looking at that paper whether there has been bluing put in or not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You can tell it?—A. It would not get that color if we did not put some coloring in.

Q. What do you mean by saying it would not be that color?—A. It would be a regular buff tint. It is just like you have a shirt washed. If you do not have some bluing in it it will become yellow in time, and that is the reason they put bluing in paper; because it becomes yellow if you do not do that; in time it will turn perfectly yellow like a man's shirt.

Q. State if paper whitened by the use of bluing has a tendency to become yellow by the lapse of time and contact with the air?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that ticket the appearance of turning color some?—A. I could not notice it on this ticket. I saw a ticket that I noticed it on.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that is?—A. That is what I would call a Western plate paper.

Q. I will ask you to examine that paper and compare it with the ticket in your hands and see if there is any difference in the stock?—A. I would call this the best paper; that is the one here. [Indicating.]

Q. That is the one I last handed you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which is the heavier, if any?—A. This ticket. [Indicating.]

Q. What do you mean? What ticket do you mean? The last one I handed you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if there is any discoloration on that ticket.—A. That has changed color. You can see by the edges. [Holding it to the light.] This one. [Indicating]. I could not say that it is.

Q. I will ask you to state if that discoloration is or is not in consequence of the use of bluing?—A. I would not say that it was just the use of ultra-marine blue; that is the use of different chemicals in the processes which we put our paper through.

Q. Is there such a thing as toned paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is toned paper?—A. Extra coloring.

Q. Is that toned paper [indicating]?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why?—A. Because it is what we call white plate paper.

Q. Made white by what means?—A. By using different chemicals into that lot bring it that color.

Q. And by the use of ultra-marine blue?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State, if I should go to you for paper for fine book work, what paper would you exhibit or advise me now as a manufacturer or seller—what kind of paper would you advise me to use in doing a fine job of book work?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. That would be altogether owing to what kind of a job you were going to print on the paper.

Q. A fine job of bookwork.—A. Would it have lithographic cuts in it, or would it be print cuts?

Q. A printed job; a fine job of printed bookwork.—A. I would tell you to buy No. 1 supercalendered book.

Q. State whether or not Western plate paper, such as that Republican ticket is printed on, is not frequently used for fine bookwork?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a piece of white paper marked Exhibit No. 7 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson, and I will ask you to take that and state what it is.—A. It is a piece of plate paper.

Q. What kind of plate paper?—A. A piece of Western plate.

Q. How much would that paper weigh sized 25 by 38?—A. In the neighborhood of 110 pounds, I should say. It might be 100; I could not tell you exactly.

Q. State if that is medium light or heavy grade of Eastern plate.—A. It is a medium grade.

Q. What is heaviest of Eastern plate paper?—A. [Referring to book.] What sized?

Q. 25 by 38.—A. About 120 pounds.

Q. Did you get that from the same catalogue that I handed you a while ago?—A. Did I get what I answered?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir.

Q. What was the catalogue that you took that from? State if the catalogue of Chatfield and Woods, which I hand you, shows that Eastern plate paper made sized 25 by 38—120 pounds.—A. No, sir; it don't show that, because we do not keep that size in stock. A catalogue is just for sizes that we keep regularly in stock.

Q. What are the sizes you keep regularly in stock—26 by 34?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Here in this catalogue I hand you it shows sizes 26 by 34, 100 pounds?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That paper, 25 by 38, would weigh about what?—A. It would be a little less than 100 pounds. There is more given 25 by 38 than in 26 by 34.

Q. For that reason it would weigh more?—A. Yes, sir; you are right.

Q. How much would it weigh?—A. I could not tell unless I figured it.

Q. You said 120 pounds a while ago.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think that would be about right?—A. No, sir; if 26 by 34 weighs 100, 25 by 38 would not weigh 120; I do not think I should say 110 pounds.

Q. I hand you a piece of paper upon which is printed "C. H. Wittig," being a business card. I will ask you to take that and examine and state what kind of material that card is printed on?—A. It is bristol-board.

Q. State what that bristol-board, size 25 by 38, would weigh.—A. I could not give you the weight of this, but I could give you what is called the regular size. The regular size is 22 by 28.

Q. What would it weigh then?—A. It would weigh 140 pounds.

Q. I will ask you to state if that card, size 25 by 38, would not run about 200 to the ream—480 sheets to the ream?—A. That is the ratio of 500 sheets to 140 pounds cardboard. I can tell you soon by figuring that.

Q. You gave the size 22 by 28, 140 pounds?—A. Yes, sir; 500 sheets to the ream.

Q. I now hand you another piece of paper, purporting to be the business card of McKee & Branham, business men in this city. Take that and examine it and state the kind of paper that business card is printed on.—A. It is bristol-card.

Q. What would be the weight of that bristol, size 22 by 28?—A. One hundred and twenty pounds.

Q. You think it is about 20 pounds lighter to the ream than the other?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that statement do you mean 500 sheets to the ream?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you now a piece of plain white paper, marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you to take that and examine it and tell what it is, if I have not stated it in my question.—A. It is a piece of cheap loft-dried writing paper.

Q. What will that weigh per ream, size 25 by 38? Is that the correct size?—A. I could not give you that at all. Writing paper runs in cap, folio, and double cap. I can give you what I am familiar with. I can tell you what the weight of cap is.

Q. Can you tell me 22 by 28?—A. No, sir; I can give you 17 by 28.

Q. Is that the regular size?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would it weigh 17 by 28?—A. It would weigh 40 pounds to the ream.

Q. I now hand you a piece of white paper marked Exhibit Nov. 5 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you to take that and examine it and state what it is.—A. It is a piece of No. 2 sized and supercalendered book.

Q. What would that weigh per ream, size 25 by 38?—A. 75 or 80 pounds I should think.

Q. I will ask you to take the whole sheet from which it came?—A. I cannot tell much by a small piece of paper like that.

Q. Take the whole sheet from which that came, being size 25 by 38, and you may examine that and answer what that would weigh; 480 sheets, size 25 by 38.—A. 480 sheets would weigh in the neighborhood of 95 pounds, I should say.

Q. What would 500 sheets of that weigh, 25 by 38?—A. I should think about 85.

Q. You get it wrong exactly.—A. What sized sheet is this?

Q. 25 by 38.—A. I should think this would weigh 95 pounds, 25 by 38, 480 sheets to the ream, and it would weigh about 5 pounds more 500 sheets to the ream.

Q. Are you familiar with the writing of Mr. Chatfield?—A. Yes, sir; I used to know it.

Q. State if this is his writing [showing witness paper].—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does he say it weighs?—A. 100 pounds.

Q. What size?—A. 25 by 38.

Q. State if that is correct.—A. If the weight of the paper is correct?

Q. Yes, sir; if he stated the weight of the paper correctly there in his own handwriting as you understand it.—A. I would not say that, because a sheet of paper—you take that sheet of paper, like any other sheet, out of a book, and the house weight is about 100 pounds where the mill weight would only be about 97 pounds.

Q. I am asking you about house weight.—A. That is what I would bill it out for house weight, unless it was weighed up against us.

Q. What would you bill that for sized 25 by 38 per ream?—A. 100 pounds.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer now in evidence these two cards, which the witness has testified to, one with the words C. H. Wittig on it, and the other with the words McKee and Branham. I will ask that they be marked by the stenographer as exhibits to the deposition of this witness. The cards were marked as exhibits 1 and 2, and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof.

Q. I now hand you a sheet of paper 22 by 28, a white sheet of paper, and I will ask you to state what that is.—A. That is what I would call a very poor plate paper.

Q. What kind of plate paper?—A. Western plate, and a very poor piece.

Q. What will that weigh per ream, sized 25 by 38?—A. I should say, about 22 by 28, 70.

Q. What would it weigh 25 by 38?—A. I believe I told you that once before.

Q. No, sir; not of that paper.—A. Well, it would weigh the same proportion as the other.

Q. Take this Republican ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and examine it, and compare it with that paper and see which is the heaviest paper.—A. There is not much difference there between these two——

Q. Which is the heaviest and thickest?—A. I would rather have a ticket that has not been handled so much. [Witness took ticket marked Exhibit Q to the deposition of William Wallace.] There is very little difference. I would not want to say which was the heaviest.

Q. What is your judgment now?—A. My judgment is that this sheet is a little heavier than this. [Indicating.]

Q. You mean that piece of cheap Western plate you spoke of is heavier than the Republican ticket?—A. I should think it was. I would not want to say so. There is very little difference.

Q. I hand you Exhibit 5 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, which you said was book paper, and I will ask you to compare that with the paper you have there that you have said was Western plate paper and say which is the better paper of the two.—A. If you take that stock——

Q. Which stock?—A. This Exhibit 5, and make a plate paper out of it, it would be better than this. [Indicating.]

Q. It would be better?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has it a better finish now than that Western plate you have in your hand?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it or not a better paper for lithographic plate purposes than the lithographic plate paper you have in your hands?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then that book paper weighing 100 pounds, sized 25 by 38, is in fact a better plate paper than the Western plate paper which you have in your hands and which you say is a cheap grade?—A. I did not say that. I said this stock there properly made——

Q. I am not speaking about what would be properly done. I asked you concerning the paper as it is. I am asking you simply as to the stock as it is there now, as you see it, whether or not the book paper that you hold in your hands that you say weighing, billed by your house, 100 pounds, 25 by 38, is not better paper for the use of plate purposes than the piece of plate paper you have in your hand.—A. Yes, sir; because this piece of paper is not a genuine piece. It is made light—I mean plate paper. It is very poor for lithographing, if a lithographer would buy this at all. If we had that we would sell it for a cheap lot of plate paper for printing to a printing house. Lithographers would not buy that.

Q. Wouldn't you sell it for book paper, too?—A. I would sell it for anything we could sell it for.

Q. State if you have not sold a better quality and a heavier grade of paper for book purposes than that western plate paper that you have in your hands.—A. Yes, sir; I have.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence this piece of paper, which the witness has handled and examined, as a specimen of western plate paper of a poor grade, and ask that the stenographer identify it and mark it as an exhibit to his testimony. The specimen will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof and marked Exhibit Number 3.

Q. Do you know Dr. Walling, of this city?—A. Yes, sir; I know him.

Q. He is a brother-in-law of Mr. English, the contestant in this case?—A. I know Dr. Walling. I did not know he was a brother-in-law to Mr. English until after my testimony the other day; I found that out then.

Q. He is in the wholesale drug business in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you sell paper to him in your business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does your house do business with the First National Bank in this city?—A. I do not know; I do not think we do, now. We used to up to the time they put up the curtains for a day or two. We do not do it now, I believe.

Q. It is regarded as one of the most solvent banks in the country, is it not, now?—A. I understand it so; yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. That inferior quality of plate that you referred to, you said was such that no lithographer would use it, and you would sell it for any purpose a man would buy it for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever know a book to be gotten up of 400 pages on lithographic plate paper; are there any books of that sort?—A. Very few.

Q. Ordinary book paper, is it as heavy as that western plate?—A. Ordinary book?

Q. Yes, sir; just as you use it for printing books.—A. No, sir.

Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of C. B. Wing.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

(Omitted. See original, page 1515.)

Exhibit No. 2 to deposition of C. B. Wing.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

(Omitted. See original, page 1516.)

Exhibit No. 3 to deposition of C. B. Wing.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

(Omitted. See original, page 1517.)

JAMES A. ISGRIGG, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. James A. Isgrigg; age, 52; residence, 223 West N. Y. street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Lumber business.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. Some 12 years.

Q. What is your politics?—A. Republican.

Q. Have you ever held any office of any kind?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a candidate for any office?—A. No, sir; not for any elective office.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What; inspector?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Precinct 2d of the 13th ward; I think it is 1 or 2.

Q. Which one, the north or south precinct?—A. The south.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were being voted there that day, and received them, I mean?—A. Yes, sir; most of them.

Q. I will hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket or similar to the ticket voted by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. I do not know that I could tell; I know the names, but the heading, I could not fix it just exactly.

Q. What is your recollection?—A. I think that is the ticket.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it, and say whether that is the ticket used by the Democrats that day at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir; similar.

Q. I will ask you to state if, when those tickets were folded in the hands of the voters, you could tell or distinguish one by sight from the other?—A. No; not in the hands of the voters, I could not.

Q. By sight, and the external appearance of the ticket, could you, as inspector, when they were coming in, tell or distinguish one by sight from the other?—A. No, sir.

Q. Could you when you had them in your hand?—A. Well, I think I could, if I paid attention to them.

Q. State if at that time, on the day of that election, you gave any sign, wink, nod, or in any way held the ticket for the purpose of or understanding with the challengers on the outside, so they would know what kind of a ticket had been handed to you as inspector?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anything of that kind done there?—A. No, sir; nothing at all.

Q. Was there any difference in the manner in which you held the Republican and the Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any particular rule by which you held the tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. How would you generally hold the tickets as they were handed in to you?—A. When the ticket was handed to me I would hold it that way [indicating].

Mr. WILSON. Catch it between your forefinger and thumb by the end?

The WITNESS. Give me a ticket and I will fold it the way they are generally folded [witness took a ticket]; about in that shape [indicating].

Mr. WILSON. Between your forefinger and thumb by the end?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hold the Republican and Democratic tickets both the same way?—A. Both the same way.

Q. Do you mean you would hold them that way now?—A. Yes, sir; I would hold them that way if they were challenged. I would hold them that way until it was decided.

Q. With the ticket in your hand?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if they were not challenged how would you hold them?—A. I would put them in the box. Of course, as soon as I could get it I would see. I frequently folded tickets. I have to fold a great many. A great many vote an open ticket, and come up with an open ticket, and I have to fold it in order to get it in the box.

Q. Sometimes both parties vote an open ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been on election boards before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often?—A. Quite a number of times—6 or 7 or 8 times.

Q. Have you ever been able at elections prior to 1882 to tell the difference between the tickets by the feeling of them?—A. No, sir; I believe not.

Q. Do you remember whether you were or not?—A. I think not. I do not think there was any difference.

Q. State if there was any difference?—A. Well, sometimes one was larger than the other—a little larger.

Q Do you mean at elections prior to 1882?—A. Yes, sir; whether they were trimmed so I do not know, but some were a little wider paper.

Q. How did the vote at your precinct correspond with the names recorded on the poll-book?—A. Well, they were about right.

Q. How did you count the tickets?—A. We would count one at a time until we got 5, generally.

Q. You mean for straight tickets or regular tickets?—A. Straight tickets, counting one at a time and tally five.

Q. What difference was there between the way in which you counted the tickets in 1882 and at the previous elections?—A. There was no difference.

Q. Then at previous elections you counted them one at a time until you would get 5 or 10 and then tally them?—A. Yes, sir. Our ward was large, twenty-two hundred at that time, and the law I suppose required us to count one at a time, but it would take some 8 or 10 days to do it.

Q. You would then take out all the straight tickets?—A. Yes; we would count "one, two, three, four, five, tally five."

Q. That was as to straight tickets, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was when you voted at one precinct in your ward at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been counting tickets that way since?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, there was no difference between the manner in which you counted the tickets in 1882 and the previous elections?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you on the board at the time of the city election in October?—A. Last October?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you tell the difference between these tickets by feeling them?—A. I could at the time; yes, sir.

Q. Could you tell the difference by sight?—A. No.

Q. When a voter would come up to vote and handed you his ticket, you would take it and wait until his name is checked off, or written down and checked off of the poll-book?—A. No; not if I knew he was a voter—I would deposit the ballot; but if I did not know the man, and if they were challenging generally, I would hold the ticket in order to settle it.

Q. A man would hand you his ticket, and if you would happen to know the man you would put it in the box before the clerk would get it down?—A. No, sir; I would call the name out.

Q. You would hold it until you called the name out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would hold it between your fingers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The challengers could see that ticket while you were holding it there?—A. I should think so. The box was in the window at the time.

Q. If a Republican had wanted to vote the Democratic ticket and did not want it to be known and handed his ticket to the inspector, could not the inspector tell from that what ticket he was voting?—A. No, sir.

Q. Holding it in your hand, you could not tell?—A. No, sir; I could not tell.

Q. You say the ballot-box was sitting right at the window?—A. Yes, sir; right in front of the window.

Q. So that people could see standing at the chute on the outside?—A. I judge so; some one or two back could.

Q. And could not those in front see?—A. I presume they could see me hold the ticket.

Q. You say you were inspector there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?—A. 52.

Q. Do you wear glasses?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years before was it that you acted as inspector?—A. Quite a number of times.

Q. Did you ever have any trouble growing out of officiating as clerk, inspector, or judge or anything on one of those boards at that precinct?—A. Not at that precinct.

Q. At any other precinct in that ward?

(Objected to as not cross-examination unless it is confined to the election of 1882.)

A. There was some city election here that we had some trouble in vouching for some parties.

Q. Swearing in votes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the trouble?—A. They claimed that they were not residents of the ward.

Q. Did it end there with that claim?—A. Yes, sir; that was all there was of it.

Q. No legal action taken?—A. No, sir

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. They were legal voters that you swore in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you say if a Republican wanted to vote the Democratic ticket and handed the ticket to you, you could not tell what his politics were or what he was voting?—A. No; I said I could not tell what ticket he was voting.

Q. You say there was no legal action taken about that matter at all where there was some trouble growing out of your swearing in votes?—A. The grand jury indicted me, but it never came to trial.

Q. That was the end of it?—A. Yes, sir; I was indicted with many others.

Q. Who were the principal witnesses in the case against you?—A. Well, there was Eli Perkins, Coble, and Elliott, and quite a number. I do not recollect now. They got mad because they were beaten, I suppose.

Q. Do you remember when that was?—A. It was a Democratic grand jury.

Q. How long ago was that?—A. That was the time they gerrymandered the city the day before the election.

Q. In 1876, was it not?—A. I think it was.

Q. It was a Democratic grand jury at that time, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a Democratic judge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Judge Buskirk on the bench?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Cropsey was prosecuting attorney?—A. Yes, I think so; I think it was Mr. Cropsey.

Q. Mr. Cropsey is quite active in politics in this city?—A. Mr. Claypool took the contract to fight that, I suppose.

Q. Claypool?—A. He was the attorney.

Q. Was the case dismissed by the prosecuting attorney?—A. That I could not tell. I think there was a number of indictments on the other side, and I think they made a swap.

Q. There was parties indicted on both sides at that election?—A. Yes, sir; some.

Q. And they were glad to play quits; is that about the size of it?—A. I judge that was it; Mr. Bernhamer, I believe, was one; and I believe there was 4 or 5 others. There was not quite so many of the Democrats indicted.

Q. Mr. Bernhamer was W. F. A. Bernhamer, an alderman in the city?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you spoke about holding that ticket up when it was challenged; did you hold it before or after the challenge was made?—A. As I stated, there was a great deal of challenging done in our ward and precinct; and I generally—if I do not know the man, he is very apt to be challenged, or nobody else knows him, or none of the challengers know him—I hold the ticket there until they are satisfied.
Q. That is, after the vote is challenged, you hold the ticket up?—A. Yes, sir; of course, I don't put it in the box.
Q. Do you, when the ticket is handed to you, unless it is challenged, hold it in the manner you indicated?—A. I put it in the box.
Q. It is only after a ticket is challenged that you hold it up so it could be seen by the bystanders?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. I do not know as I would hold it up so that anybody can see it.
Mr. WILSON. You stated you are in the lumber business; do you mean you are a partner?—A. No, sir; I am with C. C. Foster & Co.
Q. What position do you occupy?—A. As manager.

JAMES A. ISGRIGG.

TIMOTHY SPLAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Timothy Splan, age, 39; residence, No. 77 South West street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Since 1855.
Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. In the livery business.
Q. Were you formerly one of the captains of police in the city?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you in the 17th ward on that day?—A. I was, awhile. In fact, I was in all the wards south of Washington st. on that day.
Q. What were your duties as captain of police—were you captain of police at that time?—A. Yes, sir; one of them.
Q. What was your district as captain of police down there?—A. My district was on the south side of Washington street; all the southern wards.
Q. How many of the different wards were you in on that day at the time of the Congressional election?—A. I think I was in all of them.
Q. How many of them are there?—A. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24 and 25.
Q. Eleven wards?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you in all the precincts of the different wards?—A. I think I did not miss one of them that day.
Q. Were you in all the precincts of the 17th ward?—A. I was, sir.
Q. Were you at one of the precincts of the 17th ward in which Mr. Frenzil, of the Merchants' National Bank, was, and were you there when he came there?—A. Yes, sir; I was at the 17th ward, but I do not know the name of the precinct; it was on South street.
Q. State what occurred when Mr. Frenzil came down there? Do you know Mr. Frenzil, of the Merchants' National Bank?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does he live in that ward?—A. Not that I know of; no, sir.
Q. Do you know that he lives in the 9th ward?—A. I do not know where he lives. My understanding was that day he lived on the north side.
Q. When Mr. Frenzil came down there, state what he said and what he did?—A. I cannot hardly do that. I saw him hustling around there.
Q. Was there any disturbance in that ward on that day?—A. Not that I know of, during my time there.
Q. Were you there when Mr. Frenzil was there?—A. I was there part of the time. I left him there and went over to the 16th ward. I had occasion to go there, and I found Captain Campbell there, and I left and went to one of the precincts of the 16th ward.
Q. Did you challenge any votes there or elsewhere that day?—A. No, sir.
Q. Were any of the policemen on duty that day challenging any votes that day?—A. Not that I know of.
Q. Had they any instructions with reference to that while they were on duty?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What were their instructions?—A. Their instructions were to keep the peace and avoid interfering with parties.
Q. To take no part in politics?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. While you were in that precinct of the 17th ward, where Mr. Frenzil was, was there other policemen there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who were they?—A. Crane and Gerber was there.
Q. What Crane?—A. Leonard Crane.

Q. What is Gerber's name?—A. Samuel Gerber.
Q. They were patrolmen?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were they challenging any votes there?—A. I cannot say; they were not during my time.
Q. Were they on duty as policemen?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Under instructions from you as captain?—A. Under instructions from the chief. I received my instructions from the chief.
Q. Did you communicate those instructions to the patrolmen?—A. They were given out by the chief.
Q. And it was made your duty to see that the instructions were carried out?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What were the instructions with reference to members of the police force challenging votes, if any?—A. Their instructions were not to challenge while on duty.
Q. Do you know of any policeman that was on duty challenging votes that day?—A. No, sir, I don't.
Q. You say there was no disturbance at that precinct of the 17th ward when Mr. Frenzil came there?—A. There was some few words or a difficulty in regard as to who should challenge, and there was one man there, Robison, they complained about him challenging, and said he didn't live in the ward; and I asked him about it, and he said, "It is all right; why don't you stop that man?"—Frenzil. I told him he ought to complain about him, and we did not want any fuss about it, and he had to quit challenging; that it was not legal for him to challenge there unless he lived in the ward, and he said he did not, and he said, "Why don't you stop that man?" meaning Mr. Frenzil.
Q. Did you say anything to Mr. Frenzil?—A. No, sir; I merely told Mr. Robison in order to keep down any fuss.
Q. After that he did stop challenging?—A. Yes, sir; I think he did.
Q. Did Mr. Frenzil challenge any votes?—A. Mr. Robinson called my attention to him when I drove up.
Q. Did Mr. Frenzil say anything or complain there about anything that day?—A. Not to me.
Q. Did he make any charge about any bulldozing?—A. I did not hear him.
Q. Was anybody bulldozed there that day?—A. No, sir.
Q. Intimidated or threatened?—A. Not that I could see.
Q. Anybody driven away from the polls?—A. Not any man that had any right there that I know of. In fact, there was not anybody driven away.
Q. Did you threaten to make any arrest there that day?—A. No, sir.
Q. Who did they have swearing in votes there that day?—A. Indeed, I cannot tell you that.
Q. Do you know Mr. Schoettle?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he there swearing in votes?—A. I saw him there. I do not know whether he was swearing in votes.
Q. Did you see any other man there swearing in votes?—A. I saw a lot there, but I cannot say I saw them swearing in votes.
Q. Did you see a German there swearing in votes?—A. I could not say in regard to that. Schoettle was a German.
Q. Did you say anything to Schoettle that day?—A. No, sir; I do not think I spoke to him at all. I am pretty positive I did not speak to him that day.
Q. Did any other member of the police force speak to him that you know of?—A. Not that I know of; no, sir.
Q. And there was no disturbance there except what you have mentioned?—A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Was there any disturbance growing out of that, or was it simply words?—A. It was simply words.
Q. Were they angry words?—A. They were getting to be, but it stopped right there when he stopped challenging.
Q. That ended it?—A. Yes, sir; that ended it while I was there.
Q. Were you there more than once?—A. Oh, yes; I was there half a dozen times or more.
Q. Did you hear of any disturbance there by any members of the police force or anybody else?—A. No, sir; I met two fellows in the evening and they asked me why I did not stay there, and I said I had to go to the 16th ward; we had one man there and he was an extra on the police force, and our force was very light on that day.
Q. Who asked you why you did not stay there?—A. I do not know. I cannot say that.
Q. Did they give you any reason why you ought to have staid there?—A. It was in regard to Martin Powers and Conway.
Q. What was it?—A. Something in regard to going to arrest Conway for profanity or something.

Q. Anything growing out of the election in any way?—A. I cannot say. Mr. Powers was a merchant policeman at the time.

Q. Do you know of any one that was entitled to vote there that day that was deprived of it in any way?—A. I do not. No, sir.

Q. What was Mr. Frenzil's manner when he came there?—A. He was hustling around. He was dressed up. I did not suppose he would take any part, as I saw him first one place and then another around the chute.

Q. How did he talk: did he seem to be excited or calm?—A. I cannot say as to that. I do not know the man well enough to know whether that was his natural way or not.

Q. Did he say anything to you that day?—A. No, sir; he did not speak to me that day more than to pass the time of day, I do not think.

Q. Did he say anything to Crane and Gerber, the patrolmen?—A. Not while I was there. He may have done so in my absence, but not while I was there.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How many precincts do you say you visited that day down there?—A. I believe I visited every one of them on the south side, south of Washington st.

Q. How many wards?—A. I think there was eleven wards on the south side, and I visited all of them.

Q. How many precincts to the ward, if you recollect?—A. I do not know now.

Q. Not less than two?—A. No, sir.

Q. And as high as three or four?—A. I do not know of any as high as four.

Q. As high as three?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. From two to three precincts in each ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About 25 precincts down there; how much of your time did you devote between those precincts?—A. That I cannot say, about to the precinct.

Q. Did you stay in any one ward more than another?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which did you stay at the most?—A. I staid mostly down at a precinct of the 16th ward. There was only one officer there and he was an extra.

Q. You say you knew of no policeman on duty that was challenging that day?—A. No, sir; I do not know of any on duty.

Q. Any policemen on duty working at the polls?—A. I do not remember of any.

Q. Was there not a policeman on duty at the 17th ward, working at that precinct where Mr. Frenzil was?—A. I think not, that was on duty.

Q. Was policeman Robison in the 25th ward challenging at one precinct?—A. Not that I know of. I do not know that he was. If he was, I do not remember it.

Q. You did not see him there?—A. I think I saw him there, but it appears to me he was on duty there.

Q. Do you not know as a matter of fact he was not on duty?—A. No, sir; I do not. I do not remember.

Q. Don't you know as a matter of fact there were several policemen who were policemen the day before, and who claimed to be off duty, that were working in the 17th ward?—A. No, sir; the two officers, Crane and Gerber, I think, you will find them on the pay-roll, and they were on duty that day.

Q. Were there other policemen there besides Crane and Gerber?—A. No, sir. I sent one or two from the 18th ward there; that is, in the evening. I did not send him, but I heard Captain Campbell say he would send him down on account of the crowd being so big; on account of the wrangle that Powers and Conway had.

Q. Was not Case there?—A. No, sir. Case was with me all the time in that precinct during that time. He staid with me all that day.

Q. Was not Roney?—A. Roney, I suppose, was there. I would not say positive but what he was the man that Captain Campbell said he would send over from the 18th ward.

Q. Any deputies there from the sheriff's office?—A. Not that I know of. If there was I did not notice.

Q. Any deputies from the jail there?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. I do not know that there was.

Q. I will ask you how much time during the day did you spend at the 17th ward, if you know?—A. That I do not know.

Q. How much at the 16th ward?—A. I would suppose about one hour or one hour and a half altogether at the 16th ward.

Q. How much would you say you spent at the other wards? Divide it up.—A. That I could not say. Whenever I thought there was officers enough there, or whenever I saw Captain Campbell—we were both on the south side.

Q. Were you there an hour and a half altogether?—A. Yes, sir; that is my judgment. I spent that at one precinct in the 16th ward, about one hour and a half.

Q. You staid there more than anywhere else?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you were less time at the 17th ward than you were at the 16th ward?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the polls opened there at the 17th ward what time?—A. I do not know.
Q. The polls generally open at 8 o'clock and close at 6, don't they?—A. Yes, sir; I think it was about 9 o'clock when I started out.
Q. You said you went away from that precinct and left Mr. Frenzil there?—A. Yes, sir; he was there when I left.
Q. You do not remember but one German that was challenging there?—A. I did not state about any German challenging there, I do not think.
Q. You do not recollect who did the challenging there for the Democrats?—A. I think there was one merchant policeman, who was named Powers, done some challenging there, and George Robison at the same ward was challenging; and these men spoke to me and I spoke to him and he said, "Why don't you stop Mr. Frenzil?" and that is the time I noticed Mr. Frenzil.
Q. He was the merchant policeman?—A. Yes, sir; he was challenging for the Democrats.
Q. That man?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You told him he had no business to challenge?—A. No, sir; I didn't; I didn't speak to him.
Q. Who did you speak to?—A. I spoke to one man they said had no right to challenge; they said he did not live in the ward.
Q. What was his name?—A. George Robison.
Q. Who was the merchant policeman?—A. Martin Powers.
Q. And the only man challenging there was a Democratic merchant policeman?—A. Yes, sir; that is the only man I know of on the Democratic side.
Q. A merchant policeman is a private policeman, employed by the merchants?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. As a watchman?—A. Yes, sir; he had no police powers at all, and has not got them yet, I believe.

TIMOTHY SPLAN.

BENJAMIN F. HETHERINGTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Benjamin F. Hetherington; 43 years old; 45 Madison avenue.
Q. What is your business?—A. I carry on a machine-shop.
Q. What kind of a machine-shop?—A. Architectural iron works, boilers, engines, and shafting.
Q. A kind of a foundry?—A. A regular foundry.
Q. Are you alone?—A. No, sir; I have a partner, Mr. Bernard.
Q. What is the style of the firm?—A. Hetherington and Bernard.
Q. How long have you lived in the city?—A. I guess about 30 years.
Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir; I have always been.
Q. Did you ever hold any office?—A. No, sir.
Q. Were you ever a candidate for office?—A. Yes, sir; I ran against Mr. Tucker in the fourth district for the nomination, and I ran against Tom Madden in the whole ward.
Q. It was a Democratic ward?—A. Yes, sir; I got beaten on the temperance question.
Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You attended the same?—A. I was inspector.
Q. In what precinct?—A. Second precinct, seventeenth ward.
Q. You received the tickets that were handed in there, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I hand you the ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to examine that ticket and see if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that occasion.—A. That feels a little heavier; I may be mistaken, but it seems so.
Q. What would be your impression, that that was a similar ticket to the one that was used there?—A. Those are the names and the heading is the same.
Q. I now hand you a ticket marked Exhibit B to Mr. Holliday's deposition, headed "Democratic ticket." I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats at that precinct that day.—A. Yes, that is the Democratic ticket.
Q. When those tickets were folded separately, with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded in being voted, as they come up to the box to deposit their ballot, could you by sight and from the external appearance of the ticket tell what ticket a man was voting?—A. Well, after a while I could. After the polls had been open a little while and I got a little experienced in handling them I could tell the difference.

Q. I mean by sight; could you tell the difference in the looks of the ticket?—A. No; only by the feeling.

Q. Have you ever been inspector on elections before?—A. Yes, sir; for several years.

Q. Did you notice any difference in the feeling of the tickets at elections prior to 1882?—A. No, I never noticed any difference until this election spoken of.

Q. You do not recollect the difference?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did the vote there correspond with the number of names recorded on the poll-book?—A. Well, that came out pretty well; better than we did at the last election.

Q. What election do you refer to?—A. The one we had here lately. We polled a very poor vote

Q. What was the number of votes as compared with the number of names on the poll-list as compared with the election of 1882, if you remember?—A. I cannot say exactly.

Q. Do you remember whether there were more or less votes than in 1880?—A. No, sir; they were about what is generally polled there.

Q. I will ask you—I am not asking you about the number of votes now voted, but I am asking you when you counted the tickets in the box—how the number of tickets counted by you corresponded with the number of names recorded on the poll-books by the clerks.—A. I think they came out even.

Q. Were there any tickets not counted?—A. No; I believe they were all counted.

Q. Was there a man named Maloney on that board?—A. Yes, sir; and he was a very strict watcher, too.

Q. Was there two tickets of any kind folded together in that box, that you remember of?—A. No, sir; not that I know of. There was a Republican ticket—of course the paper being a little stiff sprung open a little, and there was a Democratic ticket a little inside of it, but that was the only one, and he kicked about that a little until he found it was a Democratic ticket, and he said no more about it.

Q. Were the tickets folded all together or were they lapped together?—A. No, sir; they were just lapped in.

Q. Was there two Democratic tickets folded together in that box?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. You do not recollect that. Just think a little and see if there was.—A. No; I do not think there was.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How old did you say you were?—A. 53 in October.

Q. Do you use glasses?—A. Yes, sir; when I read.

Q. Is your vision as good as that of most anybody, as people of your age usually?—A. Well, I am unfortunate in having only one eye, but it is a very good one, and I can see as much as anybody with it, and it is very strong and powerful, but I read so much at night I find it is a benefit to wear glasses.

Q. When Mr. Peelle asked you about that Republican ticket you put your glasses on before looking at it a while ago?—A. Yes, sir; I recognized the names.

Q. But you could tell the difference between those tickets by feeling them?—A. I could.

Q. Was there anybody there challenged and sworn in that was not allowed to vote at your precinct—that was not allowed to vote after they were sworn in?—A. Yes, sir; several. I understood you to ask me if there was anybody sworn in?

(Question repeated.)

A. No.

Q. No trouble of that sort at all?—A. No; some voters—I frequently had trouble in getting parties to swear them in, and they made a business of getting Chris. Schoettle to do it, and I stopped it.

Q. How did you stop it?—A. Because he did not know the parties he was swearing in.

Q. How do you know that?—A. I asked him. I said, "Do you know that man, Chris.? Do you know his name? Do you know where he lives?" "No." Then I says, "Then don't you do that."

Q. Did not you refuse to take votes after they were sworn in?—A. No, sir; when parties were sworn in with a party that had authority to swear them in I never refused a vote.

Q. The question is about Mr. Schoettle.—A. I never refused a vote after they were sworn in.

Q. Did not you refuse votes that he swore were residents of the ward and had a right to vote there?—A. No; Mr. Schoettle swore in two votes, and I saw he was making a business of it, and I put the question to him, "Do you know that man, Chris.?" and he says, "I know he is a voter." "Do you know his name?" "No." "Do you know where he lives?" "No." Then I said "Don't you do that any more."

Q. You told him, then, he must not swear in any more votes?—A. I did; and he did not do it.

Q. Did you say something about another man that was swearing in votes?—A. No; he was the only person.

(This examination was objected to as not proper cross-examination.)

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you if you, as inspector there, gave out any sign, by nod or wink, or holding your ticket in any way, so that the challenger might know what kind of ticket it was that was handed to you there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever do such a thing at any election?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hold all the tickets alike when they were handed to you?—A. Whenever a vote was challenged I retained possession of it in my fingers until the question was settled outside and all parties agreed, and then it was put inside the box.

Q. Did you hold the Democratic and Republican and national tickets all the same way?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made no distinction between the tickets in the manner in which you held them?—A. No, sir.

BENJ. F. HETHERINGTON.

JAMES P. BAKER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. James P. Baker; age, 39; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Ever since 1870.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. Have you ever held an office of any kind?—A. No, sir; except the office of notary public.

Q. Were you ever a candidate for any office?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. At what precinct and ward?—A. Second ward and first precinct. I believe it is the south precinct.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were you doing there that day?—A. I was there as one of the challengers.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans there that day?—A. I think it is the ticket.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think that is the one.

Q. I will ask you to state how far you were standing that day from the ballot-box as challenger?—A. Oh, good part of the time I was within three or four feet.

Q. Did you notice the tickets as they were being voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when the tickets were folded separately with the names on the inside, as tickets are usually or ordinarily folded in being voted, if, by sight, you could distinguish or tell one ticket from the other?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Did you make any effort that day to do that?—A. Of course, we would watch the vote and the voters and those that were in charge of the matter outside; it was important for them to know about how the voters were going to vote.

Q. Did you or not, as a matter of fact, distinguish one ticket from another there that day by sight?—A. No, sir; I could not say I could; I do not think I did; that is my impression now.

Q. Was there any complaint made there about the character of the Republican ticket at that precinct that day by any one?—A. I did not hear of any.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did not Senator McDonald drive up there in the morning not long after the polls were opened and take that ticket and show it to the people there, and make comments on its character and call it a spring-back ticket, and say that it was unfair?—A. I cannot say that he did or not; he may have done so; there were a great many people driving up there and calling. I did not hear him make that remark; I did not know that Senator McDonald had gone the rounds until recently, when I heard it.

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. I never tried it; I do not know whether I could or not.

Q. You never tried it?—A. I have had them both in my hands, but so far as testing that thing is concerned I could not say.

Q. Did you notice the difference between those tickets that day particularly?—A. I had very little to do with the Democratic ticket that day—very little to do with it. Indeed I did not handle the Republican ticket because I was a challenger, and I was not one of the parties that distributed the tickets.

Q. So you did not pay much attention to it?—A. I did not pay a great deal of attention to it.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not there after the polls closed that evening?—A. No, sir.

JAMES P. BAKER.

SAMUEL MERRILL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Samuel Merrill. I am 52 years old, and I reside in Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Bookseller and paper dealer.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. More than 30 years.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you wholesale or retail, or both?—A. Both.

Q. What is the name of the firm, if you have any partners?—A. Merrill, Meigs & Co. is the name of the firm.

Q. You deal in books as well as stationary?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Law books?—A. Yes, sir; all kinds of books I suppose you might say.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. In the 2d precinct of the 2d ward.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and tell me if you have seen or examined the paper upon which that ticket is printed or similar one before?—A. Well, I have examined a similar ticket to this.

Q. I will ask you to state from your experience in business what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. The ticket is a very dirty ticket; have you a clean one there?

Q. I will take that ticket back and I hand you now a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and ask you to examine that ticket, and I ask you to state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. I would say that came as near a No. 2 book paper as anything.

Q. What would you think that paper would weigh, size 22 by 28?—A. Our book paper comes in different sizes from that.

Q. What size do they come in?—A. We use more book paper 25 by 38 than anything else.

Q. Size 25 by 38, 480 sheets to the ream?—A. I should think that would be 70 to 75 pounds.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer that ticket in evidence, and ask that it be made a part of the deposition of the witness, and marked by the stenographer.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket" which is marked as Exhibit S, shown to Mr. Gordon, and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that is?—A. I would call it a very good quality of news.

Q. I will ask you if you have books in stock in your establishment with paper as heavy or heavier than the paper upon which the Republican ticket that I have shown you was printed?—A. Yes, we have as heavy, and we have some heavier. Let me feel that again (witness taking ticket); yes, we havesome heavier.

Q. What class of books have you in which the paper is heavier than that?—A. The books that are heavier for the most part are juvenile. Now and then there is some book—some rare book that there is an edition of it, or there is an edition of a certain book which they wish to have different from other books, a little more tasteful, and we get a book on paper of that kind, and we have an edition of Emerson's works on paper; I think, as thick as that, and we have other books—books of miscellaneous character; but as a general thing all books that are on paper heavier, are juvenile books.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What edition of Emerson is that?—A. I do not know as I know the name of it. It is issued by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Cambridge, Mass., and the Riverside edition are now issuing it.

Q. You say that this ticket is on paper similar to the Emerson paper, except that the Emerson paper is heavier, and it is book paper?—A. Yes, sir; but the Emerson paper is better book paper than this. I said juveniles were heavier. The Emerson paper is about the weight of that, I think; at least it is as heavy as that.

Q. Have you got a book in your establishment on paper which is like this?—A. There are a good many law books on paper like that, but this is calendered a little harder than the Indiana reports are printed on and law books generally are.

Q. Do you mean to say that the Indiana reports are on a similar quality of paper? —A. Similar quality of stock.

Q. The only difference being that this is calendered harder?—A. And this is heavier. I would not say the only difference, but that would be the principal difference.

Q. Have you any book that is calendered as hard as this?—A. Yes.

Q. What book?—A. Well, I think that book I mentioned, but I think you would be more familiar, perhaps, with "Buskirk's table of cases." I think it is; that just comes to my mind now.

Q. You think that is nearer like this?—A. Yes, sir; not calendered, but a better paper than this; that is my memory. I have not thought of it before. It just comes to me now.

Q. You have children's books upon paper thicker than that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean elegant cloth books? Have you any children's books on cloth?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Many of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they are thicker?—A. Some are thinner. I was not thinking of them.

Q. What children's books have you got on material like this that is thicker?—A. I do not know as I could recollect them. R. Worthington & Co., of N. Y. City, have published books on thicker paper than that.

Q. Do you deal much in plate paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have any of it?—A. Not for sale; no, sir. I had some.

Q. Are you familiar with the character of plate paper as you are with others?—A. It must be that my familiarity is with a different kind of paper from the paper that such men as these lithographers would call plate paper. The real plate paper, such as they use for steel plates, is not as solid a paper as this. It is more of a spongy character.

Q. Is it not true that plate paper on one side is pretty heavily calendered and finished?—A. In some cases they are, and sometimes on both sides.

Q. Is it not true that a distinguishing feature of plate paper is that one side is more highly finished than the other?—A. I would not call this plate paper. I think that quality, if you were to get right down to it, you would find this would not be plate paper, nor is it the kind of paper they call "Western plate." If it is, it is a term that has originated recently. It has been put through rollers. They have some new idea of plate paper. There is a paper highly finished, a writing-paper put between plates, and plated and finished in that way, but of late years they have been rolling paper between rollers, and calling it plated paper, I believe.

Q. Is it not rolled with a calender machine that gives——A. That finish. Yes, sir.

Q. That hardness and finish to plate paper?—A. You put almost too many words in there.

Q. That hardness and finish there?—That hardness and finish is partly caused by that.

Q. How long has that calender machine which is the most popular been in existence, do you know?—A. I do not know. I heard about it first in 1855.

Q. Do you know the name of the machine now, and who invented it?—A. Fortinier was the one that used to be the principal machine.

Q. For calendering?—A. As I understand it.

Q. What is your understanding of the old-fashioned way of making plate paper?—A. I do not want to enter into a discourse on it here. I would like to know what point you wish me to answer.

Q. I understood you to say a while ago that they have a way of running paper through rollers and call it plate paper, and that the old-fashioned way was some other way. I do not get the point exactly.—A. Putting it between two thin plates and press it in the bindery, or press it by the means of a screw. That was the old way of its being pressed.

Q. How did they get the finish and hardness of the other paper with the same machine?—A. I do not that I understand that question "of other paper." No not by plating at all. This was not a machine exactly; it was a press.

Q. Don't they subject book paper to the same pressure?—A. Not as they did for the purpose of plating the paper. They did when they were binding that paper, as binders often do in the binderies, subject books and sheets to that pressure and let them remain in the press over night in order to drive out the wrinkles, &c.

Q. Are you familiar with the process of manufacturing plate paper that they use to-day?—A. No, sir; I am not familiar. I go east every summer and go through the mills in Massachusetts, but I am merely a looker-on, and I am not familiar with it.

Q. Have you examined this paper that Mr. Peelle called your attention to before you came in here?—A. I did, sir. I do not know that it was that ticket, but it was a Republican ticket.

SAMUEL MERRILL.

The further taking of these depositions, by consent of both parties, was adjourned until Thursday, November 15th, 1883.

THURSDAY, November 15, 1883.

The parties met, pursuant to agreement.

JOHN B. CONNER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John B. Conner; I am 53 years old; I reside at number 360 Park avenue, in this city.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Since 1874.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position in this city or State?—A. Yes, sir; I have been in the legislature one session and in the department of statistics 2 years.

Q. Chief of the bureau of statistics in the State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business are you engaged in now?—A. Newspaper business.

Q. What paper?—A. Indiana Farmer.

Q. An agricultural paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been connected with that?—A. Ever since 1874, in July.

Q. In your business as chief of the bureau of statistics of this State, and in the publication of the Indiana Farmer, have you purchased much paper?—A. Yes, sir; considerable.

Q. Are you familiar with the different kinds of papers?—A. Tolerably.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday. Take that and examine the paper upon which it is printed and state what kind of paper it is, if you know.—A. Well, that is a heavy and extra-sized quality of number 2 book paper, I should say.

Q. Have you ever seen that paper before to day?—A. I expect I voted it.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see that ticket there?—A. I think that is the ticket.

Q. Did you examine the ticket that day?—A. Yes, sir; a casual examination.

Q. What is your judgment, then, as to the quality of paper—the same as now or different?—A. I thought it was a heavy quality of book paper.

Q. I hand you now a book entitled "Memorial address on the life and character of James A. Garfield, President of the United States, by James G. Blaine, February 27, 1882." I will ask you to examine the plate in the front part of that, upon which is engraved the picture of General Garfield, and I will ask you to examine that paper and say what kind it is.—A. That quality of paper I never had much to do with or had occasion to use it much. It is about the thickness of plate paper, and it is not finished so much.

Q. Is not that paper used for lithographic plate purposes?—A. Usually, although that lithographic plate is not so highly calendered.

Q. Is it or not lithographic plate; and, if so, what kind?—A. Yes; lithographic plate. There is a character of paper that is used almost exclusively for that work, but I am not very familiar with that quality of paper.

Q. You are more familiar with the different qualities of book paper than anything else?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the character of the paper in that book you have in your hand, upon which the printed matter appears?—A. It is what printers call book paper.

Q. Is it a better, inferior, or medium grade, compared with the ticket you have in your hand?—A. I think it is rather better finished than the ticket I have; or, perhaps, I might say higher calendered.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that is the thickness of plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; that seems to be about the thickness of plate paper, although there are different weights of plate paper, as I understand, although I never had much to do with it.

Q. There are different thicknesses of plate paper, too?—A. Yes, sir; different weights and thicknesses, but I never had much to do with either.

Q. And then you may be mistaken as to what the character of that Republican ticket would be?—A. Of course, only as to my judgment. Of course, a man might be mistaken in judgment as to most anything.

Q. Do you ever see plate paper of the thickness of that Republican ticket?—A. I think I have seen paper that light.

Q. Did you ever see plate paper finished as that is?—A. You could not see very much of the finish of that; it is so much soiled.

Q. Did you ever have any experience in the manufacturing of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever sell plate paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever buy much plate paper?—A. No, sir; not much.

Q. Your dealings have been in book paper?—A. Book paper and newspaper, mostly.

Q. I will ask you what is the finish usually of plate paper?—A. Plate paper that printers use for heavy and fine work is pretty hard finished, usually calendered and sized.

Q. What is the difference between book paper number 2 and fine plate paper, in the finishing and calendering?—A. Well, the higher finish and sizing and calendering and the weight of the paper.

Q. Have you not seen book paper really with more sizing than plate paper has?—A. I have seen book paper that is highly sized.

Q. Is not the principal difference in plate paper that one side is highly finished and the other is not?—A. No, sir.

Q. That is not the difference?—A. No, sir; not the paper that printers use. It is finished equally on both sides.

Q. Are you not describing book paper?— A. I am describing what is called plate paper, that we have for printing a good many catalogues.

Q. What catalogues do you have printed on plate paper?—A. Stock catalogues.

Q. Can you furnish us one?—A. I do not know that I can, sir; it has been years ago.

Q. Could not you give us one of those?—A. We printed one for Mr. Louden—he is in Iowa now—six years ago.

Q. Was the paper as thick as the paper upon which the engraving of Garfield is?—A. I think it is not so heavy as that.

Q. Did you ever print a book on plate paper?—A. No, sir; simply catalogues.

Q. Did you ever see newspapers printed on plate paper?—A. I believe not; no, sir.

Q. And you recollect of printing certainly one, and you think there were other catalogues on plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; it was said to be plate paper; it was ordered for plate paper.

Q. What is the weight; what is 25 by 38 per ream?—A. I do not know—60 to 65 pounds; I am not positive as to that.

Q. 25 by 38?—A. Yes, sir. I may be mistaken as to that. I bought paper 25 by 38 called standard sheet.

Q. What is the usual size of book paper that you buy?—A. 25 by 38, I believe, is the standard sheet.

Q. For books?—A. Yes, sir; a book paper is made frequently odd sizes, because books are so.

Q. Can you give the sizes in which book paper comes?—A. No, sir; because there is a great variety in size; I think 25 by 38 is regular, or what they call a standard book sheet. I think that is it, but I have not had much to do with book printing.

Q. Have you noticed the standard sizes of news paper?—A. There are so many standard sizes for news paper or paper that I would not know. It is 30½ by 44½ and 22 by 32, and 24 by 36, a great variety of regular sizes of news paper.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN B. CONNER.

S. E. PERKINS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. I am 35 years old, and I live in the city of Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. Well, I am dealing some in real estate, and trading principally.

Q. How long have you been in this city?—A. All but one year of my life.

Q. Are you a son of the old Chief Justice Perkins of this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes.

Q. What pricinct and ward?—A. 13th ward. I do not know which precinct it is, but I think it is the lower one.

Q. Did you see the ticket that was voted there that day by the respective parties?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket or the kind of ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. I should think it was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the kind of tickets used by the Democrats there that day?—A. I should say so.

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you occupied any official position that day.—A. Nothing more than to get voters in. I do not know what you would call it.

Q. State if when these tickets were folded separate with the names on the inside as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded when being voted, if you could by sight tell one ticket from the other.—A. No, sir; you could not.

Q. Did you make any effort to do it that day?—A. Yes, sir; you can by handling them.

Q. Have you been able to tell the difference between the handling of tickets before in this city?—A. It was always claimed by the inspectors that there was a slight difference, and they could tell by the touch, but I never noticed it myself, but I never tried it myself, and I never could tell by sight what people were voting; I know that.

S. E. PERKINS.

M. G. McLAIN recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if you attended the Congressional election in this city in 1882, in November.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I live in the first precinct, eleventh ward; I attended several precincts in the city that day.

Q. Is that the first precinct of the eleventh ward at the engine house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was inspector?—A. Mr. Yohn.

Q. Who was challenger upon the Republican side?—A. Mr. Hasselman was there.

Q. Did you see Ross Clark there acting as challenger on the Democratic side?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state what portion of the time you were there in that precinct that day?—A. I was there until some time in the afternoon.

Q. You were there all the forenoon?—A. Yes, sir; I worked pretty nearly all the forenoon.

Q. Did you hear any complaints made there that day by any one about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you hear Ross Clark make any statements in any way about that ticket?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you notice that the inspector, Mr. Yohn, made any signs, nods, or winks in any way by which the challenger might know what kind of a ticket he had in his hands?—A. I noticed nothing of the kind.

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Ross Clark and Mr. Ott Hasselman about the Republican ticket in any way?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Hasselman say anything to the effect that the printing of the Republican ticket was a scheme that would work the defeat of the Democratic ticket?—A. I did not.

Q. Do you know of any man there, colored or white, that day that voted with their tickets inclosed in an envelope?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you see or hear of anything of the kind?—A. I did not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you undertake to say that no colored man came there with his ticket in an envelope?—A. I do not; that was not the question as I understood it.

Q. You mean that they did not vote the ticket in the envelope, and did not put the envelope in the box?—A. I did not see anybody offer to vote a ticket in an envelope.

Q. Did you see all the people that voted?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you hear all the conversation that took place between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark?—A. I did not.

MOSES G. McLAIN.

W. F. MARTIN, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. W. F. Martin; age, 39; residence, 356 Indiana avenue.

Q. What is your business?—A. Physician.

Q. How long have you been in the practice of medicine?—A. 12 long years.

Q. What are your politics?—A. Democratic.

Q. Are you a graduate of any medical school?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?—A. Indiana Medical School.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in November last?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The first precinct, fourth ward.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. I was there in the forenoon a while and in the afternoon.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the inspector at that precinct?—A. Mr. Hadley, I think.

Q. How much time did you say you were there?—A. I was there 2 or 3 hours, I believe.

Q. Was you there in any particular capacity?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you work around the polls any?—A. No, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and see if that is the kind of ticket used by the Republicans that day?—A. Well, I made no distinction between the general appearance of the tickets.

Q. Is that the Republican ticket used there that day, or a similar ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I believe it is.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday; I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats there on that day?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my belief.

Q. Did you see those tickets when they were being voted, or similar tickets to those?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if, when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded and voted, you could tell one from the other by sight as they were being voted?—A. No, sir; I did not see any particular difference in them that day; I noticed a difference afterwards.

Q. State whether you could at that time or not distinguish by sight one ticket from the other?—A. I did not distinguish any difference between the tickets.

Q. Was there any complaint made at that precinct that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. You heard none?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You heard nothing about the difference between the tickets that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not, in fact, even notice the difference between the tickets that day?—A. No, sir; I did not notice the difference.

Q. Your attention was called to that matter since you say?—A. My attention was called by the comments of the newspapers.

Q. Could you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you can tell the difference between those tickets by the feeling?—A. Yes, sir; by the feeling of the ticket, but not by sight.

Q. Did you vote the Democratic ticket that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. A straight ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. You scratched it?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. This is not cross-examination, and I object to it.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. On the day of the election was your attention called to the ticket, as one of those tickets was heavier than the other?—A. No, sir; there was no question I heard that day in regard to the difference of the tickets.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you vote for Mr. English for Congress?
(Objected to as not cross-examination.)
A. No, sir.

WILLIAM F. MARTIN.

W. B. BURFORD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. William R. Burford; age, 37; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. Lithographer, printer, blank-book manufacturer, and stationer.

Q. How extensively are you engaged in that business?—A. I do not know just how to answer that.

Q. Are you doing a small jobbing trade, or a business that extends throughout the State?—A. I am running a manufacturing business and selling throughout the State.

Q. How many men do you employ in your business?—A. One hundred to one hundred and twenty-five.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. I did.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. It is the first ward, and I do not know that I can state the precinct, but it is the one on the corner of First and Illinois streets; I don't know whether it is the first precinct or the second precinct in that ward.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine the paper upon which it is printed, and state what kind of paper that is?—A. I should call that a plate paper.

Q. What kind of a plate paper?—A. Lithographic plate paper.

Q. Has it any other name?—A. I would not know it by any other name.

Q. Is it eastern plate paper?—A. No; it is what would be termed a western plate paper.

Q. Is it calendar on both sides alike?—A. It is intended to be.

Q. I will ask you to state what the difference is between that paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed and book paper of like weight?—A. I do not believe I could say there was any difference; not if they were of like weight.

Q. That is what I mean, like weight paper.—A. Identically the same weight?

Q. Would there be any difference between a book paper of the weight of the paper upon which that ticket is printed, in its finish?—A. It would depend a good deal upon the class of book paper you are comparing it with.

Q. Book paper of a weight equal to the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed; what would be the difference, if any, in the finish?—A. There might be considerable difference and there might not be any. It might be a highly finished book paper, equal to that of plate paper; also, it might be an ordinary finish which would notbe equal to that of plate.

Q. State whether, as a matter of fact, book paper is finished as highly as the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed.—A. It is sometimes.

Q. I will ask you to state if in fine book work the kind of paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed can be and is not frequently used?—A. I think not so heavy.

Q. You say book paper of that weight may be more highly finished sometimes?—A. It may be if it is made into a book. It can be finished that highly.

Q. Now, in point of fact, I will ask you if there is any difference between a book paper and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, both being of the same weight?—A. I must first say that book paper is not made usually so heavy as this—what is ordinarily termed book paper in the general sense of the word.

Q. But some paper is used in fine book work heavier than the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, is there not?—A. I don't know that there is; I don't believe I ever used any of it.

Q. Have you not frequently seen it in the publication of books, especially subscription books and Christmas books and children's books—a heavier and finer finished paper?—A. I don't know that I ever observed; I could not say that I have.

Q. Is there any difference between book paper and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, both being of the same weight; and if so, what is that difference?—A. If you say book paper in the general sense in which it is used, I would say there was a difference, from the fact that it is not made so heavy, also in the price of paper.

Q. Question repeated.—A. That is, if they were both of the same relative weight?

Q. Yes, sir; per ream. What would be the difference between book paper of that quality and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. If they were both the same weight and both finished alike, I would say that there would be no difference in the appearance of the paper, but there is in the price.

Q. I did not ask you about the finish; I asked you what difference there was between book paper and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, both being the same weight per ream?—A. That is a question I could not answer in a direct manner.

Q. Would one paper be finished more than the other?—A. It might be and it might not, according to the grade of paper that was used.

Q. I now hand you a specimen of white paper, marked Exhibit No. 3, to the deposition of C. B. Wing, and I will ask you to examine that paper and state what it is.—A. It is a light grade of western plate paper.

Q. What would that paper weigh per ream, size 22x28?—A. It is commonly made for an 80 pound paper, but it might vary a few pounds less than that.

Q. You keep in stock western plate paper in your business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever do any lithographic work on book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Upon which do you do the most work, on western plate paper or book paper?—A. Western plate-paper.

Q. Do you keep book paper in stock, too?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a piece of white paper marked Exhibit 5 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you to state what that is?—A. What is the size of these sheets?

Q. 25x38.—A. I should call them a piece of 70 pound, 25x38.

Mr. WILSON. What is that—book paper, did you say?

The WITNESS. I have not said yet. That might be termed a sheet 25x38 and 70 or 75 pound book paper; it might be called that.

Q. I will hand you this sheet, from which it came, and I will ask you to examine that.—A. It seems to be a sheet of supercalender book.

Q. How much will that weigh per ream, size 25x38?—A. I stated a while ago on the sheet I had in my hand, and what I meant to state when I stated the weight of that was on the basis of 22x28; I was not aware of the size of the sheets.

Q. What would be the weight of the paper 22x28 in that you answered a moment ago to Exhibit No. 5, that I now hand you?—A. That is the relative weight—22x28 sheet?

Q. Yes, sir; before you answer that question state if there is any difference between the paper of that Exhibit No. 5, that I hand you, and the paper you have got in your hand that I also handed you just now?—A. Between those two sheets?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. These look to be the same thing to me.

Q. Yes, sir; they are the same. I will ask you to state now what that paper would weigh per ream, size 22x28?—A. It is a very hard matter for a man to guess; I could only approximate it; I should say between 65 and 75 pounds.

Q. How much would it weigh, size 25x38?—A. I should think it would weigh in the neighborhood of 90 pounds.

Q. You think it would not go a little over that?—A. It might, but I would not want to state to the fraction. It is a pretty hard matter for a man to pick up a sheet of paper and tell the weight of it.

Q. Did you ever do any lithographing in your business on what is known as eastern plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you keep that in stock?—A. We do; we usually have a little on hand.

Q. Which kind of paper do you keep in stock the most of?—A. We use more of the western.

Q. How much of that do you usually keep on hand?—A. Sometimes we might have 100 pounds, or we might have 1,000, or 5 or 6 tons.

Q. The principal stock you keep on hand for your business is what is known as western plate?—A. Yes, sir; but we have the eastern always.

Q. Is your business principally lithographing?—A. No, sir; I could not say it is. Our business is largely printing blank books, and manufacturing is the principal part of it.

Q. I hand you a piece of paper marked Exhibit No. 7 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson. Will you please examine that and tell what it is?—A. I should pronounce that a piece of western plate paper.

Q. What would that paper probably weigh, size 22x28?—A. I should think that would weigh 80 pounds.

Q. What would it weigh size 25x38?—A. It would run from 100 to 110 pounds, I should think.

Q. If it weighed 22x28 the weight 25x38 of course would be higher?—A. Yes, sir; relatively higher. You can figure that up and tell to a pound, but I only speak of it by feeling the paper.

Q. Is that a heavier paper or not than the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. What would you think the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed would weigh, sheets 25x38—22x28?

(The contestant objected to counsel changing his question.)

A. I should say 100 pounds.

Q. I have changed the size to 22x28, and now you may state what it would weigh?—A. I would say 22x28 would run 55 to 60 pounds. It would be commonly known as 60 pound paper.

Q. 22x28?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if the size 25x38 would not be under 100 pounds per ream?—A. I think not by the proportion, without figuring.

Q. Which is the heaviest paper, the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed or that specimen of western plate paper No. 5, that I handed you a while ago?—A. I cannot remember. You will have to show me the paper. [Paper shown witness.] I should think there was a very little difference between them, if any. There certainly cannot be very much difference between them.

Q. State if you did not weigh that specimen yesterday that you have in your hands now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does it weigh (22x28) according to your weight?—A. 76 pounds.

Q. This specimen shown you would weigh more than the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed, size the same?—A. It would if we are right as to the basis of that—60 pounds. That would weigh the most.

Q. I will ask you, as a matter of fact, if you did not weigh both the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed and the material of this specimen that I show you, and if you did not discover that this specimen was heavier than the paper upon which the Republican ticket was printed?—A. I will state that I did weigh some Republican tickets you had, at your request, and figured it out, and found that 22x28 in a sheet of that paper which you furnished me tickets of——.

Q. Is that the same specimen of the tickets you handled?—A. I could not say that.

Q. What is your judgment about it?—A. I paid so little attention to it that I could not state.

Q. I will ask you to state if the tickets were not all like that?—A. They looked to be.

Q. State if by that the paper which you have identified as a poor quality of western plate paper was not a heavier grade of paper than the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed?—A. I believe there was one pound difference, was there not I think I stated that to you.

Q. The identical sheet identified as a poor quality of western plate paper was one pound heavier per ream according to your weight and figuring than the paper upon which the Republican ticket was printed.—A. I also stated to you, at the same time, that you might have gotten another sheet out of the same ream which would have varied. It might have been one pound lighter or one pound heavier still.

Q. The same run of papers vary in thickness and weight?—A. A little bit; yes, sir.

Q. And paper that would weigh by actual weight 76 pounds per ream would be regarded as an 80 pound paper, would it not, in the trade?—A. It would be termed as that. If you take one sheet out of the 80 pound paper, it may not weigh over 76, or it may weigh 78 or 77, and you may get another sheet that will run a little over 80 pounds. It varies a little bit.

Q. You are the same William B. Burford who was examined some weeks since on behalf of the contestants, are you not?—A. I presume I am.

Q. In your examination I believe you stated that you had sold paper of the character upon which that Republican ticket was printed, to the Journal Company, some time about a year ago, or before the election of 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much you sold?—A. I do not know that I could state to a sheet, but from memory, sitting here to-day, it was some 620 sheets, I believe.

Q. Was it this same kind of paper that this Republican ticket was printed on?—A. So far as my judgment goes, it was.

Q. State if it was not a heavier character of paper than the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. Was it not a heavier paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think not.

Q. Have you ever kept in stock any paper of the kind upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. I think I have.

Q. When?—A. I have some of it there now.

Q. Did you have some of it in stock last November?—A. We have it in stock all the time.

Q. How much of it did you have in stock last November probably of that kind of paper—a year ago now before the election in November?—A. I did not have a great deal of it at that time.

Q. Did you have any of that kind?—A. I think I did.

Q. The same grade and same quality?—A. I think so.

Q. And the same finish?—A. As near as I can judge.

Q. Manufactured by the same mill?—A. That I could not say. I could not say that.

Q. Where did you buy your plate papers?—A. The majority of them, recently, I purchased of the Cleveland Paper Company, although I buy from New York sometimes, and I have bought a good deal from Chatfield & Woods, Cincinnati.

Q. Did you buy any paper from Chatfield & Woods prior to the November election, 1882?—A. Just before that.

Q. Any time prior to that?—A. How long prior?

Q. For 6 months prior to November, 1882, did you buy any Western plate paper of Chatfield & Woods?—A. Not that I am aware of, from memory.

Q. Different mills differ somewhat in the manufacture of Western plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not true that there is a difference in Western plate papers?—A. There is.

Q. Of what does that difference consist?—A. Frequently in the stock they put in, and in the finish they put on and the sizing they put in.

Q. Do you answer now that you keep in stock all the time paper similar in quality and finish to the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. The majority of the time I have some of that kind, unless I just happen to be out. I do not intend to be out at all.

Q. I hand you a card marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of C. B. Wing, being a business card of C. H. Wittig. Please take that card and tell me what kind of material that is lithographed on.—A. It is card board.

Q. When paper reaches the grade of bristol board or card board, do you call it card board in your trade, or do you call it paper?—A. We call it card board.

Q. Then, when paper gets to the grade of card board and bristol board, it ceases to be called paper, does it—in the trade I mean now?—A. Well, yes; in that sense of the word it ceases.

Q. It is manufactured, however, out of paper?—A. Certainly it is made out of the same material that paper is.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it carefully and tell me what kind of paper it is?—A. It might be termed a low grade of book or an extra grade of print, whichever you want to call it. They are one and the same thing.

Q. Look at the words of that Democratic ticket. Are the type run together on that heading any?—A. I see one place where it is run together, but that may be from the ink spreading a little.

Q. Is not the word "Democratic" in one cut and the word "ticket" in another?—A. I would say no. I would say it was all on one piece. Just from the nature of things, a man would not go to work and engrave the words in that way.

Q. What I mean in the word "Democratic" are the letters engraved together and the word "ticket" on the same block engraved together, and if that don't make it a wood-cut?

(Objected to.)

Q. I ask the question if that is or is not an engraved head or wood-cut?—A. It is pretty hard to tell.

Q. What is your best judgment from your experience as an engraver, as to whether or not that is an engraving or a wood-cut?—A. It is either a wood-cut or a mighty poor job of type setting, one of the two, and I cannot tell which.

Q. What is your best judgment from your experience?—A. Have you got any more of them?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Let me have another piece.

Q. I now hand you three other tickets headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you to examine the heading of those tickets and tell me whether or not the heading of that ticket, the word "Democratic," is engraved or is a wood-cut or is printed from type?—A. You must make some allowance that I am not a practical printer or a practical engraver either. I am only the boss.

Q. How long have you been in the business?—A. About 13 years.

Q. You own the business, do you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your judgment?—A. The only thing in there that I could see that would make me think it was an engraved heading is that poor "D." The balance of it looks like type.

Q. Are the type of those tickets I handed you made together, or seem to be made together, on the same piece?—A. I think it is possible to set type of that font in that manner.

Q. I will ask you to state if the letters "cra," in the word "Democratic," and especially the letters "cr," are not made together?—A. That is just what I stated when I first picked up the ticket, that I say when those letters were joined together there, that it may be possible to do such a thing as that with type, and the ink make the difference if they are set so close.

Q. Is there not a good deal of regularity in the way the ink is spread on that ticket if it was type?—A. It would do the same way every time if there was ink enough on the press.

Q. What do you say as to whether that is an engraved head or a wood-cut or print from type? Your best judgment is all a man can get.—A. My first impression would be that it was a wood-cut.

Q. If that was your first impression, have you noticed anything new in the 5 or 10 minutes' time that you have been examining these tickets to disabuse your mind from that belief?—A. No, sir; I have not, but still I do not say that it is not possible to do that with type.

Q. Certainly. I ask your best impression. Don't it have the appearance of a wood cut?—A. It does.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence the three tickets headed "Demoratic ticket" which were exhibited to the witness, and ask that they be marked as exhibits to his deposition.

(The tickets referred to will be found attached to the deposition of this witness, as a part thereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 1, 2, and 3, respectively.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle says when paper gets to the grade of card-board you call it card-board in the trade, and your answer to that was "yes." What do you mean by the term "grade"? Do you mean when it gets to the thickness, or do you mean when it gets into the peculiar style in which card-board is gotten up that you call it card-board?—A. In the manner in which card-board is made and gotten up.

Q. Is it not true that there is a bristol that is thinner than some paper?—A. It is.

Q. And that is thinner than plate-paper—at any rate, than Western plate-paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So when you refer to the word "grade" you refer to the peculiar make and structure. What is the structure and make of card-board?—A. Well, there is quite a number of kinds of card-board. The finest card-board we have is made out of two or more sheets of paper pasted together. That is what we call the best card-board, or bristol.

Q. That is two-ply?—A. Yes, sir; that is two-ply, and then there is what we call machine-made bristol, in which the pulp goes in between the rollers and comes out the thickness of card-board, only in a single sheet.

Q. Then it is true that card-board is made in a single sheet?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And made finer than plate-paper?—A. It can be; yes, sir.

Q. Card-board can be made any number of flies by pasting one upon the other, can it not?—A. They don't usually make a card-board out of more than two sheets; but we use a heavier sheet to make a heavier board, and then term that one, two, or three ply.

Q. I am speaking of what could be done. You could place a good many sheets together and make a very stout, many-ply card-board?—A. I suppose a man could call it that.

Q. What are the sheets that are pasted together to make two-ply or three-ply card-board?—A. It is rag writing-paper.

Q. Then it is writing-paper pasted together, and you call that card-board?—A. That is pasted card-board.

Q. Then it is paper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; it is paper.

Mr. PEELLE. You mean it is made out of paper?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; it is made out of paper.

Q. And is paper, is it not?—A. It is called card-board.

Q. But it is paper, as a matter of fact?—A. I presume it is, if it has not been changed.

Q. You have taken paper and pasted the sheets together, and made what you call card-board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or you can take a single sheet and run it through the mill and have just one sheet of paper, and you can cut it into cards and call it a card, and it can be sold for card-board—that is, one ply?—A. Yes; if it is made heavy enough.

Q. In the trade, is plate called plate-paper or plate, or is there any exclusive rule on that subject?—A. It is catalogued as plate-paper, I believe.

Q. In talking of it, how do you speak of it?—A. We speak of it as plate-paper.

Q. Is it not sometimes called plate and sometimes lithographic plate?—A. Yes, sir; a man may catalogue and not care to repeat the word "paper" every time, because he knows that the trade knows what it is, and it will read "No. 2 plate" or "No. 3 plate" or "No. 1 plate."

Q. Is it sometimes catalogued as plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; and indexed as plate paper. You will find it indexed as plate paper.

Q. Will you please tell us why it is termed plate paper, if you know, as distinguished from book paper?—A. The principal reason, I presume, is the weight and size, and the weights into which it is commonly manufactured, which are not made in the book.

Q. Is the finish different?—A. It may or may not be.

Q. You can finish book paper as you finish plate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is book paper generally finished?—A. There is a variety in that.

Q. Ordinary book and ordinary plate; I will use it in that sense.—A. Ordinary book is not so well finished as what is commonly termed plate paper.

Q. What is the difference usually between ordinary book and ordinary plate paper in point of weight? We are not judging this by the extreme cases.—A. No; I understand. The average weight of ordinary book paper, and you speak of it in that sense of the word, is 40 to 45 pound paper; the sheets 25×38.

Q. The average ordinary plate-paper, sheets 25×38, what is the weight of that?—A. It would run from 80 to 100 pounds.

Q. That is the average now of which class—that is, the difference between the average, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now then plate paper is usually used for what? What use is ordinary plate paper put to—the general use?—A. Show-cards, I believe; and they have it that portraits are lithographed on, and frontispieces for publication in the books, lithographic frontispieces, and heavy map paper, and for any class of colored work, and chromo work. A chromo is usually printed on what is called plate paper.

Q. Is it not generally used for pictures and lithographic engravings?—A. It is most always used for that; that is, most of the engravings and lithographs of this kind are worked on plate paper; but plate paper is used for other purposes.

Q. Why is it called plate paper; do you know?—A. I do not know that I can state exact. It is a distinct name that they have always given it for a peculiar class of paper commonly used by lithographers.

Q. What is the common use of book paper?—A. For the publication of books.

Q. Did you have any of Chatfield & Wood's Woodsdale plate in November, 1882, in stock?—A. No, sir.

Q. Whose make of plate paper was it that you sold to the Journal Company at the time you referred to in your examination-in-chief?—A. The Cleveland Paper Company.

Q. I understand you to say that plate paper is made and used principally for lithographic engravings?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is not that true of Western plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The paper that you sold to the Journal Company, did you get it for any particular purpose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what purpose?

(Objected to as immaterial and not proper cross-examination.)
A. I got it for plates in the Geological Report.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you carry that kind of paper in stock as plate paper in your establishment?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you bought that paper for a geological work. Why did you not use it for that?—A. We did use all we wanted. We had that much left. We always buy a little more than we want for a special job.

Q. Did you buy that of the Cleveland Paper Company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do they keep that kind of paper in stock all the time?—A. They keep it in stock. I do not suppose they generally keep much of any kind. They run mostly as they are ordered.

Q. What time did you buy that of the Cleveland Paper Company, if you remember?—A. It was along in the summer time.

Q. Of 1882?—A. Yes; I am not positive; I cannot tell; but it was along in June or July.

Q. Did you buy through the house of which Mr. W. O. De Vay is connected here?—A. No, sir; not through the Indiana Paper Company—yes, it did come through him. He was agent in the city, and I think I gave him the order; but sometimes I would send my orders directly to Cleveland and sometimes I would give them to him.

Q. Do they keep stock on hand here in the Indiana Paper Co. of all kinds of plate paper and everything they deal in?—A. Yes, sir; they aim to. They aim to keep all the kinds we want.

Q. I hand you a catalogue of Chatfield & Woods for 1882, marked as Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson. Is that a standard catalogue?—A. I presume it would be termed so.

Q. Please turn to the index, under the head of plate papers, and see how it is indexed.—A. It is indexed as plate papers.

Q. What page does that refer to?—A. Page 39.

Q. Please turn to page 39 and see how it is carried there.—A. It is classified as western and eastern plate papers.

Q. Then it is catalogued as plate papers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And indexed as plate papers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the catalogue of Chatfield & Woods?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever know it indexed in any other way; and, if so, in what catalogue?—A. I never knew it to be indexed other than plate or plate papers.

Q. Did you ever know it catalogued in any other way than plate papers, and, if so, what catalogue?—A. I do not know that I can say that I have, but I have seen catalogues, but I could not give you the name of where it would be, where it was just No. 1 plate, No. 2 plate, just simply to distinguish them. At the head of the page would be plate papers.

Q. What do you understand by the terms "No. 1" and "No. 2 plate"?—A. That is the grade. No. 1 eastern, and 2 western.

Q. You say at the head of the page often there are the words "plate papers"?—A. It is usually marked in that way.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. This catalogue reads on the outside, "Price list. Chatfield & Woods, manufacturers of paper, Cincinnati, 1882," does it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on the 4th page I find it is noted: "To the trade: We take pleasure in presenting to the trade a revised catalogue. Prices are somewhat lower, but firm. The demand for all grades of papers is active, and, as a general thing, stocks on hand are not large. We look for a steady trade at present quoted prices. Any changes that may occur our customers shall have the benefit of. We shall aim to keep our stock very complete in papers enumerated in this catalogue. We have large facilities for making all grades of paper of odd sizes and weights, on short notice, and such orders, together with orders for staple goods, are respectfully solicited, and shall have our prompt and best attention. Chatfield & Woods. April 1, 1882."

(Objected to as not cross-examination, and that the catalogue will show for itself.)

Q. I will ask you to look over that catalogue and see if you do not find in that catalogue bags, banker's parchment, envelopes, bill-heads, blank card-sheets, plate paper, bonnet boards, book paper, Bristol card-sheets, Buckeye Mills plate papers, card-sheets, and cloth paper, wrapping paper, and, in fact, all species of things pretty near out of which papers are made.

(Objected to as not cross-examination, and for the further reason that the catalogue and index therein will show for themselves.)

Q. Is not that true as viewed in the index of the catalogue, and are they not in the catalogue?

(Objected to for the same reason.)

A. Yes, sir; it is true.

JOHN H. VAJEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John H. Vajen; age, 55; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Well, I am a hardware merchant.

Q. Are you engaged in any other business in the city?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are you not in the banking business?—A. I have an interest in the bank, and am a director there, but that is about all.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. Since 1851.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The 11th ward and 3d precinct.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was that?—A. Inspector.

Q. You received the tickets that were voted that day at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted there on that day.—A. Yes, sir; as near as I can recollect.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the the Democrats on that occasion.—A. Yes, sir; it looks very much like it.

Q. State if, when those tickets are folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are usually folded when being voted, if you could tell by sight one ticket from the other.—A. No; it is very difficult. I know we talked there that day at the polls about that, and I know the challengers outside tried to tell, and they looked pretty close, and they missed it as often as they hit it.

Q. Could you, as inspector, when receiving those tickets, tell by sight one of those tickets from the other?—A. Not very well. I know we guessed at it two or three times, talking about it inside there, and we missed it as often as we could tell it. When it came to us folded, we could tell that one was a little thicker than the other.

Q. Could you, by sight, from the external appearance of the tickets, tell one from the other?—A. No, sir; not generally.

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, that day tell one from the other by its external appearance?—A. It was thought that one was a little whiter than the other, but we missed it on that several times. I know the challengers looked very closely frequently before they let me receive a vote, to see if they could make out whether it was a Republican ticket or a Democratic ticket, and they missed it.

Q. Did the challengers on both sides try to do that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they could not tell one from the other by sight?—A. They missed it several times.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You put your glasses on when you went to look at those tickets, to see which was which, did you not?—A. I put my glasses on to read those names there.

Q. Did you try very hard, acting as inspector, to try to find out what men's politics were?—A. No.

Q. You did not try, and really did not want to know, as inspector, what the politics of the men were?—A. No, sir; I did not care anything about that.

Q. You didn't desire to know the difference between the tickets, if there was one?—A. No; but I knew in my own mind. There was a little sport over it, and sometimes the wrong party would challenge a man, and when he would actually vote their ticket; and so would the other side do the same thing.

Q. They were challenging those men because they had no right to vote?—A. No, sir; the contest was pretty hot, and they would be pressed if they thought they were not voting that ticket on that side; that is all. Both sides did that.

JOHN H. VAJEN.

ALFRED D. CLARKE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Alfred D. Clarke; 45 years old; residence, 121 N. Miss. St., Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. I came here the last time in 1871.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis, altogether?—A. I came here in 1857, and left in 1867, and came back in 1871.

Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. I am engaged in the book and stationery business—Bowen, Stewart & Co.

Q. What position do you occupy there?—A. I am head of the retail department.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. Twenty odd years, altogether.
Q. Has Mr. Bowen been one of the proprietors of that establishment all the time?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is S. T. Bowen?—A. Silas T. Bowen.
Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. I am, sir.
Q. Do you handle paper down there in your establishment?—A. We handle papers, but my department is such that I do not have anything to do with paper; at one time I did handle paper very largely, and knew more about it than I do now.
Q. Could you tell a piece of white paper if you saw it, as to what kind of paper it was?—A. I could not as an expert.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday; and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine the paper upon which it is printed, and tell me from your knowledge and experience in the business, what kind of paper that is, if you can?—A. I should consider that paper a book paper.
Q. What grade of book?—A. An inferior grade of heavy book paper.
Q. Have you books in stock in your establishment containing paper as heavy or heavier than that?—A. Yes, sir; we have.
Q. What class of books?—A. Two classes of books. We have a class of books made by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.—the Riverside Press—that contains some paper as heavy as this, although a better grade, and we have some books made by subscription men of a similar grade to this, lighter and heavier.
Q. Have you books in stock containing paper as heavy as that, that is as fine or better finished?—A. We have a better finish.
Q. What class of books is that?—A. First-class books.
Q. Are they extraordinary books, or books that are kept in stock?—A. No, sir; they are usually kept in stock. They are made by the Riverside Press, by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and a new edition—the subscription edition of Longfellow—is made on paper like this, but heavier and finer.
Q. Can you tell what the weight of that paper would be?—A. No; I do not think I could, but I should think it would weigh in the neighborhood of 60 pounds to the ream—or 50 pounds.
Q. What size?—A. 25 × 36, if that is the regular size.
Q. Can you tell anything about the weight of it by that size?—A. No, sir; I should think it was about a 50-pound paper, or 100 pounds to the ream. All papers are put up in two reams to the bundle, and this paper, I should think, would run about 50 pounds to the ream. I mean a ream of 480 sheets, 100 pounds to the bundle, 960 sheets.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What books have you got in your establishment? How many volumes do you carry in stock?—A. If my name was Tyler, of the library, I could tell you exactly; but I cannot.
Q. What do you guess?—A. Ten years ago, just for the name of the thing, I went over and estimated the volumes at that time, and we had about 20,000 volumes—I should say we had—bound books?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. 20,000 volumes.
Q. How many of all kinds have you got—bound and unbound?—A. That is a pretty hard question to answer. As near as I can judge, I suppose it would run in the neighborhood—of course you mean in the establishment?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. We have got probably 40,000 volumes. We now carry a large line of bound books up stairs.
Q. I will ask you what books you have that are printed on material like this Republican ticket that Mr. Peelle showed you?—A. The Longfellow subscription. For a fine book, the subscription edition of the Longfellow poems—the new edition of two volumes quarto; that is a very fine book, and a very much finer grade of paper—that is one; and almost any book made by the American Publishing Co., of Hartford, Conn., or the U. S. Publishing Co., are on that grade of paper. These books we have carried, but I do not think we have many of them now. It is principally subscription books. They are made heavy to make a big volume and a big book.
Q. If this material upon which the Republican ticket is printed weighs 100 pounds to the ream——A. To the bundle.
Q. To the ream, I say. If it does weigh 100 pounds to the ream, would you still insist on the proposition you made that those two houses you named had a number of books printed on that stuff?—A. I certainly should, taking that for a sample.
Q. I say, if this weighs 100 pounds to the ream, you think you have books printed on paper 100 pounds to the ream?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my judgment.
Q. Give me the names of these.—A. George Elliott, made by John W. Lovell & Co.
Q. I ask you have you got any book in your house from these houses you have named on paper 100 pounds to the ream?—A. I do not know, sir; I cannot answer that. It is impossible for me to answer that, and I cannot tell you; but as near as I can judge the paper, I would call that 50 pounds.

Q. I suppose it is 100.—A. It may be, but that sample of paper you have in your hand I can show you books in the store that are just as heavy, but a finer grade. The works of George Elliott, 8 or 9 volumes, and printed by John W. Lovell & Co., and I think "The Ladies of the White House," a book made some place in Connecticut; the paper may not be quite so heavy, but the same grade, and I do not remember. I cannot give you the name of special books, although we have them.

Q. If I come to your place of business you will let me inspect some of them?—A. I will; yes, sir.

Q. How many volumes would you say you had in your establishment out of that 40,000 that were printed on material that was as heavy as this Republican ticket?—A. I will answer that question by saying this: that the books that have been made by such houses as John W. Lovell & Co., of New York, and we carried those books, and have carried them, but we don't carry them now. I cannot tell you; it is impossible for a man to sit here and tell you anything about a thing of that kind. I cannot do it.

Q. What is your impression?—A. We carry a line of 12 books made by Porter & Coats, of Philadelphia, that I will show you, if you wish to come there and look at them. They are put up in thin and thick volumes, and you can examine them yourself.

A. D. CLARKE.

JOHN COBURN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John Coburn; 58 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am an attorney.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the practice of the law?—A. Well, I began to practice law about the year of 1853; I have not practiced all the time since, but I have practiced most of the time.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official positions?—A. Yes, sir; I was in the legislature once, and I was judge of the common pleas court and of the circuit court, and a member of the house awhile.

Q. How many years were you a member of Congress?—A. Eight years.

Q. Were you one of the Hot Springs commissioners?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in the year 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. I did.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday; please examine that and state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used or not, to the best of your knowledge?—A. I think both of them are the tickets used at that election.

Q. State what material difference, if any, there is between the length and width of those tickets?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the tickets speak for themselves.)

A. I see no very material difference; I see hardly any difference.

Q. When these tickets are folded in the hands of the voter as tickets are ordinarily folded, with the names inside, could you tell, from the external appearance of the tickets, one from the other, standing and looking on at the polls?—A. I see a little difference in the paper; one is a little more glossy than the other, but they are about the same color.

Q. Could you when they were folded in the hands of a voter tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. I could, I suppose, if I would take them from the hands of the voter and make a close inspection; and I say that the paper of one is a little more glossy than the other.

Q. As tickets are ordinarily folded in the hands of a voter, could you tell from the external appearance of the ticket what a man was voting?—A. I think it very doubtful whether I could.

Q. Did you or not?—A. I did not; I can say I saw men voting there, and did not distinguish between the two tickets by the appearance of the tickets; I saw nothing in the appearance of the tickets that attracted my attention—no difference in the tickets that attracted my attention; I afterwards heard that there was a difference

Q. Did you hear of any objection or complaint being made to that ticket on that day in any way?—A. I did not. I did not hear of any difference as to the texture or size or color of the tickets printed that day.

Q. State if that ticket contains any distinguishing mark or other embellishment, except the names of the candidates and the office to which they were voted for?—A. It does. It has "Republican ticket" at the top of it.

Q. Is that a distinguishing mark as known in the statute?

(Objected to as a conclusion of law.)

A. Each ticket has the name of the party—one has "Republican ticket" and the other "Democratic ticket" at the head of it. That is the only thing I could see to distinguish either of them. They have the same distinguishing mark, so far as that is concerned, in the samples at the head of the ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was your attention called that day to the fact that those tickets differed?—A. It was not.

Q. And you, therefore, did not pay any attention to the difference?—A. I did not. I do not think I heard a word said about it.

JOHN COBURN.

CONRAD BAKER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Conrad Baker; age, 66; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a lawyer.

Q. A member of the firm of Baker, Hord & Hendricks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What official positions have you occupied in this State?—A. Well, sir, I have been——

Q. So many that you cannot remember?—A. No, sir; hardly that. I have been governor of the State for a time, and have been a member of the legislature, and judge of the court.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I voted in the second ward and first precinct.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked as Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans that day.—A. I can only say it looks like it; I should think it was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday; and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that day.—A. I really know nothing about that, because I do not know that my attention was called to it at all.

Q. Your attention was not called to that?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you if, when the tickets are folded in the hands of a voter as he comes up to the ballot-box with his ticket in his hand, by sight could you or did you distinguish one ticket from the other?—A. No, sir; I could not.

Q. Did you that day?—A. No, sir; I did not know that there was any peculiarity about the Republican ticket until the day after, I think it was, that Mr. McDonald called my attention to it.

Q. You voted the ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it is distinguishable from the other in that it is printed upon thicker paper.

Q. Although you voted it that day?—A. I did not know it until afterwards.

Q. Did you hear any complaint that day about the character of the ticket?—A. I did not; no, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How long were you at the precinct at which you voted?—A. A short time; not long.

Q. You were not around the polls that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. You simply went there and voted the Republican ticket, and went off to attend to your business?—A. Yes, sir; I might have been there a little while, but not long.

Q. You refer to Senator McDonald when you speak of that?—A. Yes, sir; his objection to the ticket was that if it was folded together it might fly apart and be the means of voting tissue ballots.

Mr. PEELLE. You heard of no such complaint as that anywhere, did you?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

CONRAD BAKER.

By agreement of all the parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Friday, November 16, 1883.

FRIDAY, November 16, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

BRUCE CARR, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name and residence.—A. Bruce Carr; 28 Bates block, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am agent for the book publishing house of Cincinnati.

Q. Agent for this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. Nine years.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Sixteenth ward, second precinct; the one right opposite the Grand Hotel, on Maryland street.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity?—A. I was challenger.

Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. From 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening. I do not think I was away more than five minutes.

Q. How far away were you from the ballot-box when the tickets were being voted?—A. As close as I could get to the window.

Q. Did you observe the tickets that were voted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A, to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that was the ticket used on that occasion, or a similar ticket.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used on that occasion by the Democrats.—A. Yes, sir; so far as I can judge now; those are the same or similar tickets used.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded as tickets are ordinarily folded by the voters, if you could distinguish one ticket from the other as they were being voted, from their external appearance.—A. I could say that it was a matter of speculation among the challengers on both sides as to what kinds of tickets men voted, and I believe they never could tell from the appearance of the ticket what tickets were voted. I could not tell; I am sure of that.

Q. State what effect that ticket had on the secrecy of the ballot at that precinct.—A. None, I think; none that I know of. It did not, so far as I could see, at all.

Q. I want to ask you what kind of books you handle in your business?—A. School books, McGuffy's Reader, &c.

Q. Are you familiar with the different qualities of the school-book paper?—A. I am; so far as they put them in our books.

Q. State as to the quality of paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed, compared with the paper used in the books you are selling.—A. In many of our books we have a heavier paper than that that the votes were on; a considerably heavier and different paper.

Q. What class of book?—A. We do not publish anything but school books and books for teachers. We have no miscellaneous books at all.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the technical names of paper?—A. I have not; no, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. By handling these tickets, can you tell one from the other by the touch?—A. I suppose, yes; by close manipulation I could.

Q. Did you try?—A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you see and tell the difference that day between those tickets?—A. As men were voting them?

Q. No, sir; when you were handling them?—A. No, sir; such a thing never occurred to me.

Q. You did not really notice the difference between them?—A. It is my recollection that I noticed that the Republican tickets, individually, were printed on a little heavier paper, but I did not charge myself with it and I do not know. I did not charge myself with the fact, and when they were voted and in the hands of the voter I could not tell the difference.

Q. You did not try to tell or learn the difference between those tickets that day after handling them?—A. I do not think I could have learned in the handling as men were voting.

Q. I did not ask you about that.—A. No, sir, I did not; particularly with reference to telling the difference.

Q. Could an expert, in your opinion, tell the difference?—A. I could not say.

Q. Then you could not say what the effect was on the secrecy of the ballot, if the inspector could tell?—A. Very likely the inspector might know more about it; I did not notice. I paid attention to the tickets that were being voted; that was my business.

Q. If the inspector could tell the difference in those tickets, would not that destroy the secrecy of it, in a measure?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I do not know anything about what the inspector did; I was not an inspector.

Q. You are not able to say what the effect of the use of that ticket was upon the secrecy of the ballot?—A. So far as I say, from my own standpoint, I could not say that it had any effect at all.

Q. If the inspector could tell, to that extent it would impair the secrecy?—A. I do not know whether the inspector did or not.

Q. That is not the question. I assume that he did know the difference.—A. I did not say that it would have any other difference. I could not say that it would. When a man came up to present his ballot to the inspector he would take it and put it in the box, and I could not say that that would have any effect at all.

Q. So it is in that sense you use the words, "impair the secrecy of the ballot," from the standpoint of your last remark?—A. Yes, sir; I do not see what effect it could have on any ultimate result, or the result of the ballot, or any end for which the was done, or I could not say that it would have any effect, because the inspector had to receive the ballot and deposit it just as the voter gave it to him.

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant, and as being a small stump speech.)

Q. Were you at any other precinct that day than that?—A. No, sir.

Q. That is the only one you were at?—A. Yes, sir; that was the only precinct I was at during the day.

Q. What is the weight of a ream, size 25x38 inches, of the paper that you say is the heaviest that you use in your books?—A. I could not tell you. I could bring you samples of the books.

Q. What book have you that is gotten up in that style?—A. We have a book on elocution, by James E. Murdock.

Q. Do you know the number of pages of that volume?—A. I suppose there is about three hundred or three hundred and fifty.

Q. That is the heaviest that you have?—A. I do not remember that that is the heaviest; we have the works on kindergartens, by Pestalozzi, possibly on heavier paper.

Q. And juvenile books are published on cloth?—A. Yes, sir; nursery books.

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And pretty active?—A. I have never been very active; I have never had any authority and I have never had any position.

Q. You are enthusiastic, too?—A. No, sir; I do not get worked up more than one day in the year or two, and that is election day.

BRUCE CARR.

W. R. HOLLOWAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Redirect examination by Mr. PEELLE:

A. State your age, name, and residence.—A. W. R. Holloway; 46 years old; residence, Indianapolis.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. Since 1861.

Q. What business are you engaged in?—A. I am president of the Indianapolis Times Company.

Q. Is that a daily paper?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the newspaper business?—A. Ever since I was 16 years old.

Q. As a printer and as a publisher of a paper?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever State printer in this State?—A. Yes.

Q. And had the buying and handling of paper?—A. Yes.

Q. What grades of paper?—A. I have bought all kinds of paper; particularly book and newspaper.

Q. Were you at the Congressional election in November, in this city, in 1882?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Ninth ward, Western precinct.

Q. Did you stay at the polls any considerable part of the time?—A. I was there most all the time.

Q. Who was the inspector at the precinct where you voted?—A. I think George Anderson was, but I am not sure.

Q. Did you act in any offical capacity there?—A. No.

Q. Did you see the tickets voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted at that precinct that day?—A. Yes. I guess that is.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposion of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted by the Democrats there that day?—A. Yes; I guess it was.

Q. I will ask you to state if you could tell the difference or distinguish one of those tickets from the other by sight, as they were being voted?—A. Not unless I was up close to them I could not.

Q. As they were usually folded and voted?—A. No; I think not.

Q. State what kind of paper that Republican ticket is printed on, if you know?—A. That is number two, book.

Q. Do you handle such as that in your business?—A. Yes.

Q. What kind of paper is that Democratic ticket printed on?—A. Number one, book.

Q. The Democratic ticket?—A. Yes; I think it is.

Q. Do you mean number one or three?—A. Maybe they do number them that way. I expect it is number three.

Q. Is that Republican ticket on a calendered paper or supercalendered paper?—A. When you come to ask me that, I do not know. It is calendered, of course. I do not know what the difference is. It is calendered paper. Anybody can tell about that.

Q. Is that such paper that is known in this city and State as a book paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes.

Q. What is the color of that paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. They are both white paper.

Q. What kind of white paper; plain white?—A. Certainly, it is plain white. There are no water marks on it, or anything of that kind on it.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. At what stage is book paper sized?—A. What do you mean by stage, in it?

Q. In the process of the manufacture.—A. I do not know anything about the manufacture of paper at all.

Q. Did you ever handle plate papers?—A. Not much.

Q. Do you know much about them?—A. Not very much. I know them when I see them. I know it from the sizing of it. I never had anything to do with it.

Q. Do you know it from the sizing or heft and thickness; is it heavier than book paper?—A. Yes, sir; a good deal heavier. There is no book paper as heavy as plate paper.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, could you not, if you got a fair chance, tell them by sight?—A. If I was close up; I could tell any kind of paper if I was close to it; but unless I was close to it I could not tell it.

Q. You are a Republican.—A. Yes.

Q. And edit a Republican organ?—A. Yes. I am not much of an organ, but I am on a Republican paper.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if, at elections prior to 1882, you have been able to distinguish tickets by the feeling of them, in this city.—A. I never saw a ticket that I could not tell when I was near the ballot-box.

Q. Could you, prior to the election of 1882, distinguish them by sight?—A. Yes, sir; I always could.

Q. State what effect that ticket had on the secrecy of the ballot.—A. I do not think it had any.

Q. State if, in consequence of the tickets being about the same length and about the same width and about the same color, if there would not be a less marked difference between those two tickets than there has been at elections in this city prior to 1882.

(Objected to.)

A. I would not like to testify about tickets heretofore. I do not recollect anything about them. I recollect I could always distinguish them, and I always knew on my going about the polls, and told what ticket a man was voting, if I could see his ticket.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, with the words "For President, James A. Garfield," and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at the Presidential election in 1880.—A. Yes, sir; I should think so.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the Presidential ticket used in 1880.—A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you to fold those two tickets.—A. I could distinguish those very easily.

There is no trouble about it in the world; anybody that knows anything about paper could do that.

Q. Could you more readily distinguish those two tickets by sight than the other?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?—A. Because they are not the same size and a different colored paper entirely.

Q. Allowing for the elapse of time for coloring the paper?—A. It is a different paper entirely when it was new.

Q. What kind of paper is that?—A. Book paper.

Q. What difference is there between that kind and the paper upon which the Republican ticket voted in 1882 was printed?—A. None whatever; they are the same kind of paper.

W. R. HOLLOWAY.

BRAINARD RORISON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Brainard Rorison; age, 36; Indianapolis.

Q. What is your business?—A. The insurance business.

Q. How long have you been engaged in that business?—A. Since 1866.

Q. Do you occupy any official position in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. A member of the board of aldermen.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Eleventh ward and third precinct.

Q. Did you act in any official capacity there?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were you doing at the polls?—A. I was at the polls in the interest of the election.

Q. Very much of the day or a short time?—A. I was there nearly all day.

Q. Did you see the tickets as they were voted there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit A to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you if that is the ticket that was used on that occasion by the Republicans?—A. I judge it was; yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that day?—A. I judge so; yes, sir.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded, as tickets are ordinarily folded when being voted, if you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight?—A. Well, on that day I thought I could tell, but I was contradicted so many times by parties that voted, that I never felt certain about it.

Q. State whether you did or not distinguish one from the other that day by sight?—A. I am not able to say that I could distinguish one from the other with any certainty.

Q. Did you observe very closely?—A. I tried; yes, sir; and I stood right at the chute.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You could tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have been able to do that with tickets at elections prior to 1882?—A. Yes, sir; by handling them I could tell the difference.

BRAINARD RORISON.

J. G. SEXTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. J. G. Sexton; 85 West Michigan st., Indianapolis, Ind.; age, 30.

Q. What is your business?—A. Practical printer, and do a job printing business on the corner of Pennsylvania and Market streets.

Q. Are you engaged with any one?—A. John B. Jacques.

Q. How long have you been in the business?—A. Between 4 and 5 years.

Q. Are you familiar with the different grades of paper?—A. Yes, sir; with the different grades of paper used in the job printing business.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to take that and examine it, and state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. I would take that to be a heavy grade of No. 2 book paper; a very good quality of No. 2 book paper. That is, I mean very heavy weight; a very good grade of No. 2 book paper.

Q. Is it sized and supercalendered paper?—A. Well, I think not; I should take that to be a sized and calendered paper.

Q. Are you familiar with plate numbers?—A. Well, not as familiar as I am with so-called book papers.

Q. And from your knowledge of paper you would pronounce that a No. 2 book?—A. No. 2 book paper, sized and calendered as distinguished from a sized and supercalendered.

Q. What would you think the weight of that paper would be, size 25 by 38?—A. Well, it is a hard matter to get at but I should say not less than 100 pounds, and probably not more than 110 pounds to the ream, 480 sheets.

Q. I hand you a piece of white paper; will you please examine it and tell me what it is?—A. That is what they sell for number one book paper; that is one specimen of what they sell for No. 1 book paper, but there are a great many different grades and kinds of No. 1 book paper.

Q. Does the weight or thickness of paper determine the number?—A. No; those papers come in all weights—No. 1 comes in all weights.

Q. State if that paper is sized and super-calendered or merely calendered.—A. They sell that for sized and supercalendered; I guess it is supercalendered paper.

Q. Is that a finer finish or less finish than that upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. This is a more highly finished paper than that.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer this ticket in evidence as part of the deposition of the witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The ticket will be found attached to the deposition of this witness as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. Is that paper which you say is one grade of No. 1 book paper, a better finish or an inferior finish to the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. It is probably a better finish and better surface, but probably not any better stock. I doubt if it is as good; this is not a first-class quality of paper, by any means.

Q. That specimen I hand you?—A. Yes, sir. This is not a first-class quality of paper, although they sell it as No. 1 book and call it sized and super-calendered paper, but there is not good stock in it.

Q. Do you keep that kind of paper in stock?—A. Yes, sir; you can distinguish it by the glossy surface from smooth hard surface, and ink shows clearer, but still that is rotten and don't wear.

Q. What is the color of the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. I should call that white paper. That is what we call tinted paper.

Q. The specimen I hand you?—A. It is one of a slight tone, but it is hard to tell whether a thing is white. There are tints and tones, and a man may be more or less color blind. I am not prepared to say that is white or that it is not white, although that seems to be whiter than those [indicating].

Q. Which seems to be whiter?—A. The paper on which the ticket is printed seems to be whiter than the other.

Q. Would you, in your business, generally, call tha t paper upon which that ticket is printed plain white paper?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. Yes, sir; I would not take that paper to be a tinted paper; I would buy it for white paper. I would not object to it on account of the color.

Q. Are there different shades of plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir. It is very hard for me to tell sometimes whether paper is white or tinted.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer in evidence the specimen of paper just handed to the witness and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The paper will be found attached to the deposition of the witness as a part thereof and marked as Exhibit No. 2.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILLON:

Q. What is the difference between No. 1, 2, and 3 book paper?—A. Well, I hardly know how to answer that question. The No. 1 book paper is sized and super calendered, that is, it has a finer finish and is generally supposed to have a better grade of stock and more suitable for cut work; where you want to use a fine grade of ink you have to have a surface that the ink will not tear. No. 2 book paper is, of course, on paper not so good, but to determine between the two it is necessary to have some little experience; a great many people would not be able to tell the difference between No. 1 and 2 unless they had some experience, and No. 3 book paper is simply a good grade of news paper; at least I have never been able to find any difference.

Q. What is the difference in the price of manufacturing these papers, if you know?—A. I am not very familiar with the process of manufacturing paper; I have never been about paper mills and do not know much about it; my knowledge of the paper is just what I have gained from my experience in the business of job printing.

Q. You do not know anything about the manufacture of paper?—A. Very little.

Q. Do you know the difference between book paper and plate paper?—A. Well, there are a great many of those book papers that very much resemble plate paper, and unless the distinction was rather marked I do not know whether I would be able to tell one from the other or not.

Q. Is that material upon which that Republican ticket is printed a plate paper?—A. I should never take that for plate paper.

Q. What is the difference between book and plate paper?—A. There is not a great deal of difference between what I generally bought for common plate paper; there is very little difference between that and No. 1 eastern book paper; probably one side is a little more finely finished than the other.

Q. In the case of the plate?—A. Yes, sir; it takes a good while and quick sense of touch to discover the difference very often. Now, if that was a finer grade of paper it would be still more difficult for me to determine; there are some plate papers in this book that are very fine plate papers, and some, also, in this book [indicating]—there you see the distinction is very marked and most anybody could tell.

Q. What is that?—A. A plate paper; that is where the idea is to print on one side and they want a fine surface to hold the ink.

Q. You say that is plate paper that you looked at in the catalogue that is called Robinson Brothers' Printing Ink Works at the second page, with a large red square in it "Robinson Brothers," you say that is plate?—A. Yes, sir; that is what I have bought and handled as fine plate paper, and my testimony on that point would not be as valuable as a paper manufacturer's; that is understood, of course; I do not intend to be a judge or expert on that.

Q. How many of those pages in there are plate?—A. The first four leaves I would call plate paper.

Mr. PEELLE. Why in that connection?

The WITNESS. Because one side is finely finished, after the manner of plate paper.

Q. I call your attention to this catalogue, "Gray's Ferry Printing Ink Works," that has some pictures in it. What is the quality of the material upon which those pictures are found?—A. That is a No. 1 Eastern book paper.

Q. Is that or not an engraving?—A. Yes; that is an engraving; that is a wood cut; you can see quite a difference in the texture and finish in those papers.

Q. That is No. 1 book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the best paper that is made?—A. Yes, sir; there is no better paper.

Q. You say that the pictures in this now which has been put in as an exhibit are on No. 1 book paper?—A. Yes, sir; that is, according to my judgment, Eastern book.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that book as Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of the witness.

The book will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 3.

Q. You say those four pictures are wood cust?—A. I would pronounce them wood cuts.

Q. You think it would be hard to tell the difference in many instances between a plate and book paper. What class of book paper do you refer to?—A. I refer to No. 1 book paper, of course.

Q. Which is the heaviest, book or plate paper?—A. Generally speaking, plate papers are heavier than book papers, as they are generally kept in stock and the general run of stock in the paper house; of course the papers are not much heavier.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket marked Exhibit 2, to the deposition of W. O. Anderson, headed "National ticket"; what is the material upon which that ticket is printed?—A. I think that is what they call chemical newspaper; that is what I have bought for chemical newspaper, I think.

Q. What is this paper to which I call your attention, marked Exhibit No. 6, to the deposition of W. O. Anderson?—A. I do not want to appear to be very expert in this matter; I would call that a No. 1 book paper; No. 1 western book.

Q. I call your attention to the specimen there, and ask you what you call that material?—A. That is just the hardest matter in the world to tell what that is, but I would call it two-ply bristol board.

Q. There is one-ply bristol board, is there not? If there is two ply, is there not one-ply?—A. We never had any one-ply bristol board in our office, and I do not remember of having seen it in the paper house; I am not prepared to say that they don't make it; I am not swearing that that was two-ply bristol, but that is my judgment.

Mr. WILSON .I offer that specimen in evidence to the deposition of Mr. Sexton, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The specimen will be found attached to the deposition of this witness as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 4.)

Q. I call your attention to the specimen now, and I will ask you what it is?—A. I would call that a piece of ledger paper.

Q. Please tell me how ledger paper is made.—A. As I said before, I never made any paper, and I do not know much about it.

Q. You think that is ledger?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that specimen as an exhibit to the deposition of this witness on cross-examination, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The paper will be found attached to this deposition as part thereof and marked as Exhibit No. 5.)

The WITNESS. I would think it was a piece of ledger about 28 pounds demi.

Q. Explain what you mean by that.—A. I mean that a ream demi size would weigh 28 pounds; demi is 16 by 21. Blank books come so much demi.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I generally vote the Republican ticket.

JOHN B. JAQUES, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John B. Jaques; age, 33; residence, 743 North Tennessee st., Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What are your politics?—A. Well, until the township election of 1882 I was a Democrat. At the township election I voted the Republican ticket, with the exception of Luke Walpool; I voted for him last fall. I voted the Republican ticket, and this spring I voted for all except one candidate.

Q. You were a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; up to the last national election; including the last national election, I was a Democrat.

Q. You voted the Republican ticket in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printer.

Q. Are you in partnership with Mr. Seaton?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been in the business?—A. I have been in the printing business for 18 years.

Q. What kind of business?—A. Book and job printing. I have not been in it for myself that long, but I mean as journeyman, foreman, and proprietor.

Q. Are you familiar with the different grades of paper?—A. Well, mostly with the general run of paper.

Q. I hand you ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you if you will please take that and examine it and tell me what kind of paper it is?—A. It is calendered paper of some kind. The stock seems to be that which is generally used in book paper, and it is a sized and calendered paper, or what would be called a number 2 book.

Q. You would pronounce it a No. 2 book, from your experience in business?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you familiar with what is known as Western or Eastern plate paper?—A. No; I do not believe I could tell the difference, hardly, between the two, unless it was in the finish. I always regard it in the better finish of the paper. Of course, in plate paper they seem to put better stock, but in book papers the stock varies considerable, while in the plate paper they are more particular in the stock.

Q. Does the weight of the paper have anything to do with its grade when numbered?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it not true that there may be a heavier grade of No. 1?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a heavy grade and light grade of No. 2?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the same of No. 3?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would pronounce that a light or heavy grade of No. 2?—A. I should pronounce that a very heavy grade—that is, in comparison with that in general use. It would be heavy for a book, although I have seen almost as heavy.

Q. Did you ever use news as heavy as that or quite?—A. Yes; I have used news that is almost as heavy. Of course newspaper not being calendered, or, if calendered at all, not so highly, the same weight of paper would seem much thicker. The more highly the paper is calendered the thinner it is; that is, 40 pounds No. 1 would seem lighter than 40 pounds No. 2 by holding it in your hand on account of the high finish of it.

Q. Do you know anything about the manufacture of paper?—A. No, sir; not any more than I have passed through the mill.

Q. Do you use plate paper in your business?—A. We have used some.

Q. Have you examined Western plate paper?—A. That depends upon the man you are dealing with. Some men will sell you paper for Western plate. I cannot tell the difference between that and No. 1 book myself.

Q. If a man were to sell that paper for Western plate paper or a heavy book paper, what would you in your experience in business pronounce it?—A. If he would come along and offer that as plate paper, I would not want to buy that or anything more of him. If it was No. 2 book I would think I had got a bargain, of course at a fair price. It is good stock and everything.

Q. Is Western plate paper finished on both sides alike?—A. That which we have bought called Western plate, as I say, I can see no difference between that and No. 1 book; that is, I know that No. 1 Eastern book is full as good as Western plate. The Western plate, of course, is better than a Western No. 1, but when a person is speaking of strictly No. 1 they generally mean Eastern.

Q. I hand you piece of paper marked Exhibit No. 7 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson. Please examine that and state what kind of paper it is.—A. There seems to be a slight difference. I do not know whether it is on account of the handling or not. I should say that there was a difference in the two sides of the paper—a slight difference. The paper has been handled a good deal, and it is different from what a new sheet would be. Of course it gets rough.

Q. What would you say that paper was?—A. Well, it is hard to swear to. Of course I could only give my idea.

Q. Judging from the specimen you have?—A. That, I think, has been made for a plate paper, but it does not look as highly finished.

Q. Would you say it was known as Eastern or Western plate?—A. I would not call it Eastern plate. I would not call it first-class plate paper.

Q. It has been handled considerable, you say?—A. Yes, sir; it has been handled considerable.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that the Republican ticket is made of stock which is used in making book paper?—A. I say, comparing it and tearing it as I tear book paper when I buy it, it seems to have about the same stock in it.

Q. What sort of stock is plate paper made out of?—A. That is about the same grade of paper, only, as I said before, it is about the same kind of stock as strictly No. 1.

Q. Plate paper is strictly No. 1 book?—A. The stock, I am speaking about; what is called No. 1. There can be paper called No. 1--there are half a dozen grades of stock they put in paper, and there can be No. 1 paper that would be——

Q. You have not answered my question. What is the difference between the stock that goes to make plate paper and the stock that goes to make No. 1 book paper?—A. It is according to what grade of No. 1 you are talking about. I say there are half a dozen different grades.

Q. You say that Republican ticket was made out of the same stock as plate paper?—A No, sir; I did not. I said as book paper. I said as a good book paper.

Q. I would ask you if the stock out of which plate paper is made differs from the stock out of which that is made?—A. The only thing I can answer to that is this, that it is more carefully selected stock for the plate paper.

Q. What is the difference in the finish?—A. Eastern book is better finished on one side for the purpose of a cut.

Q. You mean the Eastern plate?—A. Yes, sir. The Western, as I said before—there is no strictly first-class plate paper made in the West that I know of.

Q. What is the difference between the finish of plate paper and book paper?—A. I do not know how the finish is put on, but the paper is finished better on one side for the purpose of making and printing a wood-cut.

Q. That is true of plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say the Eastern No. 1 book is different from Western No. 1 book?—A. That is in the stock. It is clearer stock You hold it up and it runs more evenly and it has got a less muddy appearance. What it is made of I do not know.

Q. What effect does calendering have on material?—A. On poor material it would tend to rot it somewhat.

Q. On good material?—A. I do not know as it would be much effect there, because I do not know enough about the make of paper.

Q. What effect does it have upon the elasticity of paper?—A. The higher calendered paper is for printing purposes, of course it is better; but put them side by side, I do not know how long they would wear and which would wear the longest.

Q. I ask you for the elasticity and springy qualities; have you felt, for example, a sheet or piece?—A. If it is good paper, the more highly calendered it is, the more springy. I do not see any difference in tearing it; it is only in the surface.

Q. It is in the surface that the elasticity and springy character would be different? You have been speaking of No. 1 paper, &c.; do you refer to extreme cases?—A. The No. 1—to explain, there is a difference of about one and one-half cents in the cost of

No. 1 book, and that is in the stock; and No. 1 is understood to be supercalendered paper—sized and supercalendered. That is what is understood in the printing business as No. 1 paper, and the other grade you have just to judge for yourself. Of course every man that has paper to sell has No. 1 book.

Q. You say you voted the Republican ticket last fall?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the spring election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had formerly voted the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Might I ask you why that change was?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I have no objection to answering, if you have not. It was the liquor question.

Q. That was the motive?—A. Yes, sir; that was the motive.

Q. Were there many changes on that question?

(Objected to as immaterial, and not proper cross-examination.)

A. Well, I knew throughout the district and throughout the State, in fact—I know more persons outside of this district than inside—of changes both ways.

Q. Changes both ways?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN B. JAQUES.

JAMES C. YOHN recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have testified before in this case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now recall you for the purpose of asking you another question or two. You stated you were inspector at the first precinct in the eleventh ward?—A. Yes, sir; first precinct, eleventh ward.

Q. Ross Clark was there as challenger on one side—Democratic challenger—and Ott Hasselman, Republican challenger, on the other?—A. Ott was there part of the time, and Don McLain was there, and others.

Q. I now ask you to state if there was any tickets voted up at that precinct and handed in inclosed in envelopes?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any colored men voted up there with the tickets inclosed in envelopes?—A. If any man had his vote in an envelope, I never saw it.

Q. Did you see any tickets inclosed in an envelope?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. ENGLISH:

Q. When you say that people did not vote there, or come there with their tickets in envelopes, do you mean that they did not come to the chute with their tickets in envelopes, or that they were not voted?—A. What I mean by that is that I did not take a ticket in an envelope.

Mr. PEELLE. And you never saw one in an envelope?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

Q. Could they not have come up in the chute with tickets in an envelope without your having seen them?—A. They could not have come in my hands.

Q. But they could come up in the chute?—A. Certainly; the only thing I know is what they handed to me.

J. C. YOHN.

The further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Monday, Nov. 19, 1883, by consent of all parties.

MONDAY, November 19, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

E. B. MARTINDALE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. E. B. Martindale; age, 55; residence, ndianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am connected with the insurance and real estate business, and trade a little for myself. Real estate is about the only established business I have.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position in this State?—A. Yes, sir; 25 years ago I was judge of the court for a time, and 12 or 13 years ago I was senator of Marion County, and those are the only two, except notary public.

Q. Were you proprietor of the Indianapolis Daily Journal a few years ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For a number of years?—A. Yes, sir; for 5 years.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. I did; yes.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. I voted at the corner of 1st and Illinois streets—the 1st precinct, I think it is, of the 5th ward at that time.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn. Please examine that, and state if that is the ticket used by theRepublicans at that election.—A. I should say yes.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of W. B. Burford, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used that day.—A. I think it is.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, if you could tell or distinguish one from the other by sight.—A. At a distance of 5 feet or upwards it would be very difficult to do so. It would be an accident if you did. I experimented with the tickets in that way, and I found I was mistaken about half of the time.

Q. What is the difference in the length and width of those tickets, if any material difference?—A. There is no material difference. There is no difference in the width.

Q. What is the color of the tickets?—A. The Democratic ticket is a little purer, clearer white. Of course, I do not know the grading of white paper. There is scarcely ever a perfect uniform in the color of white paper, but I should say the tickets are both white and as near uniformity in color as is ordinarily the case with white paper. Understanding how paper is made and the color is put in, it is very seldom you get good color. They are both white paper.

Q. State how those tickets compare with election tickets used heretofore in point of color.—A. In point of size and color they are about the same as have been used all the time for a number of years. The Republican ticket is a thicker paper, of course. I would say it was a thicker paper than has been used in elections at any time.

Q. Do you remember the ticket for Garfield in 1880?—A. I would remember it if I saw it. I have not seen it or had one in my hands for some time.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket voted at the national election in 1880.—A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. What difference would you say there was, allowing for the handling of the ticket, between the weight and thickness of the paper upon which the two tickets are printed?—A. I would say that the weight of the Garfield ticket stands about half between the Democratic and Republican ticket. It is much heavier than the Democratic ticket of 1882, and it is much lighter than the Republican ticket of 1882.

Q. I will ask you as to that ticket when folded, when a person standing looking on at the polls, with the ticket folded as tickets are ordinarily folded, whether one could be distinguished from the other by its color and external appearance.—A. No, sir; not as tickets are ordinarily folded and parties standing the ordinary distance from the polls. They would not be distinguishable. Of course, if a man was close enough to see the difference in bulk and thickness, where it was not folded closely, he would be able to see it, from the edge of it, but he would not be able at a distance to discover any material difference in them 5 feet away.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you tell the difference between them in handling?—A. Yes, sir; by handling them in my hands, and holding them both.

Q. On the day of the election, was your attention called to the difference in the tickets; and did you make any experiment—you referred a while ago to having made experiment?—A. That was in the last few days. I made that with two new tickets.

Q. Where did you make that experiment?—A. It was in the office of a neighboring attorney, where they had the tickets, and they were discussing them, and I handled the tickets at that time and made that experiment. They held them off about six or eight feet from me and asked me to name them after I had handled them.

Q. Did you have your glasses on?—A. Yes, sir; I think I had. I always wear a pair of glasses, either for far-seeing or near-seeing; and I once made the right guess as to the ticket, and once made a mistake; and I would say one-half the time a man would be liable to make a mistake in trying to distinguish them at that distance.

Q. You are a Republican, of course?—A. I am so regarded.

Mr. PEELLE. What effect would the use of that ticket have upon the secrecy of the ballot?—A. I do not think there was any distinguishing mark upon the ticket that would affect the ballot.

Q. When you say there is no distinguishing mark on the ticket, do you mean that there is no print, engraving, sign, or figure on the ticket by which it could be distinguished?—A. On the outside?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. That is what I say.

E. B. MARTINDALE.

GEORGE WEAVER, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. George Weaver; 42 years old; residence, 559 East 7th street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. Do you occupy any official position?—A. I am a member of the city council.

Q. Did you ever occupy any other official position?—A. No.
Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct. I was at most of the precincts, but that is where I paid most attention, in the 1st ward.
Q. Did you occupy any official position on the election board that day?—A. Only as a watchman at night.
Q. Were you challenger any part of the day?—A. Occasionally I took charge of the books during the day and scratched names.
Q. Did you see the Republican ticket that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn. I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans that day.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and marked as Exhibit 1 to the deposition of W. B. Burford, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used that day.—A. Those are the Democratic and Republican tickets to the best of my knowledge.
Q. State if when those two tickets are folded, as they are ordinarily folded when voted, you could tell or distinguish one ticket from the other by sight.—A. No, sir; I never could. I could not tell one from the other when folded.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You say you held the poll-book part of the time?—A. No; stop a little.
Q. The challenge book?—A. Yes; I took it occasionally; not all the time. There was a man took charge there and had charge of it, and I relieved him occasionally.
Q. Was your attention called particularly that day to the difference between the tickets?—A. No; I do not think it was. I do not know.
Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. If I was to handle them as inspector I could, but I could not tell the differenc without knowing just what they were.
Q. After learning the difference you could by handling tell the difference?—A. Yes; if I was to make a point, I can tell the difference by taking hold of them and putting them together. I could tell the difference if I took hold of them and felt them. I could do that with most of the tickets, and after a little handling as inspector I could tell the difference in feeling.
Q. Are not those tickets very different in point of weight and bulk?—A. Of course, they are a little different.
Q. Would you not say the Republican ticket is twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket?—A. I could not say. I cannot tell the difference in the strength of that paper.
Q. I am talking about the weight; how would you guess on that?—A. I would not want to testify upon the weight. It is too fine a point. I cannot discern enough difference to judge.

GEORGE WEAVER.

CYRUS T. NIXON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Cyrus T. Nixon; age, 51; residence, 141 Park avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. What is your business?—A. Publishing a newspaper.
Q. What is the name of the paper?—A. The Agricultural Press.
Q. Did you ever occupy any official position in this city?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. State what it was.—A. I have been clerk of the house of representatives a few times.
Q. How many times have you been clerk of the house?—A. Only ten.
Q. Have you ever been a member of the legislature?—A. No, sir. I was secretary of the senate once.
Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What ward?—A. The 7th ward and 1st precinct.
Q. What portion of the day were you there?—A. I think I was there all day.
Q. Did you have any official position there?—A. No, sir.
Q. Just a looker-on at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir; I believe I am.
Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. I believe it is.
Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of W. B. Burford, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats there that day?—A. I could not say.

Q. You could not say whether that is the Democratic ticket or not?—A. No, sir.
Q. State if you noticed men as they were voting with their tickets folded there that day.—A. Yes, sir.
Q. State whether you did distinguish or tell the difference in the tickets from their external appearance as they were folded and voted as they were being voted that day.—A. I have no recollection of being able to distinguish one from another except by the face of them.
Q. When open?—A. When open; yes, sir.
Q. Was there any complaint made there that day at that precinct about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. Not within my hearing.
Q. Did you hear any comments on the ticket that day?—A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. Would have been likely to have heard any comments if there had been any made there that day, or any criticisms?—A. I do not know as to that. If there had been any loud or boisterous talk there about any subject I should have heard it.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Can you not tell the difference between those tickets by feeling them?—A. Those two I can, certainly.
Q. Was your attention called particularly to the tickets on the day of election?—A. No, sir; I do not think I had the Democratic ticket in my hand that whole day.
Q. Who was inspector at that precinct?—A. My recollection it was Thomas G. Amos.

CYRUS T. NIXON.

By agreement of both parties, the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Tuesday, November 20th, 1883.

TUESDAY, November 20th, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

D. M. RANSDELL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Daniel M. Ransdell; 41 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. State your business.—A. Well, I am devoting most of my time just now to the ice business, more than anything else; I am receiver of the Northwestern Lake Ice Co., receiver of Charles H. Talbott's estate and the Unthank Plow Co., and I am commissioner to sell the Tousey estate.
Q. Have you occupied any official position in this city or county?—A. I was clerk of the city once and clerk of the county.
Q. Were you chairman of the Republican County Committee in the election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir: I was.
Q. Did you attend the Congressional election that year?—A. I did.
Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Samuel Merrill, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans on that occasion?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked as Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of W. B. Burford, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that occasion?—A. To the best of my knowledge and belief.
Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see the tickets voted that year?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you any of those national tickets of 1880?—A. Yes, sir; I have in my hand a copy of the Democratic electoral ticket of 1880, and of the Republican electoral ticket of 1880.
Q. Where did you get those?—A. I got those tickets from Mr. John Reed, one of the deputy sheriffs.
Q. What is your recollection as to whether those are or are not the two tickets voted in 1880?—A. Those are the two tickets; I remember them.
Q. State if you were in the city at the time of the election in 1878.—A. I was.
Q. The Congressional election in 1878?—A. I was.
Q. Have you any of the tickets voted at that election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you them with you?
Mr. WILSON. I objected to all of this.
The WITNESS. I have in my hand the Democratic ticket voted in 1878; that was the time I was a candidate.
Q. Who was candidate for Secretary of State then?—A. John G. Shanklin, Democratic, and the Republican candidate was Isaac S. Moore.
Q. Is that the Republican ticket voted then?—A. Yes, sir.
(Objected to.)

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence the Presidential tickets which the witness has presented, being the tickets voted for Presidential electors on the Republican ticket and Democratic ticket in 1880, and ask that they be marked as exhibits to the deposition of the witness, and marked Nos. 1 and 2.

(The contestant objected to the admission of the ticket as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

(The tickets will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 respectively.)

Q. State where you got those tickets voted in 1878, Republican and Democratic.—A. At the county clerk's office.

Q. What is your recollection as to those being the two tickets voted?—A. They are the tickets voted.

Q. Did you find them in the box?—A. They were strung over there, and were the tickets that were deposited with the clerk.

Q. Had they been returned to the clerk?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I offered those tickets voted in 1878 as exhibits to the deposition of the witness, and ask that they be marked as Exhibits Nos. 3 and 4.

(The tickets will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 3 and 4, respectively.)

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the election for township trustee in April, 1881?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and ask you if that is the ticket used by the Republicans in this city at the township election in 1881?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I think it is.

Mr. PEELLE. I ask that the ticket be marked as an exhibit to the deposition of the witness.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 5.)

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "for township trustee, Peter Spitzfodden," and I will ask you if that is the ticket used by the Democrats for township trustee in 1881?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did those tickets come from?—A. From the county clerk's office.

Q. Tickets that had been returned there and strung?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer the ticket in evidence as part of the deposition of the witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit by the stenographer.

(The contestant objected to the admission of the ticket as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

Q. State, with reference to those Republican tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882, whether, when that ticket is folded and in the hands of the voter, as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded when being voted, if it could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket similarly folded?—A. No. You mean looking at it?

Q. Yes, sir; by the external appearance?—A. No, sir.

Q. State what reports, if any, you directed or authorized, as chairman of the Republican county committee at the Congressional election in 1882, to be made to you from the different precincts?—A. Well, I authorized my couriers to report to me how matters were going on and how the vote was being gotten out just as often as possible during the day.

Q. What instructions, if any, did you give to your couriers or others to report to you during the day?—A. I gave instructions to report to me as often as possible the number of votes that were being polled and that had been polled up to a certain time.

Q. Was there any instructions about reports being made to you in any way, and if so, state it?—A. I do not remember of any other instructions. I was keeping myself in communication with all parts of the city that day, so I would know pretty well how large a vote was being polled, because I knew our success depended upon getting our vote out, and I was pretty anxious to get out our full vote, and took such steps as I thought would secure that; beyond that I have no recollection.

Q. Beyond that was any other instructions or directions given by you in any way, and if so, state as to what kind of tickets were being voted?—A. None whatever.

Q. Was there any instructions given by you to the effect that the men were to keep tally of the Republican votes because of the Republican ticket, it being on heavier paper, and report the result to you every 15 or 20 minutes?—A. There was no such instructions.

Q. Was or not such reports made to you as a matter of fact?—A. No, sir; no such reports made to me and no such instructions given to anybody.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. This Republican ticket, marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Samuel Merrill, was that the only ticket that was circulated at the polls on that day by the Republicans?—A. That was the only ticket that was circulated to my knowledge; it was the only ticket I had printed for the city. I will explain here: This is a lithographed head, and I had just such tickets as this printed for the whole county, except in the edition that I sent to the country with just such paper and just such printing, with the exception that the heading was not lithographed that was sent to the country; whether or not those were circulated in the city I do not know. That was not the intention, and if they were I do not know it. That was the only edition I had printed on that same paper and that same type.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket marked Exhibit A to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you if that is the same ticket as shown to you just preceding in your deposition?—A. The same ticket as this one?

Q. Yes, sir; Samuel Merrill's ticket, which has been made an exhibit.—A. Yes, sir; it is the same ticket.

Q. On the same material?—A. Yes, sir; so far as I am able to judge.

Q. Were those the only kinds of tickets circulated by the Republicans?—A. The only tickets circulated in this city, so far as I know. If you will let me go a little further I will say I went to the press and saw every ticket from the time they went into the printer's hands until they came out tickets, and I put them in the vault and locked them up, and there was not another ticket printed in this city; if there was it was done outside of my authority.

Q. And they were on the same material?—A. Yes, sir; the same material from beginning to end. If there was any difference in the paper it was rung in on me by the printers, and I do not know it. I never had but one lot of tickets printed, and they were all printed on the same paper.

Q. Can you tell the difference between that Republican ticket used November, 1882, and the Democratic ticket used?—A. I can tell the difference by the feeling, but I cannot tell the difference by looking; I mean folded up as the ordinary voter brings them up.

Q. You spoke just now of the reports received from the precincts; did or did you not instruct your couriers to give you all the information they could get as to how the voters were turning out and how the people were voting, and gather everything that might be of value?—A. There were particular instructions given by me to bring me a report of the number of votes, and there was particular instructions as to the number of votes being polled.

Q. Both sides or one side?—A. The number of votes polled at the several precincts and the total vote. I could not tell anything about the vote being Republican or Democratic; I knew how many votes there were in each precinct, and I knew we must get out a full vote in order to succeed.

Q. And you wanted the aggregate vote only?—A. Aggregate vote only; yes, sir.

Q. You referred a while ago to seeing these tickets printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who printed them?—A. They were printed at the Indianapolis Journal Co.

Q. Did you order them printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you order the Journal Co. to print them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it to Mr. Hasselman that the order was given?—A. The order was given to Mr. Ruckle, the foreman.

Q. You saw the paper before the tickets were printed, and you saw this material, did you, before the tickets were printed on it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who selected it?—A. I selected it.

Q. And you saw them printed, and then you took them and locked them up in the vault after they were printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that; the night before the election?—A. They were printed on Sunday, and the election was on Tuesday; I remember I went there on Sunday and stayed there all day.

Q. Do you know where this material came from?—A. I do not.

Q. You mean that originally, or do you mean that you do not know where it came from when you got it?—A. I got it from the Journal Co.; I said I went there and had them printed, and, further than that, I do not know where they got the paper.

Q. Who did you make the arrangement with?—A. More particularly with Col. Ruckle; I talked some with Mr. Hasselman, but I did the business particularly with Colonel Ruckle; he was the foreman there and the practical paper-man.

Q. Do you know who owns the Journal Co.?—A. I understand Mr. Hasselman.

Q. Mr. Ott Hasselman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he a member of the Republican executive committee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You negotiated the purchase partly with Mr. Hasselman and partly with Colonel Ruckle?—A. Partly with Colonel Ruckle; the talk I had was with him, partly.

Q. Colonel Ruckle's position in that establishment is foreman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that you think Mr. Hasselman is the owner of the company. Is it a stock company or merely the name of the firm?—A. I do not know much about it; I understood that Mr. Hasselman owned that himself; I am not sure about it.

Mr. PEELLE. Was this paper in stock there when you ordered the tickets printed?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. You say it was not specially ordered; how do you know that?—A. I know it was there when I went there.

Q. That may be true; but it may have been ordered, especially ordered, for this purpose?—A. I say I did not specially order it, and they did not especially order it for me unless they anticipated my wants, because it was there when I went there.

Q. Who got those tickets out of the vault, if you know?—A. I did.

Q. Who was with you?—A. No one; I had the tickets in the vault, and I had that locked, and I had the key, and I unlocked the vault myself, or one of the employés did that for me.

Q. Who furnished you with a key?—A. The fact is, I would take a part of that back. I did not have the key myself, but I went to Mr. Cox—Granville Cox, when I went in, and he let me in, and I was the only man in the vault, and I handed those tickets out to the several committeemen when they came after them, and to the country I handed them out the day before, and to the city I handed them out on the morning of the day of the election.

Q. Who furnished you the key?—A. Mr. Cox; Mr. Cox opened the vault; it was a combination lock.

Q. Who was present when those tickets were put in the vault, if you recollect?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. Was Mr. Hasselman present?—A. No, sir; he was not present. I do not think there was anybody but some of the employés about the building, but I could not say about that just who it was.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You say these tickets have an engraved head?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you get an engraved head for the tickets used in the city?—A. In the first place, it has for a number of years been customary for our folks to get an engraved head; and in the next place, it was to make it more difficult for the Democrats if they were disposed to counterfeit it.

Q. Have the heading of tickets been engraved on both sides, by both parties?—A. I know they have by the Republicans, and my impression they have been by the Democrats.

Q. Do you remember the ticket voted in 1880 for Frank Landers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you this ticket marked Exhibit G to the deposition of Mr. Swain, and I will ask you to state if that has an engraved head.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The flag around the words "Democratic ticket"?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you keep those tickets in the vault?—A. I did not want to let them out too soon.

Q. Had you heard of any intimation or any effort concerning them?—A. Yes, sir; I had heard various intimations that quite a sum of money was offered for a copy of the ticket, to try and counterfeit it, and that was the reason I was so careful.

Q. Has it or not been a rule of both parties in the city to keep their tickets close until the election day?—A. Oh, yes; they make it quite a point always, as I understand it, to keep those tickets secure, and not let them out until the last thing.

Q. So that neither party shall have the opportunity of counterfeiting the other ticket?—A. Yes, sir; and by having an engraved head you make it impossible, because they cannot get up an engraved head in a few hours and have it printed: but a man can counterfeit a plain head after the polls open in the morning, and have the tickets circulated.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did the Republicans ever try to counterfeit the Democratic ticket?—A. I do not know; I did not.

Q. That was not tried by the Republicans at this campaign?—A. If it was tried by anybody I do not know it.

Q. Did you want to get a copy of the Democratic ticket, and did you make any effort of that sort?—A. I do not know that I made any effort. I will say I was quite anxious to see it.

Q. Why?—A. I wanted to see what kind of tickets they had; I made no effort and offered no money or anything of that kind for a ticket.

Q. Was there any effort on the part of the Republicans in any way to duplicate the Democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Give us the names of the parties from whom you heard about this matter of trying to counterfeit the Republican ticket; while hearsay evidence is not admissible, we have powers in that respect. Who were those parties you spoke of?—A. I cannot give you the names of the parties. It is like a great many other things that come up.

Q. Who was it that informed you of the fact?—A. I cannot give you their names. I cannot possibly give you the names, but it came to my ear in the committee-room, like thousands of other things do, and I have a memorandum in my pocket—a memorandum I made in regard to that election. I cannot tell you who it was, but it was given to me by a Republican, and I made a memorandum, and there is an impression upon my mind concerning it, and I know I got the opinion, and I have a memorandum of it now, but I cannot tell you who gave it to me.

Q. You did not want the Democrats to have a ticket like the Republican ticket?—A. I have answered that question squarely. We do not want them to counterfeit our ticket.

Q. You did not want them to duplicate it?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not want them to get up one in the same style?—A. That is one of the objects of keeping our ticket quiet, that they cannot duplicate it. They are as close with their ticket as we are with ours.

Q. That is the reason you locked them up in the safe?—A. Yes, sir; certainly.

Q. That is the reason you watched over them so carefully?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the only reason why you selected that paper of the Journal Co.?—A. In using it I used my judgment and discretion, as I thought I ought to do in my position, and as my predecessors had always done in theirs, and I selected a good quality of paper, for the further reason that there was liable to be rain and wet weather in November, in which case tickets printed on inferior paper would be liable to stick together and two or more go into the box at once and be thrown out.

Q. That is the reason you did select that paper and had it printed on that material and locked them up and kept them in that manner?—A. Yes, sir. I have stated fully that my reason was to keep the ticket from being counterfeited. I think that is entirely legitimate.

Q. What do you mean by being counterfeited?—A. Why, get the ticket and lock it up and keep them from getting a ticket like it, or near like it as possible, so as to deceive and defraud voters.

Q. You spoke of this heading being engraved on the Republican ticket. Is that a wood-cut or lithograph?—A. I do not know; I do not know anything about it.

Q. Is it electrotyped?—A. I expect that is electrotyped. I do not know whether it is or not. I am not a printer and I do not know, but my understanding is that they are engravings.

Q. Do you not understand that printing from wood is engraving as much so as from stone or steel or copper?—A. No; I did not.

Q. You would not know the difference, then?—A. I could look at a ticket and could tell whether it is an engraving or not; but beyond that I do not believe I could tell anything about it.

Q. You have heard of wood-engravings?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if that Democratic ticket in 1882 at the Congressional election is not a wood-cut.—A. I should think that was a wood-cut.

Q. And if this Democratic ticket voted for Franklin Landers in 1880 is not also an engraving on wood.—A. I would say that they were engraved tickets; probably wood-cuts.

Mr. WILSON. Do you know whether they had at the Journal Co., the night you were there before the election, any of these old Democratic tickets?—A. Not that I know of.

FRANK H. SMITH, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Frank H. Smith; 30 years old residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printer.

Q. Are you carrying on business for yourself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. Jobbing establishment.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. About five years for myself.

Q. Are you familiar with the different grades and qualities of paper?—A. Yes, sir; in general use.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit A to, the deposition C. F. Holliday, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on.—A. It looks to me like it was a heavy book-paper more than anything else; I thought it might possibly be a light card-board, and that is the reason I lit it.

Q. What kind of paper is it?—A. It is rather peculiar book paper; different from any we use.

Q. What grade of book paper would you call it?—A. I would call it No. 2 book-paper. It is very heavy paper, of course; sometimes paper is used a little heavier than that in books, but very seldom that heavy. It resembles plate paper a little, but it has not got the body to it and has not got high enough finish for that. That is about the only thing I can make out of it. It does not tear like card-board or anything like that and it does not burn like it.

Q. Does it tear like plate paper?—A. No, sir; it is not strong enough for that; it might be made for that; it may be an inferior quality of that, but it looks more to me like book paper than anything else.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you know the difference between eastern and western plate?—A. Yes, sir; in fact almost all the papers we use are eastern plate. There is a paper used that is called western plate.

Q. Is not that western plate?—A. I do not know. The paper we use is eastern plate; it may be they call that western plate, and it might be sold for that.

Q. I hand you specimen of paper and ask you what that is?—A. That is more like plate paper or light card-board. There is not much difference between very thin bristol-board and plate paper—a very slight difference except card-board generally comes by the ply and generally two or three sheets together.

Q. What do you say that is?—A. That is likely a very thin bristol-board or plate paper. It looks that way to me.

Q. You would say that is the same article, wouldn't you [handing witness piece of paper]?—A. That is about the same.

Q. If you want to make any experiments with that you may do so and tell us what it is.—A. That has got more the appearance of a plate paper, but what I use is a little more highly finished than that.

Q. You think that is plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; we would not use that for the purpose of plate perhaps; it is principally used for plates, steel or copper, and it has to be firm paper and well finished.

Mr. WILSON. I offer that paper as an exhibit to the deposition of the witness on cross-examination, and ask that it be marked.

(The paper will be found attached to the deposition as a part thereof and marked as Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. I call your attention to a specimen marked Exhibit B to the cross-examination of Mr. Salsbury; what is that?—A. That is blotting paper, I think.

Q. What sort of blotting paper?—A. I do not know exactly what term it has. We do not use that to print on, on account of the rough surface, and it is injurious to type, but we sell it for office use.

Q. That is plain white blotting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is this marked Exhibit N to the deposition of Mr. Salsbury?—A. I think that is plate paper; it is a little too soft for bristol-board; I use about like that and it appears to be more like thin bristol-board—100 pounds bristol or something like that.

Q. I call your attention to this specimen marked as follows, shown to witness C. E. Devine on cross-examination Nov. 3, 1883, and at the same time marked by me as stenographer as follows: "Philadelphia, Paul C. Hendricks, stenographer."—A. That is blotting paper.

Q. What is the color of it?—A. I should think it was white.

Q. Is it plain white?—A. Yes, sir; that is plain white.

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 4 to the cross-examination of Mr. J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you what that is?—A. I think that is a cheap quality of bristol. I have used one about like that in a light-weight bristol. This plate paper and bristol is not very different, and they resemble each other a great deal. They are about the same thickness, and very light bristol and plate resemble each other a great deal, but generally plate paper has a higher finish and sometimes it is heavier; sometimes it is finished heavier for portraits.

Q. I will show you this Exhibit No. 5 to the cross-examination of J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you what that is?—A. That seems to me to be a piece of rough writing paper, or ledger paper of some kind.

Q. I will ask you to take that ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit 3 to the deposition of W. B. Burford, being the ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 by the Democrats in this city, and I will ask you what that is?—A. That is a No. 2 book paper, or else that is a cheap grade of book paper.

Mr. WILSON. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican. My father was a Democrat and my brothers and all the rest of the family but me.

FRANK H. SMITH.

Exhibit No. 1 to cross-examination of Frank H. Smith.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public

(In pencil:) Shown to C. L. Divine, on cross-examination, and at the same time marked by me as stenographer, as follows: Indianapolis, Nov. 7, '83, Paul C. Hendricks, stenographer.

WILL H. MARTZ, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Will H. Martz, age 29, and residence Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Practicing law.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. In the 8 ward, and I think in the 1st precinct.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the Republican ticket voted at your precinct on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I think it was.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 3 to the depositton of W. B Burford, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket voted at that precinct on that day?—A. It looks like the same ticket.

Q. Did you occupy any official position at the polls?—A. I was about the polls all day there and was acting as challenger part of the time, and was about the polls until the polls closed.

Q. Did you notice these tickets as they were open and being folded in the hands of the voters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you distinguish one ticket from the other when they were folded in the hands of the voters?—A. No, sir; just looking at the ticket without getting right down to look at the ticket I do not think there was a distinction.

Q. Could you tell the tickets folded as they were ordinarily folded in the hands of the voters as they were going to deposit them?—A. No; I do not think it could be distinguished.

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, that day, distinguish one ticket from the other by the external appearance?—A. No, sir; not that I remember of.

Q. Did you hear any complaint in that precinct that day about the character of the Republican ticket?—A. I do not know as to that—by what parties?

Q. Did anybody make any complaint there that day about the character of the Republican ticket as to the character of the material upon which it was?—A. I could not say whether there was or not.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You could tell the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Yes, sir; of course a man could tell that one is thicker than the other to handle them.

Q. When folding them in your hands or taking them in your hands and feeling them can you tell the difference?—A. There is a perceptible difference of course.

Q. Could you, when you got a fair opportunity to see these tickets, after having your attention called to the difference between the tickets, if folded and at the same time in view, could you tell one from the other by sight?—A. That would depend upon how near you were to the ticket.

Q. Say a foot and a half or two feet from you?—A. I do not think, sir, that a person being as far away from the ticket as one would be when it is voted, that a perceptible difference would appear if the ticket was folded.

Q. Did you pay much attention to the difference between the two that day or did you try to tell one from the other by appearance?—A. No, sir; I did not. As I said before, I was acting as challenger part of the time, and I say now a very little of the time, but most of the day I was about the polls and all around.

Q. You are a Republican, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

W. H. MARTIZ.

By agreement of all the parties, the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Wednesday, November 21, 1883.

WEDNESDAY, November 21, 1883.

Parties met pursuant to adjournment.

W. O. DE VAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are the same W. O. De Vay who was examined some weeks ago on behalf of the contestant in this case?—A. I am.

Q. State your business?—A. Paper business.

Q. How long have you been in the paper business?—A. About 10 years.

Q. What house are you connected with, or have you a house of your own?—A. For the last two years I have had an interest in a house of my own, and before that for the Cleveland Paper Company.

A. Are you acquainted with the manufacture as well as the selling of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What line of paper do you manufacture and sell?—A. When I say manufacture, I mean that Mr. Taylor and Mr. Mill are connected with the Cleveland Paper Company, who manufacture, and, of course, are connected with our house, and they are practical manufacturers. Personally I am not a manufacturer, but I am connected with men that do manufacture.

Q. What line do you manufacture and sell?—A. Straw papers, rag papers, manilla, bogus manilla, printing papers, and book paper, and a low grade of writing.

Q. Do you handle plate paper of any kind?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of plate do you handle?—A. We call it Western plate.

Q. Do you handle any other kind of plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other kind?—A. Eastern plate.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you take that ticket and examine it and state if that is a same kind of paper that you pronounced plate paper in your examination in behalf of the contestant?—A. It is.

Q. I will ask you to state what difference there is between the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed and a book paper of the same weight?—A. Well, there is no difference, the book paper being made the same weight as this. A book paper can be made this way, but it would be an extreme weight of book paper and it has got to be a very hard finish. They could make what they call a No. 2 book that had the finish of that and they could make it the same weight—that is, a No. 2 book paper. The fact of it being No. 2 book would make it not like this paper. It would lack the finish of this paper, although it would have the weight.

Q. My question was as to the difference between that paper upon which the Republican ticket was printed and a book paper of like weight in the finish.—A. There would not be any, or if any, but very little. They aim to make this paper, which they call Western plate, they aim to make it finished harder on one side than it is on the other.

Q. Is it or not finished harder upon one side than the other?—A. Very often it is and very often it is not.

Q. The paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. That paper does not show but very little difference.

Q. Would not that fact be one evidence of it being book paper?—A. The only way you could get at that would be to find out the size that paper was made. The size would have a good deal to do with whether it was book or plate of the same kind and finish.

Q. Suppose it were size 25 by 38?—A. If it was a size 25 by 38, and weighed sufficient, it might be called book paper, because that is a book paper size.

Q. Then I understand you to say that the size of the paper determines whether it is book or plate paper oftentimes?—A. Very often the size and weight.

Q. State whether or not a book paper may be of the same weight of the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed is or is not finished on both sides alike?—A. Book paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; a book paper, of what we call supercalendered book paper, has the same finish on one side as it has on the other; both sides are finished alike.

Q. State, now, what difference, if any, there is between the finish on the two sides of the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed.—A. Very little, if any.

Q. Can you discern any difference in the finish?

Mr. WILSON. You mean that is just what he has in his hand.

Mr. PEELLE. Yes, sir; that is just like all the rest of them.

A. The difference is so little, if any, I would not want to go on record as saying what it is.

Q. You would not say there was any difference?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you state what the weight of that paper would be 25 by 38 per ream?—A. It would be about 100 pounds, as near as I could judge.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it, and tell me what difference there is, if any, between the paper upon which that ticket is printed, compared with that Republican ticket which I first handed you and that was made an exhibit to the deposition of Mr. Yohn?—A. So far as I am able to judge, it is the same.

Q. Is there not a difference in the weight of the tickets and stiffness?—A. None; only I believe that one has been handled and probably not so brittle; I do not think it is.

Q. Is there any difference in the color of the tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. Any difference in the width of the tickets?—A. Yes, there is; there may be a slight difference.

Q. Which is the widest ticket; the one I last handed you?—A. Yes, sir; there is very little difference, but it is the widest.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence, as a part of the deposition of this witness, the ticket which he has just identified.

(The ticket will be found in evidence attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. Do you deal in western plate paper in your establishment?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How extensively do you deal in that?—A. We buy and sell a good deal of it. We sell principally our own make in Cleveland.

Q. Do you manufacture and sell a western plate paper like this?—A. Yes, sir; we manufacture a western plate.

Q. Do you or not sell this kind of paper sometimes for book purposes?—A. Very seldom.

Q. Do you sometimes or not?—A. No, sir; I have no recollection of ever selling this extreme weight of paper for book.

Q. There is book paper heavier than that?—A. I presume a book paper could be made heavier than that if the order was given for it, but so far as our folks in Cleveland are concerned they would not make it. It is beyond their weight.

Q. Have you had any of that western plate paper, as you call it, in your establishment for selling here?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom have you sold it?—A. Mr. Burford.
Q. Any one else?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.
Q. You keep it in stock all the time or only occasionally?—A. We keep it all the time.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you the difference between book paper of the same weight as this Republican ticket or the material upon which it is printed and the Republican ticket. In case they are the same weight may there not be a difference in the thickness, and the finish, and the elasticity of the two?—A. Well, there might be; that would be getting it down to a critical point. The fact is that paper, if I was testifying to what it was, I would call it just as I have always called it—plate paper; although, if the question was whether there was book paper of that size and weight, it might be made book paper.
Q. It could be sold for book paper?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is, they could print a book on it if they were to try to?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you what is the average weight per ream of the ordinary book paper, 25 by 38?—A. You mean the average weight in demand on the market for making books?
Q. Yes, sir; if there is any?—A. The only standard I know that would be a good one to go by would be the State of Indiana.
Q. What is the standard of the State of Indiana?—A. 45 pounds.
Q. That is ordinary book?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is the average or ordinary weight per ream of print paper, 25 by 38?—A. 30 pounds.
Q. Size of ordinary print, is it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is newspaper printed on?—A. On print paper.
Q. How much paper for book purposes do you suppose you sell on the average a year?—A. I should judge one hundred thousand dollars a year.
Q. How much of that material upon which the Republican ticket is printed do you suppose you sell for book purposes in a year on an average?—A. I would testify I do not think I ever sold a sheet as heavy as that for a book, although it can be made and called book; but I do not believe I have ever furnished that extreme weight.
Q. You say you call it western plate or lithographic plate?—A. We call it plate paper; a man orders it and designates what he wants, eastern or western.
Q. Do you sell much of that?—A. Not a great deal; no, sir; we sell Mr. Burford, I presume, from one-half to two-thirds of what he uses, but he does not use a very great quantity.
Q. For what purpose is it used?—A. Principally lithographing.
Mr. PEELLE. I call your attention to two tickets headed "Republican tickets," one of which you said was a little wider than the other, but you thought both of them were substantially the same kind of material?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And of the same thickness?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. If one is a little wider than the other, and they are equal in other respects, there will be a slight difference in the weight, will there not?—A. Not in the feeling; but you put it to the test and there will be, of course.
Q. I. am talking about the actual weight; one ticket would differ from the other?—A. Only in scale weight. You could not tell whether the weight was the same in thickness or not; but in actual weight you could.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State whether or not Mr. Burford does not frequently lithograph on book paper.—A. I cannot answer that question, because I would have to see him do it. When he orders paper of me I do not know what he does with it.
Q. State if he has not frequently bought book paper of you for the purpose of lithographing?—A. I presume he has, but to what use or what kind of lithographing I could not state, and I would not be able to state.
Q. State whether or not you can lithograph on book paper of the same weight and thickness that the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed just the same as you can upon plate paper?—A. You mean with the same finish, size, and weight?
Q. Yes, sir; just as you described a while ago, whether or not you can lithograph on that paper as readily as you can on what is known as western plate paper.—A. I presume you could.
Q. I will ask you this question, whether or not about the only difference there is between a western plate paper and a book paper of the same weight and finish is simply that one is sold as western plate, and you realized a little more profit when it is sold as book paper?—A. We got more money for it from the fact that the mill that runs it runs it at a disadvantage, and it is always expected to bring more.
Q. If it was sold as book paper you would get less for it than if it were sold for plate paper?—A. No, sir; if we were running 25 by 38, and not running the extreme weight that paper is on, we would not ask any more for it.

Q. Than book paper?—A. No, sir; but we could not run it to an advantage over 80 pounds. I do not suppose the other mills in the West are any better situated than we are, and we refused to run this paper in the extreme weight; and what I mean by extreme weight is anything over 80 pounds.

Q. Do not paper men frequently bill that as western plate, because when they do that they can realize a little more from it than if it was billed as book paper?—A. I can only answer that for myself. I never have billed that as plate when it was book, and I never had a sheet of that paper billed to me as book and sent it out as book, because we have never had it in that size and weight that we could call it book. There is a size of plate 19 by 24 and 22 by 28; one is 50 and the other 80 pounds, and if a man sends to us for plate we send him what we buy as plate paper.

(Indorsed :) Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of W. O. DeVay.

AUSTIN H. BROWN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Austin H. Brown, age 55; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. Are you the same Austin H. Brown that testified some weeks since in behalf of the contestant in this case?—A. I am.

Q. At that time you testified that you had been one of three commissioners to recount the votes cast on the seventh day of November, 1882, for the candidates for sheriff on the Democratic ticket and Republican ticket, respectively, under direction and order of the clerk of the court, and that in that recount you counted the votes cast for Mr. English and Mr. Peelle, respectively, for Congress, and in that testimony you put in a statement purporting to be a conclusion drawn from certain figures and notes, which you said you had made in making that count of those votes for the candidates for Congress, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time you stated that you did not have your little memorandum book or note book in which you had made these figures, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; that possibly I had it at home, and I would go and see if I could find it.

Q. And I asked you then to look for the book and get it if you could, in order that I might cross-examine you further in reference to that matter. Is that true?—A. That is true.

Q. I will ask you to state if you have since examined for that and found it?—A. I looked very carefully for it among where I kept my papers at home, and I have not been able to find it.

(Cross-examination of this witness was objected to, for the reason that the time for cross-examination has long since passed.)

Q. In that testimony you said that you concluded the count with reference to sheriff, and went home in the afternoon very tired, and that the next day you made a statement which you put in evidence in your testimony before.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have that book before you at the time you made that statement.—A. I had the memorandum; yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with that after it was made?—A. My recollection is I put it away with some papers in my desk, and afterwards in cleaning up my desk, which I do two or three times a year, I regarded those papers as of no value and destroyed them, is my recollection now.

Q. Have you seen that little memorandum of the vote for Congress since you made that statement?—A. Not to refer to it, unless in the way I spoke of in overhauling my papers; but I had all the facts before me at the time.

Q. At the time you made that statement from the figures you kept, what did you do with the statement?—A. I told Mr. English about it; it was my duty to tell him so.

Q. Why did you retain it?—A. I thought it was a very good paper to keep.

Q. Why?—A. I supposed it might be of some use.

Q. Where and how?—A. As a matter of evidence if this contest was to go on.

Q. You thought the result of those little figures that you had made would be better evidence, did you, or not, than the book itself?—A. It never entered my head in regard to that, one way or the other.

Q. When you made that statement then, as I understand, you anticipated that it might be useful as evidence in this contest, did you?—A. I did not know; I thought it might be useful. I thought the paper of some use outside.

Q. You did not think the memorandum-book from which you made that statement of any value?—A. No, sir; because I had all the facts collated that were in that memorandum-book, and a good many other matters besides; matters pertaining to the sheriffalty.

Q. Matters pertaining to the sheriffalty in that county?—A. I kept both counts in the same book.

Q. Was that the little memorandum-book you had?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that testimony you stated that Mr. Peelle had 99 less votes, according to your count, than were returned for him by the board of canvassers, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the statement which you put in evidence as an exhibit you said that that would make Mr. Peelle's majority in Marion County 541 over Mr. English's vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over the vote of Mr. English, you mean?—A. Over the vote as returned by the board of canvassers, which was 640—that is, over your majority, or plurality.

Q. Then in arriving at the majority for Mr. Peelle of 541, is it or not true that that is Mr. Peelle's majority, deducting the 99 votes from him returned by the board over the vote of Mr. English as returned by the board?—A. I will have to explain this if you will let me.

Q. I would like to have an answer to that question first.—A. It is not true, strictly; you asked me whether it is or not true?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. It is not true strictly; as I went from precinct to precinct in making my memorandum I took off and on the majority for or against Peelle, and the footing up of that brought this conclusion, which I mentioned in my exhibit; it was arrived at by counting every vote.

Q. Deducting 99 votes from the vote of Mr. Peelle as returned by the board of canvassers, what majority would that give him over the vote as returned for Mr. English?—A. There ought to be some votes taken from the other side, of couse; I think in my previous statement in the testimony I did not pretend to make any statement of aggregates.

Q. What was the majority of Peelle in this county as returned by the board of canvassers?—A. Six hundred and forty plurality is my recollection.

Q. I will ask you to state if, when you deducted 99 votes from that majority, what number of votes will be left for Mr. Peelle, and what majority will be left for Mr. Peelle?—A. Five hundred and forty-one.

Q. Then, in your count you deducted 99 votes from the total vote as returned by the board for Mr. Peelle, and then arrived at the conclusion that Mr. Peelle has 541 votes majority over Mr. English. Is that true?—A. Yes, sir; I have a memorandum here that I have taken of the board of canvassers as to the vote, but that you know as well as I do, and of course it would not be evidence.

Q. State if it is not a fact that the vote as returned by the board of canvassers for Mr. English, being 12,300 votes, was not accepted by you in arriving at the majority which you say Mr. Peelle had after deducting the 99 votes which you say he had less as returned by the board?—A. No; I understand your question to be this: That in my figures I did not change Mr. English's vote, but actually changed this. That is not true; the actual count of the vote as I made Mr. English's vote was more or less; I do not remember now, and yours was not the same.

Q. What was the total vote, according to your count, on Mr. English?—A. I could not give you that, sir. I did not keep it in that way; I kept it by the different majorities and in precincts as I went along.

Q. What errors were there in the precincts of the First ward for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English?—A. I cannot state.

Q. What errors were there for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English in the precincts of the 2d ward?—A. You need not ask them all. I tell you I have no memorandum that I can refer to now giving any facts.

Q. Can you tell me now, from memory, whether or not you discovered any errors for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English in any of the precincts of the First, Second, or Third wards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What errors were they?—A. I could not say, but there were errors, because there were very few precincts where there were no errors. There were variations all the way through on sheriff, and there were probably 60 precincts where there were variations.

Q. Can you tell me what errors you discovered for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English in the 4th ward?—A. I have not the figures in regard to that with me; I have not the aggregates.

Q. State if it is not a fact that in the 4th ward you discovered an error in Mr. Peelle's favor of 10 votes, and so stated at the time of the count?—A. I do not recollect. That would be a matter of recollection without any figures at this time to refer to. I do not profess to have that kind of a memory.

Q. Do you remember of any errors that occurred in the precincts of the 5th ward?—A. I answer that the same as the others.

Q. Was there not a mistake there of two votes in Mr. Peelle's favor—two votes in one precinct of the 5th ward—and so stated by you?—A. I did not make a statement to anybody about it.

Q. Did not you say so to Mr. Byram?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did not you point out errors to Mr. Byram as you went along?—A. No, sir; not on Congressman. It was the third day before he knew I was keeping the vote on Congress. We had passed largely into the precincts.

Q. Can you recollect any errors you discovered in the 6th and 7th wards?—A. No, sir.

Q. In the 8th or 9th?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any recollection of Mr. Peelle gaining any votes in any of the wards I have mentioned?—A. Down to the 9th?

Q. Yes, sir; or the 8th or 9th.—A. What do you mean by gaining?

Q. If my vote was not increased according to your count over Mr. English's?—A. I could only tell you what it was after summing up all the precincts in the county.

Q. Have you any recollection as to errors occurring in any particular precinct; you have not, as I understand you?—A. No, sir; I have a distinct recollection of a certain class of variations that occurred, which ran through the whole count.

Q. I understand you to say that you cannot give the total vote that was counted by you for either Mr. Peelle or Mr. English?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were there any tickets in the boxes from which Mr. Peelle's name was scratched off and no one voted for?—A. There might have been, but not many.

Q. How many would you think?—A. I cannot name it by any number.

Q. Four?—A. I would not say there were four, and there might be more than that; my recollection now is, since I come to think of it, that in the precinct there was some remark made about it at the time—in Decatur Township and one in Franklin Township, where you were pretty badly cut about some post-office matter, and some gentleman near me made the remark at the time that that had an influence upon the matter; whether these were simply scratched off, or whether your opponent's name voted, I do not recollect distinctly; my impression is there was some just scratched only.

Q. Have you any recollection as to the number of tickets upon which Mr. Peelle's name was scratched off and no one substituted?—A. No, sir; I cannot tell.

Q. Was there any ticket in there in which Mr. English was scratched off and no one voted for?—A. Yes, sir; there was quite a number.

Q. How many?—A. I cannot enumerate; I think there were more than of yours.

Q. Were there 100 of that kind?—A. I do not remember.

Q. Have you any impression about that?—A. No, I have not; only I know there was a greater number than of yours.

Q. State how many Democratie tickets there were in those boxes with Mr. Peelle's name written or pasted over the name of Mr. English.—A. There were a great many both ways, but the exact number I cannot give you, as I kept no memorandum at that time; it was in this book I kept the memorandum.

Q. Was Mr. Peelle's name written or pasted on four or five hundred Democratic tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many would you say?—A. I do not propose to give an opinion, because I cannot be accurate.

Q. Was Mr. English's name written or pasted on some of the Republican tickets?—A. There was not that many.

Q. How many?—A. For Mr. English?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. A good many. In some precincts more than others, and I suppose so in your case.

Q. How many would you think?—A. I could not enumerate.

Q. Were there more Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name written or pasted on than there were Republican tickets with Mr. English's name written or printed on?—A. I could not say as to that.

Q. What is your judgment about it?—A. My judgment is there was not.

Q. You mean to say there were more Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name written or pasted over Mr. English's name than there were Republican tickets with Mr. English's name written or pasted over Mr. Peelle's.—A. Possibly there may have been.

Q. May have been what?—A. More; I will not say positively.

Q. What does the word "more" refer to?—A. More with Peelle's name on of Democratic tickets than there were Republican tickets with English's. I understand that to be the question.

Q. Yes.—A. I am inclined to think so. I am not very clear or positive about it. I do not think the changes were brought about in that way, though.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if you had any recollection of any errors in the various boards, and you stated you did not; do you mean you had no recollection of any errors, or you could not recollect the number of errors?—A. He asked me to name the number particularly.

Q. It was the number of errors you referred to, and not the fact that there were no errors?—A. There were some errors in some precincts, too, and they were very apparent.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Can you state whether or not there were any errors for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English in any of the wards that I have mentioned?—A. Yes, sir; there were.

Q. What wards?—A. It was particularly the 17th and 24th.

Q. I am speaking about the wards that I named.—A. Well, I cannot say. I say there were errors—there must have been, because they became apparent right from the start of the count to me; and in the memorandum I kept I noted errors almost right from the beginning, but as to saying whether they were in the first precinct of the first ward, or the 2d precinct of the second ward, I do not recollect.

Q. Do you recollect, as a matter of fact, whether there were any errors in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, and ninth wards?—A. Yes, sir; there were errors in a general way, but the details I cannot give you.

Q. And you do not remember what number of these wards or precincts?—A. No, sir.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. In answer to Mr. Peelle's question as to errors in these wards, did you understand him as calling for whether there were any errors, or for the specific number of errors?—A. In his first question I understood the specific number of errors, and in his last question I understood as to whether there were any errors, and he wants me to give the details if I can, and I say I cannot do it.

Q. Can you give the details in any ward, specifying any number?—A. No, sir.

Q. You said you kept your count in a book for Congressman; in the same book that you kept it, did you keep your memorandum for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you made your report on the vote for sheriff, did you report the net result, or did you examine your memorandum?—A. I did not; I used my memorandum to check when I got through a precinct, then the clerks would go over the vote, and if they did not agree with the memorandum which I kept, and Mr. Byram kept, we called their attention to the fact, and our memorandum was written for that purpose, on sheriffalty, and at the same time I noted on the lower part of the page—we had one page for a precinct—the vote on Congressman.

Q. And there were some errors, and the net result you gave in your former statement?—A. Yes, sir; on cross-examination.

Q. How did your tally count on the vote for sheriff with Mr. Byram?—A. We agreed nearly always; there were deviations in the count on sheriff right along.

Q. How did you keep that count?—A. We counted each ballot, by precincts, and I noted the Democratic tickets; I had a place with "Peelle on Democratic ticket," "Republican ticket with English on," "Democratic ticket with English off," &c., and then the straight tickets, and every ticket I handled twice—first counted it over for sheriff and then counted it the second time for Congress, and passed them to Mr. Adams and he put them on the string.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. In the counting of your vote, did you compare the vote as counted by you with the vote as shown on the precinct inspector's return with the box at the time?—A. You mean the tally-sheet, or the list of voters; and at the end of the list of voters is a certificate giving the vote received by so and so, and I had that on hand and compared it every time and made a note.

Q. That was not the tally-sheet?—A. Yes, sir. Well, it is not the tally-sheet; it is the resume from the tally-sheet where they put a certificate at the end of the list of voters.

Q. Then, as I understand, the vote counted by you was compared with the total vote carried out on the tally-sheet by the clerks?—A. Yes, sir; the deviations, and I had before me, when I made this statement, the statemant from the Journal, I think it was, and the general canvass returned by the board of canvassers.

Q. Did you make any comparison of your vote with the count as returned by the board of canvassers on the canvass sheet?—A. No, sir; not the official canvass-sheet, but I did on those returns that were made—each precinct by itself; then I verified that afterwards with the published statement.

Q. Published statement of the official vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the official vote published in the Indianapolis Sentinel?—A. I think it was published in both papers.

Q. Was the official vote published in the Indianapolis Sentinel correctly?—A. I do not know. If you want my private opinion, I would say that I think the Journal is more accurate in these things than the Sentinel, for they have better printers.

Q. What Journal was that; the Journal containing the official vote after the canvass?—A. Yes, sir; after the canvass was made, certainly.

Q. About November 11, 1883?—A. Yes, sir; along about that time. I got a copy. I generally keep one for reference.

Q. That vote, as published in the Journal, is correct?—A. It is a correct copy of the canvass-sheet.

Q. Your comparision was made with the published return in the Indianapolis Journal, and the tally-sheet?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I will ask you for what purpose it was you made the comparison Mr. Peelle asked you about?

The WITNESS. At the time I took my notes during the count, and for the purpose of seeing the variation between the board of canvassers and my own count.

Q. Have you that Indianapolis Journal, or the table published?—A. I do not know whether I have now or not. I do not know that I have now.

Q. The board of canvassers did not make their report until the second day, did they?—A. They completed it on ——

Q. Friday?—A. I think so; I think they were a long while about it.

Q. And the official report published in the Journal would be Saturday, the 9th?—A. Whenever they were published.

Q. The next day after the canvass board made their report anyhow?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you, if in keeping that book of the vote of Mr. Peelle and Mr. English, if you did not keep it by characters rather than figures, part of the time?—A. No, sir; I used figures every time, but I had my heading simply in initials of the wards, that I understood myself.

Q. It was kept in such a way that nobody could understand it but yourself?—A. I think I had "P, on D," "E, on R," "P off R," "E off D."

Q. Was not that book kept in such a way that nobody could understand it but yourself?—A. Without some explanation, I think they would not.

AUSTIN A. BROWN.

By agreement of all the parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Thursday, November 22, 1883.

THURSDAY, November 22, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

A. G. PORTER, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your age and residence.—A. Albert G. Porter; age, 59; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What official position have you and do you now occupy?—A. Governor of the State.

Q. You were also at one time First Comptroller of the Treasury?—A. Yes, sir; of the United States.

Q. State if you were in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend the same; and, if so, at what precinct and ward?—A. I attended the same in my ward up there. I forget what it was then; I think it was the 5th ward.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used at that election, or a similar ticket?—A. I cannot recollect at all; I have no recollection of the kind of ticket used.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats, if you recollect?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. State if at that election you noticed and observed the tickets as they were being voted folded in the hands of the voters?—A. I think I only noticed my own. I think that a ticket was handed to me from each side, as the custom is, and I made my selection of the Republican ticket and voted it, and I do not think I was any considerable length of time at the polling place.

Q. I will ask you to state if when those tickets are folded, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, you can tell or distinguish one from the other by the external appearances?—A. I do not think they could be distinguished; I mean a man carrying it up in his hand as a voter would to the judges.

Q. As tickets are ordinarily folded, I mean. I now hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "for President, James A. Garfield," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticked used in 1880, in this city, if you remember?—A. I cannot answer.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "for President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats, if you remember?—A. I do not remember; I paid no attention to the tickets at the time.

Q. State if when those Presidential tickets, that were just handed you, are folded with the names on the inside as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, you could or not more readily distinguish them by sight than the tickets which I just handed you voted in 1882, in this city?—A. As they now appear they could be.

Q. Do you notice a difference in the length of those tickets when folded?—A. Yes, sir; but the more marked difference is that one is a flimsy ticket in appearance.

Q. Which is the flimsy ticket?—A. The Democratic ticket; the other is a less worn looking ticket and the more solid looking ticket.

Q. What difference, if any, between the paper upon which that Presidential ticket of 1880, is printed and the paper upon which that Republican ticket of 1882 is printed?—A. I should think that they were the same kind of paper. I have never examined them before. I have not made any minute examination, but I would think they were the same thickness and same kind of paper.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," with the words "For governer, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state if you have any recollection of that ticket being voted for yourself in 1880, at the State election?—A. I have not. I have no recollection of the ticket whatever.

Q. I now hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket" with the words "Democratic ticket" printed across a flag, and marked Exhibit Z to the deposition of James A. Wildeman. and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Democrats on that occasion.—A. Well, I have no distinct recollection about it. I have been told that this is the one simply.

Q. Have you any recollection of the flag upon that ticket?—A. I think I recollect that the Democratic ticket had a flag on it, though I have no particular recollection of those scrolls.

Q. I will ask you to take those two tickets voted at the State election in this city in 1880 and fold them, if you please, as tickets are usually folded when voted.—A. I do not know how they are usually folded. That (indicating) is about the way I fold mine, usually.

Q. I will ask you to state if there is any difference in the length of those tickets when folded, or the width as you may term it, though the length I refer to more particularly.—A. Yes; there is a difference of one-third to one-half inch.

Q. Which is the shorter of the two tickets?—A. The Democratic ticket is slightly shorter; one-third of an inch shorter, I should think.

Q. I had reference to which was the shortest ticket when folded; not the shortest in length, but the shortest when folded.—A. The Republican ticket is the shortest.

Q. How much shorter, probably?—A. I should think between one-third and one-fourth of an inch.

Q. State if when those tickets are folded as tickets are ordinarily folded they could or not be more readily distinguished by sight than the ticket voted in this city in 1882, when similarly folded?—A. As they appear now, the Republican ticket is a darker color.

Q. From the length of the ticket as it passed from the voter to the inspector could it or not be more readily distinguished than the two tickets voted in 1882?—A. If a voter held it so as to expose both ends it could be, but if the voter held it so as to only expose one end it could not.

Q. As it would pass to the inspector both ends would necessarily be exposed, would they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. WILSON. What tickets are they?

Mr. PEELLE. Those are the State tickets of 1880.

Q. Now, referring to the distinguishing difference between the tickets voted at the State election in 1880, and the Presidential election in 1880, and also the State election in 1882, I will ask you to state if the tickets voted in 1882 would not be less readily distinguished than the tickets voted at either the State or Presidential election in 1880.—A. I should say that the tickets voted in 1880——

Q. At the State election do you mean?—A. At the State election, would be much more easily distinguishable than those voted in 1882.

Q. And what would you say as to the tickets voted at the Presidential election in 1880 as compared with the tickets voted in 1882?—A. Taking the two tickets before me which are made exhibits, as specimens, I should think they would be more easily distinguishable than the tickets voted in 1882.

Q. Can you tell the difference between those tickets, by handling them, voted in 1880 and 1882?—A. Yes; I can between the Democratic Presidential ticket of 1880 and the Republican.

Q. And how is it with reference to the State ticket, when folded, of 1880?—A. By the feeling?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I should not like to say that I could tell the difference.

Q. Between the feeling of the State tickets in 1880?—A. If I were blind and were to judge merely by feeling, I would not like to say. It seems to me that the Republican ticket feels a little softer, but in relation to smoothness they are about the same.

Q. I will ask you to state what effect the use of the Republican ticket voted in this city in the Congressional election of 1882 had upon the secrecy of the ballot.—A. I understand that the law requires that the ticket shall be plain white paper without a distinguishing mark. There is nothing in the law that requires that one ticket shall be like the other, and they cannot be like one another unless the two parties get together and agree upon the quality of the paper, and I no not see that the Republican ticket is more different from the Democratic ticket than the Democratic ticket from the Republican, and they are both upon white paper, and they are both upon ordinary paper. One is ordinary book paper, that is book paper such as we use in printing such books as we see constantly in the book stores, and the other is such as is used in rather inferior book printing.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not the secrecy of the ballot was impaired by the use of that ticket.—A. I think not at all.

Q. State if the secrecy of the ballot by the use of that ticket in 1882 was or was not more or less impaired than by the use of the tickets voted in 1880, at the State election and at the Presidential election.—A. Not more so; and, as the tickets presented to me appear, somewhat less so.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "For secretary of state, John G. Shanklin," and marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, and I will ask you to state if you recollect whether that ticket was used in this city in 1878 at the State election —A. I do not recollect.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of Mr. Randsell, and I will ask you to state if you recollect whether that is the Republican ticket used at the State election or not.—A. I do not recollect.

Q. I see you have folded those tickets; I will ask you to state whether or not you could tell the difference between those tickets by the feeling of them.—A. I could by feeling.

Q. Which is the heavier ticket of the two?—A. The Republican ticket.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not the tickets used at the election in the city of Indianapolis during the past ten or twelve years by the respective parties have or have not been alike, or whether there has been a difference between the tickets used by the respective parties in the elections in this city, as you remember it.—A. The matter has never impressed me at all; I never have observed.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I understood you to say that the Republican ticket shown you by Mr. Peelle, which he says was voted in November, 1882, was on a quality of book paper that you have seen in the book-stores, and that the Democratic ticket was on an inferior grade or quality of paper; what do you mean by book paper?—A. I mean paper used in printing books.

Q. Do you know the difference between book paper and plate paper?—A. I do not know what plate paper is.

Q. Then you do not know the difference between book paper and plate paper?—A. I do not.

Q. Might not this Republican ticket be on plate paper?—A. It might be on paper which is used for making plates, but that is a kind of paper that is used in making books.

Q. Could not plate paper be used in making books, too?—A. Of course it could. I do not mean by what I say that that is only plate paper, and it is, in the books I have spoken of, used for plates, but the paper upon which the printed matter appears—the printed paper.

Q. How can you tell that a book is printed on book-paper, as you term it, when you say you do not know the difference between book and plate paper?—A. I say that I do not know that there is a difference; I say that I do not know them as two distinct papers—one known as book-paper and one as plate-paper.

Q. Do you know what plate-paper is—to go back to that?—A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know that books are printed upon what is termed in the trade as book-paper?—A. Because it is the kind of paper upon which books are constantly printed.

Q. Books can be printed on almost anything.—A. They are not constantly printed upon anything.

Q. I understand you to say that this Republican ticket is printed upon the character of paper that books are constantly printed?—A. I think so.

Q. And usually printed?—A. I did not say usually printed; I think this is a heavier paper than cheap books are usually printed upon.

Q. Can you give us the name of any book that is printed on material like that Republican ticket?—A. I think books that are printed for Christmas books and those books that are fancy books are printed on paper as thick as that. I think I could show you in any book store quite a number of books printed on as heavy paper as that. I should think so; I speak without having examined it.

Q. Juvenile books are printed upon material much heavier than that?—A. I do not know.

Q. Have you seen children's books printed upon what is termed cloth-paper or cloth?—A. Not to know it by name. My experience has been in the heavier class of book-paper; for example: I have been a book printer myself to some extent in printing the reports of the decisions of the supreme court, and I know there is quite a difference between the papers used in printing books; some will be a heavier quality than others, and some contain much more linen stock and much more cotton, and some contain straw, and they may be of equal weight or about the same weight.

Q. You were supreme court reporter once?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you printed, as you recollect, how many volumes?—A. Seven.

Q. Was any one of those volumes printed upon material as thick as the character of the material upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. No, sir; I do not think they were.

Q. Take that Republican ticket that Mr. Peelle showed you, and I will ask you to take this ticket, marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of W. O. De Vay, and I will ask you to tell the difference between those, if any, in finish, in thickness, in quality, in stock, or in any other way?—A. I do not perceive any difference. I do not discover any. There may be.

Q. I will ask you did you ever know a book printed in this State on material as thick as that Republican ticket, whether by the State, individual, or otherwise?—A. I do not think I have ever noticed any books in this State except the ordinary plain books, printed upon the ordinary or cheap papers, such as the books that are ordinarily printed by the State, such as documentary journals, State laws, &c., and the decisions of the supreme court.

Q. Do you know the average weight of what is called ordinary book paper sheets 25 by 38?—A. I do not know. I once knew, but I do not now. I have had no occasion for over 25 years to have anything to do with printing books.

Q. You stated that the Republican ticket was on white paper; do you say plain white paper? Explain what you mean by plain white paper.—A. I mean without any figures or distinguishing marks. I mean white paper, that it is plain white paper, and not paper figured with any marks upon it to distinguish it.

Q. I will call your attention to a specimen, marked Exhibit B to the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury. What would you call that? Is that plain white paper? Is it white?—A. Well, on one side it is white. I would say that the reverse side of it is white, and the other side of it is as white as the paper upon which the reports of our State officers are published, and I think whiter; and they are required to be on white paper.

Q. So you would regard that as white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would call that white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it plain?—A. No, sir; it is not plain.

Q. Why is it not plain?—A. Because it has marks on it as if it was cloth.

Q. Is it an immitation of cloth?—A. Yes, sir. One side of this paper is not exactly the same color as the other. On what I might call the reverse side it is white, and on the other it is less white, though on each side I would call it white paper, if it is paper.

Q. I call your attention to the Exhibit marked "Indianapolis, November 7, 1883, Paul C. Hendricks," shown to C. L. Devine on cross-examination, and at the same time marked be me; also, marked Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of Frank H. Smith; and I will ask you whether that is white?—A. Yes, sir; that would be called a white paper at the State-house, where we are printing our reports.

Q. Is that plain white paper?—A. Yes.

Q. What is your answer to the question as to Exhibit No. 4 to the cross-examination of J. G. Sexton now shown you; is that plain white paper?—A. I should call it so.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 4 to Mr. Anderson't testimony, and I ask you what that is; is that plain white?—A. I should call it a very poor white; I do not know; I do not think it is.

Q. What is the material out of which that is made?—A. I do not know that.

Q. What color is it?—A. Well, it is about the color upon which a good many of our newspapers that are called white are printed, and I think it is about the color that a good deal of our State printing is done on; that is, it is not absolutely white, but it is called white.

Q. What do you say that material is, if you know?—A. I do not know what that material is; it is all packed together, so I could not tell.

Q. I will ask you to take that Republican ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. De Vay, and take that Republican ticket Mr. Peelle showed you, marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and say as near as you can what is the difference in the thickness of those papers.—A. Well, there is a difference between a thin book paper and a heavy book paper.

Q. What is the difference; is it once, twice, or three times as thick as the other?—A. I do not know about that; I cannot tell you the relative thickness of things that are so thin as this.

Q. Is there any difference in the finish of those two tickets?—A. The Republican ticket is a somewhat solider ticket.

Q. How long were you around the polls on the day of the election?—A. I have no recollection at all.

Q. Have you any recollection of the tickets that were used that day?—A. None whatever.

Q. Then, when you answer Mr. Peelle's question as to the effect upon the secrecy of the ballot you did not answer from any recollection or knowledge you have or impression made upon your mind that day, but you answered simply as a matter of opinion from the present investigation of those tickets?—A. Yes, sir; that is the way.

Q. Is not this room a little dark?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it a large room?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. With two windows, one of which is right against a brick wall and does not throw a great deal of light in?—A. I ought to say that I have examined two tickets corresponding to these, in my office in a good light, which I have in my pocket. I suppose them to be the same as the ones you have shown me.
Q. When Mr. Peelle asked you the question he did a while ago as to the difference in the thickness of these tickets voted in 1880 and 1882, and even prior to 1880, you folded up the tickets and handled them before answering the question, all except the Republican ticket of 1882, did you not—you did not fold up the Republican ticket of 1882?—A. I do not recollect about that.
Q. Did he not show you Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Sexton, and that ticket has not been folded any, so you were not judging any from the appearance of the tickets as folded then when he was asking you this question, but from the appearance of the tickets as folded loosely?—A. That is my understanding of the question.
Q. I will ask you to look at Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Sexton; has that ticket been folded?—A. It has not.
Q. Was that the ticket Mr. Peelle showed you on his examination?—A. I think it was this, or one similar.
Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if you could tell the difference between those tickets when folded and in the hands of the voter, as ordinarily folded, and my recollection is you said no.—A. I said no, from the handling of two tickets precisely like them, having folded them and looked at them after they were folded—the two tickets I now have in my hand.
Q. And you recollect the difference, and recollect the appearance of the ticket as folded?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mr. Peelle then asked you if you could then tell the difference between the tickets voted in 1880 at the State election when folded, and you folded them up, my recollection is, did you not?—A. I think so.
Q. Do you think you could recollect the difference between those tickets without looking at them and without knowing which was which as I hold them in my hand now—as I hold them in my hand now? Do you recollect which is the Republican ticket and which is the Democratic?—A. No.
Q. Then, in answering as to those tickets in the past it required rather a critical and careful examination to tell the difference between them?—A. Between what?
Q. The tickets shown you, voted by the two parties prior to 1882?—A. When folded, do you mean?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. Well, there was a more marked difference between the two tickets of 1880—I mean the Democratic and Republian tickets of 1880—because of the softness of the paper, the Democratic ticket, according to my recollection, being on thinner and softer paper.
Q. Is not the Democratic ticket, voted at the national campaign in 1880, discolored, and is it not worn, and has it not been handled a good deal?—A. Yes. It seems to have been handled, and the creases are somewhat worn.
Q. I will ask you to look at that Republican ticket voted in that campaign in which you were candidate for governor, and I will ask you to state if that ticket is not smooth and glossy paper; look at the back of it and the finish on it.—A. I could not say whether it arises from the glazing or glazing upon papers of different softness. If you glaze upon a soft paper it is less marked than it is upon a hard one.
Q. There is a difference in the appearance in that particular in those two tickets, is there not?—A. In what particular?
Q. As to smoothness, slickness, or glazing?—A. Yes; the Republican ticket is a somewhat slicker ticket. I do not think anybody would notice it when it is folded up, but stretched out it looks slicker.
Q. I will ask you, do you recollect of the Democratic party having used a ticket or material as thick and as bulky when folded as that Republican ticket used in 1882?—A. I have not the slightest recollection of their ticket at any time.
Q. I show you specimen headed Republican ticket, and I will ask you what is the color of that?—A. White paper.
Q. Is it plain white—I mean with the exception of the printing?—A. You are asking me about color?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. It is a whiter paper than they ordinarily use in the State printing, I think.
Q. I will ask you if you can see any difference in the character of the color or in the character of the stock or material of the Republican ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Samuel Merrill—that specimen I showed you as a Republican ticket?—A. As to the character of the stock I could not decide, because one is in a bulk, and the other is a separate ticket.
Q. I did not ask you about thickness.—A. As to the color, I see no substantial difference, except as one is slightly discolored by handling.

Q. I neglected to ask you that question as to Exhibit No. 1 to Mr. Sexton's deposition, but as a matter of fact there is no difference between the Republican ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to Mr. Sexton's deposition and Exhibit No. 1 to Samuel Merrill's deposition; those tickets are the same, both of them, put in by Mr. Peelle. I presume they are the same?—A. I perceive no difference.

Mr. WILSON. I offer this specimen showed Governor Porter, which I ask him to compare the color with Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Sexton and Mr. Merrill, and ask that it be made an exhibit to his cross-examination, and identified.

(The specimen will be found attached to this deposition as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. Aside from the thickness I ask you is there any difference in the ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to your cross-examination, and the ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Sexton?—A. Difference in what respect; in color or what?

Q. I did not ask you as to the color. I mean as to the face of the ticket; is it the same ticket, aside from any question of thickness?—A. I do not understand what you mean. If they were the same ticket? If it is the same ticket of course it is the same ticket, and if it is not the same ticket of course it is a different ticket. Do you mean is it like this?

Q. What I was driving at, is it the same thing so far as the printing is concerned, and the same in material? I do not ask you for the difference in the thickness of the two.—A. I cannot tell you about the material, because one of them is in a block.

Q. You have answered that. Now as to the other point?—A. Upon the superficial examination that I now have made, I see no difference between them except that the one in block does not seem to be quite as fresh in color.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That block that you have in your hand that Mr. Wilson just handed you; did you ever know printed paper to be manufactured like that, or newspaper to be manufactured that style?—A. It being in a block, I cannot readily tell anything about it.

Q. Did you ever know book paper, or such paper as you have seen to be lithographed or printed upon, anything of that kind, in block form?—A. I do not comprehend the question.

Q. I mean did you ever know print, book, or any kind of paper to be manufactured as that block you have in your hand that purports to be a ticket?—A. That does not purport to be a ticket as I understand; I should imagine it to be many tickets pasted together from the appearance.

Q. I will ask you if there was any necessary limit to pasting those tickets together, and if they could not have gone on and pasted them until they got a foot, or two feet, or five feet, just the same?—A. Of course.

Q. When you answered that the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed in 1882 was book paper, did you answer that from your knowledge of book paper, and your experience in handling book paper, or did you answer the question as an expert in paper?—A. I am not an expert at all in judging paper; but, from my recollection, I have frequently seen books printed upon as thick paper as this.

Q. And it is from your knowledge thus derived that you answer the question, and not as an expert?—A. Certainly; I am not an expert.

A. G. PORTER.

Exhibit No. 1 to cross-examination of A. G. Porter.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

By agreement of all the parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Friday, November 23d, 1883.

FRIDAY, November 23rd, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

N. S. BYRAM, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your name, age, and residence?—A. N. S. Byram; age, 52; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a wholesale drygoods merchant.

Q. What is the name of the firm?—A. Byram, Corneilus & Co.

Q. Were you in this city at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same, and if so, what precinct and ward?—A. I do not think I was there except probably to vote. That was in the second precinct of the 3rd ward.

Mr. PEELLE. I have heretofore objected to the competency of the evidence of Austin H. Brown, with reference to the count of the votes cast for Congress in this city and this county on the 7th day of November, 1882, but inasmuch as evidence upon that subject was given by Mr. Brown over my objection, I shall now offer evidence simply to meet that evidence, and in case the evidence of Mr. Brown shall be rejected, I then ask that this evidence with reference to the count of votes cast for candidates for Congress shall be rejected also.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not you were one of three commissioners appointed by the circuit court of Marion County to recount the votes cast for Daniel A. Lemon and James W. Hess for sheriff on the Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively, cast at the general election held on the 7th day of November, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Who composed that commission?—A. Mr. Austin H. Brown——

Q. (Interrupting). What are his politics?—A. He was known as a Democrat, I believe, and Mr. Adams.

Q. What are his politics?—A. He is a Republican.

Q. And yourself?—A. I am a Republican.

Q. Were you under oath in that count?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you under oath for any other purpose?—A. No, sir.

Q. I mean for any other purpose than that of recounting the vote for sheriff?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Brown under oath for any other purpose?—A. Not that I am aware of, sir.

Q. Did you recount the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q At the time of the counting of the vote for sheriff did you keep an account and make a note of the votes cast for Mr. Peelle and Mr. English, candidates for Congress on the Republican and Democratic tickets, respectively?—A. I think after the first day.

Q. What ward did you commence that in?—A. I commenced it with the 10th ward.

Q. Did you keep the count from the 10th ward until the final count?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you count all the precincts of the several wards and townships from the 10th ward in the city up to the end?—A. Yes. sir.

Q. What up to that time had been the result, if you know, of the vote for Congressman in the wards from the first to the 9th, both inclusive?—A. Well, I do not know what the result was up to that time, except that in one of the precincts of one of the wards Mr. Brown called my attention to a discrepancy of 9 votes for Mr. English that he had credit with that he should not have had.

Q. Can you state what ward that was in?—A. I could not, but I think it either the 4th or 6th ward. I am not positive.

Q. That there was a discrepancy of 9 votes there?—A. I think it was 9.

Q. In Mr. Peelle's favor?—A. No, sir.

Q. Now, was there any other that you know of from the 1st to the 9th ward, inclusive?—A. I am not positive, but I have an indistinct recollection that there was a discrepancy of two votes somewhere else.

Q. Who was it in favor of?—A. In favor of Mr. English; I have an indistinct recollection of that; I do not know positively.

Q. Is it your impression that there was two votes counted for him that should not have been counted, or how was it?—A. That is the impression I got.

Q. That there had been two votes counted for him that should not have been?—A. Yes, sir; or, in other words, that the tallies for him showed two more than the tickets in the box showed, or the tickets we had before us.

Q. Have you any recollection of errors occurring in any of the rest of the precincts for Congressman from the 1st to the 9th, inclusive?—A. No, sir; I do not know of any.

Q. You say Mr. Brown pointed those out to you?—A. Mr. Brown pointed one of them out to me, and where I got that impression of the other I do not know.

Q. Was that one of the commissioners, Austin H. Brown?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you counted the votes cast in the several precincts of this county from the 10th ward on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you count all the votes that were cast?—A. All the tickets you mean?

Q. Yes, sir; I mean all the tickets.—A. Yes; I tried to do it—at least all the tickets passed through my hands—every one of them

Q. Who took the tickets out of the box when you were counting them?—A. I did.

Q. Were you the first man to take the tickets out of the box?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. To whom did you hand the tickets when you took them out?—A. To Mr. Brown.

Q. And Mr. Brown handed them to whom?—A. To Mr. Adams.

Q. What did Mr. Adams do with the tickets?—A. I think, probably, for the first day he strung them, and afterwards he passed them to either Mr. Hess or Mr. Lemon, and they were strung by one of those two gentlemen.

Q. One of the candidates?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State at whose instance you kept an account from the 10th ward or for candidates for Congress.—A. At nobody's instance but my own.

Q. Did you make any comparison of the votes counted by you with the vote returned by the board of canvassers?—A. At that time, do you mean?

Q. Yes, sir; or since.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make the comparison with the vote as returned by the board of canvassers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the canvass sheet?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you would get through counting a precinct, what, if anything, was said by you or Mr. Brown with reference as to how the vote stood for Congressman?—A. Well, I sometimes asked Mr. Brown how the vote stood for Mr. English or Mr. Peelle, how he had it; and sometimes he would ask me how I had it.

Q. What was done at the end of each precinct there, if anything?—A. If our results were not alike, there was frequently corrections made or the work gone over again, and a memorandum was kept to show, and sometimes corrections were made.

Q. Did Mr. Brown make some corrections or not, as you went along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make some corrections sometimes?—A. I think probably I did, in one or two instances.

Q. What kind of corrections did you make?—A. I could not tell, except I tried to make them compare with Mr. Brown's figures.

Q. How many times were those corrections made?—A. That is a question I could not answer. I do not know.

Q. Was it pretty general, or was it only a few times?—A. It was only a few times.

Q. Was there any time when Mr. Brown refused to make corrections to correspond with your count?—A. Not that I know of; he never refused to do it; no, sir.

Q. How did you keep the count of the candidates for Congress?—A. I kept a tally of them as I went along.

Q. Did you retain the total vote of each precinct from the 10th ward on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any statement made from any memorandum that you then kept?—A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. In that statement did you take in account all the errors in the wards from 1st to the 9th, both inclusive?—A. No, sir.

Q. In that statement did you accept the vote as returned by the board of canvassers from the 1st to the 9th, both inclusive?—A. Yes; I took it as returned as I found it in the clerk's office.

Q. You did not in your statement, then, give Mr. Peelle the benefit of the votes you say Mr. Brown pointed out to you as being in his favor?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you that statement with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you accept the vote as returned by the board in the 2d precinct of the 12th ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you have a statement of that result I wish you would produce it and read it.

(Objected to in so far as this evidence seeks to impeach his own witness, Mr. Brown, offered by Mr. Peelle.

Objected to on the ground that a party cannot impeach his own witness under the circumstances.)

Mr. PEELLE. In reply to the objection made, I state that I recalled Mr. Brown to cross-examine, expecting him to return the book containing the count and memorandum which he claimed in his examination-in-chief he had kept.

A. Do you want me to read this?

Q. Yes, sir; you have the statement there, and you can read it.—A. (Witness reading:) "In the contested-election case of Daniel A. Lemon vs. James W. Hess, for the office of sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, I was one of the commissioners appointed by the judge of the circuit court of said county to recount the vote cast on the 7th day of November, 1882, for said Lemon and Hess for sheriff, respectively; and while performing that duty I voluntarily kept the count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peele and William E. English, respectively, candidates for Congress from the seventh Congressional district of Indiana. All the ballots cast at said election except those from the second precinct of the 12th ward of the city of Indianapolis, as returned by the several officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the count made by me, allowing two hundred and ninety votes as returned by the election officers of the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis, Mr. Peelle received 12,794 votes, and allowing one hundred and ninety-two votes as returned from the said twelfth ward, Mr. English received 12,207 votes, making a majority for Mr. Peelle of 767 votes as cast in Marion County, Indiana."

NORMAN S. BYRAM.

Q. Have you signed that paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer this as part of the evidence of the witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit to his deposition.

(The paper will be found attached to this deposition, as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1. The contestant objecting to its admission as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial, and because it seeks to impeach his own witness, who has testified on that subject already.)

Q. On about how many Democratic tickets in the boxes you handled was Mr. Peelle's name written or pasted over and voted for Congress instead of Mr. English?—A. That is a question that a man will have to guess at, as to the answer of it; I should think there was between four and five hundred; there were a great many, I think.

Q. Did you count the vote cast for the Greenback or National candidate for Congress?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember what the vote was as returned for the Greenback candidate?—A. I remember what the canvass-sheet shows; I think it is 390.

Q. How many Democratic tickets were there in those boxes with Mr. English's name scratched off and no one voted for for Congress?—A. I would think that there was somewhere from 100 to 150.

Q. How many Republican tickets were in there upon which the name of Mr. Peelle was scratched off and no one voted for?—A. There was 25 or 30; that would be my judgment on it.

Q. How many Republican tickets were there in the boxes upon which the name of Mr. English was written or pasted over and voted for for Congress instead of Mr. Peelle?—A. Well, I do not know; between 25 and 50, I would suppose.

Q. You do not pretend that these several amounts which you have given are accurate?—A. No, sir; that is a matter that I have not thought of.

Q. You are giving them simply as an impression from the tickets that passed through your hands, are you not?—A. Yes, sir; that is all.

Q. What opportunities had Mr. Brown for counting the tickets different from you?—A. He had no different opportunities; the tickets all passed through his hands the same as mine; he handled every ticket there was in the box.

Q. After you?—A. Yes, sir; after I had them.

Q. In the counting of those tickets of the candidates for Congress, what is your best judgment as to whether or not the count made by you is or is not correct?—A. Well. it was as correct as I could make it under the circumstances.

Q. You were there for another duty?—A. Altogether; yes, sir.

Q. And it was the counting of the votes for sheriff that you paid special attention to, and for which you had been appointed by the court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the conclusion of the count of the ballots for sheriff, what was said, if anything, in the presence of Mr. Brown as to what would be the result on a recount of the votes cast for Mr. Peelle and Mr. English?

(Objected to as purely hearsay and incompetent and irrelevant.)

A. The matter was talked over there among us as to what the result would be in reference to this Congressional vote, and it was said and conceded there by the parties that Mr. Peelle's vote—that the gain for Mr. Peelle would be over the gain for Mr. Hess, or what we gained for Mr. Hess.

Q. That the vote would be larger?—A. That the vote would be larger.

Q. That the gain on a recount would be more than there was on the recount for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the recount for sheriff?—A. I have forgotten exactly; I think maybe 49.

Q. For the Republican candidate for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir; for Mr. Hess.

Q. Was Mr. Brown present during that conversation?—A. He was in the room; yes, sir.

Q. Who made the statement, if you remember, that the vote for Mr. Peelle would gain?—A. I think I made the statement myself.

Q. What did Mr. Brown say?—A. I do not know that Mr. Brown said anything. All of us were talking there in reference to the matter.

Q. Did Mr. Brown at any time state that Mr. Peelle's vote would be less on a recount?—A. Not that I heard, sir.

Q. How did the vote on the candidate for sheriff stand from the first to the 9th ward, inclusive?—A. At the end of the 9th ward Mr. Hess had gained two votes.

Q. Do you mean that he had gained two votes, allowing for whatever errors may have occurred for and against the several candidates?—A. Yes, sir. There had been losses and gains on both sides, but at that time, at the end of the recount of the 9th ward, Mr. Hess's gain was two.

Q. I understand you to say that at the time of the count of this vote cast for the candidates for Congress you made no comparison of the vote counted by you with the vote as returned or as shown on the tally-sheet?—A. I do not think I did at that time.

Q. Did Mr. Brown?—A. I do not know whether he did or not. We had a newspaper there that we were comparing with.

Q. Did Mr. Brown compare with the newspaper?—A. Well, I think so; I am not positive about that.

Q. Was it a table published in the Indianapolis Journal that you compared it with?

—A. I cannot tell you what paper it was published in, but it was in some newspaper that had a table published.

Q. Did you compare the table as published, purporting to be the official vote published in the Indianapolis Journal on November 11th, 1880, with the vote as returned by the board of canvassers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find the vote as published in the Journal correct?—A. Except in one instance.

(Objected to on the ground that the Journal vote, as taken as a standard by the comparison of the contestee, it would be the best evidence itself of the vote as recorded in the Indianapolis Journal.)

Q. You say it was correct except in one instance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that instance in favor of or against Mr. Peelle?—A. It was against Mr. Peelle.

Q. What precinct or township was that?—A. It was in one of the out townships, but I have forgotten what it was; I think probably it was the first township after we left the city.

Q. What precinct of that township?—A. I think it was the first precinct.

Q. Was it the first precinct of Lawrence or Washington Township?—A. Washington Township; I do not recollect exactly.

Q. Do you remember what the total vote as returned by the board for Mr. Peelle was in the 1st precinct?—A. Yes, sir; 152 votes.

Q. What was the vote as published in the Journal?—A. 151.

Q. Who was present at the time of the counting of those votes?—A. The commissioners, Mr. Brown, Mr. Adams, and myself, and Mr. Lemon and Mr. Hess and Mr. Tarkington and two gentlemen there that I have forgotten, but they were the clerks.

Q. Was Mr. Hawkins present?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Hawkins was there.

Q. Was Mr. Perry present?—A. Yes, sir; Joe Perry was one of them.

Q. Was Smith Myers present?—A. Yes, sir; and I think some one else there that represented Mr. Lemon and Mr. Frank Woolen.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How many days did it take you to make that recount for the sheriff?—A. We were there 5 days and 4 nights.

Q. What day did you commence?—A. I think it was on Tuesday.

Q. What hour of the day?—A. About 9 o'clock, but it was probably nearly noon before we got to the counting.

Q. What day did you stop?—A. We stopped Saturday.

Q. What hour in the day?—A. About 4 o'clock.

Q. On Saturday afternoon?—A. Yes, sir; when we got through.

Q. Were you counting all the time, day and night?—A. We counted all day and part of the night; we did some sleeping, and the first night we counted until 12 o'clock, and the second night, I think, we counted until one o'clock; we did not get through until Monday. We were there over Sunday. We did not commence Tuesday; Thursday is when we commenced.

Q. What day did you commence?—A. Thursday.

Q. About 9 o'clock, and got to counting along towards noon?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You quit on what day?—A. We quit on Monday.

Q. Monday about 4 o'clock?—A. We got our count through Monday morning about 3 o'clock; two or three o'clock; three o'clock in the morning, I think.

Q. You mean at night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sunday night at 3 o'clock?—A. It was Monday morning.

Q. You got through about three o'clock on Monday morning, that is, Sunday night in the morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You commenced on Thursday?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How late did you count, Thursday?—A. Until about 12 o'clock at night.

Q. How late did you count, Friday?—A. I think it was about one o'clock.

Q. How late did you count Saturday night?—A. Between one and two o'clock.

Q. What did you do on Sunday?—A. We counted ballots.

Q. All day?—A. Yes, sir; except at intervals when we would take a rest.

Q. How many wards are there in this city?—A. 25.

Q. How many precincts?—A. I do not know how many precincts; I think in the neighborhood of 64; between 50 and 60.

Q. How many precincts in the county, if you know?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know how many townships we have?—A. I think there are eight.

Q. Do you know how many precincts we have to the township?—A. I do not, without figuring.

Q. What time of day did you commence keeping the vote for Congressman?—A. I cannot tell you what time of day it was.

Q. What day did you commence?—A. On Friday, the second day.

Q. You commenced on Friday?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the afternoon?—A. I do not know whether it was in the afternoon or forenoon, or what time it was.

Q. You do not recollect what time of day on Friday you commenced?—A. No, sir; I know it was the second day of our count that I commenced to keep it.

Q. Are you certain that it was on Friday?—A. I think it was; yes, sir.

Q. Why are you certain it was on Friday?—A. Because it was the second day we had been counting.

Q. When did you make the discovery you referred to, that Mr. Brown was keeping count?—A. From the time he commenced counting the votes.

Q. You knew it from the time he commenced counting the votes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yet you did not commence yourself until Friday?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you do not know what time on Friday?—A. No, sir.

Q. Yet you can tell us how late you worked on the various nights?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long you worked?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you cannot tell us what time Friday, whether it was the forenoon or afternoon, or Friday night, that you commenced keeping count on Congressmen?—A. No, sir; I cannot tell you the time.

Q. How many precincts did you count the first day?—A. I do not know.

Q. How many wards did you count the first day?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. How many wards did you count the second day?—A. I cannot tell you.

Q. How many wards would you count in a day, on an average?—A. I do not know; I never made any estimate. We counted until it got time to quit, or until we concluded to quit, and the next morning we commenced where we left off.

Q. You counted in each instance until after 12 o'clock at night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were counting sometimes until one, and on one occasion until later, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you commenced on the 10th ward to count?—A. The 10th ward.

Q. What precinct in that ward?—A. The first precinct.

Q. You knew Mr. Brown was keeping the count all along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you commenced on the tenth ward? –A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th. 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th wards located?—A. The 1st ward is located in the northeastern part of the city, and the 2d ward is located just west of it, and the 3d ward is located west of that. The 4th ward is located west and south of the 3d ward. The 5th ward is south of the 4th ward. The 6th ward is east of the 5th ward. The 7th ward is east of the 6th ward. The 8th ward is east of the 7th ward, and comes down to Washington street southeast. The 9th ward is west of the 8th ward, and includes the court-house.

Q. How many of those wards are north of Washington street?—A. All of them.

Q. All of these wards that you refer to are north of Washington street that you did not count, with one exception, had a majority of the Republicans on the election board—they all had a majority of Republicans on the election board, and all had a Republican inspector but one?—A. I think they all had Republican inspectors.

Q. All of those you have mentioned have?—A. I think so; I do not know positively, but that is my judgment about it.

Q. Do you recollect what is the political complexion of those wards you named, whether they have Democratic or Republican majorities?—A. They have Republican majorities, all of them, I think, except the 8th ward.

Q. Very strong Republican majorities?—A. Some of them; yes, sir.

Q. Is it not true that north of Washington street is considered the Republican portion of town?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And south of Washington street is Democratic?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that Mr. Brown called your attention to an error of 9 votes against Mr Peelle; that is, 9 votes which had been counted for Mr. English which ought to have been counted for Mr. Peelle?—A. No, sir; I do not say that.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said he called my attention to a discrepancy of 9 votes that Mr. English was credited with; I do not say positively it was 9 votes. He was credited with some 9 votes he was not entitled to.

Q. Who was entitled to them?—A. There was that many more votes than the proper tickets showed.

Q. Are you certain he said it was 9 votes?—A. That is my recollection; I am not positive. It was in that neighborhood.

Q. What day was that?—A. That was the first day.

Q. He was keeping the count?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the only error he called your attention to?—A. That is the only error he called my attention to, I think, except I said I got the impression there were two more votes in some other precinct.

Q. Those are the only two errors he spoke of at all?—A. Yes, sir; that is all, I think.

Q. Did he call your attention to any errors against Mr. Peelle?—A. No, sir; not that I am aware of; not that I recollect of.

Q. Throughout that count that lasted that time, he spoke of only two errors that he had found?—A. No, sir; when I got to counting then we compared, as I stated. We compared at the end of the count. When we would get through with a precinct Mr. Brown would ask me how the vote for Peelle and English stood, or else I would ask him, and it was frequently done in that way, one way or the other.

Q. You never counted the votes in those wards prior to the 10th, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You never made any count of them?—A. No, sir; except in my statement I have taken those in that statement as reported by the board of canvassers.

Q. Do you know whether it is correct?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. You do not know how many errors there were in that count?—A. I do not.

Q. Then you cannot say that the statement you made there is correct as a recount?—A. I never stated that it was; I have taken it as my best impression.

Q. Your statement of that recount is made up from your best impression and recount of the precincts?—A. Yes, sir; it is made up from the record. I kept from the 10th ward down to the end of the count, and the 290 votes that were missed from the 12th ward, and the vote as returned by the board of canvassers up to and including the 9th ward.

Q. In other words, you did not take into consideration any errors which may have occurred against Mr. English in the first 9 wards at all?—A. I have made no count; I have taken the vote as returned by the board of canvassers.

Q. So that is not a complete recount you have given us?—A. No, sir; it is complete except the first nine wards.

Q. In counting the vote on sheriff did you find many errors?—A. Yes, sir; a few.

Q. You found a few errors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Only a few?—A. Only a few; what do you mean—in the whole county?

Q. Yes, sir; in the whole county; I do not ask for net results; I am asking for errors.—A. We found a number of errors.

Q. Did you find them in each precinct?—No, sir; there were some precincts we did not find any in.

Q. What was the proportion of errors you found in the precincts? I do not ask for the net result of each precinct and the number of errors that may counteract each other, &c., but the absolute number on each side?—A. Do you mean pro and con?

Q. Could you guess at that? Mr. Peelle has been calling for some guesses here on some things.—A. I could tell by making my calculations exactly what the errors were.

Q. Have you the figures so you can make a computation?—A. I have not them with me.

Q. You never made that computation?—A. No, sir.

Q. You can make as fair a guess at that as you could at the number of tickets scratched with nobody's name on the Democratic ticket for Congress?—A. I suppose I could.

Q. And you could come as near to it?—A. Yes, sir; I suppose so.

Q. I will excuse you from answering that, as that is not considered evidence. How did you keep that count on Congressmen?—A. I kept it by tally.

Q. How do you mean?—A. By counting the tickets and tally; what we call a tally is five.

Q. You counted the tickets and every five ballots you tallied?—A. Yes, sir; every five tickets I would tally.

Q. And you counted the tickets, and when you spoke just now of counting the votes, you mean counting the tickets?—A. Yes, sir; counting the tickets.

Q. How long would it take you to count a precinct, an average precinct?—A. I do not recollect exactly; probably we would count one in an hour, and sometimes less; and sometimes it would take longer.

Q. Would you make a memorandum as you counted the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sometimes it would take an hour and sometimes more?—A. Yes, sir; and sometimes less.

Q. But it would average an hour, about?—A. Well, I do not hardly think it would average an hour; I do not think it would; some of the precincts we counted over as much as three times.

Q. What stage of the recount was that?—A. I do not know; in two or three instances where we would find an error that looked as if it was too large, there would be a recount of it to see whether we were correct or not.

Q. Was that towards the last or first?—A. It was two or three different times, I think, probably; my recollection is, now, that the first one or two we counted in the 6th ward over twice, but I am not positive about that; still, I think we did; one of the precincts, I mean, and not the whole ward.

Q. What other precincts do you recollect of having counted twice or three times?—A. I recollect of counting a 12th ward precinct over twice.

Q. What other precinct?—A. I think the 24th ward we counted over three times, maybe.

Q. Any other precinct?—A. Yes, sir; but I could not designate. There was some precincts over in the country we counted over twice.

Q. When did you strike the country in your count?—A. That I am unable to say; I think along about the third day, but I am not positive about that.

Q. You think you struck it about Saturday?—A. Some time, I think, about Saturday.

Q. What time on Saturday?—A. That I do not know.

Q. In the morning or afternoon?—A. I could not say.

Q. At whose instance was it you commenced keeping this count on Congress?—A. At my own instance.

Q. Did anybody suggest it to you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell anybody that you were going to do it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who did you tell?—A. I think I told Mr. Adams; and I told, I think, Mr. Hawkins, but I am not positive; I told some one.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Brown, too?—A. I do not know; I might have possibly told Mr. Brown, but I do not recollect.

Q. When was this writing made out?—A. I made it out this morning.

Q. You reduced this to writing this morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Exhibit No. 1 to your deposition—that contains a statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts did you make it?—A. In my store.

Q. Who was with you?—A. Nobody; I was in my office; there was nobody with me, except, probably, the office boys were in the office, and perhaps Mr. Cornelius.

Q. At whose suggestion was this made?—A. Mr. Peelle asked me to make it.

Q. So it was reduced to writing on the 23d day of November, 1883?—A. Whatever the day of the month is to-day.

Q. You finished the count on what day?—A. It was on Monday morning, but I do not know what the date was.

Q. You finished it some time in November, 1882?—A. I do not know whether it was in the month of November or not.

Q. It is about a year ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This is not dated?—A. No, sir.

Q. It is not sworn to?—A. No, sir.

Q. In this memorandum that you have introduced here, and marked Exhibit No. 1, you say, "In the contested election case of Daniel A. Lemon vs. James W. Hess, for the office of sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, I was one of the commissioners appointed by the judge of the circuit court of said county to recount the votes cast on the 7th day of November, 1882, for said Lemon and Hess for sheriff, respectively, and while performing that duty I voluntarily kept the count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English, respectively." You say, "I voluntarily kept count of the votes cast;" do you mean to say by that that you kept count of all the votes cast?—A. No, sir; I do not mean to say that. I mean to say I kept an account of the votes cast from the 10th ward.

Q. Then this statement is incorrect when you say you kept an account of the votes cast for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English: "I voluntarily kept count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English." Then it is incorrect if it purports to mean that you kept count of the votes?—A. It is correct in so far as you have examined me on the question. I can tell you how it was done, exactly.

Q. I ask you this: is this statement here correct when it reads that you counted the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English?—A. It is not correct; there may be a discrepancy in the first nine wards of the city.

Q. Then, when it reads that you counted the votes cast at that election, does it mean that you did not count the nine wards?—A. That is it; it means that; that is what I mean by it. I mean to say I counted all the votes from the 10th ward to the end of the canvass, and the first nine wards I did not keep any count of.

Q. Then this should read, "that I voluntarily kept count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English, respectively, candidates for Congress, commencing with the 10th ward and from that on?"—A. Yes, sir.

Q. (Reading.) "All the ballots cast at said election, except those from the second precinct of the 12th ward of the city of Indianapolis, as returned by the several officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the count made by me, allowing 290 votes as returned by the election officers of the 2d precinct of the 12th ward of the city of Indianapolis, Mr. Peelle received 12,974 votes, and allowing 192 votes as returned from the said 12th ward, Mr. English received 12,207 votes, making a majority for Mr. Peelle," &c. That is the rest of this. Now, you say that all the ballots cast at said election, except those from the 2d precinct of the 12th ward in the city of Indianapolis, passed through your hands; you did not count all those ballots on Congress as they passed through your hands?—A. All except, as I say to you, the first nine wards.

Q. Then whilst they passed through your hand in the count for sheriff you did count them for sheriff, yet you did not keep count of the first nine wards for Congressman?—A. No, sir

Q. And this language does not intend to mean that you did keep the count?—A. I don't want it to mean that.

Q. And you say, "Upon the count made by me, allowing 290 votes," &c. Now, you mean by that, that taking the reports from the other wards and taking the count that you made of the rest of the vote for Congress, this is the result you reached?—A. Yes, sir; that is just exactly what I mean.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Brown how the count was running along whilst he was keeping the count on the first precinct, from the first ward down to the 10th?—A. I do not know that I did.

Q. You asked him afterwards?—A. Yes, sir; when we were both tallying. I do not know that I asked him every time; I think probably the information was furnished without the inquiry either by him or I.

Q. He and you did compare figures along from the 10th ward up?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often was that done?—A. I do not know how often; I think pretty near every time that a precinct was counted out.

Q. How did you agree?—A. Sometimes we agreed, and sometimes we disagreed a little.

Q. Was it approximately an agreement, or was there considerable variance?—A. My recollection is there was not much variance. As I said before, there were frequent corrections made.

Q. When there were discrepancies, you say you would correct them?—A. There were corrections made, I think, by both of us.

Q. You spoke of a number of Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name written or printed on them or pasted on. Did you keep a memorandum of that sort?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you try to charge your memory with anything of that sort?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it not true that what you said on that subject is a mere guess?—A. I said so in my testimony—that it was guesswork.

Q. And the same thing is true as to the number of Republican tickets with Mr. English's name written or pasted on?—A. Certainly; yes, sir.

Q. The same thing is true as to the number of Democratic tickets without any Congressman voted for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the same thing is true as to the Republican tickets without any Congressman voted for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it you made the comparison with the vote found, as you say, in the Indianapolis Journal?—A. For Mr. Peelle?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I made it to-day; the Indianapolis Journal and the canvass-sheet is what I understand you to mean. I made the comparison of the figures in the Journal and the canvass-sheet to-day.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you, when you made the statement that you have testified to concerning the result of the recount on Congress, what Mr. Brown said; I understand you to say that Mr. Brown said nothing when you made that statement.—A. I do not recollect of his saying anything.

Q. Did Mr. Brown say anything?—A. I do not know that he did; I do not recollect that he did say anything.

Q. Was Mr. Brown present when you made that statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts was that?—A. In the room where we did our counting.

Q. When was that statement made?—A. After we got through with the count.

Q. Sunday morning?—No, sir; some time Monday; we went to bed after we got through.

Q. As soon as you got through you went to bed?—A. I guess we took a lunch, may be before we went to bed; we ate a lunch and then went to bed.

Q. Going back to that comparison when you compared your memorandum which you refer to with the tally-sheet that you had?—A. I did not compare it with the tally sheet I had over there at all.

Q. When did you compare it with the return?—A. Some time this week; I do not know what day it was.

Q. You made a comparison some time this week?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you get that return?—A. In the clerk's office.

Q. It was there that you made the comparison?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was there that you discovered the difference?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you discover the difference?—A. Which?

Q. The difference between the precincts as you counted them and the return for those precincts by the officers.—A. I found the difference there; yes, sir; and when they were counted I found there was a difference as we went along.

Q. How did you get the difference?—A. The total difference, you mean?

Q. No, sir; the difference as you went along.—A. Compared it there; we had the list and the tally sheet before us.

Q. Then you made a comparison at that time with the tally-sheet of the inspector?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, do I understand you to say you did make a comparison with your memorandum by precincts at that time, as you went along, with the tally-sheet of the official return of the inspector?—A. That is my recollection, that I made a comparison at that time; I am not positive of it, but think we did.

Q. Did you make it?—A. Well, I think so, but I am not positive about it.

Q. Did Mr. Brown make it?—A. I do not know; possibly he did.

Q. Now, did he not make it right there?—A. I do not know. I think so, but I am not positive about it. I think we both did so far as that is concerned, but I am not positive of that. I know there was a discrepancy as we went along, and I know distinctly because that matter was talked there.

Q. Was that comparison that you made there with the officer's return in trying to see how the vote was running on Congress?—A. I am not positive whether it was with the return, or whether it was with the newspaper or table we had there. It may have been both.

Q. It was with one or the other that you made it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are not certain that it was made?—A. I am not certain it was made, but I think it was.

Q. How many precincts were there in the first 9 wards, if you know?—A. Well, I think there is twenty.

Q. And there are twenty precincts in which you did not receive a vote for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; as many as that.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. The statement that you have put in evidence here is not based upon the comparison of the vote for Congressman as counted by you with the tally sheet of the vote as published in the Journal, but with the vote as reported by the board of canvassers, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated, in answer to a question by Mr. Wilson, that the Repnblican wards were in the north part of the city, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; almost all of them are Republican wards.

Q. State where you discovered the most errors, in the north part or southern part of the city?—A. We discovered more in the southern part.

Q. Did you on the vote for sheriff discover any errors in the first and second wards at all?—A. Yes, sir; in the first ward we did, I think.

Q. Did you discover any in the second ward?—A. I am not positive as to that; I do not remember about that; I think in the first precinct we got into we found a discrepancy in the first ward.

Q. Do you remember whether there was any errors on the count for sheriff in the second ward at all?—A. I do not know now.

Q. Do you remember the number of errors on sheriff from the first to the 9th ward; I mean the number of wards in which there was errors from the first to the 9th?—A. I think if I was to make a guess at it I will say that there was four or five wards.

Q. In which there were errors?—A. Yes, sir; small errors.

Q. You stated, in answer to one of Mr. Wilson's questions, that you sometimes counted the votes in many of the precincts two or three times over?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why would you go back and count the votes over for sheriff?—A. Well, we would find some discrepancy there, and Mr. Lemon or Mr. Hess would object to the counting, and say that we had not got it down right, and we went over it to see if it was correct or not.

Q. That was in the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you did count some of the precincts on the votes for sheriff two or three times over to be sure that you were correct?—A. Yes, sir; there was one, I think. I am satisfied that we counted three times and several of them twice.

Q. Did anybody count the votes for Congressmen more than once?—A. No, sir.

Q. That statement that you put in here, was that made from the figures or memorandums kept in a book by you at that time?—A. It was made from my memorandums and the returns which I found in the clerk's office.

Q. What did you do with that memorandum when you got through with the count there?—A. I sealed it up and put it in my safe.

Q. When did you first open that package?—A. Last Sunday.

Q. Did you ever make any calculations as to the difference on the vote for Congressmen until since last Sunday?—A. No, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Brown say, if anything, during that count about keeping the number of Republican tickets simply at the request of Mr. English?—A. I do not know that he said anything in reference to that. I do not think he said anything about Mr. English requesting him to keep any count.

Q. Did he say anything about keeping an account of what he termed "spring-back tickets"?—A. I think not.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you answered that Mr. Brown said nothing about keeping a count of the spring-back tickets, you mean you heard him say nothing?—A. I did not hear him say anything.

Q. He may have made the remark and you may not have heard it?—A. Yes, sir; that is possible.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you remember what the total vote was as counted by the board for the candidates for sheriff?—A. I can give it to you if you want it.

Q. Can you give them for each?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what it was.—A. I have a memorandum of it in my pocket (referring to paper). The vote for Hess was 12,851; and for Lemon, 12,790.

Q. Making a total of how many votes cast?—A. 25,641.

Q. As the total vote cast for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir; that is, all the tickets we counted for sheriff.

Q. Was there any other candidate for sheriff except Lemon and Hess?—A. I think not.

Q. What votes were cast for sheriff was cast for them?—A. That is my recollection, yes, sir; now there may have been some scattering votes.

Q. Was there any tickets for either of those gentlemen with the names scratched off and nobody voted for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of them?—A. I think one hundred at least or more.

Q. More ballots than the total number you have given here?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You spoke of recounting the ballots in answer to Mr. Peelle's question because Mr. Lemon or Mr. Hess would insist on it; do you mean by that each precinct that you recounted two or three times?—A. I do not know as it applied to each precinct. I think there was one precinct we done that in.

Q. Which precinct was that?—A. I do not know; I think in the 24th ward probably.

Q. Why did you do that?—A. Because there was not as many tickets there as the returns showed—not as may tickets.

Q. What was the discrepancy? What was the number?—A. I think it was 5.

Question by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. On your count, who got the benefit of the 5 votes that there was not tickets voted in your count?—A. In our count I think there was 5 less for Lemon than the return showed.

Q. How was it on the vote for Congress?—A. It is my recollection it was the same.

Q. Mr. English had 5 more votes than there was tickets?—A. That he had returns for 5 more votes than there was tickets in the box.

Q. And by your vote he had been tallied 5 votes more than there was tickets in the box?—A. The boar . of canvassers' return gave 5 more votes.

Q. Compared with the vote counted by you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did your vote correspond with Mr. Brown's?—A. Well, I do not know; I think so.

Q. In the count of the several precincts was it not a fact that where you would discover more votes for Mr. English than he had received according to the ballots that a corresponding number of votes would be due Mr. Peelle?—A. Well, in some instances, not in all; but in some instances it seemed to be a clerical error.

Q. Was that the case or not in the count for sheriff in many instances?—A. It was in some instances; I do not know how many.

Q. So that the total vote would not be varied very much?—A. Not a great deal.

NORMAN S. BYRAM.

Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of N. S. Byram.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

In the contested-election case of Daniel A. Lemon vs. James W. Hess, for the office of sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, I was one of the commissioners appointed by the judge of the circuit court of said county to recount the vote cast on the 7th day of November, 1882, for said Lemon and Hess for sheriff, respectively, and while performing that duty I voluntarily kept the count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English, respectively, candidates for Congress from the 7th Congressional district of Indiana.

All the ballots cast at said election except those from the 2d precinct of the 12th ward of the city of Indianapolis, as returned by the several officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the count made by me, allowing two hundred and ninety votes as returned by the election officers of the 2d precinct of the 12th ward of the city of Indianapolis, Mr. Peelle received twelve thousand nine hundred and seventy-four votes, and allowing one hundred and ninety-two votes as returned from the said 12th ward, Mr. English received twelve thousand two hundred and seven votes, making a majority for Mr. Peelle of seven hundred sixty-seven votes as cast in Marion County, Indiana.

NORMAN S. BYRAM.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of N. S. Byram, Nov. 22, '83.

By agreement of all parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Saturday, November 24, 1883.

SATURDAY, November 24, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

E. W. HALFORD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. E. W. Halford; age, 40; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. State your business.—A. I am managing editor of the Indianapolis Daily Journal.

Q. That is regarded as the leading Republican paper in the city, is it not?—A. I suppose it may be so taken as one of the leaders.

Q. How long have you been in journalism?—A. About 20 years.

Q. Were you ever in a job printing establishment?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you connected with a job printing establishment?—A. I have been in the printing business ever since I was 13 years old.

Q. Been in the job printing business?—A. In the job and printing business up until the time I went on the Journal, about 20 years ago.

Q. Are you familiar with, and have you handled the different kinds of paper used in book printing?—A. I was at that time; I had charge of a job office for some time.

Q. I hand you a ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of J. G. Sexton; and I will ask you to take that and examine it, and state if you know what kind of paper that ticket is printed upon?—A. I should say that was a heavy book paper.

Q. What grade of book paper would you call that?—A. I would hardly know now, because it has been a long time since I handled book paper. I would not know just what grade.

Q. By number can you tell?—A. I cannot tell that.

Q. It is a heavy grade of book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. An unusually heavy grade?—A. It is an unusually heavy grade for ordinary printing.

Q. Have you used that kind of paper at any time in your business in the job printing business?—A. I expect I have; it seems to me I have, but I cannot recollect any particular job in which it has been used.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn. Please examine that, and state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. A lighter grade of likely the same paper.

Q. Would you call it book-paper?—A. It seems to me to have a calendered surface.

Q. Is that paper such as is used in printing books?—A. I should think that paper would be used in printing books, but not a very good quality of book-paper.

Q. Examine the heading of that ticket and notice how the type are run together in the Democratic ticket in the words Democratic ticket; I will ask you to state if that is or is not an engraving.—A. I should think that was a cut.

Q. You mean a wood-cut?—A. Well, it might be a cut, and then electrotyped from a wood-cut; I should consider it not to be type.

Q. It is printed from a cut?—A. I should think it would be; it looks to me like the same thing.

Q. Would you say the same thing of the Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; that is a cut.

Q. Are you familiar with the different grades of plate paper, eastern and western plate-papers?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are not familiar with plate papers?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know when the use of plate papers came in vogue?—A. No; I could not say.

Q. It has been since you quit the jobbing business?—A. We did not have much of it when I was in the jobbing business.

Q. When did you quit the jobbing business?—A. About in 1862 or 1863; I am not certain about that date exactly; Mr. Baden was running the establishment then.

Q. You do not know the difference between book and plate, do you?—A. Not technically; no, sir.

Q. Might not that Republican ticket be plate paper then?—A. I could only answer that by saying that if there is any difference between book and plate-paper, I should think this was book paper, that is so far as my knowledge of paper is concerned.

Q. Would you call that ordinary book paper, or is it such book paper as is used in printing ordinary books?—A. It seems to me I have handled books printed on paper as heavy as that.

Q. Could you name any books printed on paper as heavy as that?—A. These fine gift books as I see them; it seems to me they are as heavy as that is.

Q. Then it is gift books and rare books, in your estimation, that are printed on that?—A. I should not consider that a paper.

Q. That is in ordinary use?—A. That is in ordinary use for printing books and pamphlets; it is a lighter grade of paper.

Q. I call your attention to the specimen marked Exhibit No. 4 to the cross-examination of J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you what is that material?—A. That appears to me to be a very light quality of what we call bristol board.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 1 on the cross-examination of Frank H. Smith, and I will ask you what that is?—A. I should say it was the same thing, practically.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit U to the cross-examination of Mr. Salisbury, and I will ask you what that is?—A. I should think they were all about the same grade.

Q. Bristol board?—A. A light quality of what we call in printing bristol board.

Q. I hand you Exhibit No. 5 to the cross-examination of Mr. Sexton. What is that?—A. That is probably a fine quality of paper or bristol board; I could not tell. That is very light; I think it is bristol-board.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson, and I will ask you what is that material?—A. Paper.

Q. What sort of paper?—A. Book paper.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Wing. What is that?—A. That is paper.

Q. What sort?—A. What I would call book paper.

Q. What do you call paper; what do you mean by that?—A. I do not know hardly how to explain that.

Q. What is paper?—A. I cannot give you the constituent elements of it.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. It is not bristol board or card-board?—A. I cannot tell you how it was made. I have seen it made, but I do not know what the constituent elements of it are—whether wood, straw, or rags.

Q. You judge by what it is made out of; you say it was put through a given process, and made out of rags, wood, and straw, and, if so, you would come to the conclusion it was paper?—A. No; I do not know that I would.

Q. Let us hear how you would judge?—A. I judge by the feeling or looks of it. That looks to me like paper.

Q. Is that white?—A. That is not very white. It is intended for white paper, I presume. It is not a very good color.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 7 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you what that is?—A. That is paper.

Q. What sort?—A. Book paper for fly leaves, and so forth, in binding, I should think. It has been a good many years since I handled paper.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of A. G. Porter, and I will ask you what is the material out of which that is made?—A. I would not like to answer that. I could not tell. I do not think anybody, unless he was very expert, could tell what that was. The surface of the back there looks to me like paper, but it does not have the appearance of bristol board, and I cannot tell what there is inside.

Q. Suppose that is made up of sheets of Republican tickets, one placed on top of the other, what would you call it then?—A. I would say it was made up of paper, if it was made of those Republican tickets. I should say it was a block of paper.

Q. Do you know how card-board is made?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you answer that a thing is bristol board simply because of its thickness?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why?—A. The surface appears different to the look and to the touch to me.

Q. What is the difference in the surface?—A. You can see there. It has a kind of a macerated appearance that card-board has not.

Q. Referring now to Exhibit No. 5 to the cross-examination of Mr. Sexton, what would you call that?—A. That is what I would call a light grade of bristol board, such as calling cards are printed on. That would just be my impression.

Q. When you cut it up into cards for visiting purposes you call it calling cards?—A. I used the term bristol board. We used that term in printing for calling cards, and light, fine work of that character.

Q. Is it not true that there are bristol boards a good deal thinner than certain qualities of book paper?—A. I should say so, but I do not know; that would be my impression that there is paper heavier than some grades of bristol board.

Q. Do you know the average weight of ordinary news printing paper, ordinary size, sized 25 by 38, such as the Indianapolis Journal is printed on?—A. We print on a very light grade of paper, an unusually light grade.

Q. Is it not true that the Sentinel prints on a lighter grade than the Journal?—A. I do not know: I have not handled the Sentinel enough to judge of it. My judgment would be that we have printed upon a lighter grade than the Sentinel.

Q. Is it not true that the News prints on a lighter grade than the Journal or Sentinel?—A. I should think it is.

Q. What is the ordinary weight per ream, 480 sheets, sized 25 by 38 inches?—A. I do not know, but to jump at it I should say in the neighborhood of 40 or 45 pounds.

Q. What would you say was the weight of the material upon which that Republican ticket was printed, size 25 by 38, per ream?—A. I should say 70 pounds, probably; I do not know.

Q. Would it not be a good deal more than 70 pounds?—A. I am just estimating now; I should think possibly it might be double the weight of the Democratic ticket; I do not think it is more than that, if so much; that is just the way it feels.

Q. What do you say from the external appearance of that Exhibit No. 1 on the cross-examination of A. G. Porter as to whether or not the material upon the outside is the same as that upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I judge from the appearance of this that it was pasted on, and there was something there, underneath that, that interfered with the original appearance of the paper as it looks to me upon the back there.

Q. You mean in color?—A. No, sir; the texture. I do not know whether it was that or not.

Q. Do you think it has the same look at the front of the ticket and the back?—A. I should judge that it has; I can only tell by the surface; it looks to me more like the face of the ticket than the back.

Q. You say that that Democratic ticket is a lighter grade of book paper. Look at it again and see if you think that may not be a grade of newspaper?—A. Yes, sir; it may be. It would properly go into the grade of newspaper, as experts would determine it, but I judge that grade of paper is very frequently used for printing books and pamphlets.

Q. A very inferior quality of book?—A. Yes, sir; it is not a very good calendered surface for book.

Q. It may be newspaper?—A. Yes, sir; pretty good newspaper if it is.

Q. You spoke of that Republican ticket being sized; do you say it is sized and calendered?—A. Sized and calendered; that is as much as I know about that.

Q. You do not know anything about the manufacture of paper, or the process?—A. No, sir; but as to the surface of it.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. This block of supposed paper marked Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of A. G. Porter, which has been handed to you, I will ask you to examine and state how many tickets have been pasted together to constitute that block?—A. Is it to be presumed that these are all tickets?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. That is the assumption?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I cannot give any reasonable estimate hardly about that. That has undoubtedly been in a press.

Q. Can you get at the number of tickets at the end?—A. I do not think I can. It seems to me like there was 30 or 40 put together.

Q. Just look at the other end, and see if you can count them. Are there as many as ten?—A. If that is a specimen of the ticket, I should think there were a good many more than 10 tickets in there.

Q. Taking that as the specimen, how many tickets would you suppose there was in there?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. I now hand you 10 tickets headed Republican ticket. Please fold these together and compare them with the thickness of that block, and state how much thicker that block is than the 10 tickets you have?—A. 5 or 6 times.

Q. As much as 50 or 60 tickets probably in that block?—A. Yes, sir; I should say so.

Q. I will ask you to state if you ever saw or ever knew of any paper to be manufactured in this country or elsewhere as the paper upon which that block appears for any purpose.—A. You mean just one thickness, like that?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I never saw any.

Q. State if, when it gets to the point of card-board and bristol, if it has not ceased to be called paper, and is simply called card-board and bristol; and if it is not known in the business and trade as card-board and bristol board?—A. There are papers, and bristol boards and card-boards.

Q. Ordinary book papers or plate papers or print papers would not be called card-board or bristol, would they?—A. I am not acquainted with plate papers; I think that newspapers or book papers would not be called bristol.

Q. Or bristol board would not be called book or print paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. It would be known in the trade, and is known in the trade, as Bristol board and card-board?—A. I cannot say. If you were going to buy, and wanted a bristol board, you would have to ask for bristol board. I am not acquainted with the mode of manufacturing bristol board. I have seen something of the manufacture of paper; I have seen it in the process.

Recross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You call newspaper newspaper?—A. News print is what we call it.

Q. And you call plate paper plate paper, do you?—A. I presume so; but I do not know anything about plate paper.

Q. And you call blotting-paper paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And blotting-paper is made very thick, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The stock in card-board is a paper stock, is it not?—A. Well, of course; I do not know how it would be treated. My judgment would be that the stock in bristol board is finer stock than paper.

Q. Do you not think there is a grade of card inferior to certain grades of book-paper stock?—A. Yes, sir; certainly.

Q. The stock is though the same stock out of which paper is made?—A. I should just presume that; I would not know positively, because I do not know about that. Of course there are different grades of stock and different kinds of paper. There are exclusively linen papers, and exclusively rag papers and straw papers.

Q. And you may make card-board out of these various materials you have named that are manufactured out of what is called paper pulp?—A. That of which paper is made; yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, can you make paper collars out of that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they can make cards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they can make car-wheels?—A. I only know that by reputation.

Q. Do they make buckets and such like out of paper?—A. I do not know that.

Q. Do you not know there are 2 large factories—one of them in Wisconsin, one in Iowa—that turn out thousands of buckets made out of paper exclusively?—A. I do not know.

Q. Have you not seen them selling round at the doors of the stores, and are they not used in carrying grain and wheat and anything that is dry to distinguish it from what is wet?—A No, sir.

Q. You did not know there were any such factories?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do not you know that they make roofing out of paper?—A. Yes, sir; paper roofing.

Q. Now, you can make a good many things out of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you about 2-ply bristol. Is there a 1-ply bristol?—A. I really cannot say, because I do not know the process of the manufacture of bristol board.

Q. Is it not a fact that bristol-boards are made 1-ply, that is 1 sheet as it comes from the mill or 2 thin sheets put together and called 2-ply?—A. I should presume that would be the distinction between the plies.

Q. And you would call it 2-ply card, and 2-ply bristol, and so forth, and is it not true that you may take certain qualities of book-paper and put sheets together and out of that make what is called 2-ply card?—A. I do not know.

Mr. WILSON. I stated to the witness just now, supposing this exhibit which I called his attention to was Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of A. G. Porter, supposing that was made out of Republican tickets. I do not want to be understood to say that it is made out of Republican tickets, for I do not know that it is.

The WITNESS. That is what I do not know.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. If car-wheels were made out of paper and houses were roofed with paper and buckets were made out of paper, and paper is made into blocks of that kind which has been shown you marked Exhibit No. 1, to the cross-examination of Governor Porter, would the paper then be called book-paper or print-paper?—A. I should suppose not.

Q. It ceases to be called print or book-paper whenever it gets in any other form than book or news paper?—A. Book paper, as I understand it, is distinct. It is not card-board.

E. W. HALFORD.

By agreement of the parties the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Monday, November 26, 1883.

MONDAY, November 26, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

HENRY C. ADAMS, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Henry C. Adams; I am nearly 40 years old, and I live in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a contractor.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if you were one of the commissioners appointed by the circuit court of Marion County, Indiana, to recount the votes cast for Daniel A. Lemon, James W. Hess, respectively for sheriff?—A. I was.

Q. That election was held when?—A. November, 1882.

Q. Yourself, N. S. Byram, and Austin H. Brown composed the commissioners, did they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you sworn to recount the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was any member of the commission sworn for any other purpose?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you recount the votes on sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time of that count, I will ask you to state if any one kept a count or attempted to keep a count of the votes cast for Mr. English and Mr. Peelle for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it?—A. Mr. Austin H. Brown and Mr. N. S. Byram kept part of the vote. Mr. Brown kept all the vote. I think he commenced counting when we commenced counting the vote for sheriff and Mr. Byram kept part of it.

Q. Did you discover any errors in the count of the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How were those errors, and in what did those errors consist?—A. Well, there were a great many errors in this. The board of commissioners made one set of rulings when they counted the tickets in regard to some classes of the tickets, and adhered to them all the way through; and the election officers in the different precincts, about 75 or 80 election precincts, their rulings were not all the same and not all just alike; and there were some tickets rejected that we counted, and some tickets counted that we rejected, and we discovered two or three mistakes in the tallies where the number of votes did not agree with the number of names on the poll-book, and errors of that kind.

Q. Then, in the errors discovered in the vote for sheriff, they consisted, as I understand you, in the fact that the board of commissioners counted several tickets that had been rejected by the election precinct inspectors?—A. Yes, sir; and rejected some that had been counted by them.

Q. Did that comprise all the errors discovered in that count?—A. No; as I said before, there was some places where the number of votes on the poll-sheet would exceed the number of tickets, and would exceed the names on the poll-book. There was one instance of that kind in one precinct of Wayne Township.

Q. How was that? Just state it.—A. There were 5 more votes counted than tickets; 5 votes tallied for Mr. Lemon more than there were tickets in the box or names on the poll-book.

Q. How was it as to Mr. Peelle and Mr. English in that precinct?—A. I do not remember that there was any difference.

Q. What do you mean by "any difference"?—A. I mean I do not remember that there was any difference between the number of votes as counted on the tally-sheets and the number of votes or the tickets in the box. I will say right here that when this vote was taken the count was kept by Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown, and they seemed to be managing the Congressional part of the business; and Mr. Hess and Mr. Lemon and myself paid especial attention to the count of the vote for sheriff, and the other gentlemen went over all the tickets; I kept no record of that, and I kept no book of it like they did, but I called off the vote. Shall I go ahead and state how we did that?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Mr. Byram first examined the tickets, and he would pass them to Mr. Brown in tallies of 5, and Mr. Brown would examine the tickets and pass them to me.

Q. That was in tallies of 5 for Mr. Lemon and Mr. Hess?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That ruling was not adopted with reference to Congressman, was it?—A. No, sir; we counted all the straight tickets first of course, as they appeared on the strings where they were strung, and Mr. Lemon would take the tickets from me, and when he had passed them over I would announce the result—5 for Lemon, or 5 for Hess, whichever it might be.

Q. That is, they did not count 5 straight tickets for Peelle, but simply counted the votes for Peelle as the number happened to be on the 5 straight for Lemon or Hess?—A. Yes, sir; those gentlemen did this. After a while, in counting the straight tickets I noticed that because it delayed us a little in counting the votes, as they first would take up the straight tickets, all the election board did that—that was the general rule, to count the straight tickets as they would be counted in tallies—that is, in tallies of 5—and they would be strung, and sometimes there would be 50 or sometimes 100 of one party counted, and there would be the same of another of straight tickets. After the straight tickets were counted, then they would count these scratched tickets, and we took them off the string that way, except we would reverse the string and commence at the bottom of the string to take off the tickets, so that the straight tickets would be first; and I noticed them in this way, that the gentlemen in counting had a mark for a tally on the straight tickets, a single mark for a tally, and they would have a mark for scratched tickets; that is, a mark for the Republican scratched tickets and one for the Democratic scratched tickets. I remember I sat by Mr. Brown, and he had his book and showed me what he told me was Republican with Peelle off and Democratic with English off, and Democratic with Peelle on and Republican with English on, so as to get the number of tickets that were scratched and had no other name substituted.

Q. How long were you counting that vote for sheriff?—A. Three or four days is my recollection

Q. Thursday to Monday, was it?—A. We commenced Thursday and finished Monday morning; I think it was about 3 o'clock, if I am not mistaken, in the night of Sunday.

Q. The succeeding Sunday?—A. Yes, sir; and we finished up about 3 o'clock; we thought we would finish it up while we were at it.

Q. At the time during the count of the vote or at the conclusion of the count of the votes cast for this county for sheriff, what was said, if anything, by Mr. Brown or in Mr. Brown's presence as to how the vote would stand on a recount for Peelle and English?—A. Well, it was after we were through counting and after the count was over, and it was the morning of the day we reported.

Q. After the count had concluded?—A. Yes, sir; it was after we had agreed, and Mr. Brown, Mr. Byram, and myself had agreed on our return that we should make, and Mr. Brown said—I believe he said—he would like for Mr. Cropsey to look at it and to have them see it; and Mr. Lemon, and probably Mr. Cropsey, was in the room and looked at it, and we were waiting for some time for some purpose or other, and Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown and myself, and, I think, Mr. Hawkins, were standing at the end of the table, and we were talking about the English count. It was our impression and my impression that the advantage in the recount, or that the advantage in the recount of the vote for Congress, that it would have made a gain in favor of Mr. Peelle, and that remark was made to Mr. Brown, and I spoke to him about it and he acquiesced in it.

Q. State what he said.—A. My best impression is he said right then that that was the case, and he should say the same to Mr. English, and that Mr. English would have nothing to gain in a recount, and he would tell him so.

Q. Was Mr. Byram present when that occurred?—A. Yes, sir, and Mr. Hawkins.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Brown after that about the recount on Congressmen?—A. I do not know that I ever did; I do not remember.

Q. Did you find any Democratic tickets in that box with the name of Mr. Peelle printed on them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Not more than 5 or 6 to the best of my recollection.

Q. Did you notice the vote on Congressmen as you went along at all?—A. No, sir; I paid very little attention to it.

Q. You do not know where the errors occurred or how they occurred?—A. Except where there was a general error that affected the whole ticket. I remember of hearing Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown talking about the error in Franklin Township, and I remember of hearing them talk about that, and also a general error in the 24th ward.

Q. How was that error in the 24th ward?—A. There were 5 more votes counted than there were tickets in the box.

Q. Was that 5 counted for the whole Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; there were 5 less tickets in the box than there were names on the poll-book.

Q. That made 5 more votes counted for Mr. English than he was entitled to in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you notice any errors in Wayne Township?—A. Yes, sir; I have spoken about that. My impression of that is and my recollection is--I may be wrong about t—they were errors only affecting the vote for sheriff

Q. Were there or not some tickets in that precinct there that were not counted by the election board at all?—A. In all these?

Q. No, sir; in that election precinct in Wayne Township.—A. Tickets that were not counted?

Q. By the election board.—A. I do not recollect that there were. No, sir; it is not my recollection that there was any.

Q. I will ask you to state how the vote on sheriff corresponded with the names registered on the poll-list, if you know, in the several precincts.—A. Well, there were less votes tallied for sheriff than there were names on the poll-book naturally for the candidates. There would be less than there would be names on the poll-book because in some places the name of the candidate would be scratched entirely off and none substituted in place of it; and of course that would make the vote short as to the number of votes on the poll-book.

Q. Do you or not say that as a matter of fact the number of votes counted by you were more or less than the number of names recorded on the poll-book?—A. They were less, but the number of tickets would be about the same. There generally would be as many tickets as there were names on the poll-book. They would agree except in 2 or 3 instances. I believe there would be a difference, but the number of tickets would be the same as the number of names on the poll-book, but the number of votes would be different.

Q. On account of scratching?—A. Yes, sir; there was some scratching at the last election.

Q. Did you notice Democratic tickets in the box with the name of Mr. Peelle pasted or written on in place of Mr. English's name?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state about how many there were there of that kind?—A. I can give you my best impression about it. I should say 4 or 5 hundred.

(Objected to as an expression of opinion.)

Q. Did you see some Republican tickets in there with the name of Mr. Peelle scratched off, and Mr. English's pasted on or written on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of that kind?—A. I should say not more than 50, if that many. My best judgment would be 25 to 35—along there.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not at the end of each precinct after the count had been made of each precinct, what was said or done between Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown with reference to the vote for Congressman.—A. They just struck a balance—that is, compared notes to see how they stood.

Q. Did Mr. Brown make any corrections, or not, as he went along?—A. Yes, sir; sometimes he and Mr. Byram did not agree, and they always ended it by agreeing except in one instance.

Q. How was that?—A. I do not recollect exactly how it was. I remember one instance, and they agreed except that one instance. I remember of laughing about it at the time—about their disagreeing on that point.

Q. What did he say he was keeping that count for?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. He said he was keeping it for Mr. English; that he had been employed by Mr. English to keep it.

Q. Did he say that he was employed by Mr. English to keep count of the vote, or simply to keep count of the number of Republican tickets upon which Mr. English's name appeared?—A. He said he had been employed to keep a count of all the votes, which he proceeded to do.

Q. I will ask you to state now whether or not in the keeping count there, as Mr. Brown was, on candidates for sheriff and candidates for Congress, was he or was he not liable to make mistakes and commit errors in his count?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Certainly he was; any person would have been.

Q. Could an ordinary or a prudent man, or an expert, if you please, in the keeping of the vote have kept that vote correctly in the manner in which Mr. Brown kept it?

(Objected to as a mere opinion of the witness.)

A. That is all I have to give you—my opinion.

Q. I asked you that question and asked your judgment and opinion upon that, based upon the manner in which the count was kept?—A. I cannot see how a man would keep a count and keep it the way he did that he would be satisfied with as to the correctness of it.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Brown calling attention to any errors in the vote for Congress in any wards from the first to the ninth, both inclusive?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not remember of it?—A. I do not remember of his calling any attention to any errors in the vote for Congress.

Q. At any time?—A. At any time; no, sir.

Q. State if there were any errors discovered on the vote for Congressman in this way, where there would be tallies of 3 or 5 for Mr. English when the same number of tallies should have been given to Mr. Peelle.—A. I remember one instance of that kind, and we thought it was rather queer. It was one precinct in Franklin Township.

Q. How many votes was that?—A. The difference of 10 was made, I think it was, to my recollection.

Q. Was that 10 votes tallied for Mr. English that should have been for Mr. Peelle, or was it a tally of 10 votes for Mr. English that should have been counted for him or anybody?—A. My recollection is there was 5 votes too many tallied for Mr. English; my recollection is there was 10 votes too many tallied for Mr. English.

Q. State if that tally of 10 votes for Mr. English was or was not 10 votes more tallied for Mr. English and the whole Democratic county ticket more than were in the box.—A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection. I understand you to say that there was 10 more votes tallied for Mr. English than there were tickets for the Democratic State ticket.

Mr. WILSON. That is your answer?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; that is my recollection.

Mr. WILSON. That is your answer?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; that is my recollection, that there was 10 votes more tallied for Mr. English than there were for the Democratic State ticket—that is, 10 above what he should have.

Q. And that was 10 more votes than there were ballots in the box?—A. Yes, sir; than there were votes. When I say tally, I mean a tally of 5 votes.

Q. Had you any conversation with Mr. Brown at any time since that recount on sheriff was had about the count of the vote for Congress?—A. No, sir; not since we left that day. I don't think I have spoken to him about it.

Q. What kind of a memorandum did he keep there; was it in a book or on a piece of paper, or how was it?—A. He had a little book, like a little pass-book or bank-book.

Q. Did he keep the vote for sheriff in that as well as the vote for Congress?—A. No, sir; we had clerks that kept the tally.

Q. Did he make note of the vote for sheriff as he went along?—A. No, sir; I don't think he did.

Q. Then the vote he kept for Congress was in a book that he used for that purpose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to examine that and state if that is the kind of tickets that were found in the boxes when you recounted the votes for sheriff?—A. We found this kind of tickets in the boxes; yes, sir. This was not all the kind we found in there.

Q. I mean of Republican tickets.—A. There was another kind of Republican ticket, too.

Q. What kind of a Republican ticket was that?—A. There was another ticket just like that, except a different heading. It was a plainer heading—an engraved heading, and had an open letter and a plain letter.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer in evidence the ticket which I have just handed the witness. I ask that it be marked as an exhibit to his testimony.

(The ticket will be found in evidence attached to this deposition as a part thereof and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. I now hand you another ticket headed Republican ticket.—A. That is the ticket.

Q. Is that the kind of a ticket that you found in the box, too?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many tickets were there of that kind?—A. It is hard to say, but not nearly so many as the others.

Q. How many tickets would you say there were of that kind?—A. Whatever the Republican ticket was in the country—and I do not know what that vote was, but just about that number.

Q. Was that kind of a ticket voted at the several precincts in this county outside the city of Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of a heading has that ticket?—A. That has an engraved heading.

Q. Is it a plain heading, plain type?—A. It is a plain letter.

Q. You say it is a plain letter?—A. Yes, sir; a wood-cut.

Q. It may be a wood-cut, or it may be printed from type, may it not?—A. No; that is a wood-cut. I know about it. I have seen the cut.

Q. I will ask you to state if that is the same kind of paper or different paper from that upon which the other tickets were printed. Just examine them.—A. I should say it was the same kind of paper.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed Democratic ticket, and I will ask you to state if you found that ticket in the boxes.—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer this ticket in evidence as a part of the deposition of this witness, and ask that it be marked as an exhibit.

(The ticket will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 2.)

Q. State whether or not the Republican tickets in the boxes that you counted did or did not show the type on the opposite side in the main, or whether there were only a few of them.—A. I could not say as to that. I do not remember of paying especial attention to that. I did not pay much attention to the back of the tickets. In some instances, where there were names written on them, or something of the kind, I noticed them.

Q. I now hand you five tickets headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to take those tickets and examine them and see if that is the kind of a ticket you found in the boxes?—A. Yes, sir; I do not see anything different from the tickets we found in the box.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer in evidence these five tickets just handed to the witness, and ask that they be marked as exhibits to his deposition.

(The tickets will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibits Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7, respectively.)

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say there was two kinds of Republican tickets you saw in that box on that recount of the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The ticket that Mr. Peelle called your attention to—that plain ticket headed "Republican ticket," and the one where you made an exhibit of five tickets a moment ago—I call your attention now to these tickets, and ask you to look at them and say whether you found tickets like those in the boxes?—A. These seem to me to be heavier than the tickets there. There may have been tickets of that kind; I am under the impression they are heavier than most of the tickets in there. That is the general style of the tickets.

Q. How many tickets do you think there was of the style Mr. Peelle showed you in the boxes—a majority of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find some like these in the boxes?—A. I do not say that I did. I say there might have been.

Q. Do you say there was not?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is your statement as to whether there was or not?—A. I do not say whether there was any there or not.

Q. You counted the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know whether this kind was there or not?—A. No, sir.

Q. You think they are a stouter ticket?—A. Yes, sir; than the general run of our tickets.

Q. Did you see the tickets printed?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about the material upon which they were gotten up on?—A. No, sir.

Mr. WILSON. I offer as an exhibit to the cross-examination of Mr. Adams the 5 tickets which I have shown him, and ask that they be made exhibits to his deposition.

(Objected to for the reason that the tickets have not been identified as the tickets that were voted.)

Mr. WILSON. I propose to do that. The tickets will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibits 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12, respectively.

Q. You say there was two tallies, 5 each, more votes counted by the election board in Franklin Township than there was names on the poll-book or tickets in the ballot-box? I understand you to say that.—A. I say there was 10 more votes counted for Mr. English than there was names on the poll-book, or ten more votes than there was votes for him in the ballot-box. There was ten more votes counted for Mr. English and Mr. Peelle together than there was tickets in the box.

Q. How do you know whether that tally was against Mr. English or against Mr. Peelle?—A. Because Mr. English's voted exceeded that of the State ticket, is my recollection.

Q. That is the reason you give that conclusion?—A. That Mr. English's vote, taking off the scratches, that Mr. English had that many more votes to his credit than he should have had.

Q. Did you not say that you did not count the tickets for Congressman at any precinct?—A. My attention was called to that afterwards.

Q. Did you count the precinct on Mr. Peelle?—A. No. But I looked at the poll-book and saw.

Q. How could you tell whether that was for Mr. English or for Mr. Peelle? It was not in excess of the entire number of names on the poll-book, was it?—A. It was not in excess of the names.

Q. Was there not 103 votes for Stanton J. Peelle in Franklin Township, precinct No. 1?—A. I do not know.

Q. I will ask you to look at this paper and see if it is not a certificate of Mr. McLain?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it not say that there was 103 votes in precinct No. 1 for Stanton J. Peelle in Franklin Township?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And precinct No. 2, 120?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And English, in precinct No. 1, 165?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Precinct No, 2, English, 183?—A. 183.

Q. Medkirk, 5 at No. 1 and 18 at No. 2?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do I understand you to say there were more votes for William E. English than there was names on the poll-books?—A. On the poll-books, as I understand.

Q. How does the number of names on the poll-books correspond with the number of tickets in the ballot-boxes?—A. With the number of votes or the number of tickets?

Q. With the number of tickets.—A. There was ten more votes counted than there was tickets in the ballot-box.

Q. The aggregate of votes in that township exceeded the aggregate of names by ten?—A. There was ten more tickets, Republican, Democratic, and National, for Congress than there was names on the poll-book.

Q. If you did not count those names, how do you know but what there were scratches there for Mr. English that would give him that vote?—A. Well, we looked over that precinct where that occurred; we looked over the precinct afterwards.

Q. How could you tell whether it was for Mr. Peelle or Mr. English?—A. Very easily by counting the votes.

Q. Did you count the votes for Congress?—A. With reference to the count in that precinct.

Q. On Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not say that you did not count a vote at all?—A. I do not say I did not count at all. I say I noticed that when it was called to my attention.

Q. How was it called to your attention?—A. I forget now who called it to my attention, but it was a matter of conversation in the board.

Q. Did they count them?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them counted. We witnessed that count.

Q. For Congressman?—A. Yes, sir; in that precinct when they ran it over.

Q. Every ticket?—A. Yes, sir; when it was counted I saw that count.

Q. Who counted them?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram both counted them.

Q. And you saw them counted on English and Peelle?—A. I have told you that two or three times.

Q. I understand you to say two or three times, in the course of your examination-in-chief, that you kept no count on Congressmen?—A. I did not keep any count on Congressmen.

Q. And you did not count any precinct on Congressman?—A. I witnessed that count. I did not count it myself individually, but I witnessed that.

Q. You say now that they counted for Mr. English more votes than he got by ten?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say those tickets were counted over and the number of votes English got was counted?—A. Yes, sir; and he had ten tallied for him in excess of what he should have had.

Q. Did you count any other precinct on Congressman?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you watch any other precinct on Congressman?—A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Brown called your attention to that mistake, you say?—A. I do not say that. I say my attention was called to it, but I do not recollect whether by Mr. Brown or Mr. Byram.

Q. Mr. Brown called your attention to no mistakes in that recount?—A. On the vote for Congress?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I do not remember that he did, and I do not remember that he did not.

Q. Your memory is not clear on that subject?—A. You mean whether he called my attention to it or not?

Q. Yes, sir?—A. I do not remember anything about whether he called my attention to it or not.

Q. Did not Mr. Brown call your attention to the ticket that he said he had voted for Congressman, and that the ticket he had voted was not in the box at all from the second precinct of the 17th ward?—A. Mr. Brown said his ticket was not in the box; he did not call my attention to the ticket, because he said it was not there. He called my attention to that and said it was not there, though.

Q. Is Mr. Brown pretty shrewd and smart?—A. He has that reputation.

Q. What do you say?—A. He bears that reputation as a tolerably shrewd politician.

Q. Is he not a man of some ability in your estimation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he not pretty good at figures?—A. I do not know whether he is or not.

Q. You could not say?—A. I could not say how good he was. I do not know whether he is any better at figures than the ordinary well-educated man.

Q. He is a well-educated man, is he?—A. Yes, sir; I guess he has a good deal of education. I should think so; he writes a good hand.

Q. Has he not had, to your knowledge, a good deal of experience in figures, and has he not been county clerk, and does not the duties of that office require more or less dealings with figures?—A. Yes, sir; if he performs the duties of his office himself; if he has a deputy, it is not very likely he will do very much of that though.

Q. Did he not attend to the duties pretty thoroughly himself?—A. He had a deputy, a cashier that kept his books, Mr. Madden.

Q. Was he not United States collector?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would not that require him to learn something about figures?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he not auditor of the county, too?—A. The records show that; I did not know him when he was auditor of the county.

Q. Would not that require a man to deal in figures pretty extensively?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would not that require a man in your estimation that was pretty skillful in dealing in figures?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you mean to say that it is impossible for a man skilled in figures not to keep an account of two offices at an election when you are making a recount?—A. Yes, sir; I mean to say that in my opinion a man cannot do it and do it accurately.

Q. Was not Mr. Brown recently selected as expert to go through the county treasurer's books?—A. Yes, sir; but if he was, the gentleman whose books he settled is now being sued by the county to pay back some twenty thousand dollars. It was Mr. Hanway he settled for.

Q. No, sir; it was Mr. Landers.—A. Mr. Landers paid considerable money to the county treasurer on that settlement.

Q. Is it not true that the treasurer of the county paid to Mr. Landers some money?—A. Mr. Landers has paid some money in.

Q. Is it not true that Mr. Brown examined all these books and on his report it was found that the county was indebted to Mr. Landers about eighteen hundred dollars?—A. That I do not know; Mr. Brown was commissioner, as I understand, appointed by the court to hear the evidence in that case, appointed by Judge Holeman to hear the evidence in that case and make his report to the court, and my recollection is that Mr. Brown and Mr. Gelwick made Hanway's settlement with the county and that Mr. Hanway is now being sued by the county for twenty thousand dollars on account of that settlement.

Q. Was it not upon the basis of that settlement that that suit was brought?—A. That is my recollection. No, sir, I think not.

Q. You were one of the commissioners who counted the votes in the sheriff's contest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You, believing that one man could not keep two counts as accurately as one, you paid attention to the sheriff?—A. Yes, sir. I kept no record of the count for Congress.

Q. Did you pay much attention to that count?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you count any other township other than Franklin Township?—A. I have answered that I did not.

Q. Do you think Mr. Byram could have kept the count any more accurately than Mr. Brown?—A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you how many Democratic tickets there were with his name written or pasted on them; was that a guess on your part?—A. That was my best impression.

Q. Was it a guess, or was it really anything more than a guess; and could you give a definite answer in numbers?—A. No, sir, I could not give a definite answer in numbers, but that is my recollection and my best impression.

Q. What is the impression; would you call it a guess?—A. You can call it anything you please; I call it an impression.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a guess?—A. No, sir; because I could guess without being present at the count, but my impression was verified from those gentlemen in their count.

Q. They counted the votes, as you say you have not done. Do you think your impression could be anything more than conjecture?—A. Yes, sir; because a person, as I understand it, can make a conjecture without any opinion at all, but he would derive his impression from some information upon the subject, and it was from the information by seeing these gentlemen as they were making the count.

Q. Did you try to charge your memory with the matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. You would make the same answer as to the number of Democratic tickets scratched where English's name was scratched off that you have made to the preceding question?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would make that same statement?—A. Yes, sir. The figures I have given on the vote for Congress as to the scratches and changes are given simply from my best impression.

Q. Without having counted them?—A. Yes, sir; without having counted them.

Q. Whilst you were giving, as you said, your best attention to the count on sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whilst, you said, one man could not count under the circumstances more than one office?—A. And do it well; yes, sir.

Q. What was your business in November, 1882?—A. I was sheriff of this county.

Q. You said that Mr. Byram kept count of the vote for Congress. Do you know whether he kept a complete count?—A. Mr. Byram did not keep a count at first; he did not keep a count when we first commenced.

Q. When did he commence; do you know how many precincts had been counted or how many wards had been counted before he commenced?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Byram did not keep count the first day, and did not commence until the second day we were counting.

Q. Do you know what time the second day he commenced?—A. I think in the morning of the second day.

Q. Do you know how many wards or precincts had been counted before he commenced?—A. My recollection is that Mr. Byram commenced after the 6th ward had been counted.

Q. That is your recollection?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not true that he commenced with the 10th ward?—A. I say that my impression is he commenced with the 7th ward—commenced with the 6th or 7th. If I thought it was true that he commenced on the 10th ward I should have said so.

Q. I want to see if your memory can be refreshed and see if you cannot recollect, and I will ask you now to refresh your memory and think awhile and see if it was not the 10th?—A. I think Mr. Byram commenced to keep count and make memorandum upon the 7th ward. My recollection is we finished the 6th ward on the first day.

Q. You say that the board of commissioners, or who was it, made one set of rules as to counting, and this body, appointed by the commissioners, made another. It was the election officers at the various precincts, was it not?—A. The election board at the different precincts did not all rule alike.

Q. And the rule of the commissioners appointed to make that count ruled uniformly?—A. Yes, sir; we tried to rule uniformly, and we all agreed upon every ruling that was made. There was not a dissenting opinion by either one of us on our rules.

Q. Do you recollect the number of errors, not the net result of the errors, but the number of errors that occurred on the count of the vote for sheriff?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recollect the net difference between the vote that the commissioners found and the aggregate of the vote that the election board returns showed?—A. I remember that by the returns Mr. Hess had a majority of 12, and the commissioners found him to have a majority of 61. That is my recollection.

Q. I will ask you whether the errors were measured by the difference between 12 and 61, or were there more errors, or is that the net result?—A. Yes, sir; there were more errors, and that is the net result.

Q. About how many errors do you think there were that resulted in giving that net result; were there many or few?—A. Oh, there was considerable more than the net result.

Q. Did you not find errors all along, all the way through, resulting in that net difference of between 12 and 61?—A. No; there were some precincts in my recollection where we made no changes.

Q. Was there a large number of precincts in which there were errors?—A. Yes, sir; I think there was in the majority of them.

Q. You say there was a difference in Wayne Township found when you came to make the count on sheriff, between the vote that was returned by the board from that township and the vote as found by the commissioners?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recollect how that difference occurred?—A. I can tell you how I was informed it occurred.

Q. I am asking you about how in your count it occurred, if you know?—A. We had no error in the count of Wayne Township, but we found more tallies for Mr. Lemon than there was tickets; more votes for Mr. Lemon than there was tickets, and then there was names on the poll-book, counting the tickets of both parties and the Greenback party together, and deducting Mr. Hess's straight vote, or all of Mr. Hess's votes and all of Mr. Lemon's—deducting all their votes and the scratched tickets—there was more votes than tickets.

Q. Do you know which way that vote was, or could you tell from that count how the error was, whether for or against Mr. Lemon?—A. Certainly.

Q. How could you tell?—A. By counting the tickets.

Q. You found that there was not the number of tickets that Mr. Lemon claimed?—A. That the report of the board showed.

Q. And if you had given him the number that they showed, he —— A. He would have had five votes too many.

Q. And added to what Mr. Hess had there would be more tickets than there was names in the box?—A. Counting scratches and the votes there reported.

Q. That was the way you got at it and that was the basis of your statement that Mr. Lemon had more votes given him than he ought to have had?—A. Yes, sir; and those five votes were deducted from him and the commissioner agreed to that.

Q. State to us again how you went through this process of counting; you counted by 5's?—A. Yes, sir; on straight tickets.

Q. Did you take them up and sort them and then count them?—A. My recollection is this: we, Mr. Hawkins, took the tickets off the string a good part of the time and divided the tickets into tallies of 5's as they came off, and Mr. Byram took them and looked at them and passed them to Mr. Brown, and Mr. Brown passed them to me, and I passed them to Mr. Lemon.

Q. From the box or off the string, which was it?—A. They were taken right off the strings.

Q. They were first taken out of the box and then strung?—A. No, sir; they were first taken off the string; the tickets were on the string.

Q. In the boxes?—A. Yes, sir, in the bags; and the bags were opened and the strung tickets were taken out, and the tickets were taken off, and five tickets at a time were handed to Mr. Byram, and sometimes he took five off himself, but most of the time five were handed to him, and my recollection is Mr. Myers and Mr. Hawkins took them off. I know they did until Mr. Lemon objected. At one time Mr. Lemon raised some objection about it, and he said he would just as soon the board would take them off as not, and then Mr. Brown passed them to me, and I passed them to Mr. Lemon, and Mr. Lemon passed them to Mr. Hess, and for a good part of the time Mr. Hess restrung them, and part of the time Mr. Lemon restrung them, when Mr. Hess got tired; and part of the time our bailiff, Mr. Maguire.

Q. What time of day was it that the remark was made by Mr. Brown—I think you said it was made by him—with reference to a recount on Congress?—A. It was after we had finished the count; before we had returned our report.

Q. In the morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before daybreak?—A. Oh, no.

Q. The next morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was present?—A. Mr. Byram, Mr. Brown, myself, and Mr. Hawkins.

Q. Was not some one else present?—A. There was other persons in the room.

Q. Who were they?—A. Mr. Smith Myers, Joe Perry, Frank Woolen, Mr. Lemon, and Mr. Hess, and Sam Maguire, the bailiff.

Q. Were they all there in the room?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the remark made by?—A. I made the remak myself.

Q. On the vote for Congress?—A. Yes, sir. No; I think it was Mr. Byram made that remark. Mr. Byram made the remark.

Q. You did not make the remark, then?—A. We were talking at the time. We were all there together, right behind the table, where we were counting, and Mr. Byram and I were talking about it, and Mr. Brown was there, and I forget just which one started the conversation, but we were both of us talking, and Mr. Brown acquiesced in it.

Q. What room was that at; where you had the count?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you left the court-house, after getting through?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say Mr. Brown acquiesed in it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Brown say anything, or did he just remain quiet?—A. No; he said something. He said he should tell Mr. English there would be nothing gained in a recount.

Q. That is your impression?—A. I know it.

Q. You testified in chief that that was your impression?—A. I testify that I know it.

Q. You testify now that you know it?—A. I do not remember Mr. Brown's exact words, but that was about the remark he made.

Q. You are a Republican in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you connected with the Republican county central committee that conducted that campaign?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you connected with the Republican State central committee?—A. No, sir.

Q. The city central committee?—A. No, sir.

Q. In no way at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are chairman of the present Republican central committee?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you reside at that time in November, 1882?—A. 622 north Alabama street.

Q. That is the first precinct in the second ward?—A. I forget now which precinct it is. I think it is the second. It is in the southern precinct.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I will ask you by way of refreshing your memory if you remember whether or not that precinct in Franklin Township, wheret here was an error against Mr. Peelle, whether you did not delay the count of the vote for sheriff for some time in order that Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram might go over that again?—A. Yes, sir; and Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram went over the vote and I saw them do it.

Q. That enabled you to get at the error there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if you discovered some errors in consequence of the width of Mr. Lemon's poster, some tickets that had or had not been counted by the precinct inspector that you counted or refused to count?—A. There were places where the name of the candidate would be pasted over the name of the other candidate, and the words "for sheriff." It would be pasted over both.

Q. How would they leave it then thus pasted?—A. We did not count the vote at all.

Q. Did some of those errors grow out of the way in which the pasters were put on the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any Greenback candidate for sheriff in this county in 1882?—A. No, sir; they indorsed the Democratic candidate—that is, the most of them.

Q. Did the Greenbackers indorse Mr. Lemon if you remember?—A. Yes, sir; there was some of the Republican candidates for judge indorsed by the Greenbackers.

Q. Who were the Democratic candidates for judges in 1882?

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

A. Napoleon B. Taylor.

Q. He was elected, was he not?—A. Yes, sir; and John A. Holman and Fred Heiner.

Q. Fred Heiner and John A. Holman?—A. Yes, sir; Heiner was a candidate against Judge Walker.

Q. Did Mr. Heiner or Mr. Holman make any contest for their election in any way?—A. No, sir.

Q. The Democratic candidate for the criminal circuit court was elected?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Democrat candidate for civil circuit court was elected, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 12 to cross-ex. of Henry C. Adams.

R. O. HAWKINS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. R. O. Hawkins; age, 35; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Attorney-at-law.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recollect the time of the recount of the vote for sheriff under direction of the circuit court by the board of commissioners?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. Do you mean during the recount?

Q. Yes. sir.—A. I was present there as one of the watchers, I believe the statute designates it.

Q. On behalf of Mr. Hess, were you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you known whether Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown kept any count of the votes cast for Congressman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Brown commenced his count?—A. I think he commenced at the beginning.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Byram commenced his?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Byram commenced his keeping the record of the vote for Congressman in the morning of the second day. The count was to commence at 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning, but we really did not get to work until after dinner. The votes had been taken and put in the boxes, and they had to be brought down there, and it delayed us, and we did not get to work at them, as I recollect, until afternoon, and Mr. Byram commenced that evening, but he did not keep the evening of the first day. He commenced on the 7th ward, and the 7th, 8th, and 9th wards were counted in the evening and the night, I recollect, of the first day, and he kept some memorandum of that count, but not a complete one. I think he commenced the next morning; I know he commenced the morning of the second day of the count to keep the complete record.

Q. Where was that count had?—A. It was in what is known as the witness-room of the criminal court—a room for witnesses on the second floor of the court-house. I have forgotten the number of the room.

Q. Were you present after the recount had been had at the time in which there was a conversation between Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown abont the recount for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what occurred?—A. My recollection is that the question was asked there by Mr. Adams or by myself jointly—I do not know who it was—of Mr. Byram about the recount on Peelle, and we were sitting there together, all of us, and something was said about the recount on Peelle and English, and how it would compare with the Hess and Lemon recount. Mr. Byram then said that he thought Mr. Peelle would gain more than Hess had gained by the recount; and Mr. Brown—I do not know that I can give the exact language—but my impression is the same as Mr. Adams's, that Mr. Brown said that he did not think there was anything for Mr. English to gain by a recount, or that he would not advise him to have a recount, or something of that kind.

Q. Did yon have any convecsation with Mr. Brown afterwards about that?—A. No, sir; I do not think Mr. Brown and I have ever spoken of the Congressional matter since.

Q. Do you remember the error that was spoken of in Franklin Township?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that error?—A. There was a difference there of 10. Mr. English had 10 votes there that he was not entitled to.

Q. Was that discovered by the commissioners, Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown, on the recount?—A. Yes, sir; it was discovered by them on the recount.

Q. Did you go over the ballots more than once to ascertain that fact?—A. My recollection is they did. The way they kept it is, after the count was through for sheriff the ballots were restrung, of course, as we recounted them, and they were put up in bags and the bags sealed and then put back in the boxes, and there was only one set of votes out at any one time on the table. That was the rule we adopted generally for each count, and while the balance was getting at these tickets and putting them in the bag or getting them out or stretching their legs, &c., Mr. Byram and Mr. Brown compared notes on their tally on Congressman. On this Franklin Township matter, before the votes were sealed up that was spoken of and discussed, and they talked about it, and finally they took the ballots back and went over them again in that precinct, whichever it was.

Q. Was that going over for Congressman?—A. Yes, sir; to see whether they had made a mistake or not for Congressman.

Q. Did Mr. Byram or Mr. Brown make any comparison of their vote at the end of each precinct for Congressman?—A. Yes, sir; in almost every instance, my impression is.

Q. Did they or not make corrections pro and con?—A. Yes, sir; I think in more than Franklin Township; but my recollection is not so distinct about counting the tickets over for Congressman in other precincts, but I know the count was delayed and they looked over the returns in connection with the general returns of the election, and made their comparison afterwards to see which was wrong and where the mistake occurred.

Q. Was there any time in which Mr. Brown or Mr. Byram refused to make corrections?—A. My recollection is, there was one precinct, I do not know which it was, that they could not agree on.

Q. In what did the errors in the votes for sheriff consist?—A. In some of the rules of the board—for instance, on tickets that were scratched, part of the ticket would only be scratched. I remember one place where the name of Mr. Hess, there was just a dash of the lead pencil on it, and there was hundreds of ways in which it might have happened without the voter having done it, and it was discussed at the time, and it was not afterwards counted for Mr. Hess, and it had not been thrown out by the board as we supposed.

Q. By the commission in the recount?—A. Yes, sir; but it had evidently been a count by the board; a count of the precinct showed it had one more than it would have had if that was thrown out, and the same way with reference to pasters. The pasters were wide and some of them would be put on in such a way as to cover up the name of the candidate and the office for which it was being voted, and in those cases the board did not count them, and I think they adopted this rule—my recollection is—the rule that if there was enough of the ticket itself to show what the indication of the voter was—for instance, of the name of the office "For sheriff"—if there was enough left exposed to see that, even though part of it was covered up, it was counted, but otherwise it was not.

Q. Was that the principal cause of the errors that was discovered?—A. Yes, sir; I think that the principal errors were in that way. There was a few instances where there was evidently errors by the clerks in tallying.

Q. Do you recollect whether or not, as the count of the vote progressed, there was or not discovered tallies in some of the precincts of two or three or five votes for Mr. English when the same number of votes should have been counted for Mr. Peelle?—A. I remember this—Franklin Township.

Q. How was it in the other precincts, if you remember?—A. I remember that Wayne Township matter, but I am not very well settled in my mind as to how that did happen on Congressman. I remember there was a difference there, as I recollect, of 5 in one of the precincts in Wayne Township.

Q. Did you notice some Democratic tickets in the boxes where Mr. Peelle's name was pasted or written on them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state how many there were of that kind in the boxes?—A. I can give my general impression from what I saw. I did not handle all the tickets. I should say from those I handled that there was several hundred. I would not undertake to make an approximation of those I did not see, because I did not handle all the tickets, and those that did not pass through my hands of course I did not notice them.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the city election in October last?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and I will ask you if that was the ticket used by the Democrats in this city in October last?—A. I think it was.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at the city election in October last?—A. Yes, sir; I think that was the ticket.

Mr. PEELLE. I ask that these tickets be marked as exhibits to the deposition of the witness.

(The tickets will be found attached to the deposition, as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1 and 2, respectively.)

The WITNESS. Those city tickets were different in the different aldermanic districts and different wards.

Q. I am speaking of the city tickets.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those are the tickets used by the Democrats and Republicans in the city election in October last?—A. Yes, sir; but in the aldermanic districts there was different names for councilmen, and in the different wards the same way.

Q. That is the same ticket voted, except they would vary in the different names for councilmen and aldermen?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Referring to that recount again of the vote for sheriff, did you notice the manner in which the tickets were being counted there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how the tickets were handed out and passed along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. One right after the other?—A. Partly that way. No, I do not think they were handed along one at a time; I think they went in fives.

Q. Were they handed out as fast as tickets could be taken off the string and passed down?—A. Yes, sir; as fast as they could be taken off the string.

Q. Was it possible for Mr. Brown or Mr. Byram to have kept a correct account of the vote for Congressman if they were keeping the vote for sheriff under their sworn duty?—A. No, sir; not in the way which they kept it; that is, an accurate account.

Q. Was Mr. Brown at one time an expert appointed by this county for any purpose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what purpose?—A. He was appointed as expert by the county to make the settlement in connection with Mr. Gelwick as between the county and Mr. Hanway, by an agreement between the commissioners and Mr. Hanway; and I think he was also appointed to prepare a system of books for the treasurer's office at the same time.

Q. What was the result of this examination?—A. My understanding is Mr. Hanway made a settlement with the county upon the report of these two gentlemen—the two experts.

Q. What is the result since?—A. The county has, I understand, a suit pending against Mr. Hanway for twenty thousand dollars.

Q. For errors discovered in that expert report of Mr. Brown and Mr. Gelwick?—A. I do not understand that question.

Q. Was it a suit brought since the settlement was made against Mr. Hanway?—A. Yes, sir, for an amount claimed to be due from him to the county that was not accounted for in that settlement.

Q. That the experts had overlooked?—A. Yes, sir; a mistake in the settlement, claiming an addition of some part of the tax duplicate that he should be charged with that he had not accounted for.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You did not keep the count of Congressman?—A. No, sir.

Q. You kept the count on sheriff?—A. No, I did not keep any count at all.

Q. You were simply a watcher?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am a Republican.

Q. You have explained, in your estimation, how these errors occurred on the count for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

N. S. BYRAM recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I recall you for the purpose of asking you if you noticed any Democratic tickets in the boxes at the time you were counting the vote for Lemon and Hess and Mr. Peelle with the name of Mr. Peelle printed on instead of Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Straight Democratic tickets, except Mr. Peelle's name was printed in there instead of Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many were there of that kind of tickets?—A. I do not think there was to exceed 5 or 6; I do not know that there was that many; there was a few.

Q. I intended asking you when you were on the witness stand the other day as to whether or not you had any conversation about what the result would be on a recount for Congressman; did I ask you that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you answer?—A. I do not know that you asked me that question in that way. You asked me if Mr. Brown was there when this matter was talked of, and when I made the statement, and my answer was that I did not think that Mr. Brown said anything, and that I did not recollect of his saying anything.

Q. You do not recollect whether he said anything?—A. My recollection now is that in that conversation, or some other conversation, I think it was in that same conversation, that Mr. Brown said that the recount would not be of any benefit to Mr. English, and would not do him any good, and he would probably say so to him.

Q. Do you remember whether he said anything about what the gain of the vote would be, if anything?—A. I do not think there was anything said about what the gain would be; my recollection is that he was there in the party and acquiesced in what was said as to the gain for Mr. Peelle.

Q. For Mr. Peelle?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anything said in that conversation about Mr. Peelle gaining more on a recount than had been gained for Mr. Hess?—A. Yes, sir; I made that statement to the parties there, that a recount would show a larger gain for Mr. Peelle than for Mr. Hess.

Q. Did he say anything about reporting to Mr. English?—A. My recollectio n is rather indistinct of that part of it, but it is that he stated that he did not think it would do any good for Mr. English to go on, or have a recount; that it would be no benefit to him, and he would say so to Mr. English. That is only an indistinct recollection of it now.

Q. What is your recollection about that error in Franklin Township with reference to Congressmen?—A. That there was 10 more votes tallied for Mr. English than there was tickets in the box, and there was as many tickets in the box as there was names on the poll-book.

Q. That the ticket and the names corresponded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your recollection as to the number of tickets corresponding with the number of names on the poll-book in the several precincts of the county?—A. As a general thing they corresponded. Sometimes there was one or two tickets less and sometimes there was a ticket two more.

Cross-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you recollect when it was you appeared here and testified in this matter?—A. It was Friday or Saturday, I believe.

Q. Last Friday or Saturday?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. When Mr. Peelle asked you the question what Mr. Brown said, you said he said nothing?—A. I so stated right now.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you did Mr. Brown say it would be more, and you said you did not recollect; and Mr. Peelle then asked you did Mr. Brown say it would be less, and you said he did not; and on cross-examination you said you did not recollect that he said anything?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you say you have an indistinct recollection that he did say something?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you talked with anybody since about this matter?—A. Yes, sir; I have talked with several parties with reference to it.

Q. Who did you talk to?—A. Mr. Peelle, and Mr. Adams, and Mr. Hawkins, I have talked with. I guess, probably, that is all I have talked with.

Q. And after talking with them you think you did probably hear that?—A. That, in connection with what I had testified to, and in thinking over the matter.

Q. You did not then recollect it?—A. I recollected that Mr. Brown was there, but I did not recollect of his saying anything at that time.

NORMAN S. BYRAM.

By agreement of all the parties, the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Tuesday, November 27, 1883.

TUESDAY, November 27, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

On account of the absence of Mr. Wilson, counsel for contestor, Mr. W. D. Bynum appeared for Mr. English.

N. S. BYRAM recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I wanted to ask you another question at the time of the adjournment last evening, but was unable to do so, and I will ask you now, what memorandum, if any, you made of the votes on Congressmen in the 7th, 8th, and 9th wards?—A. At the 7th ward I commenced keeping the number of Democratic tickets on which Mr. Peelle's name appeared, and the number of Republican tickets that Mr. English's name was on, and also the number of tickets that neither one of their names was on of the Democratic and Republican tickets.

Q. Did you make any notes of the number of Greenback tickets Mr. English's and Mr. Peelle's names were on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any count of the precincts of those wards at all, further than that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then, as you stated before in your examination, the only count you made was commenced in the 10th ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In keeping count of the tickets in that way in the 7th, 8th, and 9th wards, state how Mr. Brown was keeping his count.—A. I think he was keeping it in the same way. That was my impression at that time, and is my impression now.

Q. That he was keeping count of the Democratic tickets upon which Mr. Peelle's name appeared, and the Republican tickets upon which Mr. English's name appeared, and the National tickets upon which the name of either appeared?—A. Yes, sir; in other words, as we call it, keeping the "offs" and "ons."

Q. Did you keep any other memorandum of those three wards?—A. No, sir.

Q. You cannot tell anything about what the total vote of those three wards was?—A. I could by making an estimate and taking the number of votes on the poll-book.

Q. From your count or memorandum you could not tell anything about it?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many Democratic tickets did you find in those wards upon which the name of Mr. Peelle appeared, and how many Republican tickets upon which Mr. English's name appeared, and how many National tickets upon which either appeared?—A. I have a memorandum that was taken from my book.

Q. You can refresh your memory from anything you have, and state what it is.—A. In the 7th ward I found 20 Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name on, and 3 National tickets with Mr. Peelle's name on, and one Republican ticket with Mr. English's name on, and one National ticket with his name on. I also found two Republican tickets that there was nobody's name on for Congress, and also three Democratic tickets with nobody's name on.

Q. In the 7th ward?—A. Yes, sir; the 7th.

Q. How was it in the 8th?—A. In the 8th I found 24 Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name on, and 3 Republican tickets with Mr. English's name on, and I also found 3 Republican tickets with nobody's name on, and 3 Democratic tickets with nobody's name on.

Q. How was it in the 9th ward?—A. My memorandum shows that there was 40 Democratic tickets in the 9th ward with Mr. Peelle's name on, and 3 National tickets and 17 Republican tickets with Mr. English's name on, and 12 Democratic tickets with nobody's name on.

Q. Was that the only memorandum of those wards that you kept?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the way in which Mr. Brown kept count?—A. That is the way I thought he was keeping it.

Q. Was that keeping an account of those particular precincts for those wards, or was that the kind of a count he kept all the way through?—A. That is my recollection of the way he kept it all the way through. He made calculations from those memorandums.

Q. Have you examined the vote to see what the mistakes were in that precinct in Franklin Township?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the state of that mistake?—A. The state of that mistake in Franklin Township, according to my book, is that there was 10 more votes counted for Congressman than there was tickets in the box, that Mr. English was tallied with 9 more votes than the tickets showed, and that Mr. Peelle was tallied with two votes less, taking into consideration the scratched tickets found.

Q. Than he was entitled to?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Making the difference 9 votes in Mr. Peelle's favor in that one precinct in Franklin Township?—A. It made 11 votes in his favor.

Cross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. I observe you hold in your hand a memorandum from which you took the figures about which you testified. Just state what that memorandum is.—A. It is a memorandum I made from the memorandum I kept during that recount.

Q. Where is that memorandum you kept during the time of the recount?—A. It is at my store on Meridian street.

Q. When did you take the memorandum you now hold in your hand from that?—A. I took it this morning.

Q. Have you any recollection as to the figures, outside of the memorandum you have in your hands?—A. Nothing, except from what I saw in the book. I took the memorandum off of that memorandum book I kept during that recount.

Q. How many precincts were there in the seventh ward at the last election?—A. There was three.

Q, How many in the eighth ?—A. Two.
Q. And in the ninth ?—A. Two.
Q. Can you give the number of tickets which were scratched and upon which the names of the opposing candidates for Congress appeared in the respective precincts ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Just give them in the precincts.—A. Seventh ward, first precinct, Mr. Peelle was on eleven Democratic tickets, and Mr. English was on one Republican ticket and Mr. English's name was scratched off of two Democratic tickets. In the second precinct Mr. Peelle was on three National tickets and on nine Democratic tickets; Mr. English was off of one Democratic ticket, and Mr. Peelle's name was off of two Republican tickets, and Mr. English was on one National ticket. In the eighth ward, in the first precinct, Mr. Peelle was on six Democratic tickets and Mr. English was off of one Democratic ticket. When I say off of the Democratic ticket I mean there was a Democratic ticket with nobody's name on it at all. In the second precinct of the eighth ward Mr. Peelle's name was on eighteen Democratic tickets and Mr. English's name was on three Republican tickets; Mr. English's name was off of two Democratic tickets, and Mr. Peelle's name was off of three Republican tickets. In the ninth ward, in the first precinct, Mr. Peelle's name was on fifteen Democratic tickets and on three National tickets, and Mr. English's name was on two Republican tickets and off of two Democratic tickets. In the second precinct Mr. English's name was off of ten Democratic tickets and his name was on fifteen Republican tickets, and Mr. Peelle's name was on twenty-five Democratic tickets.
Q. Those Democratic tickets upon which Mr. Peelle's name appeared, was it written or printed ?—A. In some instances it was written and in some instances there was pasters on.
Q. Were there any in which it was printed in the ticket originally ?—A. No, sir.
Q. Were there any Democratic tickets there in any of those precincts in which all of the Democratic candidates for the various offices appeared except Mr. Peelle's for Congress and upon which his was printed ?—A. In those precincts I have spoken of ?
Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; unless there was a paster over it. That is my recollection now.
Q. You have testified here before in this case ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Once or twice ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. In your previous examination did you not state that you kept no account of the vote for Congress except from the 10th ward up ?—A. Yes, sir; I testified that; I testified in this instance I kept merely the number of tickets upon which Mr. Peelle's name—of Democratic tickets—and Mr. English's on the Republican, and not as to the final number of tickets in the box for them.
Q. In regard the vote in Franklin Township, you said there was a mistake there of 11 votes against Mr. Peelle ?—A. As shown by the account I kept; yes, sir.
Q. Was not that the vote for sheriff in this county, and not for Congressman, that you are testifying about ?—A. No, sir; it is the vote on Congressman that I am testifying to now.
Q. Was not that same mistake claimed in relation to the candidates for sheriff ?—A. That I do not know, sir. I do not recollect as to that, because I have not looked at it.
Q. You stated the tickets were short in that box ?—A. No, sir; I did not state the tickets were short. I stated there was more tallies for Congressman in that precinct than there was tickets in the box, taking into account the scratched tickets.
Q. More tallies for Congressman ?—A. Yes, sir; more votes tallied.
Q. The tally and the number of tickets did not agree ?—A. No, sir; not for Congressman.
Q. Did the vote in that township for Congressman exceed the vote for the candidates for any other office ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. By how much ?—A. By ten, is my recollection.
Q. Did it exceed the number of names upon the poll-book ?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. By how many ?—A. By ten.
Q. Can you state what office received the highest number of votes after that of Congressman, as appeared by the tally-sheet ?—A. I think—I am not positive—I think the State officers.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Can you remember what precinct that was in Franklin Township ?—A. The second precinct.
Q. Known as Acton precinct ?—A. I do not know whether it was the Acton precinct or not; it was the second precinct.

NORMAN S. BYRAM.

OTTO H. HASSELMAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Otto H. Hasselman; age, 36; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printing and publishing.

Q. What is the name of your firm or business?—A. The Hasselman Journal Company.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. No public official position.

Q. Were you ever a candidate for office?—A. I was appointed city printer at the time they were appointed by council, in 1872, but I removed from the city directly afterwards and did not fill the appointment; I received the appointment, but never did the business.

Q. Were you at one time connected with the Indiaanpolis Daily Journal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Saint Louis Globe-Democrat?—A. The Saint Louis Democrat.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election, November, 1882?—A. I was.

Q. Did you attend that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Eleventh ward; precinct No. 1.

Q. Was that the engine-house precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you occupy any official position there?—A. I was Republican challenger.

Q. At that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was challenger for the Democrats there that day?—A. Mr. Ross Clark.

Q. Were you there all day as challenger?—A. I was.

Q. How far were you from the inspector as challenger?—A. About four feet.

Q. I will ask you to state if any complaint was made there that day by any one concerning this Republican ticket in any way, and if so, who was it?—A. Yes; there was a complaint made by Senator McDonald, who appeared with the ticket in his hand, cautioning those present that that ticket could be used as a "spring-back" ticket, and explaining the use to which it could be put.

Q. To whom did he make that explanation?—A. To every one standing there—explaining that smaller or thinner tickets could be folded up inside of it, and in making this complaint he stepped right up to the window and asked me step out of the way so that he might more readily come near the inspector, Mr. Yohn, and he cautioned him to see that no tickets were folded inside of them.

Q. Was there any other complaint made there by any one about that ticket?—A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Do you remember whether Ross Clark made any complaint about that ticket there that day?—A. I do not.

Q. If he had would you have known it?—A. I should if it was made within my hearing. I was at the window all the time.

Q. How far was he from you?—A. Just across the chute.

Q. Three or four feet?—A. Yes, sir; and sometimes further than that.

Q. If he had made any complaint there that day, you would have heard, it would you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him about this ticket in any way?—A. None that I remember of.

Q. Did you state to him, in a conversation with reference to this ticket, that this Republican ticket was a scheme gotten up for the purpose of beating the Democrats in any way?—A. I did not.

Q. You made no such statement as that?—A. No such statement as that.

Q. State if there was any nods or winks given in any way there by the inspector by which he was to tell what kind of a ticket went into his hands, so that you might know?—A. No, sir.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of J. G. Sexton, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and state if that is the kind of a ticket that was voted there at that precinct that day?—A. I think it is; if not, it is very similar.

Q. I will ask you to state if when that ticket is folded in the hands of a voter, as tickets are ordinarily and usually folded when being voted, it could be told or distinguished by sight from the Democratic ticket?—A. It could not if it was folded so that you could not see the inside of it.

Q. I mean folded with the names on the inside as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted; you say it could not?—A. It could not, because I tried very hard to distinguish them when they came up.

Q. You could tell the difference when feeling them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been able to do that at elections before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been challenger before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember a time in the history of elections in this city when you could not tell the difference by feeling between the tickets?—A. There has been no time when I could not tell the difference between the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket when I have been challenger.

Q. By the handling of them?—A. By the handling of them.

Q. I now hand you another ticket, headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 8 to the cross-examination of Henry C. Adams, and I will ask you to take that ticket and examine it and tell whether or not that ticket was one of the tickets used at that precinct that day?—A. You mean if it is the same kind?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think it is.

Q. State now where these Republican tickets were printed, if you know.—A. They were printed at my office.

Q. State what proportion of the tickets printed at your office would be the kind of a ticket that I have now handed you?—A. Let me see that other ticket.

Q. I will ask you to take the two tickets, and take this rule which I hand you, and measure them and compare them carefully.—A. That is a wider ticket.

Q. Which one; the one I last handed you, that is marked Exhibit No. 8 to the cross-examination of Mr. Adams?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How wide is it?—A. It is about $\frac{3}{32}$ of an inch wider than the other ticket.

Q. Were those tickets printed and gotten up in your establishment?—A. I think they were.

Q. How many of that kind of tickets was there probably printed and gotten up at your establishment of that wider ticket?—A. There could not have been many of them, on account of the width; there could not have been many.

Q. About how many would you think?—A. It was a mere accident that any should have been as wide as that. These tickets were printed 8 of them in a form—8 tickets were printed at one time. The heads were electrotyped and the names of the officers set in type, so that the type-setting of the ticket was repeated 8 times, so that 8 tickets might be printed at once. I was present during a greater portion of the time while the tickets were printed. I have a machine that cuts very true, without drawing. I think technically drawing in cutting means where the drawing of the knife at the side of the clamp would cause the paper to double up a little bit and draw off a little wider at the bottom of the pile than at the top; but in the machine I use the clamp comes directly over the blade of the knife, and the knife comes up from underneath and cuts directly across the center of the clamp, and the only way I know of that ticket being cut wider after the gauge was set would be that it would be the last ticket on the sheet, without having been trimmed.

Q. How many of those tickets would you cut at a time?—A. In thickness?

Q. How many sheets would you cut at a time?—A. I think we cut 500 sheets; that is the usual rule.

Q. That is, a ream at a time, or nearly a ream?—A. 480 sheets in a ream; yes, that was the way; we put the extra sheets in so as to make even 500, so as to have them in bunches, more easily to count and distribute them.

Q. Then in cutting you say that width with the wider one would be on account of your failure to trim the end?—A. It would be on account of the failure to trim the edge of the last ticket.

Q. I will ask you to examine those tickets and state which one is the heavier of the two?—A. The broader ticket is a little heavier; there is a perceptible difference.

Q. I will ask you to state now about how many tickets of that heavier ticket there would be in a ream, for instance?—A. I cannot tell; it would be impossible to tell.

Q. Would there be a majority of the heavy, or less than a majority of the heavy?—A. There would either be a very few of them heavy or very few of the sheets light.

Q. State now which is the ruling weight of the paper upon which those tickets were printed—the ticket I handed you first, marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Sexton, or the last ticket which I handed you, which is marked Exhibit No. 8 to the cross-examination of Mr. Adams, which you say is a little wider ticket?—A. The lighter ticket is the predominating weight.

Q. How many of those heavy tickets would you think there would be in the whole lot of tickets voted out of 25,000 in this county?—A. Judging merely from the weight of the paper, I could not tell.

Q. Could you make any estimate from the number of sheets of that heavier grade there would probably be in a ream?—A. No, sir; there might be a dozen or there might be 20. That is simply impossible to tell. That depends entirely upon the care that the machine-tender at the mill gave the paper while tending it. While operating the machine, the paper will sometimes run heavier, and if there is any sort of care, with a few sheets he would discover it and change the machine to the correct way.

Q. I understand you to say you printed both of those tickets in your establishment?—A. I could not say positively, but I think so.

Q. Have you any doubt about either of them being printed at your establishment; if so, which?—A. I have no doubt, but I would not like to say positively that these tickets were printed at my place.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to examine the heading of the ticket and say whether it was printed from type or an engraving?—A. It is from an engraving.

Q. What makes you think so?—A. Because the letters are not as uniform as type and because the letters run together.

Q. The heading of this Republican ticket was also an engraving, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Printed from an electrotype?—A. Yes, sir; from an electrotype made from an engraving, and this Democratic ticket is probably an electrotype made from an engraving also.

Q. I now hand you a ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of J. G. Sexton. Examine that and tell me what kind of paper that ticket is printed on.—A. It is printed upon a sized and supercalendered book paper.

Q. Did you buy that book paper?—A. I did.

Q. Did you buy it by order or by sample?—A. By sample.

Q. Where did you buy it?—A. I bought it from Chatfield & Woods, through their agent, Mr. Wing, in my office.

Q. Did he have a sample of the paper there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the time of the purchase what was said, if anything, as to what kind of paper it was?—A. Nothing.

Q. Are you a judge of paper?—A. Yes, sir; I make all the purchases for my establishment.

Q. State if you use that kind of paper in your business.—A. I do.

Q. What portion of the time and for what class of work do you use that paper?—A. I have paper of this kind in stock all the time.

Q. What is it used for?—A. We use it principally for small jobs—programmes and such.

Q. Take this ticket headed "Democratic ticket," marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you what kind of paper that ticket is printed on?—A. This paper is known in this market as a No. 2 book.

Q. What number would you give, or did you give any, to that Republican ticket?—A. I did not. This is of the grade a little less than the average western No. 1 book.

Q. Are you familiar with what is known as western plate paper?—A. I am.

Q. Did you ever have any western plate paper in your establishment?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What difference is there between that western plate paper and the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed?—A. The paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed is a little below the grade of western plate.

Q. You say at the time you purchased that paper there was nothing said as to what kind of paper it was?—A. I bought that paper by sample.

Q. Did you buy it upon your own judgment or upon the judgment of anybody else?—A. I bought it upon my own judgment. In what way do you mean upon my own judgment?

Q. I mean did you take your own judgment as to the character of the paper and the stock, or did you rely upon the statement or judgment of anybody else, as, for instance, Mr. Wing, as to what the quality of the paper was?—A. I make a rule in buying goods of Mr. Wing to use my own judgment entirely.

Q. What was said, if anything, at the time about that being western plate paper?—A. Nothing.

Q. State if you bought the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed as a separate lot of paper, or did you buy it in connection with other papers?—A. I bought other papers at the same time.

Q. What was the size of that paper as you bought it?—A. 19 × 24 inches.

Q. What was the weight of it?—A. 50 pounds to the ream, 480 sheets.

Q. What did you pay for it?—A. 8½ cts. a pound.

Q. Are you familiar with Chatfield & Woods' catalogue and price-list of 1882?—A. I have seen it; I am as familiar with it as people generally in the trade. I could not describe the catalogue.

Q. I will ask you to state then what was the price of fine No. 2 book, sized and calendered, per ream, in November, 1882, about the time you purchased the paper upon which this Republican ticket was printed?—A. This kind of paper (Democratic ticket) I had a contract at that time $7.80 a hundred, delivered at Indianapolis. The contract was made in the August previous, and before that contract was half out I discovered I was paying about 30 cts. a hundred more than the paper was worth. That would make it 7½ cts. a pound, as near as I could tell; that would be very close to it. That is what we call in this market No. 2, or about the quality that the State of Indiana uses in its reports.

Mr. BYNUM. To which are you referring now?

The WITNESS. The Democratic ticket.

Q. State what difference there was in the price of book paper and the paper upon which that Republican ticket was printed in November, 1882, per pound?—A. If you use the word "quality" I can answer that more directly.

Q. I mean such paper as that Republican ticket is printed on?—A. Paper of that quality?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. You see the size of this paper has something to do with its value in the market. If it had been a regular book size and larger sheet, that paper would have been worth more money. I bought it for less in stock than finished paper of that kind is worth—than paper of this grade is worth—on account of its size. The size exactly fits the tickets and cuts exactly without a waste.

Q. The size 19 x 24 just fits the tickets?—A. It cuts sixteen tickets from a sheet.

Q. Is that the size, 19 x 24, of Western plate paper?—A. It is one of the sizes; 19 x 24, 20 x 25, &c.

Q. I now hand you this price-list of Chatfield & Woods for 1882, and I will ask you to examine page 9 and state the price of book paper as given in that catalogue?—A. Fine No. 2 book is priced here at 9¼ cts. per pound.

Q. What size is that?—A. In the catalogue it runs from 22 x 32 to 28 x 42; and then on the same page there is another grade of paper here.

Q. What grade is that?—A. It is named in the catalogue extra fine No. 1 book-sized and supercalendered, priced at 10½ cents per pound, and in sizes running from 20 x 25 inches to 28 x 44 inches.

Q. Did you purchase the paper upon which this ticket was printed?—A. I did; yes, sir.

Q. Have you printed tickets before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what time you purchased it?—A. The latter part of October.

Q. How long after the purchase of the paper was it before the tickets were printed?—A. I think we printed that ticket on Sunday, and the election was Tuesday, was it not?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Tuesday the 7th, and Sunday the 5th it was used. It was purchased the latter part of October and printed about the 5th of November.

Q. What is the color of that Republican ticket?—A. White.

Q. Is it known as plain white or not?—A. Such a term as "plain" white is not known to the trade. Paper that is not plain is printed on and ruled, or something.

Q. Was it, before it was printed on, plain white paper?—A. It was.

Q. I now hand you a piece of paper or card or something, and ask you to examine it and state what it is?—A. It is bristol four-ply, 140 pounds.

Q. Did you keep that in stock in your establishment? You say that it is four-ply; how can you test it, and how can you test the ply of bristol?—A. By separating the sheets.

Q. Can you test it by fire?—A. Yes, sir; it shows very plainly. Do you want me to try it?

Q. Try it.

(The witness burned a piece of the specimen.)

Q. Can you see them after they have been burned?—A. Yes, sir; they are all separated.

Q. How many ply is that?—A. It is three-ply.

Q. After having made the examination of this piece of card I have handed you, you may now state what it is.—A. It is three-ply bristol.

Q. I now hand you another piece, and ask you to state if that is the same, or different?—A. The same thing.

Mr. PEELLE. I now offer these two pieces in evidence as a part of the deposition of the witness, and ask that they be marked as Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2, respectively.

(The specimens will he found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked as Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2.)

Q. How is western plate paper made—I mean finished?—A. It is finished in a stack of calender rolls.

Q. When it is finished, what is the surface?—A. The surface is smooth.

Q. What difference is there, if any, in the finish on the two sides of the paper?—A. Nothing; no difference. Both sides are finished alike.

Q. What is the difference between the western plate and any other kind of plate paper?—A. What is known to the trade as western plate paper is, in fact, not a plate paper at all, and in no particular bears any resemblance to plate paper, except in the size into which it is cut and kept in stock.

Q. The only resemblance the western plate paper has to what is known in the trade as real plate paper is—— —A. In the size.

Q. In the paper upon which this Republican ticket is printed, you say the size is 19 x 24?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a book or plate size?—A. That is a plate size.

Q. The paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed in size resembles plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was this paper billed to you?—A. It was billed as job plate.

Q. What does "job plate" mean?—A. The word "job" designates a job lot—in papers. That may mean almost anything that is irregular.

Q. Why was it billed as a job plate, if you know?—A. Because it was not plate paper in every particular.

Q. Did the size of the paper have anything to do with the sense in which it was billed?—A. I think so; it was a plate size.

Q. Is there anything else about this paper to designate it as a plate paper, except the size; if so, state what it is?—A. There is nothing to designate it as plate paper, except paper of the same quality and grade is called Western plate—technically known as Western plate, which is not plate at all.

Q. How are papers billed in the trade and sold in the trade?—A. That is, I suppose, a hard question to answer.

Q. I mean how are they billed?—A. They are billed according to their size, weight, kind, and grade.

Q. Does the bill show that it is paper, or is it billed in some other way?—A. Everything about the bill would show it was paper.

Q. Does the word "paper" appear on the bill in the purchase of paper?—A. No; paper is understood. It would just be using the word "paper" over and over again. Coming from a paper house they understand that paper is meant.

Q. How would news or print paper be sold or billed?—A. Billed merely as news.

Q. The word "paper" would not follow?—A. The word "paper" would not follow; the size, weight, and number of reams would appear, and sometimes as to whether it was flat or folded,

Q. Suppose it was billed as S. & S. C. tint, what would that mean?—A. It would mean sized and supercalendered tint paper.

Q. The word "paper" would be understood?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you the bill of this paper?—A. I have.

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that the bill speaks for itself.)

Q. How many different kinds of paper are contained in that bill?—A. I cannot answer without examining the bill. I could answer in this way; that there were a number of items on the bill, but I could not state what they were unless I would see the bill.

Q. The bill of this paper with the other paper is pasted in your bill-book?—A. Yes, sir; my invoice book.

Cross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. What are your politics?—A. Republican.

Q. Were you a member of the Republican county executive committee of Marion County that had charge of the Republican campaign for Congress in this district in 1882?—A. I was.

Q. You say you printed the ticket used by the Republicans at the election in November, 1882, specimens of which were shown you by Mr. Peelle, headed "Republican ticket." Who gave you the order to print those tickets?—A. The order was given to my superintendent, Colonel Ruckle.

Q. What position did Colonel Ruckle occupy on the Republican executive committee?—A. None.

Q. What are his politics?—A. Republican.

Q. Do you know who gave the order for the tickets?—A. I think Ransdell gave the order. I am pretty positive of it; Daniel M. Ransdell.

Q. He was the chairman of the Republican central committee of Marion County at that time?—A. He was.

Q. Was the order verbal or written?—A. Verbal.

Q. Can you state how many tickets were ordered to be printed?—A. I am not positive, but I think 100,000.

Q. Was there any entry or memorandum made by you or Mr. Ruckle or any person in the office, of the kind, quality, and character of the tickets that were to be printed at the time the order was made?—A. No, sir; there was a charge made on the book, but that would not cover what you asked.

Q. What was the charge made upon the books for—for the value of the tickets?—A. Yes.

Q. When the order was given was there any character or quality of paper designated upon which it should be printed by the party ordering it?—A. It was understood that the ticket was to be printed upon this paper.

Q. Upon what paper do you refer to?—A. The paper upon which the tickets were printed.

Q. In your examination-in-chief you stated you ordered the paper upon which the Republican tickets shown you were printed, as well as the others used generally in the election in 1882 in this district—the last of October in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State if you ordered that paper especially to be used in printing these tickets.—A. I did.

Q. How did you come to select that character and quality of paper?—A. Because paper of good quality, good weight, and good color was wanted.

Q. Why was paper of good quality, good weight, and good color wanted?—A. That is a hard question for me to answer; because it was natural to want that kind of paper. I do not want to give any answer that would seem like an evasion in any way.

Q. Is the material upon which the Republican tickets are printed print or news paper?—A. Print and news paper are the same thing. This is book paper.

Q. That does not answer the question. The question is, was the material upon which it is printed print or news paper?—A. Neither; I would say neither. Both print and news paper are the same thing—news and print paper.

Q. Is it ordinary book paper, such as is commonly used in printing?—A. It is.

Q. What class?—A. I would like to ask you before you ask that question what you mean by ordinary and common.

Q. Such as is commonly and ordinarily used as to quality, and common as to the general printing of books.—A. Yes; in that sense it is common and ordinary.

Q. What proportion of printing done in your office is done upon that quality and character of paper?—A. The work done in my office is so various that it would be impossible to tell.

Q. Give some opinion or some estimation.—A. Did you ask me to answer in relation to the price or bulk?

Q. The proportion of the work—more than likely to space than anything else. What fractional portion of your printing do you do upon that paper?—A. Well, I would say 99 in a 100 of all bound printed books are printed on this, or a trifle better, grade of paper.

Q. Do you mean to say 99 out of 100 books are printed upon paper as heavy as this upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I do not.

Q. You answered that 99 out of 100 books printed in your office.—A. Yes, sir; printed bound books, I said.

Q. What do you mean by printed bound books?—A. I use the word "bound" in contradistinction to pamphlets—in contradistinction to pamphlet work.

Q. What are the books printed in your office, which you have designated as bound books, used for ordinarily?—A. Printed to read.

Q. What books are they? Give a description of the works.—A. I could not do that.

Q. You can name some of them; come as near as you can.—A. Name some of the jobs we have had?

Q. Some of the works, the legal works, or literary works, or statutes.—A. The revision of the ordinances of the city of Indianapolis and the reports of the proceedings of the grand commander of the State of Indiana Knights Templar. I cannot readily call them to mind, but any number of those jobs.

Q. Any other books printed by you during the last year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name them; other bound books.—A. It is impossible for me to call up now the jobs I have had. Understand me, I want to give all the information I can.

Q. Do you mean to say that the ordinances of the city of Indianapolis are printed upon what is called Western plate paper?—A. They are printed upon the same grade of stock; paper of the same grade.

Q. That does not answer the question. I want you to answer the question directly whether they are printed upon what is called Western plate paper?—A. They are not.

Q. What proportion of the work done in your office in printing bound books is done upon what is called Western plate paper?—A. Very little, or none of it.

Q. What portion of the works printed in your office—bound books—are printed upon material similar to that upon which the Republican ticket shown you was printed; similar in weight and quality?—A. Upon material similar. Now, you do not refer to weight, do you?

Q. Yes; I refer to weight when I refer to material, similar in kind.—A. You say material. Material may be large and small; it may be thick and thin, all the same matter. Ivory is ivory whether it is in an elephant's tusk or a toothpick.

Q. But the quality is the same?—A. I think you are wrong; I want to answer you and would like to do it.

Q. That is what I want.—A. A tree is a tree, but one may be thick and another thin; but it is a tree all the same.

Q. (Question repeated)—A. Very little.

Q. Have you printed a solitary book within the last 12 months upon paper similar in weight and quality to that upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. None that I know of.

Q. Have you ever printed a book to your knowledge upon similar material in quality and weight?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever print a newspaper upon similar material in quality, weight, and finish?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever before print election tickets upon material similar in quality, weight, and finish?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. The ticket used in the last Presidential election in 1880 was—I want to say it was similar in weight—but I want to qualify a little bit. If I had one of them so I could feel it I could tell you at once. My recollection is in weight it was very similar and very near as heavy. I will say the Republican ticket of 1880.

Q. You have stated that you are engaged in purchasing printing paper. Do you say that the material—the quality, finish, and weight—upon which the Republican ticket is printed is such as is ordinarily used in printing books or newspapers?—A. I do not.

Q. For what purpose is the character of paper in quality, weight, and finish upon which the Republican ticket was printed ordinarily used in your business?—A. Various kinds of job work.

Q. What class of job work?—A. I do not know how to designate it by class.

Q. I suppose you might say cards and programmes?—A. I could name some items of programmes; I remember now of some progammes printed on paper like that.

Q. What is the weight of the paper upon which the tickets shown you by Mr. Peelle, designated as the Republican ticket, is printed as compared with common book or print paper?—A. Did you say common size of book or print paper?

Q. Per pound I mean.—A. The weight is always governed by the size of the paper.

Q. Similar size sheets, 25x38?—A. I think that weight is relative to a 25x38 sheet, 80 pounds in weight.

Q. The Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the weight per ream of the paper upon which the Democratic ticket as shown you by Mr. Peelle was printed, sheets of the same size?—A. 25 x 38?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. 25 x 38 sheets, I think, would weigh 45 pounds.

Q. I believe you stated that 100,000 tickets were ordered?—A. That was my recollection; may I refresh my recollection by asking Mr. Ransdell if I am right.

Mr. PEELLE. Never mind; just answer his questions, and nothing else.

Q. What was the cost of the paper upon which 100,000 tickets was printed of the kind, quality, and size stated by you as ordered?—A. Used on the Republican ticket?

Q. Yes, sir; as Exhibit No. 1 to Mr. Sexton's depsition?—A. Give me a piece of paper, and I can figure the cost. [After figuring] $55.46.

Q. What would be the cost of the same number of tickets printed upon sheets of like size and of the weight and quality of that upon which the Democratic ticket was printed, marked Exhibit B to Mr. Holliday's deposition?—A. [After figuring] $29.45.

Q. I will ask you the same question as to the National or Greenback ticket, used at the election in 1882?—A. It would be about a cent and a half a pound less; it is about 37-pound paper. Do you want me to calculate on that paper?

Q. Yes, sir; perhaps you had better look at the Democratic ticket, and see if you have that weight right.—A. It is 45-pound paper.

Q. What is the National ticket?—A. That ticket I can tell more about. It is a chemical wood paper, and it appears heavier than it weighs by about 6 per cent.

Mr. PEELLE. What National ticket do you mean there?

Mr. BYNUM. The National or Greenback ticket voted in November, 1882, and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson.

The WITNESS. $21.40.

Q. Why did you print said Republican tickets on heavier material, which cost, as you say, $55.46, when, as you say, you could have had the same tickets printed on plain white paper, such as the Democratic ticket was printed on, for $29.45, or plain white print for $21.45, such as the Greenback ticket?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. You ask me as the printer?

Q. I ask you to answer that question why you selected this paper that cost so much more when you could have had just as good tickets printed upon ordinary white paper?—A. In the first place you could not have had as good a ticket printed upon a thinner and cheaper paper; that is what makes it difficult for me to answer. I do not think that they would have been as good. I think the tickets ought to be heavier.

Q. Is that your answer to the question?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wherein is the material on which the Republican ticket is printed any better than the material on whieh the Democratic ticket is printed?—A. Because it is better stock and worth more money and cost more.

Q. It cost more?—A. Because it is worth more and cost more and is better.

Q. Do you mean it is better for tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that Mr. Ransdell selected this paper upon which these tickets were ordered upon your original examination; when was that selection made?—A. I stated that Mr. Ransdell gave the order for the tickets.

Q. Who selected the material upon which they were to be printed?—A. I selected the paper when I bought, and Mr. Ransdell selected this paper when he ordered the tickets printed.

Q. You selected the paper when you bought it?—A. Yes, sir; that was my business.

Q, Did you see it before Mr. Ransdell selected it for a ticket or afterwards?—A. I bought it about the same time.

Q. Did not you state in your testimony a short time ago that you ordered this paper on purpose?—A. I did, and that is what I answered now; that it was done at the same time.

Q. Then the order for the tickets was made before you ordered the paper?—A. No, sir; it was not. When I bought that paper the committee did not know how many tickets they wanted and they did not give the order.

Q. They had agreed that it should be printed ou the kind, quality, and character of that paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that agreement made?

(Objected to as incompetent, for the reason that it assumes that there was an agreement.)

A. I could not answer.

Q. Can you state who was present at the time the paper was agreed upon, and by and between whom it was agreed upon?—A. By Mr. Ransdell, Colonel Ruckle, and myself.

Q. Who recommended this kind of material?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I do not know that anybody recommended it.

Q. Did you have a sample of the paper present at the time it was agreed upon?—A. Each of the parties that I mentioned were familiar with the paper and had examined it, but whether at the exact moment the agreement was concluded that it was to be printed on this paper the sample was by them and in their hands I do not know and could not tell.

Q, When and where had each of the parties examined this quality and character of paper?—A. Mr. Ransdell was first shown a sample of this paper in my office the ay Mr. Wing exhibited his samples of paper to me, and the day on which I made the purchase.

Q. When did Mr. Ruckle examine it?—A. Mr. Ruckle saw the paper the same day and examined it.

Q. Did you then agree among yourselves that the ticket should be printed upon that character and quality of paper?—A. I do not know that we agreed among ourselves on that day that it should be done.

Q. Did you have any understanding on that day?—A. Not definitely; at least I do not know that we had definitely on that day; I do not think we came to the conclusion to select the paper and our minds were made up that day.

Q. Where was that examination made; in your office or building?—A. As I stated, the paper was first shown to Mr. Ransdell in my office, and Col. Ruckle first saw it in my office.

Q. Was Mr. Wing present at the time it was shown to Mr. Ransdell and Mr. Ruckle?—A. He was present at the time it was shown to Mr. Ransdell.

Q. Had you any of this kind of paper in stock at that time?—A. I had.

Q. How much?—A. Not a sufficient quantity to print the tickets.

Q. Did they examine the paper in stock, or that sample shown by Mr. Wing?—A. The sample shown by Mr. Wing.

Q. Who first suggested that this paper should be used for the purpose of printing election tickets?—A. I did.

Q. What was your object in suggesting this character and qualityof paper?—A. To meet the views of the commitee in having a paper of excellent quality, and good color, and good weight.

Q. Is that all the object you had?—A. That was all.

Q. What do you mean by good weight; do you mean extra weight, or double weight, or common book paper, or print paper?—A. Above an average weight.

Q. Do you mean above the ordinary weight of common print or book paper, such as commonly used?—A. I think my answer, an average weight, is as clear and distinct as I can answer that question.

Q. What is about an average weight?—A. I cannot tell definitely; what kind of paper do you mean?

Q. Common book or print paper?—A. You see they are two different things.

Q. Common book paper first?—A. 60 pounds.

Q. Is that an average of common book paper?—A. It is a common average of he better qualities of book paper.

Q. Of common ordinary book paper?—A. If that is what you mean, I want to change that 60 pounds. If you are talking about common paper, we use lighter weights than that. Let me change that answer. If you want common book paper, I will say the common weight of common book paper is 50 pounds.

Q. What is the average weight of common print or news paper?—A. 50 pounds. News paper runs in more different sizes than book papers.

Q. In your testimony I want to designate it in sheets, size 25 × 38.—A. Then I will say on the print I will change that to 25 × 38 print, 40 pounds as a print paper. You see, news paper is usually larger size.

Q. What advantage was there in printing the Republican ticket upon paper as heavy as that upon which they were printed?—A. There was no advantage, provided they were not printed on paper a great deal thinner.

Q. What advantage was there in printing them upon paper of the kind, quality, and weight upon which they were printed, as a ticket, over the kind, character, and weight of paper upon which the Democratic ticket was printed, marked Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Holliday?

(Objected to as immaterial, for the reason that it assumes that the paper upon which the Democratic ticket was printed is the standard under the law.)

A. In my judgment, the paper upon which the Democratic and National tickets shown to me as exhibits were printed is too light and too flimsy for such use.

Q. Is not the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of Mr. Holliday printed upon a paper considered an average in weight and quality of paper in common use for printing purposes?—A. It is a common weight and quality of No. 2 western book.

Q. State why, in your judgment, you think the Democratic ticket is printed upon paper that is too light and too flimsy to be used.—A. The statement that you refer to carries its own answer; because it is too light and too flimsy. Those are the only reasons I have.

Q. You can assign no other reason than you stated in your last answer?—A. I cannot.

Q. State whether or not you did not select this paper upon which the Republican tickets were printed, as shown you by Mr. Peelle, because it was a heavier, more polished paper, and could be told from that of ordinary book or common print paper?

(Objected to as immaterial and assuming that the witness selected the paper upon which these tickets were printed.)

A. I did not. If you would put that as to the recommendation, I would say it was a suggestion instead of a selection, and then you would get an answer to your question.

Q. State whether or not you did not recommend to Mr. Ransdell the paper upon which the Republican tickets were printed, as shown you by Mr. Peelle, because it could be told from a ticket which was printed upon common book or print paper by sight?

(Objected to as immaterial and assuming that the witness had knowledge of what kind of paper the Democratic and National tickets were printed on.)

A. I did not. Can I give you a reason for my answer?

Q. That answers it.

Mr. PEELLE. You have a right to explain any answer you give.

The WITNESS. I did not, for the reason that I had no means of knowing upon what kind of paper the Democratic ticket would be printed.

Q. Did not you recommend that kind of paper to Mr. Ransdell because you thought that the Democratic ticket was less likely to be printed upon that than any other kind or quality of paper?—A. I did not.

Q. Have not the Democrats in Marion County printed their tickets generally upon the same kind and quality of paper as that upon which the ticket marked Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Holliday is printed?—A. I do not remember.

Q. Did you buy any such material as the Republican ticket is printed upon from Mr. Burford, in the city of Indianapolis, the day before the election?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. I did not.

Q. Did you buy any such paper from Mr. Burford at any time near the election?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you purchase any lithographic plate paper from Mr. Burford about that time?

(Objected to for the same reasons.)

A. I did not.

Q. Did you get any from him about that time?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I got some paper, known as western plate paper, from Mr. Burford about that time. I borrowed it.

Q. When did you borrow that?—A. A few days before the election; I cannot tell you the day.

Q. How much did you borrow?—A. I do not remember.

Q. Was not the paper billed to you?—A. It was not.

Q. Was not it billed to you as plate paper by Mr. Burford?—A. It was not billed at all.

Q. Was it not charged to you by Mr. Burford as plate paper?—A. I do not know; I have no means of knowing; I have no knowledge that he charged it to me at all.

Q. For what purpose did you get that paper of Mr. Burford?

(Objected to as not cross-examination.)

A. I was in Mr. Burford's house and saw there a paper very similar to that upon which the Republican ticket was to be printed, and I knew that a large reward had been offered for an advance copy of the Republican ticket—a copy to be used for counterfeiting the Republican ticket—and when I saw this paper in Mr. Burford's house, upon the impulse of the moment, I thought if I could get that paper from Mr. Burford there would be one chance less of counterfeiting the Republican ticket, and I borrowed the paper from him—sent my porter after it, and it was taken into my house and laid to one side, and after the election was over the paper was returned to Mr. Burford. This was done of my own accord, and from the impulse of the moment.

Q. For what purpose was you in Mr. Burford's establishment at the time you borrowed this paper?—A. I do not know.

Q. Did not you go there for the purpose of borrowing or getting hold of all the paper similar to that upon which you intended to print the Republican ticket?—A. I did not.

Q. Who had offered a large reward for the character and quality of paper?—A. I cannot state. The information came directly to the Republican county committee, and I took it as a fact that there was such a reward. Mr. Ransdell, in speaking of this, had cautioned me very particularly, and I in turn cautioned my employés to be more than careful that no copy of the ticket should get out.

Q. Suppose the Republican ticket had been printed upon the same kind, quality, and weight of paper that the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit B attached to the deposition of C. F. Holliday was printed upon; could it have been told from the ticket printed upon the paper you did print it on?—A. I do not understand your question. With the ticket unfolded?

Q. Yes; unfolded.—A. It could have been told very readily.

Q. Why could it have been told very readily?—A. The ticket distributer at the polls, on account of the variation of the weight of the papers, would have been able to distinguish readily the bogus tickets

Q. Would it have been a bogus ticket if it had been a Republican ticket printed upon that character of paper?—A. It would have if it had not been printed in my office; and all the tickets were to be printed upon one kind of paper, and the same kind of paper; therefore a ticket printed on anything else would have been a bogus ticket.

Q. Do you mean to say that a Republican ticket printed correctly upon the same quality and character of paper that the Democratic ticket was printed on would have been bogus?—A. I say any ticket not authorized by the Republican county central committee, having charge of the campaign, would be a bogus ticket.

Q. Could you have told the difference between a Republican ticket correctly printed upon the same character of paper as that upon which the Democratic ticket was printed, marked Exhibit B to the deposition of C. F. Holliday, and that printed upon the kind and quality of paper as that used by the Republican executive committee, when folded in the hands of the elector?—A. If in the hands of another party, I could not; if in my own hands, I could.

Q. Was the paper that you borrowed of Mr. Burford, that you have spoken of, known as Western plate paper?—A. It was.

Q. Was it the same size and weight that you used in printing the Republican ticket in 1882?—A. I do not remember the size, but I remember distinctly that it was thicker paper and heavier paper.

Q. Heavier paper?—A. Heavier paper of relative size; heavier to the square inch; superficial surface.

Q. What did you do with the paper you got of Mr. Burford?—A. I returned it to him.

Q. Did you return the same identical paper you borrowed to Mr. Burford, or did you return other paper of the same quality?—A. The identical paper.

Q. How long after the election did you return the paper?—A. Within three days.

Q. At the time you obtained that paper from Mr. Burford, did you suppose you had gotten hold of all the paper of that kind and quality that there was in Indianapolis?—A. I did not suppose so.

Q. Did you make any further search for paper of that kind and quality?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you have any other person to make a search?—A. I did not, I knew without searching that there must be other paper of that kind in Indianapolis—more than I cared to borrow or buy.

Q. Did not you state to Mr. William E. English about the 5th of October, in your office, that you knew that no other person in Indianapolis had any of that kind and quality of paper, except Mr. Burford?—A. No.

Q. And when you got it you knew you had all there was in town?—A. No.

Q. I show you the same two tickets presented to you by Mr. Peelle in his examination; are they printed upon the same quality of paper?—A. I think they are; one of them is a little heavier than the other; I think the quality is the same.

Q. One of them is a little heavier than the other; do you think they came in the same lot of paper that you ordered?—A. I do; I said that in Mr. Peelle's direct examination.

Q. What is the weight of that ticket marked Exhibit No. 8 to the deposi ion of Henry C. Adams?—A. I gave you the weight of these; I said that was five or ten pounds heavier, I thought.

Q. Five or ten pounds lighter, did you not?—A. This is the heavier one, I think; this is five or ten pounds heavier than that on a ream.

Q. Which is the heavier one?—A. The one marked Exhibit 8 to the cross-examination of Henry C. Adams is the heavier one.

Q. Did you not state to Mr. Ransdell or Mr. Ruckle, or both of them, at the time you recommended the use of this Western plate paper for printing the tickets for the Republican party in 1882, that it could be easily told what character of a ticket the voter had in his hand?

(Objected to as assuming that the witness printed the tickets on what is known as Western plate paper.)

A. No, I did not.

Q. In your examination in chief you said that this is not what is known or called "plate" paper?—A. I did.

Q. Is it what is called or known as Western plate paper?—A. It is sometimes known as that.

Q. Is it known by any other name in the trade?—A. That is simply a sized and supercalendered book paper, and nothing else.

Q. That is not an answer to my question; please answer the question direct.—A. That paper does not quite come up to the quality of what is known generally as "Western plate paper."

Q. What is the difference between this and what is generally known as "Western plate" paper?—A. The quality, you say? The quality of the paper generally known as "Western plate" paper is better than this; the stock is better; it is more carefully beaten and more carefully made, and the machine so carefully tended that the sheets would be of exactly the same thickness. For the purposes for which Western plate papers are used it is important that they be of an even thickness and very uniform in thickness.

Q. What is the weight per ream of "Western plate" paper as described by you?—A. Of a size similar to this?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Of a size similar to this, 19 by 24, the weight varies from 50 or 55 up to 80 and 100 pounds.

Q. Then, the only reason you give for this not being a "Western plate" paper is because there is a slight variation in the weight, and of a different size?—A. No; I gave more reasons than the ones you mentioned.

Q. Is not the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed made of the same material that the plate paper which you have described is made from?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not the paper as good quality when made of uniform weight and thickness as the plate paper that you have described?—A. No; not what is generally known as "Western plate" paper. "Western plate" paper is a little better than that, and it is run more carefully and is of more even thickness.

Q. That is what I am asking you; where it was even thickness, what was the difference?—A. Then the beating in the engine has not been as complete. I should say it would take two or three hours longer beating in the engine to make paper of as close grain and fiber as what is generally known as "Western plate" paper; perhaps two or three hours.

Q. What is the material or paper generally known by in the trade—upon which the Republican ticket was printed—as shown to you by Mr. Peelle?—A. Book paper.

Q. Did you buy it as book paper?—A. I bought it on sample without any terms being used or employed in the purchase of it.

Q. Was it billed to you as book paper?—A. It was billed as "job plate."

Q. What character or quality of book paper is it generally designated by in the trade?—A. No 1, sized and supercalendered book. This paper falls a little below the average grade or average quality of No. 1 book.

Q. Is it not heavier per ream than the No. 1 book paper that you have described?—A. It is heavier if you leave out the "ream." It is heavier than the average weight; it is above the average weight. I have said that once before.

Q. It is above the average weight?—A. Yes, sir; it is above the average weight. You asked me that once before what the average was, and I said 25 by 38, 60 pounds.

Q. When this ticket marked Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of Henry C. Adams is folded, as tickets are ordinarily folded by voters when depositing them in the ballot-box, can it not be distinguished by its size, weight, bulk, and the manner in which it is folded, from the Democratic ticket printed on paper such as has been shown you?—A. It could not be so distinguished readily. I am positive of this, because I tried hard all day at the polls to so distinguish it, and failed in every instance.

Q. Could not the Republican ticket be easily distinguished from the Democratic and National tickets voted at the election in November, 1882, by touch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why could they be distinguished?—A. Because of the difference in their weight and difference in the finish, and difference in the quality of the stock.

Q. What is the difference in the finish of the paper between the Republican ticket and the Democratic ticket?—A. The Republican ticket is sized and well calendered, and the Democratic ticket is lightly sized and very lightly calendered, and the National ticket is of a wood pulp stock, and rough surface.

Q. You tested some bristol board handed you by Mr. Peelle, and determined that it was three-ply. I will ask you if bristol boards are not also made one-ply?—A. Not real bristol. During late years there is on the market and getting into very general use, for some purposes for which bristol boards are used, a material known as "machine bristol." It is to be found in one, two, and three ply, so designated, not because it is made of one, two, and three ply thicknesses pasted, as genuine bristol is, but that it corresponds in weight with genuine bristol of corresponding number of ply to that which the machine-made bristol is designated.

Q. Machine-made bristol is all made in one-ply?—A. It is all made in one piece. Even three-ply is made in one piece, which is just like a sheet of paper, but still it is called "three-ply."

Q. Because a paper can be split, do you say it is a bristol board?—A. Bonnet board can be split.

Q. Answer the question.—A. I mean to say that all genuine bristol can be split.

Q. If the material upon which the Republican ticket or tickets are printed could be split or would split, would you say that they are printed upon bristol board?—A. I would not.

Q. Would you say that they were printed on book paper, if they could be split?—A. Yes; but there is no possibility of splitting it or anything else. I would say it was not book paper if it would split under the same test that I used on the bristol.

Q. Have you ever been engaged in the manufacture of paper?—A. I have not.

Q. Can you describe how "print" paper is made?—A. I cannot describe minutely the entire process. I am familiar with the general features of its manufacture.

Q. Describe the general features of its manufacture—describe it minutely.—A. I have said that I could not do it.

Q. You have said that you were acquainted with the general features. I ask you the same question in reference to book paper?—A. I will make the same answer.

Q. Can you describe minutely how book paper is made?—A. I cannot.

Q. Can you describe minutely how plate paper is made?—A. I cannot, but I can describe the general features of plate paper.

Q. Describe what is called "toned" paper, if you know.

(Objected to as assuming that the witness has testified that there is toned paper.)

A. That is a term which is applied to paper—it is less than a "tint," and "toned" paper is less than a "tint"—a very slight color, and that bears a different meaning West from East. What we call "toned" paper here they call a natural color, and it has a yellowish cast. They do not use much bluing in it.

Q. Is the Republican ticket printed upon what is called "toned" paper?—A. No.

Q. What is called plain white paper?—A. I said that at the start; that there was no such term known in the trade as "plain white."

Q. In describing "toned" paper, you say that in the East it has a different meaning from what it has in the West.—A. No; I did not. I told you what "toned" paper was; that it was a paper which had been given a color, but so light, as to be less than tint, and what they would call a natural paper, or a natural color, East, we would call a "toned" paper here; that it had a yellowish tinge to it.

Q Is a paper manufactured without any bluing plain white paper?—A. In the West we call paper in which no bluing has been used a toned paper. It is not plain white; it is the natural color.

Q. Suppose bluing is used, what do you call it?—A. In any paper that we know as white, bluing has been used.

Q. Has bluing been used in the manufacture of the paper upon which the Republican ticket is printed?—A. I think it shows evidence of that. If you will look at the paper carefully you will see that it now has a yellowish tint, and near the edges—where it has been more exposed—the tinge is still yellower and deeper.

Q. How many sheets of plate paper is counted to the ream in the trade?—A. 500.

Mr. PEELLE. State how many there is in this paper that you bought.

The WITNESS. There was 480.

Q. How many in the kind the Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. 480.

Q. Did not you, in a conversation in your office a few days after the election, at the time Mr. William E. English went to your office to look at the invoice, state to him that this was plate paper upon which the Republican ticket was printed?—A. I have no recollection of stating to him that it was plate paper. I merely know that I showed him the bill.

Q. Can you get that bill at your office?—A. I will tear it out of the book; certainly; I will send it over to you to-morrow.

Q. What was the size of the sheets of paper upon which you printed this Republican ticket?—A. 19 by 24; 50 pounds.

Q. Did you ever purchase any book paper, sizes 19 by 24?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or 22 by 28?—A. I think I have, but I cannot state positively; that is, with the exception of this paper we are talking about. This exact thing. I bought that 19 by 34.

Q. As a matter of fact do you not know that book papers are not made in sheets 19 by 28 or 22 by 28?—A. They are made in the web and they cut them any size you want. I know those are not usual sizes. It would be an irregular thing if they were. I will say that. I cannot state as a matter of fact that they were never done that way.

Q. You stated in your original examination that you attended the election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was challenger at the polls that day?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. Ross Clarke was Democratic challenger?—A. He was.

Q. You stated in your original examination that you could not tell the difference between the Republican ticket and Democratic ticket when folded and in the hand of the voter—by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not you state to Ross Clarke, in the presence of Doctor Carliss, Webb Thayer, George Stacey, Milton Jacobs, and J. R. Robinson, or some of them, on the day of said election—at or near the day of the last election in 1882, at or near the place of voting, in the first precinct of the 11th ward, where you voted, that the Republican tickets were printed as they were, and on that material, so as to distinguish them from other tickets, and beat the Democrats?—A. I did not.

Q. Did not you state substantially the same thing to other persons at the time and stated in the foregoing question?—A. No, I did not.

Q. What did you say about the tickets being printed upon that kind of material in order to beat the Democrats, if anything, at that time or place?—A. I said nothing of that kind, or of that purport.

Q. Was you there when Senator McDonald was there?—A. I was.

Q. Did you make any remarks at or about that time, relative to the character and purposes for which that ticket was gotten up?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did not Ross Clark make the charge in your presence, on the day of the election in 1882, at or near the election precinct, and in the presence of Doctor Corliss, Webb Thayer, George Stacey, and Milton Jacobs, that the Republican ticket was unfair because it impaired the secrecy of the ballot-box, and prevented colored men and others from voting the Democratic ticket; and did you not say, in reply, that that is just what the ticket was designed for—anything to beat the Democrats?—A. Well, I believe I remember Ross Clark made a remark very similar to that, in regard to the negroes, and I answered him jestingly, "anything to beat the Democrats was fair," or something to that end, all in good humor, and in order not to take what he was saying as charges, because we did not want to have any trouble, and he was pretty hard to get along with.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That was without any reference to the ticket?—A. Not any.

Q. You heard no reference to the ticket, other than that?—A. No, sir.

Q. In the purchase of the paper for the use of these Republican tickets, state if this was different from former occasions when you printed tickets; I mean, had you paper sufficient for tickets heretofore?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where an odd job comes along, like an election, every one or two years, do you, or not, purchase paper for a particular occasion?—A. Almost always.

Q. What difference is there between the manner in which you print your tickets, and that of the Democratic party in this State? Do the Democrats buy paper specially?—A. I do not know.

Mr. BYNUM. You selected the paper for the tickets at the last city election, did you not?

The WITNESS. I printed the tickets. No, I did not; Colonel Ruckle selected that, or the committee.

Q. Was it a paper specially ordered for the purpose, or was it in stock?—A. No, it was in stock. There was but a small quantity of tickets, and it took but very little paper.

Q. How many reams of paper did you purchase to print these Republican tickets on, voted in 1882?—A. Fourteen.

Q. Do you carry as many as fourteen reams of paper in your stock of any one kind?—A. It depends altogether upon the kind. I carry 400 reams of paper.

Q. Do you carry as many as fourteen reams of paper of any one kind, in stock?—A. Yes, sir. I sometimes have 300, or more. It depends on the kind.

O. H. HASSELMAN.

Exhibits Nos. 1 and 2 to deposition of Otto H. Hasselman.—Paul C. Hendricks, Notary Public.

By agreement of both parties, the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Wednesday, November 28, 1883.

WEDNESDAY, November 28, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

J. T. LECKLIDER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. J. T. Lecklider; 43 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. State your business.—A. I am an attorney at law in this city.

Q. How long have you been a practicing lawyer here?—A. Since August, 1874, in this city.

Q. What was your business prior to that time?—A. I was in the practice of law in Ohio.

Q. Did you ever occupy any official position?—A. I was mayor of the town of Greenville for four years prior to moving to this city.

Q. Did you ever occupy any other position?—A. No, sir; I was school examiner in the town of Greenville, if you call that an official position, some eight or nine years.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The first precinct of the eleventh ward.

Q. Who was the inspector?—A. James C. Yohn.

Q. What position, if any, did you occupy?—A. I was the Republican judge of the board.

Q. I now hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn, and I will ask you to state if that is the Democratic ticket used at that precinct that day.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you act as inspector part of the time in receiving the tickets?—A. Yes, sir; for a small part of the time.

Q. Who was the other judge at that election?—A. George W. Stout.

Q. The Democratic judge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state if, when that Republican ticket is folded in the hands of a voter, as tickets are ordinarily folded when being voted, it could be told or distinguished from the Democratic ticket when similarly folded?—A. I cannot tell the difference by feeling myself.

Q. By sight, I am speaking of?—A. No, sir; there is no difference.

Q. When folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded, could you tell or distinguish one from the other by sight as they were being handed in?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or as you saw them handed in?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint made there by Ross Clark or anybody else about the character of that Republican ticket?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Was you there when Senator McDonald called?—A. Yes, sir; I was there and talked to Senater McDonald myself part of the time.

Q. Did he come up to the window?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear Ross Clark make any complaint about that ticket?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Was you there when the polls opened?—A. Yes, sir; I was there from the time the polls opened until they closed and the count was concluded.

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark about that Republican ticket in any way; and, if so, state what it was.—A. I did not.

Q. Was Mr. Hasselman there that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Republican challenger?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Ross Clark was the Democratic challenger?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Standing opposite each other?—A. Yes, sir; just outside the window.
Q. How far from where you were?—A. There was a brick wall between us—at the outside of the window at the open space with the middle lower light left out. I suppose the brick wall is 9 inches thick.
Q. Did you hear Ross Clark say to O. H. Hasselman that that ticket was a fraud, or speak in any such way?—A. No, sir; nothing of the kind.
Q. Did you hear Ross Clark say that that ticket was a ticket gotten up to beat the Democrats?—A. No, sir.
Q. Did you hear him say that the reason that ticket was printed on that kind of paper was so it could be distinguished from the other?—A. No, sir.
Q. If such a conversation took place do you think you would have heard it?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were there any tickets voted there inclosed in envelopes?—A. No, sir; there was none offered.

Cross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. You were one of the judges that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Your position and duties were on the inside of the room, were they not?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Whereabouts was the election held that day?—A. At the headquarters of the fire department.
Q. Was the voting done at a door or at a window?—A. It was a door that was made into a window by boarding it up, say, two or three feet high, and then a window put in.
Q. How long did you act as inspector that day?—A. I received tickets for perhaps as much as three-quarters of an hour altogether, I think, at two or three different times, but the whole time would not amount to more than three-quarters of an hour.
Q. Whereabouts were you during the time you were acting as judge and not receiving tickets?—A. Just inside of the window.
Q. Did you remain right there all the time?—A. Yes, sir; I do not think I was absent from the room during the day.
Q. Was you not walking around the room some?—A. I might have walked across the room; it was a very small room.
Q. And a conversation might have occurred there during the day some time between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark in regard to this ticket and you not have heard it?—A. I think not, unless it had been carried on in whispers and very low, because my position that day was just inside of the window most of the time, and the ballot-box was against the lower part of the window and I stood just inside of there.
Q. You are positive that no conversation occurred between Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman in regard to the Republican ticket at all?—A. I heard none.
Q. You said, in answer to Mr. Peelle, that you think you would have heard a conversation if it had taken place.—A. Yes; I think I would have heard it, if it had taken place in an ordinary tone of conversation.
Q. And you heard nothing whatever?—A. No, sir; I heard no objection whatever.
Q. Did you hear Mr. Clark say that the Republican ticket was an unfair ticket, and that it prevented colored men from voting the Democratic ticket that wanted to, because it could be told?—A. No, sir; I did not hear any such statement as that. Mr. Clark challenged a good many colored men that day who came up to vote.
Q. Did not you hear Mr. Clark make an assertion, and Mr. Hasselman reply that that was what it was gotten up for; anything to beat the Democrats?—A. No, sir; I heard nothing of the kind.
Q. You say you could not distinguish the difference between those tickets by handling them?—A. Not when they were folded up, I could not.
Q. And you could not distinguish the difference by sight when they were folded up?—A. No, sir; I could not tell one ticket from the other when they were folded up.
Q. Is not the Republican ticket a much heavier ticket than the Democratic ticket?—A. I think it is a little heavier.
Q. Did it fold as easily as the Democratic ticket?—A. I think the creases are a little harder to make, possibly, than the other ticket, but when folded up I could not tell or distinguish one from the other.
Q. Do you think that Republican ticket would fold as closely as the Democratic ticket, and that it would be as liable to remain in its position as the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. I do not see very much difference in it when I try them. I think that is not a distinguishable ticket.
Q. Do not you know as a matter of fact that one ticket is as heavy again as the other?—A. No, sir; I do not know it.

Q. Do you not know it by examining them now that one ticket is twice as heavy as the other?—A. I do not know whether there is that difference or not.

Q. What is the difference between them in your opinion?—A. The Republican ticket seems to be a little stiffer than the other.

Q. Do you say when those tickets were folded up the Republican ticket shown you by Mr. Peelle and the Democratic ticket shown you by him, in the manner in which tickets are usually folded when being deposited in the ballot-box, that you could not distinguish the difference between them by handling them and putting them in the box?—A. No, sir; I could not tell which was the Republican and which was the Democratic.

Q. Was not you called out of the room during the day of the election at all?—A. Not that I remember of.

Q. To the back door?—A. I was called to the back door once.

Q. Do you know whether any conversation took place during the time you were at the back door?—A. I was just to the door an instant at the time, and I now remember of some one coming and asking a single question, and I returned to the ballot-box, and if anything occurred while I was there I did not hear anything.

Q. At the time you was at the back door could not a conversation have occurred there at the front window where they were voting and you not have heard it?—A. A few words might have occurred. It might have been possible.

Q. There was considerable talking during the day outside, was there not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there not considerable wrangling there over the question as to whether certain voters were legal voters or not?—A. There was some wrangling over colored voters. Mr. Clark challenged a number of colored voters, and he himself was quite noisy at times outside.

Q. Did not Mr. Hasselman challenge a number of white voters?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Hasselman challenge any person that day?—A. He may have challenged some that day, but I do not remember.

Q. He was Republican challenger that day?—A. Yes, sir. And my recollection is there was scarcely any challenging on the Republican side. There may have been a few, but they were few.

Q. Did not Mr. Hasselman challenge some colored voters that day?—A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Did you hear any conversation at all during the day between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark?—A. Yes, sir; I heard them talking. Each of them had a book what they claimed to contain the names of the voters in the precinct that they had polled, and when anything occurred they would speak about what was on their books, and what their books showed.

Q. Were not they contending there with each other considerably during the day over the question of certain voters being legal voters?—A. Yes, sir; they talked at different times about the men that presented themselves to vote.

Q. Can you relate any special conversation that took place between them now?—A. I remember of a conversation that occurred between them concerning their own books that they had outside, that they claimed to be poll-books and to be a statement of the men that resided in the precinct, and who were entitled to vote there, and when they had made their canvass, and things of that kind.

Q. Did you stand up or sit down during the time of the voting?—A. Sometimes I stood and sometimes I sat down.

Q. When you was sitting down, you sat back behind the inspector?—A. No, sir; the inspector sat at one side of the box and one of the judges on the other.

Q. Where did the other judge stand?—A. Just back of the box.

Q. You do not pretend to be able now to relate all the conversations that may have taken place there on the day of election, do you?—A. No, sir; I could not give it word for word all the conversations that took place, that I heard outside.

Q. What time did you go there in the morning?—A. I think it was in the neighborhood of 8 o'clock when I went there.

Q. And what time did you adjourn at night?—A. I think at 6.

Q. At the time the polls closed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you pretend to say that during the entire day that you was not out of that room from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 in the evening?—A. I do not remember of having been out.

Q. Can you state positively that you was not out?—A. I have no recollection; that is the best I can state. If out, I probably went to the urinal.

Q. Did you not go out there that day?—A. I cannot state that I did. I have no recollection of going out that day. I know we kept very close during the whole day.

Q. Is it not reasonable that you would go out in that length of time?—A. Some days I would, and some days I would not go out in that length of time. I cannot tell you what would happen in regard to a matter of that kind.

Q. State whether, in your judgment, any person could distinguish any difference between those tickets shown you by Mr. Peelle, by handling them.—A. By touch?

Q. Yes, sir; by touching and feeling.—A. It is very possible that a man with an exceptional touch, and having his attention called to the matter, could. I could not; my sense of feeling would not give me a difference between those two tickets when they were folded up.

Q. Then you think no one except an expert in the business, and he only when his attention was specially called to the fact, would distinguish any difference in handling the two tickets?—A. I think an ordinary man would not distinguish the difference; that would be my judgment in the matter.

Q. Was there any other Republican challenger there during the day besides Mr. Hasselman?—A. There were a number of other Republicans about the polls during the day, and I think Mr. Hasselman was relieved during the time by different persons who came up there to assist him.

Q. Can you state who they were?—A. D. B. Shideler was there a part of the time, and Moses McLain a part of the time.

Q. Was Robert Smith there a part of the time?—A. He was there, but I don't remember that he had anything to do with that. I don't recollect of his handling the book or doing anything in connection with the checking off of the tickets.

Re-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. How large is that room in which the election board were?—A. I should think about 10 by 12 feet as near as I could guess at the size. It was a small room, and may be not more than 11 feet square. It was the corner room, in the southeast corner.

Q. What was the manner of Ross Clark that day; was he a mild-mannered man or boisterous?—A. He was quite boisterous at times.

(Objected to.)

Q. Did not his boisterousness provoke criticism from the Democratic judge?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

Q. How far could he have been heard that day in his ordinary manner of talking there that day?—A. I should think at times as much as half a square away outside in the open air.

Q. Did he swear some of the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated you had no recollection of any white man being challenged by the Republican challengers?—A. I do not remember of any.

Q. About how many colored men were challenged by Ross Clark?—A. My recollection is there were about 20. I give this simply as my recollection. I think about 20 or 22 were sworn in during the day that he had challenged.

Q. That Mr. Clark had challenged?—A. Yes, sir. I give that as my best recollection.

Q. Were they or not sworn in by the most prominent men in the ward?—A. They were.

Recross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. Were not some of those voters sworn in that the inspector and judges afterwards decided were not entitled to vote?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did the inspector and judges there not decide that one or more of those who were sworn in were not entitled to vote?—A. The tickets of every one that was sworn in were received that day.

Q. Do not you remember the fact that Dr. Walker made an affidavit there that a colored man was entitled to vote, and even then his vote was not received?—A. No, sir. Ross Clark challenged a colored man, and Dr. Walker was brought there for the purpose of identifying him, and identified him as a man in the ward and entitled to vote, and they still would not let him vote.

Mr. PEELLE. State why.

The WITNESS. Ross Clark and the doctor got into an altercation, and Clark was offensive to the doctor and they got into an altercation, and Clark insisted that he would not take any man's word and the man must be sworn in, and Dr. Walker came in to make out an affidavit, but when looking at the affidavit and reading it he saw that it required the ownership of property in the precinct, and he could not make it, and the fellow went away and his vote was not taken.

Q. How many Democrats were sworn in during the day?—A. I do not remember.

Q. Were there any at all?—A. I think there was a couple; yes, sir; just the number I cannot give, and I am giving that from recollection now, but there were several.

Mr. PEELLE. Several; what do you mean?

The WITNESS. Several Democrats, during the day.

JOHN T. LECKLIDER.

O. H. HASSELMAN recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. Take the bill I now hand you, and state if that is the bill containing the paper upon which that Republican ticket is printed.—Answer. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. What is the "S. and S. C. tint"? Read over the items on the bill.—A. After the first item?

Q. Yes, sir. What is the first item on that bill?—A. [Reading] $14\frac{2}{20}$ reams 19 by 24, 50-pound white plate job, at $4.25, $59.92.

Q What kind of paper is that that follows?—A. Next item is sized and supercalendered tint. That means book paper. The next item is tint plate.

Q. Plate what?—A. Plate paper. That is all it says.

Q. Is the word "paper" understood in billing goods just in the manner in which these are billed?—A. Yes, sir; I think almost invariably.

Mr. BYNUM. That first item is the one?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; the first item is the paper upon which the tickets are printed.

Mr. PEELLE. That is billed as "plate" because it is plate size?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. I offer the bill in evidence and ask that it be made a part of the deposition of the witness.

(The same will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. BYNUM. You stated on yesterday that you bought that paper of Mr. Wing. Can you tell what his given name is?

The WITNESS. His first name is Charles. I do not know the middle name.

Mr. BYNUM. Charles B.?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; Charles B. Wing.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 1, O. H. Hasselman's deposition.

HENRY C. CHANDLER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Henry C. Chandler; age, 40; residence, Indianapolis, Ind., 278 West Vermont street.

Q. What is your business?—A. Engraver on wood.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. About fifteen years.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Tohn, being the ticket voted in this city at the Congressional election in this city in 1882. Look at the heading of that ticket and tell whether that is printed from type or printed from an engraving.—A. I should say that was an engraving, from the looks of the print.

Q. Can you tell why that is an engraving?—A. If that had been printed from type it would have been clean, just as the rest of the type is below here. It has been a bad job of engraving, from the simple fact that you will notice in between the letters above and below it is ragged and dirty.

Q. How are the letters themselves, regular or irregular?—A. They are not all absolutely the same.

Q. Has it probably been an engraving on wood or metal?—A. That I could not say. It may have been on either. but probably on wood.

Q. And then electrotyped?—A. I presume so. I could not tell anything about that. So far as printing is concerned it would be the same.

Q. You say as an engraver that that heading is engraved?—A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Cross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. Are you positive that that heading is an engraving, or printed from an engraving?—A. I am as positive as a man could be without absolutely having done the work or seen the work done. I judge from the appearance of it that it has been engraved and been a bungling job.

Q. Could not it have been printed from old type or type defaced?—A. If that had been printed from type you would not see that dirty, muddy appearance around the letters, although the type may have been old. Type is cut deeper and cleaner almost invariably. I never saw a type cut that was like that.

Q. Could not you mutilate the type and get it like that?—A. I do not know how it would be possible for you to mutilate the type in that shape. The type is cut too deep.

Q. No person but an expert could tell whether that was printed from an engraving or from type?—A. I presume that an ordinary man if you asked him would not know the difference. The majority of people would not know whether it was engraved or otherwise.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. State if the letters in the heading there are not written together and cut together.—A. They are in some instances; yes, sir.

Q. Would not any ordinary man now know the difference between the print from an ordinary type or from a wood-cut in which the letters were cut together?—A. I suppose an ordinary man might notice that the letters were run together if his attention was called to it, but any person in glancing at the ticket would not notice it, because not one man out of a thousand would know or think whether the job was printed or engraved.

Q. There are some dots in the letters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they necessary to the letters?—A. No, sir.

H. C. CHANDLER.

R. O. HAWKINS recalled.

Direct examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. I have recalled you because I omitted to ask you some questions when you was on the stand. You stated before that you was one of the Republican watchers at the time of the recount of the vote cast in 1882 for sheriff?—Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. When Mr. Brown, and Mr. Adams, and Mr. Byram were the three commissioners to recount that vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state what objection or complaint, if any, was made by Mr. Lemon, the Democratic candidate for sheriff, and by Mr. Myers, the Democratic watchman in there in the interest of Mr. Lemon, at the time of the recount, with reference to Mr. Brown keeping the count of the vote for Congressman at the same time he was keeping the vote for sheriff.

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

A. Mr. Lemon made a great deal of objection and talked about it a good deal to me and to others there in my presence, saying that he did not—— Do you want to know what he said, or the substance?

Q. The substance of what he said.—A. He made these objections a good many times, and in fact between almost every precinct, every time that we quit work, for a while, and walked around the room there. In the conversations we had he said it was wrong, and that Mr. Brown ought not to do it, and that in trying to do that he was neglecting his interest, and he could not do both, and he thought it was an imposition on him. That was about the purport of what he said.

Q. Was that in the presence of Mr. Myers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Myers say anything to the same effect?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Myers spoke of it a number of times to me, and always in his presence—— [Objected to as incompetent, &c.] He spoke to me, saying about the same thing in substance that Mr. Lemon had said.

Q. What reason did Mr. Myers give?—A. He thought Mr. Brown ought to be devoting his entire attention to the count for sheriff, and that he could not do both and do justice to both of them, and while he was devoting his attention between the two he was jeopardizing Mr. Lemon's interest.

Q. What was said, if anything, by Mr. Lemon and Mr. Myers about the ability of Mr. Brown to keep a correct count in that way?

(Objected to as irrelevant and incompetent.)

A. I do not know as I can state positively all Mr. Lemon did say in so many words; but he said it was impossible for him to keep the count. Mr. Lemon seemed to think that his interest was being jeopardized by this division of his attention, and the correctness of the count on sheriff, and the figures, &c., were made by two men that the statute provides, or three men that the statute provides—the statute really provides that the county clerk shall keep it; but each one had a tally, and there were three men making tallies and the figures; and he complained about it that Mr. Brown's attention was diverted from looking at the tickets closely on sheriff, for the reason that he was trying to work at both and carry them in his mind, both on Congress and sheriff, and Mr. Myers would say to me that he did not think the count could be correctly kept as to either one of them in that way.

ROSCOE O. HAWKINS.

CHARLES A. KILLIE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Charles A. Killie; age, 27; I reside at 98 John street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am corresponding clerk for John B. Stumph, treasurer of the Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias.

Q. State how long you have resided in this city?—A. Over 4 years.

Q. Were you at the Congressional election in this city, November, 1882?—A. I was at the polls that day.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Third precinct of the seventh ward.

Q. Did you act in any other capacity there?—A. I was Republican committeeman for that precinct, and I acted in the capacity of challenger and handled the poll-book, and done a little of everything. We had a very few workers up there.

Q. How much of the day did you challenge?—A. I challenged all day except probably half an hour at noon.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, and I will ask you to state if that is the ticket used by the Republicans at that precinct that day?—A. I think it was.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of James C. Yohn. Was that the ticket used by the Democrats there that day?—A. I think it was.

Q. State if when that Republican ticket is folded with the names on the inside, as tickets are ordinarily folded when voted, if you could tell or distinguish that from the Democratic ticket, when similarly folded, by sight.—A. Well, I do not know whether it could be done or not, but I know that so far as my experience went on that day I did not distinguish any difference between them. I was there all day, and I suppose I saw almost all the votes cast that were cast, and I did not know any difference between them. It might have been possible to distinguish them. I do not know as to that.

Q. You could tell the difference by the feeling of them?—A. Oh, yes, sir; I could probably tell the difference that way.

Q. When folded or otherwise you could tell the difference by feeling, could you not?—A. Yes; I think I could.

Cross-examination by Mr. BYNUM:

Q. The Republican ticket is much heavier than the Democratic ticket, is it not?—A. Yes; it is a heavier ticket. It has a hard finish to it that you can feel.

Q. Can you distinguish the difference between the two tickets by reason of the fact that the Republican ticket is on much heavier paper than the Democratic ticket?—A. As I said before, if I made a special point of that it is possible I could. I could not say as to that; I do not know. I was there all day and I did not notice the difference.

Q. Examining the two tickets now do not you think if your attention was specially called to it that you could distinguish the difference between those tickets even when folded up and being handed to the inspector of election by the voter?—A. Well, that would be according to how close a person was to it.

Q. As close as the challenger ordinarily stands to the ballot-box?—A. It might have been.

Q. Do not you think it could be done?—A. Well, I suppose it could be done in some cases.

Mr. PEELLE. That is, by a critical and close examination?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; but with just an ordinary glance I do not think it could be done without paying special attention.

CHAS. A. KILLIE.

The said depositions to be used as evidence at the hearing and in the trial of the above-entitled cause and contest, by and for the said contestor. The taking of said testimony will be adjourned from day to day until the same is completed.

Dated this the 13th day of December, 1883.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

I acknowledge service of the above and foregoing notice.

STANTON J. PEELLE.

SATURDAY, December 15, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment, and the contestant commenced his rebuttal testimony, as follows:

Mr. WILSON. We offer the following agreement in evidence this morning.

Mr. PEELLE. I admit that.

It is agreed: That the agreement offered herewith, between William E. English and Stanton J. Peelle, is correct as to the time of commencing to take depositions on the part of the contestant in rebuttal; and, by agreement, the further taking of these depositions is adjourned until Monday, Dec. 17th, 1883, at 9 a. m.

The agreement will be found attached hereto.

vs.
STANTON J. PEELLE.

Agreement.

In consequence of the necessary absence of contestant's counsel on account of a death in his family, and at the same time to accommodate the contestee in taking his seat at the approaching session of Congress, it is mutually agreed, by and between the parties above named, that the further taking of testimony in said cause is hereby postponed until December 14th, 1883; and it is further mutually agreed that the said contestant shall have ten (10) days from and after said December 14th, 1883, within which time to take such testimony in rebuttal as may be admissible in law, beginning December 15, 1883.

Indianapolis, Indiana, November 28th, 1883.

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.
STANTON J. PEELLE.

MONDAY, December 17, 1883—9 a. m.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

MILTON C. JACOBS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. Your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Milton C. Jacobs; age, 37; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Sign-painting.

Q. How long have you resided in this State?—A. In the State about twenty-seven years.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. I have been here all the time. My residence has been here all the time. Of course I have been out of the city off and on.

Q. You are a Democrat in politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you in the city of Indianapolis on the day of the Congressional election in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you?—A. At the eleventh ward polls.

Q. At the engine-house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Ross Cleark?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. O. H. Hasselman?—A. I do; yes, sir. I know Mr. Hasselman by seeing him; just a casual acquaintance. I know him to be Mr. Hasselman.

Q. Did you hear any conversation or conversations between Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman on the day of that election at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. State what it was.—A. In the morning it was. Mr. Hasselman fetched up a bundle of tickets, and Mr. Clark got hold of some of them, and he saw them, and he exclaimed that they were an illegal ticket.

Q. Whereabouts was it that he exclaimed that?—A. On the chute as you went up to vote. He got up on there, in front of the window, and exclaimed that it was an illegal ticket, and Mr. Hasselman then held the tickets up and shook them—a bunch of them—and says, "Yes, the scheme was gotten up to beat the Democrats."

(Objected to as not being rebuttal of anything brought out by the contestee, and simply cumulative evidence.)

Q. Was he joking or in earnest?—A. He appeared to be in earnest. I would consider that it was in earnest.

Mr. WILSON. In answer to the objection heretofore made, the contestant desires to state, in the spirit of fairness, that Mr. Hasselman stated that he had no such conversation——

Mr. PEELLE. I object to the quotation of testimony; that shows for itself.

Mr. WILSON (continuing). With Mr. Clark; and at the time, upon cross-examination, a question was put to Mr. Hasselman if he did not make a statement of that character, and in substance that statement, in the presence of Milton Jacobs and others, and Mr. Hasselman said he did not.

Q. I call your attention to five tickets marked as exhibits to the cross-examination of Mr. Henry C. Adams, Nos. 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12, respectively——

Mr. PEELLE. To which I object, for the reason that the contestant instructed the notary in this case not to allow any of the exhibits, or any portion of the testimony taken in his case, to go out of his office; and that, in pursuance of that, he refused to allow me to take any of the exhibits, or any portion of the testimony, whatever, from his office.

Mr. WILSON. In answer to that the contestant says that the statement was made to the stenographer not to allow the original evidence to be taken out of his office, or out of his control; in the making of which statement we had no reference to copies and did not pretend to deny anybody the right to have copies, nor did we say or insist that the original evidence and the original exhibits could not be produced by the stenographer, and had, at the time consumed by Mr. Peelle in making out his case in answer to the contestant's. What was meant was that the evidence could not be carried away from the stenographer; and, at no time have we said or stated that in the examination or cross-examination of witnesses the contestee should not have the benefit or use of the exhibits offered by the contestant.

Q. I will call your attention to those exhibits, and I will ask you if those are the tickets Mr. Hasselman had there, or like them; is that the kind of ticket?

(Objected to for the reasons stated.)

A. Yes, sir; that is the ticket.

Q. Was that the only conversation had between them?—A. The only one I took any particular attention to. Of course they were bantering backwards and forwards all day.

Q. Do you recollect what transpired in those bantering conversations?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Where do you reside?—A. 12½ North Delaware street; in the "Langsdale" block
Q. What precinct did you vote in?—A. At the engine-house in the eleventh ward.
Q. Were you painting that day?—A. No, sir; I worked at the polls.
Q. What time did you go to the polls?—A. Before they opened in the morning.
Q. Were you challenger?—A. No, sir; I was peddling tickets.
Q. The conversation that occurred between Ross Clark and Mr. Hasselman you spoke of is a conversation similar to conversations occurring at the polls; jocular bantering back and forth?—A. I do not know; I do not think I ever heard anything of that kind before in reference to tickets.
Q. You do not think Mr. Hasselman made that remark in a bantering tone? You think that he was in dead earnest?—A. Yes, sir; he acted that way.
Q. He said right out that that was a scheme?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And he meant just what he said?—A. He appeared to.
Q. And there was no fun about it?—A. No, sir.
Q. How many were around there at that time?—A. There was a good many.
Q. Fifteen or twenty?—A. Yes, sir; there was fully as many.
Q. Was Moses McLain there?—A. I did not notice him. I saw him there, but I do not think he was there at that time. I did not see him. I saw him afterward.
Q. Did you see Robert E. Smith there?—A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. You do not remember that?—A. I saw Bob there along in the forenoon.
Q. Was Ott. Hasselman there at that time?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Why do you recollect that?—A. Because of this wrangle.
Q. Was Joe Robinson there?—A. I do not know Robinson.
Q. Do not you know him?—A. I know Joe Roberts, but not Robinson.
Q. Was he there that day?—A. I did not see him.
Q. When did you see him there?—A. I saw him probably about two weeks ago. Joe Roberts, the attorney, is the one I mean. I do not know the man you had reference to.

MILTON C. JACOBS.

GEORGE C. STACEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. George C. Stacey; I am 26 years old; I room at room 25, Talbott & New's block, in this city.
Q. What is your business?—A. I am passenger brakeman on the I., B. & W. Ry.
Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. About 22 or 23 years.
Q. Were you in this city on the 7th of November, 1882, at the time of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where were you that day?—A. I was at the polls; I had charge of the wagons.
Q. What precinct?—A. First precinct eleventh ward.
Q. At the engine-house?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know Ross Clark?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Ott. Hasselman?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were they there that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you hear any conversation between these gentlemen?—A. Yes, sir, I did; two or three times, if not more.
Q. State what that conversation was.—A. It was in regard to the heavy spring-back ticket that the Republican party was using that day. Mr. Clark got up at the edge of the chute where he was and made the remark that that was an illegal ticket, and Mr. Hasselman remarked that that was a scheme gotten up to beat the Democratic party.

(The contestee objected to this evidence as not being rebuttal of any evidence brought out by him, and that it is simply cumulative evidence on the part of the contestant.)

The WITNESS: This was two or three or four times during the morning.
Q. Was Mr. Hasselman in earnest or was he joking? What was his manner?—A. His manner would denote that he was in earnest I should think. Of course I cannot say whether he was in earnest or not, but if he had been speaking to me I should have taken it that he was in good earnest.
Q. You say there were two or three conversations.—A. Yes, sir; if not more.
Q. I will ask you did you hear Mr. Ross Clark make this statement to Mr. Hasselman: That the Republican ticket was unfair, because it impaired the secrecy of the ballot-box and prevented colored men and others from voting the Democratic ticket; and did not Mr. Hasselman say, in reply to that, "That is what the ticket was designed for; anything to beat the Democrats?"

(Objected to as not being rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee, and simply cumulative upon the part of the contestant.)

A. I do not know that those words exactly were used, but I remember that Mr. Clark—

not only with Mr. Hasselman, but during the day speaking about it several times; that their ticket was so that parties, even at the door or window of the chute, could tell what ticket was being voted by the size and thickness of the ticket. I know that there were several conversations. I have spoken of it myself quite often, and he and I were working together that day.

Q. I ask you whether or not there was such a conversation between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark?—A. That was the continuation of the argument I was speaking about first. When Mr. Hasselman said it was a scheme he took one of the tickets out of a bunch and had one in his hand at that time, and said, "Anything to beat the Democratic party."

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Democrat.

Q. How long have you known Ross Clark?—A. About eight or nine years.

Q. Do you room with him?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you room near him?—A. About a square apart. He lives on Delaware street and I live on Pennsylvania.

Q. You said a while ago that he could find you any time.—A. He knows where I am, and I go to see him.

Q. You are intimate friends?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had charge of the wagons that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the business of the wagons?—A. Wherever I would find that there were people that day to be brought to the polls, if I was busy around the polls myself, I would send some one with the wagon to bring them; and if I had leisure time—especially during the last part of the day—I got in the buggy and went after them.

Q. How much of the time were you away from the polls?—A. On business of that kind, I should think probably at least two hours during the day.

Q. And, notwithstanding that, you heard two or three conversations between Mr. Hasselman and Mr. Clark about those tickets?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Hasselman was in dead earnest all the time?—A. I thought he was. I could not say, of course, whether he was or not.

Q. What do you think about that?—A. If he had been talking to me, I would think he was in good, square earnest.

Q. How many were there present at that time?—A. I cannot say exactly. I should think there was somewhere between eight and twenty people.

Q. Hasselman was not in fun, but he was in earnest when he made the statement that that was a scheme gotten up to beat the Democrats?—A. Mr. Clark was talking very severely about the tickets, and his words were in a very animated way, and they both got to talking pretty sharp, and I should think it would be pretty near what they thought about it.

Q. How long have you been running on the road as a brakeman?—A. About sixteen months.

By WILSON:

Q. Did the Republicans have any one there looking after the voters and sending after them with vehicles on that day?—A. I cannot say that they did. Of course there were several men around the polls with tickets. Yes, now I do remember that there were Republican wagons there and men there hustling around pretty lively.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. How do you refresh your memory on that subject?—A. I remember one party they went after and they got fooled. I went after him afterwards and got him.

Q. You looked at Ross Clark before you made that answer?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Yohn that day?—A. Yes, sir; not only once, but a dozen times during the day. They were spatting, off and on, right along.

Q. What was said?—A. Ross was quarreling about Mr. Yohn looking out of the window and winking at parties; and he got up and said, "Mr. Yohn, I do not think that is right. I think you ought to stop it;" And Mr. Yohn replied to that and said he was not winking at anybody, but there was something wrong with his eyes; I do not remember what it was. And they had quite a spat about it two or three times.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What did Mr. Yohn say was the matter with his eyes?—A. He either had sore eyes or there was smoke in his eyes, I don't know which.

Q. There was smoke coming in the window all the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was Mr. Yohn's statement, was it?—A. Yes, sir.

GEO. C. STACEY.

ROSS CLARK, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. You are the same Ross Clark who testified in chief for the contestant in this case?—Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. You said you were at the eleventh ward precinct where Mr. Yohn and Mr. Hasselman and others were?—A. Yes, sir; the first precinct of the eleventh ward.

Q. You testified as to a conversation between you and Mr. Hasselman. I will ask you whether—in that conversation what was Mr. Hasselman's manner; was he joking, or did he appear to be in earnest?—A. He was as much in earnest as he could be.

(The contestee objects to this testimony as not rebuttal of any evidence offered by him, and as being cumulative evidence on the part of the contestant.)

Mr. WILSON. In answer to Mr. Peelle's objection, I wish to say that the question was asked Mr. Hasselman, on cross-examination, "Did not Ross Clark make the charge in your presence on the day of the election in 1882, at or near the election precinct and in the presence of Doctor Corliss, Webb Thayer, George Stacey, and Milton Jacobs, that the Republican ticket was unfair, because it impaired the secrecy of the ballot-box and prevented colored men and others from voting the Democratic ticket; and did you not say in reply to that, that it was just what the ticket was designed for—anything to beat the Democrats?" In answer to which Mr. Hasselman said: "Well, I believe I remember Ross Clark making a remark very similar to that in regard to the negroes, and I answered him jestingly, anything to beat the Democrats was fair, or something to that end, all in good humor, and in order not to take what he was saying as charges, because we did not want to have any trouble, and he was pretty hard to get along with."

Mr. PEELLE. In reply to what Mr. Wilson has said, I will say that the cross-examination is not legitimate cross-examination, and was brought out by the contestant, and now he is seeking to meet what he brought out on a cross-examination that was not legitimate cross-examination.

Q. Was his manner jesting or not?

(Objected to as leading.)

Q. What was his manner?—A. I will say that his manner was very much in earnest indeed; as much so as it could have been; he was mad.

ROSS CLARKE.

AUSTIN H. BROWN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. What is your name?—Answer. Austin H. Brown.

Q. You are the same Mr. Brown that has been examined before in this case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were examined by Mr. Peelle in the course of his case, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether, since the examination you have had here in this case, you have heard or read the evidence given in this case by N. S. Byram, Henry C. Adams, and R. O. Hawkins on behalf of the contestee—especially with reference to the count on the vote for Congress made by you.—A. I have.

Q. I will ask you as to the way you kept the count of the vote for Congress; whether an expert could keep it correctly under the circumstances under which you made the count?

(Objected to as not being rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)

A. An expert could keep an accurate account under the circumstances as I kept it.

Q. I will ask you whether you have had much experience in that kind of business?—A. I have had a good deal of experience ever since I was 18 years of age.

Q. State fully what experience you have had.—A. Ever since I was 18 years of age I have had a good deal to do with figures and calculations and accounts; as Treasury clerk in Washington, and I was assistant chief clerk in the Sixth Auditor's Office for the Post-Office Department, being clerk there four years, and in 1846 I was detailed to assist Jonathan Elliott in the preparation of the tables that accompanied the celebrated report of Robert J. Walker, Secretary of the Treasury, on the "Tariff," and it occupied several months, and as county auditor I had a good deal to do with making calculations in the distribution of taxes and funds and settlements with the county treasurer. I was clerk of Marion County, and, in addition to other duties, I personally—not by deputy—acted as clerk to the board of canvassers in the elections of 1876 and 1878 in Marion County, and counted the vote and tabulated the returns; and as collector of internal revenue I had considerable to do with accounts. That is about my experience.

(Objected to as immaterial and not rebuttal, being cumulative evidence simply.)

Q. State, if any, what notice or commendation of your work in 1878 was made by the Republicans of your work in that line?

(Objected to for the reasons before stated.)

A. The Indianapolis Journal complimented me very much. I have that paper here, if you wish to introduce it.

Q. You can produce that and let us see it. You may read it.

(Objected to for the reasons before stated.)

A. [Reading.] "Friday, October 11, 1878. The official canvass of the Marion County October election, 1878. The board of canvassers met yesterday in the civil circuit court room and completed the election table presented below. The session lasted from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. Austin H. Brown, the clerk, worked on the table all that time without rest, a trial which would test the endurance of any man."

Q. Were you selected by the county commissioners as an expert, to make an investigation as to the accounts of Samuel Hanway as treasurer of Marion County? And if so, state the character of the work imposed upon you, and whether the result of your work has ever been called into question since.

(Objected to for the reasons before stated.)

A. In 1877 the board of county commissioners appointed myself and one Michael Gelwick as special commissioners to ascertain the amount which Samuel Hanway, the outgoing county treasurer, should pay over to his successor. This order limited our examinations to the period between the last settlement made with the county auditor and the time of the expiration of his term of office. We commenced this investigation just before Mr. Hanway went out of office, and our report was made to the county commissioners, and he paid over to his successor the amount that we found due from him at that time. This report has never been impeached or questioned since. Subsequently there was an error discovered in this settlement, owing to an erroneous footing on a tax duplicate—that is, the settlement made with the county auditor prior to the day at which we commenced taking off collections, and which we accepted as correct under our instructions—and a suit has been instituted for several thousand dollars as involved in that one error in the footing of that one duplicate. Our report in the proceedings of the court was alluded to in the pleadings by the defendant, he claiming that the settlement that he made by virtue of our report was conclusive, and a bar to any further investigation of his accounts, but the court overruled this pleading, and the suit is still pending.

(Objected to as giving the contents of pleadings now in court, and as incompetent.)

Q. You have already said you were selected by the court to count the vote for sheriff in a contest between Lemon and Hess, so I will not ask you as to that, but I will ask you whether you were not selected as an expert to examine and report as to the amount due from Mr. Landers as treasurer to Marion County; and if so, whether your work has ever been impeached, impugned or brought into question.

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. In April, 1872, I was appointed by the judge of the superior court as master commissioner to investigate the accounts of Jackson Landers, late county treasurer, and that report was made to the court and approved.

(Objected to as not being in response to the question.)

A. [Continued.] There never has been any question as to the items going to make up the exhibits accompanying that report, or the general correctness of it, further than the attorneys objected to some of my rulings, which objections were carried to the superior court and argument made, and I was sustained and my report approved.

Q. When you were county auditor, and again when you were county clerk and collector of internal revenue, did you, or did you not, give your personal attention to the various duties of those offices, and did not the duties require great knowledge and familiarity with figures and the kind of work you done when you kept the count between English and Peelle that you have testified to?

(Objected to for the reasons before stated.)

A. I never held any public position that I did not give personal attention to. I had deputies, but I never allowed deputies to know more of the duties of the office than I did myself, and that is the character of work such as I brought to my aid in making this count.

Q. Did you give particular attention to making a careful and accurate count of the vote in Marion County in the Congressional election in 1882, as between Mr. English and Mr. Peelle; and is that count correctly stated in the testimony you have heretofore given in this case?

(Objected to as leading, and not rebuttal, &c. Cumulative.)

A. I made a very accurate account of the vote, and it is correct as I made it.

Q. Mr. Byram has testified in this case that it is his impression that your method of keeping the count for Congress consisted only in keeping a note of the number of the Democratic tickets upon which Mr. Peelle's name appeared and the number of Republican tickets upon which Mr. English's name appeared, and the number of National tickets upon which neither of their names appeared, together with the number of Democratic and Republican tickets which were blank as to Congress. I will ask you, is this a correct statement as to your method of keeping the count, and is that the way you did keep the count?

(Objected to as immaterial, and for the further reason that the witness testified as to the manner in which he kept the count in his examination in this case, and testimony continued in response to that is cumulative.)

A. The statement of Mr. Byram is correct as far as it goes, but it does not include all I did. In addition to the details he alludes to there, I kept a tally of the straight Republican tickets Peelle on, and of the straight Democratic tickets English on, and of the straight National tickets with Medkirk on, as well as notes in detail of the exceptions to regular straight tickets.

Q. Were you present during the whole time employed in that recount of the votes on sheriff and Congressman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If Mr. Byram made any count of the vote for Congressman, with what ward did he begin his count?—A. He commenced with the first precinct of the tenth ward.

Q. How many tickets had been counted by the board before Mr. Byram began his count?—A. Very near 7,000. Over 6,900, anyhow.

Q. Who counted those tickets you refer to on the vote on Congress?—A. The 6,900?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I counted those.

Q. Did Mr. Byram, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Adams, or either of them, count these 6,900 votes, that you know of?—A. They did not to my knowledge.

Q. If you know how Mr. Byram did keep his vote for Congressman after he commenced, please state it.—A. My recollection is, and impression is, that he kept the count of the tickets off and on. In other words, the Republican with Peelle off and English on, and the Democratic tickets with English off and Peelle on, and the Democratic and Republican tickets that had neither Peelle or English on, and with no name on, and I am not sure, but I think he kept it the same way with such Greenback tickets or National tickets as were voted with variations, and I think he kept this count from the time he commenced with the first precinct of the tenth ward to the end of the count, as near as I could tell by glancing at his book, which was some three or four feet from me.

Q. If you made any statement to Mr. Byram, or called his attention to any errors in the fourth or sixth wards, or any other ward prior to the tenth ward in your recount of the vote for Congress, please state what it was.—A. I do not think I called Mr. Byram's attention to any errors that I had discovered in the vote for Congress in the fourth or sixth wards during the progress of the count; but further along, one evening as we were about retiring, and after we had counted the vote of the second precinct in Franklin Township, I had some conversation with him in reference to the Congressional count that I had made, and in that conversation my recollection is now that I told him in the fourth and sixth wards I had found that the board of canvassers had failed to give Mr. English as many votes as he was entitled to—my impression now is that that was about thirty. English gained thirty by my recount in those two precincts. I never said to him that Peelle had gained any votes in the aggregate in either of those precincts, or both. During the progress of the count of the twenty-fourth ward I think we had some conversation on the question of Congressman, and it came up as to the aggregate vote, that is, a precinct we counted three times over because there was a less number of votes or tickets to count than there were names on the poll-list, and the question of the Congressional vote came up there, but what was said either one way or the other I do not remember.

Q. In counting the vote for sheriff how many errors did you find in the wards numbered 1 to 9, inclusive?

(Objected to as not rebuttal of anything brought out by the contestee, and for the further reason that Mr. Brown has testified that he lost the memorandum book in which he kept the count, and he had no recollection whatever as to errors occurring in any particular precinct in any particular ward.)

A. On the vote for sheriff?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. That I have figures for. It was fourteen errors—there were variations in fourteen totals on candidates for sheriff as between that and the return of the board of canvassers.

Q. Fourteen totals?—A. Yes, sir; and my impression would be that that would include fifty errors at least—in fifty distinct tickets.

Q. Did you find many errors in these wards in counting the vote for Congress?—A. I did.

Q. These wards are all north of Washington street, are they not, and all but one are Republican?—A. Yes, sir; they are all north of Washington street, and all Republican, except the eighth, which is Democratic.

Q. Did you find more errors in the wards north of Washington street than you did in the wards south of Washington street on the count of the vote on Congressman?

(Objected to.)

Q. I will change it. On which side of Washington street, in your count of the vote for Congressman, did you find the largest number of errors—north or south?

(Objected to as incompetent.)

A. My impression is, upon the north side; that is, there were more corrections upon the north side than upon the south side.

Q. If you know, you may state whether Mr. Byram, in keeping the count that he says he kept from the tenth ward on of the vote for Congressman, made a comparison at that time of his count of each precinct with the return of the votes of such precinct made by the board of canvassers?—A. He did not make any general comparison, but a few times he did.

Q. Did you make such comparison of the recount of the vote for Congress?

(Objected to for the reasons stated before.)

A. I did, in every case. Do you wish me to state the character of those returns? I can.

Q. What returns do you mean?—A. The comparison I made was not with the sheet of the board of canvassers, but with the election officers' returns.

Q. I believe you testified to that in chief.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If in the course of the recount of the votes for sheriff and your recount of the votes for Congress you compared results at the end of the count of each precinct, or any precinct, with Mr. Byram, you may state it.—A. I never made any such comparison but once, and he then asked me how I had the vote and I gave him my figures. I never asked him for his.

Q. Was that on sheriff?—A. On Congress. We always compared on sheriff every time. I think I testified to that in chief.

Q. No; I do not think you did.—A. I mean as to the sheriffalty.

Q. Was there any recount of the ballots because of a discrepancy between the votes for Congressman, as you found it in any precinct, and the vote as Mr. Byram found it in any precinct?—A. No, sir. What we did we did voluntarily—at least I did voluntarily—in regard to the vote for Congressman, and we were commissioned to count for sheriffalty, and of course any application to recount for Congress would not have been entertained, and no such application was made, nor was such recount made by the board.

Q. You did make such recount on the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir; several times.

Q. Mr. Byram, in his evidence, gave it as his impression that in making that recount 25 or 30 Republican tickets were found that had Mr. Peelle's name scratched off and no name for Congress. Please state what is your recollection or impression upon that subject.

(Objected to, for the reason that the witness has testified that he had no impression upon the subject.)

A. I cannot give you an exact statement about that, but my impression is, not less than 100 anyhow of that kind of tickets.

Q. Mr. Byram, in his evidence, gave it as his impression that there were 25 or 50 Republican tickets found, in making that recount, with Mr. English's name written or pasted on them for Congress. Please state what is your recollection on that subject, if you have any.

(Objected to for the reasons heretofore mentioned.)

A. My impression is that there were at least 175 tickets of that character.

Q. In keeping the count of the vote on Congressman, did you and Mr. Byram compare results or did you have any conversation as you went along as to results in the various precincts?—A. No; we had no conversation except as I remarked a little while ago.

Q. I will ask you whether Mr. H. C. Adams or Mr. R. O. Hawkins, or either of them, were in a situation during said recount to see or know of the count for Congress as it was in process of counting?

(Objected to as not rebuttal, and for the further reason that no witness has said that he was in such position.)

A. Neither of those gentlemen were in a position. Mr. Adams was closest to me and Mr. Hawkins was some distance off from where I sat; though he changed his position frequently, still he never was very close to me.

Q. Did you in the course of your recount for the vote for Congress call Mr. Adams's or Mr. Hawkins's attention to any errors you had discovered?

(Objected to as not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)

A. I never said anything to Mr. Hawkins about this matter at all, but Mr. Adams and I had some talk. I remember in the count of a precinct in Decatur Township, where Mr. Peelle had lost a number of votes, Mr. Adams said it was because of some feeling in regard to some post-office matter, and the same remark was made in reference to a similar loss of votes in Franklin Township—I think the Acton precinct; and when we were counting the seventeenth ward and second precinct, the ward in which I live and voted, I said to Mr. Adams, "Harry, when I come to my ticket I will show it to you, because I would know it among thousands because of some peculiar marks upon it." I looked very carefully at every ticket and failed to find my ticket. It was not there. I said to Mr. Adams again, "Harry, they have stolen my ticket, and it is not here." The reason I am sure is, if it had been here it would not have escaped my eye, and I could very readily have identified it.

Q. Now, is that all the conversation you had with Mr. Adams?—A. Yes, sir; I told him why I would know my ticket. I said I had marked my ticket and fixed it up at home, and that I had voted for three Republicans, and for one I think a friend had furnished me a paster with mucilage on the back of it, and I wet the mucilage and put that upon the ticket; and for the next I had no paster, and I cut the name out of one of the Republican papers and put mucilage on it myself and then put it over the Democratic name; and the third name, which was below, I took a pen and scratched out the name of the Democratic candidate and wrote the Republican name on it, and such a ticket as that voted by me I said I would know anywhere. That is all the conversation I had with Mr. Adams that I remember of.

Q. Now, in the count of the vote for sheriff, did you as the count progressed keep a memorandum of the number of votes each candidate received for sheriff, and the same as to Congressman?

(Objected to as not proper rebutting evidence and as being simply cumulative evidence.)

A. I did. I kept them both in the same book, as I testified in chief.

Q. At the time or after the conclusion of the recount of the vote for Congressman made by you, did you say anything in the presence of N. S. Byram, Roscoe O. Hawkins, and H. C. Adams, or either of them, with reference to the result of your recount of the votes for Congressman as between English and Peelle which you had then made?—A. I never made any remark in the presence of Mr. Byram or Mr. Adams or Mr. Hawkins, or either of them, or to any one in their presence, at the time or at the conclusion of the count as to the result of the count which I kept, or did I give any one any figures on that day.

Q. Did you have a conversation on that day with any one as to the result of the recount you had then made of the votes for Congress in Marion County, as between English and Peelle? And, if so, you may state what was said.

(Objected to, for the reasons heretofore stated.)

A. I did; in answer to an inquiry made of me by Mr. Frank P. Woollen I said to him that Mr. English was elected by my count.

(Objected to as made in the absence of the contestee and not in the presence of those who made the count.)

The WITNESS. But I gave him no figures. On the day following I gave Mr. Woollen my figures at the Meridian Bank, late in the afternoon. This conversation I had with Mr. Woollen was in the water-closet in the rear of the room where the count was made.

Q. Did you say anything that day in the presence of Mr. Byram, or Mr. Hawkins, or Mr. Adams as to what would be the probable result of the votes for Congress as between English and Peelle should a recount be made in the future? And, if so, state what you did say and your reasons for saying it.—A. I never made any statement as to the result of the count. I may have stated, and I have an impression that I did, that I would not advise Mr. English to have a recount of the ballots, for the reason that the tickets which we had just completed counting, in my opinion, had been tampered with as to sheriff before they reached us, and what would be done in that case might be done in any other if it was necessary to accomplish a given purpose. I do not think I ever made any remark in any other connection in reference to a recount.

Q. That was in reference to a future recount?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On your recount of the vote for Congress did you find tickets in there, in any precinct in Franklin Township or Wayne Township, or any precinct in the twenty-fourth ward in Indianapolis, or any precinct in any township or ward in Marion County, either in favor of Mr. Peelle or in favor of Mr. English, or against either of them, that you did not take into account and include in your statement of the aggregate result as shown in the paper marked Exhibit I in your original examination in chief, in which you made Mr. Peelle's majority over Mr. English in Marion County to be 541?

(Objected to as immaterial and as not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee, and for the further reason that the evidence is cumulative, being the same testimony or testimony in substance given by the witness.)

A. I would say in a general way that every error which I found for or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English was included in my count, and taken into consideration in arriving at the conclusion at which I have arrived at and stated in my exhibit, which you have referred to there.

Q. I will ask you what would have been Mr. Peelle's majority for Congress over Mr. English in Marion County, according to your count, if you had taken the vote of the second precinct in Franklin Township and the second precinct in the twenty-fourth ward as actually returned by the board of canvassers in Marion County instead of your own count as to those two precincts?

(Objected to for the reasons stated heretofore.)

A. It would have been 24 less. Of course, whatever mistakes I made there I gave him the benefit of in the aggregate.

Q. If you can offer any explanation of the errors discovered in Franklin Township and the twenty-fourth ward, please state if you know how they occurred.

(Objected to as not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)

A. I do not think I can state distinctly in regard to that matter, or have even an impression.

Q. Mr. Byram stated in his evidence here that it was his impression that during your count of the vote for Congressman you called his attention to an error in the fourth or sixth wards of 9 or 10 votes in Mr. Peelle's favor. I ask you what you recollect about that, if anything, and did you make such a statement?—A. I have never stated what I said in regard to that matter. I did not call his attention at the time the count was going on, but afterwards, before retiring one evening, I told him that the errors I found were in Mr. English's favor; that the board of canvassers had given Mr. Peelle at least 30 votes more than I found he was entitled to according to my count in those two precincts. That is my impression now and my recollection.

Q. You are a Democrat, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And voted for Mr. English?—A. Yes, sir; I voted for Mr. English—that is, I attempted to do so. I know my ticket was short when we counted them, and I did not include that in my count.

Q. You did not include your ticket in counting that ninety-nine votes?—A. No, sir; I did not, because it was not there.

Q. That would have made a difference, would it not?—A. I think so.

Q. I wish to call your attention to a written statement of Mr. Byram's here, and I do not know how I can better ask the question than to read it in sections. It reads as follows: "In the contested election case of Daniel A. Lemon vs. James W. Hess, for the office of sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, I was one of the commissioners appointed by the judge of the circuit court of said county to recount the votes cast on the 7th day of November, 1882, for said Lemon and Hess for sheriff, respectively, and while performing that duty I voluntarily kept the count of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English, respectively, candidates for Congress from the seventh Congressional district of Indiana." Now, you heard that statement; he says he counted the votes on Congress. Is that correct?

(Objected to, for the reason that the statement has only been given partially.)

A. Any statement there that assumes that he counted the entire vote for Congress is incorrect.

Q. "All the ballots cast at said election, except those from the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis as returned by the several officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the count made by me, allowing 29 votes as returned by the election officers of the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis, Mr. Peelle received 12,974, and allowing 192 votes as returned from the said twelfth ward, Mr. English received 12,207 votes, making a majority for Mr. Peele of 767." I will ask you whether all the ballots cast at said election, with the qualifications named as read, passed through Mr. Byram's hands and were counted on the recount of the vote for Congress.—A. All except that second precinct of the twelfth ward passed through Mr. Byram's hands, but he kept no count of the vote for Congress until the first precinct of the tenth ward was reached.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You said you gave those figures the next day after the conclusion of the recount for sheriff to Mr. Woollen. Where did you take those figures from?—A. I told him in a general way that I had made my count and gone over my memorandum-book and made up a statement that showed there was a difference of 99 votes, as stated.

Q. Did you give the figures from memory, or simply from the statements you had made out?—A. From memory.

Q. That was the next day?—A. That was the day after.

Q. Was that before or after you made your statement?—A. It was after I had made out my statement.

Q. You gave it to him from memory?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he put it down?—A. I do not know whether he did or not. I do not know anything about it. He asked me the question as to what the difference was, and I said my statement showed he got 99 less votes than the board of canvassers gave him.

Q. That is all you said to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that you did say to Mr. Byram and to Mr. Hawkins and to Mr. Adams that you should not advise Mr. English to have a recount?—A. I do not think I ever said any thing to Mr. Hawkins.

Q. Who was it, then—to Mr. Adams?—A. Mr. Adams may have been present. I am of the impression that if I did speak at all on the subject that is about what I said, because I did say that there, and they possibly heard it.

Q. Did you say anything about the reason why you would not do it?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you say to them?—A. I said that those ballots had been manipulated as to the sheriff, as I was satisfied, and before another recount could be had the same parties could manipulate them again if it was necessary to arrive at a given conclusion.

Q. You stated that to Mr. Adams?—A. I did not say I did.

Q. To whom?—A. Either Mr. Byram, and possibly Mr. Adams was present, but I stated it in the room there.

Q. Was that at the conclusion of the count?—A. No, sir; I think not. I think it was about the time this Franklin Township which we were discussing was on.

Q. That was before the count had concluded?—A. The count was practically concluded.

Q. You deny having made any statement at the conclusion of the count to these gentlemen, do you?—A. Yes, sir; most positively, as to the result of the figures that I had arrived at.

Q. You say you are an expert in the counting of ballots in the recount of that vote?—A. I did not say that. I say I claim to have a knowledge of figures sufficient to enable me to keep a correct and accurate count.

Q. What errors was there in any of the precincts prior to the tenth ward in Mr. English's favor?—A. My impression is that in the fourth and sixth wards, according to my recollection, the errors aggregated 30 votes, at least, in favor of Mr. English.

Q. What do you base that on?—A. I base that on my recollection.

Q, When you were examined before you could not state any errors in any of those wards.—A. Not in detail.

Q. Do you remember the number of votes in Mr. English's favor in any one of those nine wards?—A. The aggregate—no, sir; I do not pretend to.

Q. Do you remember what difference the errors would make in favor of or against Mr. Peelle or Mr. English in any precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. You give it as a mere impression?—A. Yes, sir; I said so.

Q. You said there was some errors in the count on the vote for sheriff from the first to the ninth ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the difference; in whose favor was the aggregate difference?—A. I could not say about that.

Q. Don't you know that there was an aggregate difference of 2 votes in favor of Mr. Hess up to the ninth ward inclusive?—A. That is possibly true. I could not say. There were errors in nearly every precinct we handled. That is the truth about it.

Q. You stated that you have an impression now that there was probably 175 Republican tickets upon which Mr. English's name appeared?—A. The best of my impression is there was at least that number.

Q. Why could you not have given that in your evidence before you were asked about that?—A. I was not asked for my impression; I was asked to state positive facts, which I could not do.

Q. I asked you myself before if you had any recollection upon that subject, or could give any impression, and do you remember that you declined to do so?—A. I do not think you asked me for my impression. I know there was a good many, but not so many as there was on the other side.

Q. You say the ticket you voted down there at your precinct in the seventeenth ward you fixed up at your house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far do you live from the polls?—A. I live about three blocks from the polls.

Q. When you fixed up the ticket what did you do with it?—A. I went to the chute and showed it to Tom Farley, a Republican friend of mine, and he saw me vote it.

Q. What did you do with it when you fixed it?—A. I put it in my vest pocket, and carried it to the polls and voted it. I showed it to a Republican gentleman in this city before I voted it, and he saw me vote it.

Q. Did you say anything to Mr. Adams about that ticket before that count commenced?—A. No, sir; further than he knew I was going to vote for a certain man. I called his attention to that, and that is the way that happened to come up.

Q. You did not run across that ticket in that box?—A. No, sir; I spoke about it during the count, and expected to find it.

AUSTIN H. BROWN.

JOSEPH E. MCDONALD, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Question. I believe you testified in this case in the beginning?—Answer. Yes, sir; with reference to the general character of the tickets.

2. Q. I will ask you if you know Austin H. Brown; and, if so, how long have you known him?—A. Yes, sir; I have had a personal acquaintance with him since the fall of 1849—you may say since December, 1849. I met Mr. Brown first in Washington when I went there as a member of Congress from the eighth district in this State. At that time he was a clerk in the Sixth Auditor's Office connected with the Post-Office Department, and we were boarding at the same house a good part of that session. A part of the time he occupied the same room with me. I received an injury early in the session, and he came in as company and as a friend, and occupied the room with me most of that winter. I have known him very well ever since. He was then, I should think, probably 18 or 19 years old. I know he was not of age at the time. He continued there until his father became the owner and editor and proprietor of the Sentinel here, and then he resigned his place and came back to Indianapolis to go into the Sentinel office. He was with his father in that office during the time that his father was editor. My acquaintance with him has continued ever since, and quite intimately since I have lived in this city, which has been since the spring of 1859. We have met very frequently.

3. Q. He was a resident when you came here?—A. Yes, sir.

4. Q. And you have known him, you say, intimately?—A. I have known him intimately since I formed his acquaintance in December, 1849.

5. Q. I will ask you what Mr. Brown's reputation is for truth and veracity in this community?—A. I think it is as good as anybody's; first rate.

6. Q. I think you testified in your evidence in chief in this case that you went to the second precinct of the seventeenth ward.—A. I do not remember of testifying to that effect, but that is true. I was at one precinct of the seventeenth ward in the afternoon of the day of the election. I think I probably went to both precincts. I started out for the purpose of visiting the wards in the southern part of the city, having been around to most of the polling places in the northeastern part of the city in the forenoon, and after dinner I started out to drive to the different polling precincts in the southern part of the city, and I stopped on my way down at the ninth ward a short time. I had not been at that ward in the forenoon, and I stopped as I went down in the afternoon.

7. Q. What was your position as to that campaign?—A. I was chairman of the Democratic State central committee, and also chairman of the executive committee.

8. Q. Now I will ask you if when you went to either precinct there in the seventeenth ward you had any conversation there with reference to swearing in voters? If so, state fully what you said and what was said at that precinct, if you recollect.

(Objected to as immaterial, and for the further reason that the question does not disclose with whom he had a conversation, if any one.)

Mr. WILSON. I state here as to the admission of the evidence that the witnesses for the contestee from the second precinct of the seventeenth ward have testified to alleged conversations of Senator McDonald, in the language of the statement made at that precinct concerning swearing in voters, and we have a right to call for the entire conversation.

A. I will state at one of the precincts in the ninth ward I met John Frenzel, who was a member of the executive committee and treasurer of our State central committee, and who had been on a committee acting in concert with the county central committee to see about qualifying voters that might be challenged, and I learned from him who in the seventeenth ward was expected, or had been, or had been spoken to about qualifying such voters as might be challenged, as we understood there were quite a number of voters in that ward who were employés of some machine shops in the western part of the city across the river, and he gave me the names.

9. Q. Do you recollect that name?—A. No; it is a German name.

10. Q. Was it Schoettle?—A. It was some such name. It was a German name. When I got down to that precinct of the ward I found trouble there about the votes of certain parties being received and inquired about this man, whose name had been given me by Mr. Frenzel, to know if he would file an affidavit to qualify a voter who was then challenged, and Mr. Pierce Norton, whom I found there—whether he came before me or after, I do not know—took a blank affidavit and had it filled up and went to the voter to have it signed and sworn to before a notary public, as I understood. I did not know the man, but I understood he was a notary public; and Norton and myself, and this voter, whom I did not know, but I remember to be a young man, and the witness who had signed the affidavit, this German, started up to the poll to have this man's vote presented. We went up through the chute, and when the voter got to the window the affidavit was presented and his vote, and the inspector asked the witness something about this man or what he knew of him and what his name was, or something of that kind, and the German not answering to his satisfaction, the vote was refused. I then turned to see who had interposed the challenge. I felt satisfied that this person who was tendering his vote was a legal voter. I understood he had just come across from the shops with quite a number of others who had been at work during the forenoon and had adjourned to come over in the afternoon to vote, and there was nothing about them to indicate that they were not legal voters and nothing to show that there was any attempt on their part to put in illegal votes. I turned to see who it was had made the challenge, and a person standing off at the right was pointed out to me as the person, and I asked the question. I said, "Do you know that this man is not a legal voter? I do not want any man to vote here who is not a legal voter, and unless you have some knowledge that he is not a legal voter I suppose you would hardly challenge him;" and he said: "No, I do not know he is not a legal voter, and I do not know that he is; but if he puts it in he is to put it in according to law," and he spoke in a very brusque sort of a way; and I said: "This man has complied with the law." By that time the German witness, who had filed his affidavit, seemed to be a little inclined to back out. He did not understand what was going on, or did not seem to very well. He was growing somewhat timid, and he was backing out of the chute, and in the mean time parties on the outside were saying: "Put them out! Get them out of the way!" or words of that kind were passing around, and we got out of the chute and I did not hear what the inspector said, but finally it resulted in the vote being refused. That much I clearly understood. Not being able to talk with this man in his own language, I then told my son Frank, who was with me in the buggy, to drive back to the ninth ward and bring down Mr. Frenzel to see if he could not get a better understanding with this person and unlock this trouble about the votes; and about the time Frenzel came there—I remained until he did come, and soon after he came I went away. The person that I spoke to I did not know, but I had the impression he belonged to the police force—that is, the person pointed out to me as the one who made the challenge, but I do not know that. He spoke up quite brusquely, and seemed quite determined that this man should not vote.

11. Q. You made your statement, did you, in the presence of the gentlemen standing around the chute?—A. Oh, yes, sir; the conversation took place while I was in the chute, and Judge Norton was in the chute, and the man whose vote we were presenting and the witness—we four were there.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

12. Q. He then told you to clear out of the chute, so that others could pass up to vote?—A. Yes, sir; they got impatient.

13. Q. It was in order to enable others to pass up the chute to vote?—A. They did not want that affair to stop the vote any longer.

14. Q. Do you know who that man was that was challenging?—A. I do not.

15. Q. Did you examine the affidavit?—A. I am very confident I did. It was written by Pierce Norton. I recollect of his bringing the affidavit up after he had filled it up. It was a printed form.

16. Q. You do not know who the man was that was offering to vote?—A. No, sir.

17. Q. Do you know where he lived?—A. Nothing except what I was told there.

18. Q. You do not know whether he was a legal voter or not?—A. No, sir; except what I was told there, and that was that he was from the workshops on the other side of the river and boarded in that ward.

19. Q. All you know about it is what was told you by those persons?—A. Yes, sir.

20. Q. Personally you have no knowledge upon the subject?—A. Personally, I have no knowledge of the parties at all.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

21. Q. You say that Judge Norton drew up the affidavit?—A. Yes, sir.

22. Q. You think you saw it after it was written?—A. Yes, sir. It was a printed form, and you are all familiar, of course, with the printed forms of affidavits. He used a form for the voter to be qualified to and a form for his witness and they were filled up and sworn to.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

23. Q. You did not pretend to read the affidavit at all?—A. No; I do not think I read it, but there was no question arose at the polling place by the officers of the election or the inspector who did most of the talking, so far as the parties interested were concerned, as to the regularity of the affidavit.

24. Q. But simply that he was not a legal voter, that was all.—A. That this witness did not have a sufficient knowledge of him or was not able to recall his name, or something of that kind. He questioned the information of the witness.

25. Q. He was swearing him in on a guess?—A. The question was the information of the witness, and I said to him that the affidavit was what the law required.

26. Q. I will ask you this, if the inspector did not ask that man who was vouching for this voter whether or not he knew him?—A. It is possible he did.

27. Q. And if he did not tell him he did not know anything about him, and he did not know him at all?—A. He could not give him his name; I remember that.

28. Q. Did not he say he did not know the man?—A. No; I do not remember that he said he did not know the man. He was a German, and I did not understand him very well myself.

29. Q. And the inspector refused to receive the vote after he had questioned the man who had vouched for him?—A. Yes, sir.

30. Q. Is it not a fact that the reason he gave for refusing was that the man that swore him in knew nothing about him?—A. He was not satisfied with the man's information. I think I said to him, if the man is satisfied to make the affidavit he could make it anywhere else as well as to come here.

31. Q. And when the German ascertained the difficulty he began to back out and became a little timid?—A. Yes, sir; he was hesitating.

32. Q. That was after the inspector had questioned him, was it not?—A. Well, I think it was. There was some pulling and hauling there.

33. Q. Such as is usual at polls?—A. It was more than usual. I have not seen that much at many of our polls here.

34. Q. No trouble there and no fighting?—A. No fights.

35. Q. No row?—A. No row.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

36. Q. The affidavit was offered to the inspector?—A. Yes, sir; certainly.

37. Q. And he declined to accept it?—A. I think he took it in his hands, and perhaps held it while he asked this man some questions; but I am not certain about that, and it is my impression that the inspector had the affidavit in his hands; but as to that I think Judge Norton would probably know better than I would, because he was forward of me. I was the last one in the chute. There was nothing at all to indicate that this man was trying to put in an illegal vote that would strike me.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

38. Q. Do you remember of making the statement that a man would be satisfied to swear in a vote if some other man who knew him told him he was a legal voter?—A. I said he was not bound to have knowledge of the party at all; that he——

39. Q. Sworn in upon the reputation of some other man who knew him?—A. Such information as satisfied him. I said that the witness must be satisfied, of course, that the voter had resided in the precinct the time the law prescribed, and that he has resided sufficiently long in the State to become entitled to citizenship, and if he is satisfied of those facts he can make the affidavit, but he is not bound to have a personal knowledge of when the man came into the State and a personal knowledge of just how long he had been in that precinct, but it must be satisfactory evidence.

40. Q. Was that statement made by you before or after you went out of the chute?—A. I am not certain.

41. Q. Was it made before?—A. Perhaps it was.

42. Q. And was it not after that information was given by you that the man became timid and declined to swear him in?—A. No; this was after the vote had been refused that I made the statement.

43. Q. It was after the questions had been asked?—A. Yes, sir.

44. Q. And you said that the witness ought to be satisfied from some information?—A. I said no man, or very few men, could tell when a man came into the State if he had come in a short time before the six months, and he is not bound to know just the day he came into the State or county, but he must have satisfactory evidence.

45. Q. That he is a legal voter?—A. Yes, sir; and if he has satisfactory evidence or seemed willing to make the affidavit I think the law is complied with. I think that is what I said.

46. Q. I will ask you, then, if that was not said in the presence of the man who was intending to vouch for the voter?—A. I think so.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

47. Q. That was made after the vote was refused?—A. Yes, sir.

48. Q. And you say he became timid?—A. Yes, sir.

49. Q. From what cause was it that he became timid?—A. I am not able to judge. I saw he could not talk with me or do anything, and the next thing that occurred to me, after having left Frenzel a short time before and Mr. Frenzel having given me his name, was to send up for him to come down, because I knew he could talk to him in his own language and could probably get these things straight. There was quite a number of votes that seemed to be depending upon whether this man could vote or not, and I had a very strong impression that they were qualified voters and legal voters, and I did not see anything at all to intimate that they were not.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

50. Q. Who seemed to be taking an active part in securing votes being sworn in—I mean Democrats down there?—A. I do not recollect any one that was active about it.

51. Q. You say there was no German there that could talk German?—A. None that I know.

52. Q. Then the people that were getting that man to swear in votes were not German, were they, but people that could not talk the language?—A. I do not know whether they could or not; I do not know about that.

Question by Mr. WILSON:

53. Q. He spoke the language?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. PEELLE. And understood it?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; I suppose he understood it.

J. E. McDONALD.

FRANK P. WOOLLEN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. State your name, age, residence, and occupation.—Answer. Frank P. Woollen; 32 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.; and cashier Meridian National Bank.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Austin H. Brown?—A. Since about the spring of 1873; ever since I have been in the city.

Q. What is his general reputation for truth and veracity in this community?—A. I consider Mr. Brown's reputation as good; excellent.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Brown after the recount was had on the vote for sheriff with reference to any recount he may have made on the vote for Congress that took place in November, 1882?

(Objected to as immaterial and as being hearsay, and for the further reason that it is not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by Mr. Peelle.)

Mr. WILSON. They have sought to impeach Mr. Brown by showing that he has made contradictory statements. We claim the right under the law to sustain the witness, Mr. Brown, by showing that he made statements to third parties similar to those he has testified to.

Mr. PEELLE. I will state that no witness in this case, up to the present time, except Mr. Brown, has testified to having any conversation with Mr. Woollen about the recount, and it is therefore simply in support of their own witness, as made a few moments ago upon an immaterial point.

A. I was a witness to the recount, but I was not present when the count was completed. It must have been some 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, probably later than that, that I went home. I went back in the morning, next day about noon, to witness the signing of the papers, and I was present when all that was done, and while there I had a conversation with Mr. Brown. We were in the water-closet. I knew, of course, that he was taking the vote on Congress as he went along, and in talking it over I asked the question as to what the result was, and he said his count showed that Mr. English was elected, and not Mr. Peelle. That is what I heard.

Q. Did you say it was the day they finished the recount and made the certificate?—A. They finished the recount some time during the night after I left.

Q. Monday morning?—A. Yes; and it was on that day.

Q. They were in the same room?—A. Yes, sir; just before the papers were all arranged. We were there some two or three hours, to my recollection.

Mr PEELLE. Do you mean before they were signed?

The WITNESS. Whether the papers had been signed or not I do not know, but my impression is that it was before the papers were signed, and there was a good deal of trouble in preparing the exact return. My recollection is that Mr. Brown wrote out one, and after reading it over Mr. Byram, or some one, objected to some clause in it, and they changed it around, and we were there quite a while, but I do not know how long, and I think it was probably during this time that this question came up to be discussed. The water-closet was right adjoining the room.

Q. That return was on sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation afterwards with him on the same subject?—A. Yes, sir; my recollection is we talked the matter over about the recount of the sheriff several times. I do not know how often, but two or three, and possibly more.

Q. Did he make any statement in any subsequent conversation as to the recount of Congress?—A. Yes; my recollection is that he stated that he had figured it up and it was a fact what he had stated up there to me.

Q. Do you know when Mr. Byram commenced his count for Congressman? Did he commence with the beginning?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what ward he commenced with?—A. No, sir; I do not know that. I recollect that it was in the afternoon of the second day, or something like that. That is my recollection.

Q. Do you know when Mr. Brown commenced to keep his recount?—A. He commenced with the first precinct, of the first ward.

Q. Do you know of any one else except Mr. Brown who kept a count on Congress of all the votes?—A. No, sir; I do not think any one else did.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You did not know when Mr. Byram commenced?—A. My recollection is it was probably in the afternoon or evening of the second day.

Q. You do not know what memorandum he had made prior to that time, do you, on the vote for Congressman?—A. I do not think he kept any. I am satisfied he did not. If he kept any before that I have no recollection of it, and I had no knowledge of it. It was carried on in the room there, and I sat at one side of the table and they on the other, and I could readily see what they were doing and they could see what I was doing.

Q. You were Democratic clerk on that board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were not very convenient to where the commissioners were?—A. The table sat in the middle of the room, and Mr. Byram sat opposite to me and Mr. Brown at his side and a little to the left.

Q. How far were they from you?—A. Just the width of the table.

Q. Ten feet?—A. Oh, no; probably three and a half feet.

Q. It was your business to keep a tally of the votes when they were called and to pay no attention to anything else, and that was all you were selected for; simply to keep tally as clerk?—A. One of the reasons that I was requested to go on that board was that our folks were satisfied——

Q. I will ask you if you did not work there simply as a clerk?—A. I was going to give you what I was there for.

Q. I am asking you if you were not selected as a clerk or as a watcher?—A. Whatever the term was.

Q. You acted as a clerk, in fact?—A. I kept tally.

Q. Was Mr. Joe Perry the Republican who kept tally?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He kept tally right by you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Smith Myers was a Democrat in there as a watcher?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Lemon was there all the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't Mr. Lemon and Smith Myers both make complaints about Mr. Brown attempting to keep the vote on Congress at the same time he kept the vote on sheriff?—A. I do not recollect about Mr. Smith Myers objecting, but Harry Adams did.

Q. Did Mr. Lemon?—A. I am not certain about Mr. Lemon. I know this: that I was there expecting to get through much sooner than I did, and I went there against my will, to a certain extent, and I know it delayed us somewhat in keeping this count; but I do not think anything was said about it until probably the evening of the second day.

Q. Was Mr. Lemon very much out of humor?—A. He was out of humor a great many times. I do not recollect whether it was in reference to that or not.

Q. Wasn't he out of humor in reference to Mr. Brown attempting to keep the count, and is it not a fact that he was out of humor?—A. I do not know. He probably was.

Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that Smith Myers said it was impossible to keep a ount correctly and keep both of them?—A. I do not recollect of hearing Smith Myers aying that.

Q. He was present all the time, wasn't he?—A. Smith Myers?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Lemon was there all the time?—A. Yes, sir; I think he was there all the time the voting went on. I do not think a vote was counted that he did not witness.

Q. You say you never remember of any figures Mr. Brown gave you in that conversation a day or two subsequent to the conclusion of the count?—A. I do not know. He may have given me figures, but I do not recollect.

Q. You do not recollect what was said?—A. No, sir; except simply he had made his calculations and figured it up and it showed as he thought or he knew. The figures confirmed his belief, or something of that kind; I do not know what it was, now.

Mr. WILSON. Was not the objection made to Mr. Brown's keeping a count on the vote on Congress because he was giving so much attention to the vote on Congress?—A. That was all the objection I heard; that it was taking up so much time, and time that we ought to spend in getting through there.

F. P. WOOLLEN.

PIERCE NORTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. What is your position?—Answer. I am judge of the criminal court of this county.

Q. You are over 21 years of age?—A. Yes, sir; I am 33 years of age.

Q. How long have you resided in this city?—A. I came here in the spring of 1873.

Q. Do you know Austin H. Brown?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. I guess I have known him since I came here.

Q. Do you know his general reputation for truth and veracity in this community?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. Good.

Q. Were you in this city upon the 7th of November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you attend the Congressional election held on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the second precinct of the seventeenth ward on that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If you were present there and heard a conversation between Senator McDonald and any one else, or any statement made by him publicly as to the rights of parties to swear in voters, you can state so and the circumstances under which that statement was made.

(Objected to as hearsay and immaterial.)

A. I can state what I said myself and give the substance, I think, of what Mr. McDonald said at the time. About between 3 and 4 o'clock, and perhaps after 4 o'clock, I heard there was some trouble in the seventeenth ward, and I went there, as I was a candidate on the ticket myself at that time and there was trouble in getting in votes; and I went there, and at that time the inspector was refusing to receive votes that had been sworn in; that was generally stated in the crowd and also by the inspector himself; and to test that matter there was a man who was challenged. I cannot remember his name now, but I had a freeholder and a resident of the ward make an affidavit, Mr. Chris. Schoettle, and I said we will see whether this man will refuse this ballot; I filled out the affidavit myself, not only of the voter but of the freeholder, and Mr. McDonald and myself, together with that man and with the freeholder who made the affidavit, went in chute, and I said to the inspector, now here is a legal voter and he has qualified as required by law, and I offer now this, his own affidavit, supported by that of a freeholder; and the affidavits were in due form of law, and he declined to receive it; Mr. McDonald then tried to explain to them what the law was, and that this affidavit filled all the requirements of the law.

Q. And that voter was rejected?—A. That voter was rejected, together with a number of other voters. He declined to receive the votes when they were supported in this way.

Q. Did you see any policemen there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any policemen challenging?—A. Mr. Crane was challenging and Mr. Splann; whether he challenged any while I was there I do not recollect, but these officers were both taking an active part in the election, and they ordered me out of the chute at the time I was there.

Q. Ordered you out?—A. Yes, sir; I explained to them that I was there in the interest of the voter, and there was a general cry to put them out, when Mr. McDonald and myself were both in the chute.

Q. And you got out?—A. Yes, sir; I did not get out until the vote was refused and I saw there was no opportunity of getting it in. We were not forced out by any cries of that kind at all.

Q. What became of Mr. Schoettle?—A. He was there. Whether he went away or not I do not know, but I found out they would not take his affidavit, and we could not do anything and we had to go. There were a number of voters there who could vote, and a party who was willing to make the affidavits for them and a number he had made affidavits for that they would not receive.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you see the inspector refuse any vote there that day?—A. I did. He refused this voter who was in the chute with Mr. Schoettle, Mr. McDonald, and myself.

Q. That was the voter for whom you had made out the affidavit?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any other rejected there that day by the inspector?—A. There were several refused, but I could not state who they were.

Q. Did you see them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before or after that?—A. It was before that.

Q. This man Chris. Schoettle you spoke of had sworn that voter in?—A. Yes, sir; he had.

Q. Did the inspector, when he went up to present that affidavit, ask him some questions as to whether or not he knew anything about that man?—A. I believe he undertook to interrogate him as to whether he knew him personally or something of that character.

Q. And did not Mr. McDonald make the explanation that a man was not justified in swearing in a vote upon the representation of some one else he knew, but he must have satisfactory evidence that the man was a voter?—A. I do not recollect just what Mr. McDonald's language was on that occasion, but I think McDonald said to him this: that this man has complied with the law and that is as far as you can go.

Q. Did he not say that a man who swore in a vote should have sufficient evidence from some source that the man was a legal voter?—A. Possibly he did. I do not know.

Q. And was it not after that that Mr. Schoettle backed out?—A. No, Mr. Schoettle did not back out.

Q. Did he not decline to swear in that vote, and did not he take back the affidavit himself?—A. No, sir; he did not. The man gave it back. The inspector would not take it. He says, "I won't receive it," and handed it back.

Q. And Mr. Schoettle took the affidavit?—A. I do not know about that. It is possible it was rejected.

Q. After that did not the man who swore him in—Mr. Schoettle—become a little bit timid on the subject?—A. I think not.

Q. And the cries of "Get out of the chute!"—wasn't that to enable others to get there to vote?—A. I do not know whether it was or not. There was great confusion there, and the police seemed to have charge of the polls there, as far as I could discover.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. I mean they were hallooing and talking and challenging and making a great racket.

Q. Who were challenging?—A. Mr. Crane was challenging for one.

Q. Was he on duty that day?—A. I do not know about that, but he was recognized as a policeman. I knew him well, and Captain Splann was about the chute.

Q. Was he challenging?—A. I do not know that he was.

Q. What was his conduct there?—A. He seemed to be taking part in it.

Q. What part was he taking?—A. I can hardly say what part he was taking any more than he was there and interested in it, and seemed to be discussing it.

Q. What other policemen were there?—A. I think there was some one else there, but I do not know who it was. I knew those men very well.

Q. They were all you know as being there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many people were there at that precinct at that time?—A. I could not give you an idea of that. I suppose there were one hundred there at the time I was there. I judge that, although I did not look at it with a view of determining the number.

Q. Did you see any policeman there do anything outside of the line of his duty as a policeman?—A. I suppose that would depend entirely on a man's idea of what a policeman's duties are. They were taking quite an active part in appearance—as I would do myself when I was challenging—and I think that is pretty tolerably active.

Q. State any one you saw taking part other than for the purpose of keeping order and quiet, and keeping the chute open, as it was their duty to do.—A. They were not manifesting any disposition to keep order when I was there. The burden of their work was to keep out Democratic voters so far as I could discover.

Q. Who did that?—A. Mr. Crane, more especially than any one else, and he seemed to be seconded by Captain Splann, who was standing there.

Q. You do not know whether he was on duty that day or not?—A. I do not know whether he was or not.

Q. You think there were one hundred at the polls?—A. It is possible. I do not know about that. I should judge so.

Q. There was not any trouble there—no fighting?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. No riot?—A. No, sir. These men were challenged and they would step outside and endeavor to get some one to swear them in.

Q. How many were objected there that had been sworn in?—A. I do not know. I cannot get give you any idea about that. I heard a great deal of talk in the crowd. They said there were some 30 or 40 men kept out in that way.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge of any except the one you mentioned?—A. I do not know except those 3 or 4 or 5 that were there and were challenged. They seemed to be engaged in wholesale challenging there.

Q. There were three or four or five who had been regularly sworn in that had been rejected by the inspector?—A. I do not know about that. My purpose in going into the chute was to present this affidavit, and I drew the affidavit myself and filled it up and went to Mr. Schoettle's house afterwards, and he said there would be no use in going there, because the man would not take his affidavit, and I said, "You are a freeholder and own property in this ward and have for a long time;" he said he was, and I said, "Come along with me and we will see whether or not this affidavit will be refused;'' and they refused to receive it.

Q. Where did he live—the voter?—A. He lived there in the ward.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know whether he was a legal voter there?—A. No, sir; I do not know except from the information I received there. There was a number of gentlemen there with whom I was well acquainted who said he was.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge of any man being refused permission to vote at that precinct except the man you refer to?—A. I cannot say that I do.

Q. All the rest you have testified about you have spoken from hearsay?—A. Yes, sir; during the time I was there there was a number of them standing outside and they were German people.

Q. Is it not the rule at election precincts to exaggerate things of that kind on both sides?—A. I do not know that it is. It is a matter that is easily determined.

Q. Was Mr. Frenzel there at the time you were there?—A. I do not know. I think he came there.

Q. Did he leave while you were there or after you did?—A. I think I left him there.

Q. How long was he there during the time you were there?—A. Perhaps half an hour. I could not give you with any certainty the time he was there.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was Mr. Gerber, the policeman, there?—A. I think that he was. He was Crane's partner. They run together at that time, and I think he was there, but I am not sure about that.

Q. Did they have their uniforms on?—A. I think they did, but I am not sure about it. I knew them so well as policemen that my attention was not especially attracted to that.

Q. Were there any Democrats voted while you were there?—A. No, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Were there any that offered to vote except the one you spoke of?—A. Yes, sir; there was a number offered to vote, but were challenged.

Q. This was the only one that swore in his vote that was refused that you spoke of while you were there?—A. Yes, sir; he was the only one. I paid special attention to that in order to see whether the man would refuse his vote. He had been challenged, and my attention was specially directed to that, and I thought he would not refuse the vote when the proper affidavit was made, and Mr. McDonald and myself went into the chute to see about it.

Q. They refused to receive the vote on the ground that he was not a legal voter, and the challenge was held good on that account?—A. He held the challenge; I know he renewed the challenge while I was there—Policeman Crane did.

PIERCE NORTON.

By agreement of both parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Tuesday, December 18, 1883.

TUESDAY, December 18, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

SMITH H. MYERS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Smith H. Myers; age, 37; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

2. Q. How long have you lived here in this city?—A. I think about 14 years.

3. Q. Were you present at the recount of the vote in the Hess and Lemon contest for sheriff in November, 1882?—A. I was.

4. Q. In what capacity were you there?—A. I was there as one of the watchers.

5. Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

6. Q. Was there a count made at that time on all the vote on Congressman between Mr. English and Mr. Peelle?—A. There was by some party.

7. Q. Who was that?—A. Austin H. Brown.

8. Q. Have you any reason to doubt the correctness or doubt the vote for Congress made by Mr. Austin H. Brown at that time?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. I do not know whether I could answer that. I never saw the count and I do not know what the count was or the result of it, or the footing of it, or anything about it. I did not pay any attention to it at all.

9. Q. Did you say to R. O. Hawkins or to Mr. Adams or to Mr. Byram or to any other person there that you did not think a count could be correct kept as Mr. Brown kept it on the votes for Congress? Did you make any such statement?—A. No; in point of fact I did not. I never mentioned or referred to it to anybody but R. O. Hawkins, and that was just last week or week before. He asked me if I remembered of Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram, when their counts would not agree, getting together and fixing it up to make them correspond, and I told him I did. I remember once or twice where we recounted the ballots twice or thrice over, and still their counts would vary two or three votes. Then they would get together and fix them. I told Mr. Hawkins I remembered an instance or two of that kind.

10. Q. You do not recollect of making any statement to Mr. Hawkins or Mr. Adams or Mr. Byram that the count could not be correctly kept by Mr. Brown and kept as he did on the vote for Congress?—A. No, I never talked with either of them about the correctness of the count.

11. Q. I will ask you if it is not true that the comparison you refer to, made by Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram, was in fact a comparison on the vote for sheriff as they were keeping tally themselves on the vote for sheriff?—A. No; we had several of those contests, but there was once or twice a discrepancy in their tallies as to Congressman.

12. Q. Was that in reference to Wayne Township?—A. I declare I paid so little attention to Mr. Brown's count for Congressman that I cannot say truly.

13. Q. Was it not with reference to the count in the country?—A. I could not answer that, indeed, because I disremember.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

14. Q. You were there as watcher at the solicitation or appointment of Mr. Lemon, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.

15. Q. He was the Democratic candidate for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

16. Q. You stated a while ago that the count for Congressman was kept by one party, and that was Austin H. Brown. What do you mean by that?—A. What I mean by that is that Mr. Brown began keeping count for Congress when we commenced the count for sheriff, and he began at the first ward, and Mr. Byram did not commence until the next day or the second day; I do not recollect, now which. I know it was quite a while. We had counted several wards before he began.

17. Q. He counted it from the time he commenced?—A. Yes, sir; from the time he commenced until the close he counted along with Mr. Brown.

18. Q. And he and Mr. Brown, at the end of the count on the vote for Congressman, would frequently compare notes and make changes so as to correspond?—A. No; I did not say frequently, I said once or twice. Two or three times I remember there would be discrepancies in their accounts, and they recounted the ballots once or twice of the entire vote just on Congressman. I know that pretty near all of us objected to it taking so much time. We were very late at night, and all day, and we objected to consuming that much time.

19. Q. Was there not considerable objection manifested on the part of Mr. Lemon, and did not you object to Mr. Brown keeping the vote on Congressman?—A. Yes, sir; I objected to it on account of it taking up so much time, and it was something I was not brought there for.

20. Q. Did not you state it would be impossible for him to keep the vote for Mr. Lemon correctly if he undertook at the time to keep the vote on Congressman.—A. No, I did not say that.

21. Q. Did not you say that to Mr. Hawkins?—A. No, sir?

22. Q. I will ask you if within the last two or three weeks you did not state to Mr. Hawkins that it was impossible for Mr. Brown to keep a correct account in the manner in which he kept it and if you were called as a witness you would so swear?—A. No, I did not make the statement.

23. Q. What did you say?—A. The statement I made was this: He asked me if I did not remember that two or three or four times—I forget now the number of times—that Mr. Brown and Mr. Byram would disagree in their count as to the number of votes cast for Congressman, and I told him I did, and I remembered once or twice the entire vote was counted over for a certain precinct and ward, and still they could not agree, and they would fix them up and make them agree, leaving a vote or two or three. I forget the number.

24. Q. I will ask you if it is not a fact that it was impossible for Mr. Brown to keep an accurate account on the vote for sheriff and Congressman at the same time and under the circumstances in which they were making their count?—A. I do not know in regard to Mr. Brown's capacity for anything of that kind. It is a pretty difficult job, but I presume he could do it. He is an expert in this business.

25. Q. What would you say? You know Mr. Brown and you know the manner in which the count was kept there; could he keep that vote on Congressman at the time he did keep the vote on sheriff in the way he did so as to make it an accurate account?—A. I suppose he could. I know he took time enough. He took fully as much time keeping the count on Congressman as he did on sheriff, much to my objection. I know I was complaining of it until I saw it was no use, and then I had to quit.

26. Q. I will ask you if there was not so much objection there that Mr. English, sr., had to be brought over there, and if he did not come over there?—A. No; I do not think Mr. English was over there; not to my recollection.

27. Q. Did not Mr. English come over there and hold a consultation upon the outside of the door?—A. I do not remember that he did; there were quite a number of parties came there and we had a bailiff there, and they would rap and some one would be asked for, and I do not know whether he came or not.

28. Q. What is the fact as to whether he did come or not?—A. Indeed I do not know whether he did or not.

29. Q. You do not say he did not?—A. No, sir.

30. Q. Did Mr. Lemon make any complaint about his having to pay the expenses of that contest and Mr. Brown was taking up so much time in keeping the vote on Congressman?—A. I do not remember that. He made a good many objections, and I think he was afraid his interests would not be looked after well enough.

31. Q. Did not he say that Mr. Brown could not keep his account correctly at the same time he was keeping the vote on Congressman?

(Objected to.)

A. I disremember as to that. He talked a great deal there.

32. Q. Did not he make that remark that Mr. Brown was neglecting his interests there in keeping the vote for Congressmen?—A. I do not know that he did. He did not directly, but he inferred that once or twice to me that Mr. Brown was not looking after his interests as close as he liked.

13. Q. And he was fearful that the vote on sheriff would not be kep tcorrectly in the manner in which he was keeping both counts?—A. Yes, sir; that is what he was fearful of.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

34. Q. Is it not time the remarks that Mr. Lemon made that you referred to about Mr. Brown's keeping the count on sheriff were had to the effect that Mr. Brown was devoting so much time to taking such a careful count on the vote for Congress?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. That is in the main true. He said that Mr. Brown was paying much more attention to Mr. English's interests than he was to his and he was swearing about it and he was mad about it.

35. Q. You say Mr. Byram commenced on the second day?—A. I think it was. Yes, sir.

36. Q. What time in the second day do you recollect?—A. I disremember the time.

37. Q. They commenced with the returns in the city, did they not?—A. Yes, sir.

38. Q. They commenced on—what day was it, do you recollect?—A. I do not recollect the day they began.

39. Q. You commenced Thursday and you quit Sunday night or Monday morning, did you not?—A. Monday morning, I believe.

40. Q. You do not know what ward he commenced with?—A. No, I do not. It was along the ninth or tenth, somewhere along there. We had counted quite a number.

41. Q. How long have you known Mr. Brown?—A. I have known Mr. Brown ten or twelve years.

42. Q. In this community?—A. Yes, sir.

43. Q. What is his general reputation for truth and veracity?—A. I never heard it questioned.

44. Q. Then I understand you to say that Mr. Byram did not keep a complete account on the vote for Congress?—A. No, sir; he did not commence until after we had counted several wards. I know when he began keeping we all kicked, and he had to recount and handle the ballots and it took about as long again.

45. Q. I call your attention to the statement of Mr. Byram in which he says as follows: "In the contested-election case of Daniel H. Lemon and James W. Hess for the office of sheriff of Marion County, Indiana, I was one of the commissioners appointed by the judge of the circuit court of said county to recount the vote cast on the 7th day of November, 1882, for said Lemon and Hess for sheriff, respectively, and, while performing that duty, voluntarily kept an account of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English, respectively, candidates for Congress from the seventh Congressional district of Indiana." He says he kept account of the votes cast at said election for Stanton J. Peelle and William E. English respectively. Did he keep account of all the votes?—A. No, sir; not all of them.

46. Q. [Reading.] "All the ballots cast at said election except those from the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis, as returned by the general officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the account made by me, allowing 290 votes as returned by the election officers of the second precinct of the twelfth ward of the city of Indianapolis received, and so forth." Now, I will ask you when he says here, "All the ballots cast at said election, except those from the second precinct, twelfth ward, of the city of Indianapolis, as returned by the several officers of said election, passed through my hands, and according to the account made, and so forth," is that correct if it purports to say that he counted all the votes?

(Objected to as intending to interpret an instrument which speaks for itself.)

A. No; if he means to convey the idea that he counted all the votes for Congressman there it is incorrect, but the ballots passed through his hands.

47. Q. On the count of the vote for sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

48. Q. And the same ballots passed through his hands on the vote for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

49. Q. Then that is correct as to that part?—A. Yes, sir; as to the ballots.

50. Q. All the ballots passed through his hands that were in the box?—A. Yes, sir.

51. Q. Every ballot that went through Mr. Brown's hands went through Mr. Byram's?—A. Yes, sir.

52. Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Byram?—A. Yes, sir.

53. Q. How long have you known him?—A. I never did know him intimately. I have known him in the business here for six or eight years.

54. Q. He stands high as a merchant in this city, does he not?—A. Yes, sir.

55. Q. And so does Mr. Hawkins, does he not, as an attorney at this bar?—A. Yes, sir.

(Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial.)

SMITH H. MYERS.

DANIEL WEBSTER THAYER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. D. W. Thayer; 29 years old; residence, 309 Market street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. Twenty-nine years.

Q. Were you in the city at the Congressional election, November 7, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct, if you recollect?—A. It is up at the headquarters of the fire department; the first precinct of the eleventh ward.

Q. Do you know Mr. Ross Clark?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Ott Hasselman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those gentlemen there at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. One of them was working on one side, and the other on the other in the cause of the respective parties?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear any statement or any conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Hasselman in reference to the Republican ticket? And, if so, state what it was.

(Objected to as not being rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee, but is accumulative on the part of the contestant.)

A. Mr. Clark spoke out when he noticed the ticket. That was very early in the morning; and he stated to Mr. Hasselman that he did not consider it a legal ticket; that it was illegal. I did not notice that myself, but Mr. Clark spoke to me afterwards about it, and Mr. Clark says "Ott, I do not think this is a genuine legal ticket;" and Mr. Hasselman spoke up and says, "Ross, you need not kick. This is a scheme us Republicans have gotten up to beat you Democrats." I was at least within three feet of Mr. Ross Clark at the time and Mr. Hasselman was upon the opposite side of the chute.

Q. Was there any further statement made by Mr. Ross Clark afterwards publicly?—A. Mr. Ross Clark afterwards got up and made that statement right in the middle of the chute.

(Objected to, for the reasons stated before.)

Q. Did you hear the conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Yohn that morning?

(Objected to, for the same reasons.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say in that statement? You said he got up and made it in the chute.—A. He got up and publicly stated to Mr. Hasselman that he did not think it was a legal ticket, and that it was an illegal ticket; and he made that so a person could hear it within fifteen feet of the chute, if not farther; at least I heard it.

Q. Was that at the voting precinct, right there and then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the window?—A. Not exactly at the window; but about five feet from the window perhaps.

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Mr. Clark and Mr. Yohn that morning?—A. Yes, sir. I heard Mr. Clark speak to Mr. Yohn, and he said he did not like to have him standing there and winking over at the challengers so often.

(Objected to, for the reasons before stated.)

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What did you hear Mr. Yohn say in reply to that?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. Did he not say, in reply to that, that the smoke was coming in at the window very bad and his eyes were sore, or something of that kind?—A. I did not hear him state that. There was not any smoke during the time I was there.

Q. You did not hear him say that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. 309 East Market street.

Q. What is your business?—A. Railroading.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. 23 years.

Q. What precinct do you vote at?—A. The 1st precinct 9th ward.

Q. How much of the time were you at the 11th ward and 1st precinct?—A. I was there nearly all the time with the exception of half an hour.

Q. What were you doing over there?—A. I worked over there.

Q. In whose interest—Mr. Clark's interest particularly?—A. The Democratic party generally.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. What railroad are you working on?—A. I., B. and W., Peoria division.

Q. What time in the morning did you get there, and in the afternoon?—A. I was there in the morning from quarter after eight or half-past eight until eleven o'clock.

Q. How long before the polls had been opened did you get there?—A. I do not know exactly what time the polls opened. I suppose the regular time.

Q. And they were open when you got there?—A. They had been opened some time—some little time when I got there.

Q. It was after you had got to the polls when you heard Mr. Ross Clark make this statement to which you refer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not a statement made at the time the polls were opened because you were not there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Hasselman was very mad, was he, and in earnest?—A. He seemed to be, in the way he expressed himself.

Q. And he was in dead earnest?—A. Yes, sir; he seemed to be.

Q. And he spoke right out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And 50 or 100 people at the polls?—A. I presume so, or more.

Q. At whose instance did you come up here?—A. Through Mr. Clark.

Q. Ross Clark, you mean?—A. Yes, sir.

D. W. THAYER.

MARTIN POWERS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. Your name, age, and residence?—Answer. Martin Powers; age, 49; residence, 277 South Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived here in this city?—A. Since 1856.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election held November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. Second precinct, seventeenth ward. I think that is the lower precinct on South street.

Q. Was there any policemen there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the police do any challenging there that day?—A. Two of them done it all day.

Q. What were their names?—A. Samuel Gerber and Leonard Crane.

Q. Did they have any uniform on?—A. They had a vest on with buttons on their vest.

(This testimony was objected to as not rebuttal, and cumulative simply.)

Q. Do you know Mr. Hetherington?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what he was doing there?—A. I think his occupation was inspector.

Q. Inspector of election that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he refuse to take any affidavits that were offered to get in any Democratic vote, or any offer to swear them in?

(Objected to for the same reasons.)

A. He did three in my presence, that he held in his hand and shoved them out, and the men went off mad and swearing. I cannot say whether they were swearing, because they oke in German, and they were called back but would not come near the place.

Q. Did they vote?—A. No, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who were those three men?—A. I cannot name them. They were boarding, they said, at the Mechanics' Hotel.

Q. Do you know where they were boarding?—A. At the Mechanics'.

Q. Do you know they were boarding there?—A. At Vetter's.

Q. How do you know that?—A. Mr. Vetter came up and said they were boarding there.

Q. All you know about it is what he told you?—A. He would not lie about it.

Q. You do not know whether they were living in the ward or not?—A. Yes, sir; they did. I know one of them voted there previous to that.

Q. What is his name?—A. I cannot say his name, but I know him.

Q. Where does he live?—A. Right there at Vetter's.

Q. How do you know him?—A. I seen him boarding there, and I pass there every day at times.

Q. Was he a German?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had papers that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had just been sworn out?—A. No, sir. This man said he had his papers a good while, and showed them.

Q. Had not the others just taken their papers out?—A. I cannot say, because Schoettle swore them in and swore that he knew them.

Q. And the votes were rejected?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why?—A. I could not say.

Q. Was it not because they were not legal voters?—A. No, sir; Chris. Schoettle——

Q. (Interrupting.) Were they not rejected by the inspector because he claimed they were not legal voters?—A. It must be on account of he did not want to take them in.

Q. Did he not claim they were not legal voters?—A. No, sir.

Q. They were challenged, were they not?—A. The men were all in the chute.

Q. Were they challenged?—A. Yes, sir; they were asked where they lived and all this business, and they got mad.

Q. And the original challenge was withdrawn?—A. No, sir.

Q. And the challenge was made because they were not legal voters?—A. No; they must be legal voters, they took their oaths.

Q. I am not asking you about that. I ask you if they were not challenged because it was claimed that they were not legal voters?—A. They were not challenged on that ground. They wanted to stop the votes coming in, and that was the great principle of it.

Q. They were Germans, those two, were they?—A. And there was an Italian among them that I know.

Q. He had just taken his papers out to become naturalized, hadn't he?—A. Yes, sir; and they refused him.

Q. They were taken out on the day of the election?—A. I could not say the day they were taken out.

Q. Did he not have papers there that the ink was frèsh on?—A. I could not say. I was standing there watching Mr. Hetherington.

Q. What policemen were on duty there that was challenging?—A. Crane and Gerber.

Q. Were they on duty as policemen?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they have on their badges?—A. Yes, sir; the badges were on both of them.

Q. And the police coats on?—A. I cannot say they had police coats on.

Q. Don't you know they were not on duty as policemen at all?—A. Of course, they were on duty as policemen all the time.

Q. Did not they say they were not on duty as policemen?—A. No, sir; not in my presence.

Q. Did they act as policemen?—A. They threatened to arrest me.

Q. Did they act as policemen?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they arrest anybody?—A. They were regular challengers there.

Q. Did they arrest anybody?—A. They would if they got a chance.

Q. Did they arrest anybody there that day?—A. They browbeat everybody.

Q. Did they arrest anybody?—A. No, sir; I did not see them arrest them, but they would if they got a chance.

Q. How do you know what they would have done?—A. I know what they would have done; I know very well.

Q. You know Captain Splann?—A. Yes, sir; he threatened to arrest me, and Crane threatened to arrest me, and I dared them to do it.

Q. There was no arrest made by the police there that day?—A. I do not know of any.

Q. There was no row there?—A. There was a row there at that time.

Q. There was no fighting?—A. I did not see any blows struck.
Q. You were there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was there any fighting?—A. I could not say. There was a great many jostling around.
Q. Were you there?—A. Yes, sir; I was there watching the two voters come up the chute.
Q. How much of the time were you there?—A. All day.
Q. Was there any fighting there?—A. That I could not say.
Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I am a Democrat.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you see Senator McDonald there that day?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see Judge Norton?—A. Yes, sir; I was speaking to them both.
Q. Did you hear any conversation between Senator McDonald and either of those policemen?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was that conversation?
(Objected to for the same reason.)
A. Lem. Crane said he would not believe him any more than any other man around there, and he went to lay down the law to them there, and they would not listen to him.
Q. Do you know what he said in reference to the law?—A. In regard to those men coming up they said, "We will not take this man's word, or your word, or any other man's word."
Q. I understood you to say that Mr. Hetherington refused to accept the affidavits as they were offered there?—A. Yes, sir; three of them in my presence, and he shoved them out with his left hand in that way [indicating], and Captain Maloney picked them up in his hand and asked him why he done it, when the man went up and took the paper in his hand.
Q. Did you see Mr. Frenzel there?—A. I did once; I did not have any conversation with him; I was engaged in watching there close by the chute where the challenging was, watching these men.
Q. You say Captain Splann threatened to arrest you?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. What for?—A. I could not say.
Q. Were you trying to get these votes in?—A. Yes, sir; I was trying to get them in; doing the best I could.
Q. How many of them were there?—A. About twenty-seven altogether that were refused there in my presence.
Q. How many affidavits were offered?—A. I could not say positively, only these three that were refused.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have no personal knowledge of only three men whose votes were refused?—A. These men, and there were over twenty-seven men went away who did not vote.
Q. Did you see them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were they sworn in?—A. They came to vote.
Q. Their votes were challenged when they came up?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And they were not sworn in?—A. There was nobody there to swear them in.
Q. Was one of three men who was rejected on an affidavit rejected while Senator McDonald was there?—A. There was one of them that was.
Q. Only these three that were rejected after being sworn in—you said that, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. One of them was rejected while Senator McDonald was there?—A. He was advocating for one—I could not say who he was.
Q. Was he one of the three men you spoke of?—A. No; there was none of them. These three came together abreast.
Q. Those were the only three that did not get their votes in that were sworn in?—A. There was something over 27 I saw.
Q. They were challenged and not sworn in?—A. All of them were browbeaten.

Mr. WILSON:

Q. And they were not sworn in?—A. I couldn't say; they were browbeaten there. That was all.
Q. Do you know what the vote is in that precinct, Democratic or Republican?—A. It always went Democratic.
Q. How was it in the last election?—A. Really I could not say.
Q. Don't you know there was a larger Democratic vote in the last election in that precinct than there had been before?—A. I do not know. I could not say. I have seen that precinct go as high as 90.

Q. Don't you know it went Democratic the last Congressional election?—A. I think it did. I could not tell how much Democratic majority.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was it less at this election this spring or at the election afterwards, or what is your knowledge on that subject?—A. I really could not say now.
Q. Do you recollect anything about it?—A. No; I don't now. I could not say.
Q. Have you an impression?
(Objected to as incompetent.)
A. I could not say.

MARTIN POWERS.

ROBERT CAMPBELL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. State your name, age, and residence.—Answer. Robert Campbell; age, 41; residence, 84 Harrison street.
Q. Were you in the city at the time of the November election, in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you at the seventeenth ward, second precinct, that day?—A. Yes, sir; I was.
Q. Did you see Mr. Frenzel there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you see Captain Splann there?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Timothy Splann is Captain Splann?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And Mr. Frenzel is John P. Frenzel, of the Merchants' National Bank?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. State what was said in that conversation between you and Mr. Splann there that day?
(Objected to for the reason that there has been no evidence upon this subject at all.)
Q. Did you have any conversation there that day with Captain Splann with reference to any trouble with Mr. John P. Frenzel?
(Objected to as not rebuttal and as being simply accumulative in support of the testimony of Mr. Frenzel in chief.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was said?—A. I came to the polls the second time between 5 and 6 o'clock, and Splann says, "What do you think of a banker coming here in the interest of these fellows."
(Objection to any statement given by Captain Splann in the absence of Mr. Frenzel.)
A. He said he had had a racket with Frenzel.
Q. Was there any policemen challenging at that precinct that day?—A. Crane and Gerber were alongside of the chute.

(Objected to as not being rebuttal.)

Cross examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you know whether they were on duty as policemen that day?—A. We were all on duty.
Q. Did they have their uniforms on?—A. No, sir; none of us had uniforms on.
Q. Don't you know that those two men were not on duty that day?—A. No, sir; if they were not on duty I knew nothing of it.
Q. That is all you know about it. Captain Splann said he had had a racket with Frenzel?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. He did not state anything about what it was?—No, sir.
Q. You did not hear it yourself?—A. No, sir; I came after the racket was over.
Q. He did not state what it was or anything about it?—A. No, sir.
Q. You are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you are now captain on the metropolitan police force in this city?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON. The members of that board are equally divided as to politics, are they not?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. PEELLE. You mean they aim to be equally divided in politics?
The WITNESS. Yes, sir.
Q. They are not equally divided as a matter of fact.—A. Yes, sir; I believe they are equally divided.
Q. You came up here as a witness with John P. Frenzel?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. John P. Frenzel is the chairman of the police board?—A. No, sir.
Q. He is the Democratic member of that board?—A. Yes, sir.

ROBERT CAMPBELL.

JOHN P. FRENZEL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. You are the same Mr. Frenzel who testified in this case in chief?—Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified in your examination in chief that you went to the second precinct of the seventeenth ward on the day of the Congressional election, in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any conversation that day with Captain Timothy Splann at that precinct? And, if so, state what it was.

(Objected to for the reasons heretofore mentioned.)

A. While I was there moving about Captain Splann accosted me with the remark, "What are you doing down here?" I said I was just down here to enthuse our side of the house a little bit. That was one part of the conversation I had with him. After fifteen or twenty minutes, or probably a few more minutes, I was near him again, and he turned to me and, pulling out a pair of nippers from his pocket, he said in a threatening manner, "Do you see these things?" I said, "Yes; I guess I know my business," and he put them back in his pocket again; and that is all the conversation I had with him.

Q. Was there any police there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you whether or not if you know any voters whose votes were challenged and who were qualified by property-holders that were rejected by the inspector? I mean Democratic votes.

(Objected to for the reasons given before.)

A. Yes, sir; there was one vote of a naturalized German who was sworn in; that is, the affidavit was sworn to by a property-holder, but when he presented his vote it was refused.

Q. Do you know who prepared that affidavit?—A. I did.

Q. Did you accompany the presentation of that affidavit to the inspector?—A. I accompanied it as far as the chute.

(Objected to for the reasons heretofore given.)

Q. Why was it refused, if you know, and what was the circumstance?

(Objected to for the reasons before given.)

A. I think it was refused for the reason that the inspector claimed that the man that had made out the affidavit did not know the voter.

Q. Did he know him?—A. I think he did; at least he swore to the fact.

Q. Was the matter pressed?—A. There was no opportunity to press it under the circumstances.

Q. Why?—A. Because of the presence of these policemen and their manner towards the man who made out the affidavit and the voter.

(Objected to as not rebuttal and simply accumulative, Mr. Frenzel having sworn to the same fact before.)

Q. Captain Splann asked you why you were there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the reason you were there?—A. My reason for going there was to encourage our Democratic men around the polls and set them right

Q. Were you requested to go there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom?—A. Joseph E. McDonald, chairman of the Democratic state central committee.

Q. Was that your ward?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were connected with that committee?—A. Yes, sir; I was a member of the executive committee and treasurer of the Democratic State central committee.

Q. You did not go down to challenge any votes?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not challenge any votes?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did the police challenge there that day?

(Objected to for the same reasons given before.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who they were?

(Same objection.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were they?—A. One policeman by the name of Crane, and one by the name of Gerber.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

Q. Are you any kin to William H. English?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or William E. English?—A. No, sir.

Q. I ask you that for the reason that some one has suggested that there was an impression that you were a son-in-law.—A. No, sir; I am not.

Q. You say you neither challenged or swore in any votes, and you went there at Senator McDonald's request—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he send for you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know?—A. He sent his carriage with his son to the first precinct of the ninth ward, where I was.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You said awhile ago that there was a German man whose vote was rejected and for whom an affidavit was prepared?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was swearing him in?—A. Chris. Schoettle.

Q. You say he was a naturalized German. Do you mean that he had simply taken out his papers and became a citizen?—A. I could not say as to that. It might be that he had only taken out his intention papers.

Q. It was that day he took them out?—A. I could not say whether it was that day or the day before.

Q. Was not the ink still wet on the paper?—A. No, sir; not that I remember.

Q. Do you remember who it was?—A. No, sir; I do not know that I can now say.

Q. Do you know where he lives?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he was a voter in that ward, to your own knowledge?—A. He was properly identified to me as being a voter there by responsible parties.

Q. Do you know anything about that, or about him, except what was told you that day?—A. Only what was told me by reliable parties, and I had seen the man there.

Q. That day?—A. I saw the man that day, and I had seen him before.

Q. You do not know how long he had been in this country, or how long he had been in that precinct?—A. No, sir.

Q. That was the only man's vote that was rejected that had been sworn in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say at the time the inspector claimed he was not a resident?—A. The inspector claimed that Schoettle, who swore him in, did not actually know him.

Q. Did he question Mr. Schoettle as to his knowledge of the man and his residence?—A. I think he did.

Q. And it was after that that Mr. Schoettle withdrew himself, did he?—A. Mr. Schoettle left the polls then.

Q. And made no effort to swear him in after that?—A. No, sir.

Q. You know Captain Splann well, do you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you know him?—A. I suppose I have known him for six years—five or six years.

Q. And he has been a very efficient member of the police force in this city, and bears that reputation?—A. I think not.

Q. Has he not borne a reputation of being a good policeman and an efficient officer; and did you ever know anything to the contrary?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That instance you spoke of?—A. No, sir; not only that.

Q. In that conversation that you had there that day in which he showed you the nippers, was not that all in jest, and did you not know Captain Splann well enough to know that he meant nothing like that?—A. No, sir; I do not think I ever spoke a word to the captain before in my life until that time.

Q. You never spoke to him until that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were you doing just before he showed you the nippers?—A. I was moving about in the Democratic ranks.

Q. Did he say to you you were not a resident of that ward?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he mention that fact to you that you were not a resident?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he not think you were there challenging; and did he not so state to you?—A. You must ask Mr. Splann about what he thought.

Q. Did he not ask you if you were not there to challenge voters?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not go away from the polls when he showed you the nippers?—A. No, sir.

Q. You stayed there right along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Democrats had a majority in that precinct?—A. I think they did have a small majority.

Q. They always have in that precinct on national politics?—A. I am not well enough informed to state.

Q. Do you remember how the vote last fall compared with the vote in the spring before?—A. Our majority was larger this last election than the fall before.

Q. Your majority in the Congressional election, 1882, was larger than it was in the April election, 1882?—A. No; I think not.

Q. Do you know how it was?—A. I could not say positively.

Q. Don't you remember that the Democrats carried that precinct?—A. In the fall election of 1882?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Yes, sir; I think they did.

Q. The Democrats had pretty general charge of the polls?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there not a great many at the polls?—A. There was a good many there.

Q. How many were there?—A. I suppose there was at times 25 and sometimes it ran as high as 75.

Q. That is the only vote you saw that was rejected that day that had been sworn in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are the Democratic member of the police board in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a German, are you not?—A. Yes, sir; but I was born in America.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What was Captain Splann's manner?—A. His manner was rather of an angry mood, I thought.

Q. Was it excited or calm?—A. It was calm.

Q. What do you understand by the term "nippers?"

(Objected to.)

Q. What are nippers?—A. They are instruments which they use in putting around prisoners' wrists.

Q. Handcuffs?—A. Yes, sir; handcuffs.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you whether or not the majority at that precinct at that election in 1882 was as great as it was at the spring election preceding and at the election thereafter? I will ask you as to the election held thereafter was the majority as large?—A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. Was it as large as the majority was at the spring election preceding?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the amount of the difference?—A. I cannot state exactly.

Q. Was it not true that at the November election, 1882, that the public was more thoroughly worked up and there was a greater effort to bring the voters out than at any election preceding or subsequent for years?

(Objected to for the reason it is not rebuttal and that the returns will show for themselves.)

A. Yes, sir; I thought so.

Q. You say there was only one vote that you saw for whom an affidavit was offered there that was refused. Do you know whether there was voters depending upon that affidavit; and, if so, how many?

(Objected to.)

A. I thought there was a good many, and it was my impression that there must have been at least fifty or sixty that were scared off, as it appeared to me.

Q. Did you make any statement about that at the time as to the number?

(Objected to as immaterial.)

A. Yes, sir; I made a statement after the day was over, is my impression.

Q. To whom was that statement made, and what was said?

(Objected to as immaterial and not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)

A. It may have been to different parties, because my impression is I stated it a number of times. I would not remember. I might say I stated it to my brother, and perhaps I stated it to Mr. Seidensticker and Mr. Hood; that impression was that we had a loss of one hundred votes in the second precinct of the seventeenth ward.

Q. Was that the evening of the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That evening or the next day?—A. That evening and the next day.

Q. Do you know of any man that did not get his vote in there that day?—A. It would not have been possible for me in that large crowd and with the amount of excitement going on there to have even identified my friends.

Q. You do not know the name of any man whose vote was not gotten in?—A. I cannot state at this distant day.

Q. What was the majority there at the city election in October last for the Democratic ticket?—A. I could not state.

Q. Then as a matter of fact you do not know what the difference was between the votes in those three elections?—A. I know there was a difference, but I cannot state the exact numbers.

Q. You do not know where the increase was, or the decrease, and at what elections there was a greater vote than there was at others?—A. I know there was a greater majority in the spring election in 1882 than in the fall election of 1882, and there was a greater majority at our last election than there was in the fall of 1882.

Q. What was the difference?—A. From what I can remember I think the difference between the last election and the November election must have been somewhere in the neighborhood of 20.

Q. Difference between the election of October?—A. The November election and this last election.

Q. About twenty?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then there could not have been—— What did Mr. English suggest to you just then?—A. I said I could not remember the number.

Q. Then there could not have been a loss of one hundred votes on the November election, could there?—A. There might have been, because the sentiment in favor of the Democratic ticket was very much stronger at that election than it was at last October election; the voters may have been inclined at that time because of the issues to vote the Democratic ticket, and at this time probably some of them voted the Republican ticket.

Q. Do you know what the majority for the Democratic ticket was there at the April election in 1882?—A. I do not recollect exactly.

Q. Was it 50?—A. I say I do not remember. I have not charged my memory with it.

Q. Was it 75 or 100?—A. I could not remember, as I told you.

Q. Do you know that the majority for Mr. English at that precinct in that ward in 1882 was over 60?—A. I do not know that. I do not remember it now.

Q. I hold in my hand a table published in the Indianapolis Journal, which Austin H. Brown says is a more correct table than that published in the Sentinel, and that shows that Mr. English had 62 majority in the November election in 1882; is that right or wrong?—A. I should say it was right.

Q. Can you state whether or not that would be a lesser or greater majority than was given for the Democratic ticket at the April election in 1882?—A. It is my impression it was a smaller majority.

Q. How much smaller would you say?—A. I would say from all the circumstances I observed there it was at least one hundred.

Q. At least one hundred smaller?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know anything about it as a matter of fact?—A. Of course I do from my impression.

Q. What was the Democratic majority down there at the April election, 1882? How much greater was the vote at the April election, 1882, than it was in November, 1882?—A. I do not remember the figures.

Q. You cannot tell?—A. No, sir.

Q. How much greater was the vote at the October election in this city at the last election than it was in 1882?—A. I do not know the figures.

Q. I ask you how much greater the vote in the April election was than it was in the November election, 1882, and you said it was about one hundred?—A. I would not state that without comparing the figures of the elections of 1882, because I do not know the figures in the one case or the other. If I knew the figures in the April election I would be able to state.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You said in answer to Mr. Peelle's question that the number of votes at the November election in 1882 was less than the others—that the majority was less?—A. Yes, sir; that the majority was less.

Q. You say the sentiment was stronger then for the ticket than at any of the other elections. You mean stronger at the November, 1882, election than at any other election?

(Objected to.)

A. I would say that the sentiment in favor of the Democratic ticket was stronger than it was in the spring election of that year. It was certainly much stronger than it was at the last October election.

Q. So that the vote was better organized in November, 1882?

(Objected to.)

A. I thought so.

Q. What sentiment do you refer to when you say the sentiment was stronger?

(Objected to as immaterial and nothing but sentiment, and not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)

A The question at issue took on considerable of the prohibition character, and for that reason a large number of voters, particularly Germans, were inclined to vote with the Democrats.

Q. Who had not voted before; is not that true?

(Objected to as leading, immaterial, and not rebuttal.)
A. That is my opinion.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. That same sentiment you refer to was greater at the April election in 1882 than it was in November, 1882?—A. I think not.
Q. Was not that question new in April, 1882, and was not that the first campaign made on the sentiment you refer to?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN P. FRENZEL.

JOHN MALONEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John Maloney; age, 55; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. You are the same gentleman who testified in this case in chief for the contestant?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. You testified there that you were one of the election board at the second precinct of the seventeenth ward?—Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know Mr. John Wahle?—A. Yes, sir; he is a German down there in my ward.
Q. Did you see him on that day?—Yes, sir.
Q. I will ask you his condition on that day, if you saw him, as to whether he was drunk or sober, or what?—A. He was sober when I saw him. What I call a man sober is when he is in his reasonable mind and good sense, and acted like any sober man would.
Q. You were one of the judges there?—A. Yes, sir; I was one of the judges on that board.
Q. Did the judges on that board refuse to accept any affidavit offered them?
(Objected to.)
A. Not the judges, but the inspector.
(Objected to as not rebuttal.)
Q. Did the judges refuse?—A. No, sir.
Q. I will ask you whether or not the policemen there did any challenging or interfered with the election?
(Objected to as not rebuttal, &c.)
A. Yes, sir; there was two or three there that was challenging and cautioning men as they came up to vote that they must be careful; that they did not belong to that ward.
Q. Do you recollect the names of them?
(Objected to for the reasons before stated.)
A. There was Len Crane and a partner of his.
Q. You say it was his partner?—A. Yes, sir; a man that used to be a partner with him. He was a sandy-complexioned man.
Q. Was it Robinson or Gerber?—A. Gerber was the man.
Q. Did the inspector there refuse to take any votes sworn in?
(Objected to as leading and not rebuttal.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many of them?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. The man Wahle made out an affidavit that was brought in there and was rejected, and the inspector would not take them.
Q. Who would not take them?—A. The inspector.
Q. Do you know how many votes were lost by that?
(Objected to as leading and not rebuttal.)
A. About as near as I possibly could come, if you will allow me to explain what I really think, is, I suppose there would be in the neighborhood of about 100.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Were there votes sworn in by any one?—A. There were votes sworn in, but they would not be received.
Q. How many men's votes were sworn in?—A. I am not saying what amount was sworn in, but I am speaking about the intimidation from the men, and they were threatened and they were lost; and the ignorant German or ignorant Irish, &c., that came up there, and there was even Americans——
Q. How many men were rejected that were sworn in there that day?—A. There was at least 7 or 8; very close on to that many.
Q. How many?—A. About 7 or 8 that this man Wahle came up there and signed the affidavit for, and the old man rejected that, and would not have anything to do with them at all.

Q. The other men you referred to were men who had simply been challenged?—A. They were scared off out of the chute.

Q. Were they challenged?—A. They were challenged, sir,

Q. How many were challenged and afterwards sworn in?—A. The challenger——

Q. I admonish you now to answer my questions. Were they sworn in after they were challenged, any except those you have mentioned?—A. No; those were not. They were not sworn in.

Q. You were inside of the room all day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know where this man Wahle was during that time?—A. He was outside there. They brought him up to make some affidavits.

Q. You do not know anything about his drinking if you were upon the inside?—A. I could not tell the balance of the day, but while he was there he was sober.

Q. While you were on the board inside you do not know anything about whether Mr. Wahle drank, or if he drank anything?—A. I saw him during the time they made this rejection.

Q. I ask you the question, I ask you whether you know this man Wahle drank anything during the time you were on the board?—A. I do not; all I can tell was from the appearance, from what I saw of the man; I could not follow him right around.

Q. Did the inspector refuse to receive votes sworn in by Mr. Wahle because he was under the influence of liquor?—A. Yes, sir; that is what he said.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Were you in an attitude to know as much about the soberness of Mr. Wahle as the inspector?—A. Yes, sir; and more so, because I had two clear eyes and he had only one, and I could see better, and very few men can see the distance off that I can see.

JOHN MOLONEY.

W. M. HICKLIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Question. You are the same gentleman who testified for the contestant in chief?—Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. You said in that evidence that you were at the second precinct of the seventeenth ward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were there all day, pretty near?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you whether or not you saw there that day Mr. John Wahle, or if you know him?—A. I do not know him by name.

Q. A German who was swearing in votes there?—A. I do not know him by name.

Q. Did you see a gentleman there swearing in votes for the Democrats that day?—A. Yes, sir; I saw two.

Q. What were their names?—A. One was that saloon-keeper on the corner—Schoettle.

Q. Who was the other?—A. I think Mr. Wahle.

Q. What was the condition of those two gentlemen that were swearing in votes as to intoxication; were they intoxicated?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. They were not when they were at the polls, in my judgment.

Q. Did you see any police there that day?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I did.

Q. Did they take part in that election?—A. They took a very active part in the election.

Q. Did they challenge any votes?—A. They challenged several votes.

Q. Were there any affidavits offered there in behalf of the Democratic voters that were rejected?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

Q. Were there any affidavits refused by the inspector; did he refuse to receive any affidavits as to any voters that had been sworn in?—A. Yes, sir; they did. Mr. Hetherington was one of the judges.

Q. He was inspector, was he not?—A. Yes, sir; he was inspector. He was known as one of the judges of the election. I do not know what they call them here.

Q. Did those men get in their votes whose affidavits were offered?—A. They did not, and I kicked.

Q. Do you know how many votes there were of that sort?—A. I do not.

Mr. PEELLE. What sort do you mean?

The WITNESS. Those that were actually voters, and by virtue of the police and by virtue of the intimidation of the men whom we had to swear in votes we lost a great many votes. I know that.

Q. Do you know how many?—A. No; I cannot tell how many.

Q. You mean you cannot give the exact number?—A. I cannot give the exact number. That is what I mean.

Q. Can you approximate it?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I think if we had had a lot of men like we have out in Missouri, where I was born and raised I think there would have been fifty or sixty more votes polled there for the Democratic ticket. Democrats here—like those are in the seventeeth ward—are somewhat backward about voting, and, of course, a man like myself—I should have voted.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did you see any man's vote refused there who had been sworn in?—A. I did. e saw a man whose vote had been sworn in and an affidavit came there from a responsibl party that was rejected.

Q. What was his name?—A. I do not know what his name was.

Q. Do you know where he lived?—A. I do not know where he lived.

Q. Do you know whether he was a voter in the ward or not?—A. I know that one man at the chute, and that was Mr. Bryce, and he was councilman there from our ward, and a Republican and the meanest one in the ward—and he spoke out and said: "I know that man is going to vote the Democratic ticket, but he is a voter, and you ought to let him vote," and the policeman on the other side challenged him.

Q. Mr. Bryce is the meanest Republican in that ward?—A. He is the strongest Republican I know of.

Q. Is that a Democratic ward?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is not the precinct Democratic?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did not it go Democratic last fall?—A. No, sir; I tried it.

Q. Did not the whole ward go Democratic in 1882?—A. I am talking about the last time.

Q. Is it the October State election where you are talking about that the votes were rejected?—A. I am talking about the October election where votes were rejected; that ward is Republican.

Q. Mr. Wilson was asking you about the Congressional election of 1882.—A. I am aware of that, and that is what I am talking about.

Q. Do not you know that that ward went Democratic in 1882?—A. It went for English; yet it is not a Democratic ward.

Q. Did not it go for every Democratic candidate in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Bryce has carried that ward three times for council, and is now councilman from that ward?—A. I believe he is.

Q. Do you know of another voter down there whose vote was refused after he had been sworn in other than the one you mentioned?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them sworn in.

Q. I mean men who were challenged and sworn in. How many of that kind were refused? How many of that kind were rejected by the inspector?—A. I could not say how many there were.

Q. Did you see more than that?—A. Yes, sir; I saw more than one.

Q. Did you see more than two?—A. Not sworn in according to the laws of Indiana, but men who were residents of the ward, and every one knew, would come in there with their affidavits made out in full and present it to the inspector; but they were men who had no real estate in the ward.

Q. And the challenges were not withdrawn, were they?—A. The challenges were not withdrawn.

Q. And the inspector would not receive that kind of affidavits, as the law required the affidavits to be of some one who owned real estate in the ward. Is not that the fact?—A. That is the law in this State.

Q. And it was that kind of affidavits you are referring to?—A. It is that kind of an affidavit.

Q. You say you have a personal knowledge of one man whose vote was refused after the affidavit had been made for him?—A. Two men that I know of.

Q. Was there more than two rejected after the affidavits had been made?—A. No; but there would be more men not coming to vote who had ascertained that they could not vote by being sworn in by some one who owned no real estate.

Q. As the law required?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you only know of two men whose votes were rejected when affidavits properly prepared had been offered?—A. No; I do not say that. I say that I know there was any amount of men who did not come up and apply, and did not go in the chute to vote because they knew their votes would be challenged and rejected.

Q. Give me the name of some man who did not vote and did not come to the chute because he knew that he was going to be challenged.—A. I do not know the names of the parties.

Q. You do not know the name of one of them, do you?—A. I cannot call one to mind now.

Q. All the votes that you say you saw rejected were two; is not that really so?—A. No. I saw men that I knew were voters in that ward, and I wanted them to come up and vote, and they replied if they went up there their votes would be challenged and the challengers would not withdraw them.

Q. Did you see the inspector reject any but two votes at that poll?—A. No rejection.

Q. Did the inspector, Mr. Hetherington, reject more than two votes?—A. All Mr. Hetherington had to do was to wait for the outside man to challenge. He did not challenge any votes.

Q. Did he receive any vote of any one that was offered to him?—A. I do not know whether he did or not.

Q. I mean did he refuse any vote that was offered him?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, he received every vote that was tendered him by the voter?—A. Yes. But they could not get their votes into the hands of the inspector.

Q. Did you see the inspector refuse to receive a vote of any man that was a voter in that ward?—A. Well, now, I do not know what you might call refusing. I saw Mr. Hetherington stand there and reluctantly take a ticket and look at it and see the thickness of it and wait for them to parley over it, and I saw him do that, and if he thought it was a Republican vote I am satisfied he would put that vote in without stopping a minute.

Q. Did you see the inspector, Mr. Hetherington, refuse to receive the vote of any man where a proper affidavit had been made?—A. Yes. I saw him refuse to—I do not know what you call proper affidavit. I saw him refuse to take the ballot of two or more after a citizen of the ward and a resident, and he knew him to be a resident, swore that this man was a legal voter.

Q. But the man who swore him in did not own any real estate in the precinct?—A. The man I allude to now did not own any real estate in the ward.

Q. And for that reason the vote was rejected?—A. Yes, sir; and the reason why this man made the affidavit that this man was a voter was because two men who did own real estate in the ward were scared out of swearing in any more votes for fear that they might get into trouble.

Q. Did they swear in any votes?—A. They swore in one or two in the morning.

Q. What time did they leave there?—A. I think the first man we had there was this saloon-keeper.

Q. Chris. Schoettle?—A. Yes, sir; and he left there before noon.

Q. Did you see Senator McDonald there that day, or Mr. Frenzel?—A. I do not know Mr. Frenzel; I saw Senator McDonald come there.

Q. He was there about three or four o'clock in the afternoon?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Schoettle there at that time?—A. Yes, sir, he was there. He made up his mind, he said, to swear in a few more votes, and Mr. McDonald came down there to assure, as I understood at the time, Mr Schoettle that he would be all right in swearing in votes that he knew to be voters.

Q. That was about three o'clock in the afternoon?—A. That was some time after dinner.

Q. Did Mr. Schoettle try to swear in any man while Mr. McDonald was there?—A. I think he did.

Q. He was intimidated in the morning and came back in the afternoon?—A. He said he knew him.

Q. You say he was intimidated in the morning, but came back in the afternoon and said he would swear in a few more votes?—A. I do not know wha the said about being intimidated in the morning. He did not say he was intimidated. He said he was not going to get into any racket to swear in a few votes.

Q. And did he not say that he was intimidated?—A. He called it a racket.

Q. And he came back there after he went away, to swear in a few more votes?—A. He came back there with a fellow he knew to be a voter.

Q. I asked you if he did not go away and come back to swear in more votes?—A. I do not believe he did, sir, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Did not he attempt it when Senator McDonald was there?—A. The fellows tried to get him to do it.

Q. Did not he come up in the chute with Senator McDonald with an affidavit to swear in some voter?—A. Yes, sir, I believe he did; but I do not believe they got the vote in.

Q. Mr. McDonald told him he would have to have some satisfactory evidence before he swore in a vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not Mr. Schoettle go away after that?—A. Mr. Schoettle said, "I know this man to be a voter;" and the policeman on the other side said, "We will make it pretty hot for you if you swear that man's vote in."

Q. Did the inspector inquire of Mr. Schoettle whether he knew the man or not?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Hetherington did.

Q. And did not Mr. McDonald say that if the man had satisfactory evidence that the man was a legal voter he was justified in swearing him in?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. And did not Mr. Schoettle go away from the chute after that?—A. Yes, sir; I think he did.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle says Mr. McDonald made the statement if a man had satisfactory evidence that a citizen was a voter that would be sufficient to swear him in; and Mr. Peelle says after he said that Mr. Schoettle went away. Did he go away because of that statement, or what caused him to go away?—A. I met him as he came out of the chute, and I says to him to swear that man in if you know him to be a voter; and he says, "I am not going to get into a racket; I am going to quit; this is the second time I have been bulldozed around here;" and he said, "It is no interest to me for the Democratic party;" and he said, "I am not going to take any chances," or words to that effect.

Q. You say the affidavit had been made out in that case?—A. I do not know whether it was in this particular case, but he was ready there to swear him in, and he was in the chute, and the question came up as to whether the man that swore the vote in was the judge of the——

Q. Sufficiency of the affidavit?—A. Yes, sir; and the residence of the man and the legality of the voter; and it was that question Mr. McDonald was called in the chute for.

Q. That was after the affidavit was made out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you, when you testified in chief about there being two men that were swearing in votes whose affidavits were refused, and you said they were Mr. Schottle and Mr. Wahle, did not they own property in that precinct?—A. I never examined the title, but I presume they did.

Q. When you referred in your examination by Mr. Peelle to two parties, some one else who was swearing in votes, who was that; who was the third party?—A. I do not remember now. There was only two that undertook to swear in in our precinct.

Q. When you answered Mr. Peelle's question did you have reference to only two, or to this third party?—A. Only to the two. There was only two that I know of that owned property that were expected to swear in votes that were legal voters and no more.

Q. Who were they?—A. Schoettle and this other fellow.

Q. And were they offering to swear in votes and make out affidavits?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Schoettle swore in some in the morning—two or three. I cannot say how many.

Q. You mean Mr. Wahle when you say "the other fellow?"—A. Yes, sir; I mean Wahle. I do not think he swore in more than one or two, then he quit.

Q. Just now you said the challengers went away, in answer to Mr. Peelle's question; you mean the parties who made the affadavits, and not the challengers?—A. No; I did not say challengers.

Q. Yes, you did; you said challengers, but I suppose you meant the parties who made the affidavits.—A. I mean the parties who made the affidavits went away. Mr. Schoettle went away when Mr. McDonald was in the chute.

Questions by Mr. PEELE:

Q. You do not know anything about the condition of Mr. Wahle there that day?—A. He was sober when I saw him.

Q. Do you know him?—A. When I see him.

Q. Was you there all day?—A. Pretty near all day.

Q. Do you know whether he drank any?—A. I do not know. According to the laws of Indiana, they are not allowed to drink any on election day.

Q. Do you know whether he drank any on that day or not?—A. I do not.

Q. Mr. Schoettle is a saloon keeper down there right on the corner, across from the voting place?—A. And he is a clever, nice man, too.

Q. A Republican, too?—A. I believe he is a Democrat; a Dutch Democrat.

Q. Is he not a Republican and was he not paid there that day to stay at the polls?

(Objected to.)

A. No, sir. He is a Democrat and voted for me in the seventeenth ward for councilman. He told me he did, and they know me to be a Democrat.

W. M. HICKLIN.

By agreement of the parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Wednesday, December 19, 1883.

WEDNESDAY, December 19, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

WILLIAM BUEHRIG, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Your age and residence?—A. My age is 38. I live at the corner of South and Pennsylvania streets, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. About 37 years.

Q. Were you in this city in November, 1882, at the time of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you?—A. I was at the polls all day, at the lower precinct, across the street from my place.

Q. Were you in the seventeenth ward?--A. Yes, sir,

Q. You were councilman from that ward at one time.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is your place of business?—A. No. 49 East South street.

Q. How far is that from the precinct?—A. Just directly opposite; a short half-square. The back part of our lot is opposite.

Q. Did you attend that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much of the time was you there?—A. All day. I am generally always there.

Q. Did you take any part; are you a worker there?—A. Yes, sir; I generally take that much interest in it at all elections. I have for several years, and I have been committeeman a great many times.

Q. Do you know who the inspector of the election was at that precinct?—A. Mr. Hetherington.

Q. Can you say whether or not there were any affidavits offered there for swearing in any Democratic voters; did you see any such offered there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What became of them?—A. Mr. Hetherington would take them and throw them to one side and not pay any attention to them.

(This testimony objected to as not rebuttal.)

Q. Were the police at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir. They acted as challengers that day.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

Q. How many of them?—A. Two of them.

Q. What were their names?—A. Mr. Crane and Mr. Gerber.

Q. They acted as challengers?—A. Yes, sir. They took the place of challengers and would refuse to let Democrats vote.

Q. What time of day was it you first noticed the inspector refusing any affidavits?—A. The first I noticed of it so particularly was about noon when they commenced and would not let any Democrats vote.

Q. Did these men vote whose affidavits were refused?—A. Oh, no; they were put right out of the chute—just pushed right out and told to get away from there.

Q. Do you know Captain Splan?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him there that day?—A. I saw Captain Splan and Captain Campbell and many of the police.

Q. How many police?—A. Outside of Crane and Gerber, I judge there was hardly less than half a dozen there all the time, standing by the chute.

Q. Did you hear any conversation between Mr. Frenzel and any one there?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Frenzel came down to see what the trouble was down there, and I was on the Democratic side of the chute, and I heard some one, whether it was Crane, Gerber, or Campbell, or Splan—they were standing behind there. I do not know who it was; but Mr. Frenzel was given to understand if he did not get away from there, he would be run in, or something to that effect.

(Objected to, as not rebuttal.)

Q. Do you know how many voters, on account of the refusal of those affidavits, there were, who did not vote?

(Objected to as not rebuttal; and for the further reason that counsel had announced that he was through with the witness, and the contestee had no cross-examination to make.)

A. I judge there was 100 or more. From noon on, I do not think we got in a dozen votes; in fact, I asked a dozen to vote, and they said, "What is the use? they won't let us vote." I know individual cases, of men who had lived in the ward a number of years, and they would push them right out of the chute and would not let them vote; and late in the day, when wagon loads of Democrats would come there, they would hold some Republican in the chute and keep him there; and the chute was crowded awhile before the polls closed, and parties that wanted to vote could not vote.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE.

Q. Were there any affidavits made by property-holders there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men were refused to vote who had made the proper affidavit?—A. I know Mr. Schoettle made affidavits.

Q. (Question repeated.)—A. How many affidavits the inspector refused to take?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I judge 25 or 30; somewhere along there; or more, perhaps.

Q. Who made the affidavits?—A. Mr. Schoettle made some, until they scared him off, and Mr. Wahle.

Q. How long was Mr. Schoettle there?—A. He was there off and on all day.

Q. He did not go away at all?—A. He went home.

Q. What time?—A. He lived just across the street. He would go home and come right back, or some of us would go over after him to come over, and they would get around him and intimidate him and scare him off, and he would go away again and we would go after him again.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I will ask you as to Mr. Wahle. What was his condition there that day; was he drunk or sober?—A. No, sir; he was not drunk. I have known Mr. Wahle for years.

Q. You say he was not drunk?—A. No, sir.

WILLIAM BUEHIRY.

MICHAEL CLUNE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. I came here in the spring of 1864.

Q. Were you in this city at the November election 1882; the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you?—A. In the 24th ward.

Q. What precinct?—A. The second precinct. The farthest one south.

Q. I will ask you what capacity you were acting in that day?—A. I acted as Democratic judge.

Q. How long did you stay in the room there where the ballot-box was?—A. From the time I went in, I never was out until everything was signed and sealed up and fixed up. I never was out of the room.

Q. I will ask you as to the number of votes in the ballot-box; as to how they corresponded with the number of names on the tally-sheet.

(Objected to as not rebuttal; the same witness having testified to the same fact in examination-in-chief.)

Q. Who signed the certificate that was made out there of the returns?—A. Each one of signed them. That was the instruction.

Q. Was that certificate correct?

(Objected to as not rebuttal, because the certificate speaks for itself.)

A. Yes; the certificate was all correct; that is, you mean the tally-sheet and tickets, &c.; do I understand you?

Q. Did the number of tickets that you took out of the box and put in the bag, and sealed up, correspond with the number of votes you had on your tally-sheet?—A. Yes, sir; the ones that we registered were all correct; we had the same count.

Q. Did the number of tickets that you placed in the bag and sealed up correspond with the number of votes you certified up as voted for Congress?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. According to the number we filed on our string they corresponded exactly with the tally-sheet, as far as we knew.

Q. You mean the number you put on the string corresponded with the tally-sheet?—A. Yes, sir; the number of votes cast.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You did not keep the tally of the votes yourself, at all?—A. No, sir; we had a clerk.

Q. You simply was the judge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know whether the clerks gave five votes for Mr. English by mistake, or not?—A. We had clerks on both sides that I think we could rely on.

Q. But you do not know but what they might have made a mistake?—A. Of course; I have nothing to say in regard to that; we had clerks on both sides, and I thought the sheet was correct; at least there was no dispute in regard to the count.

Q. Did you look at that particularly as to the vote for Congress, or did you look at it as to the vote for the State officers, or county officers?—A. We generally took it separately.

Q. I am confining it to the vote for the State ticket and the county ticket; did they correspond with the number of names and ballots cast?—A. We had no trouble in regard to that.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. English had more votes down there than the other candidates?—A. In regard to that I cannot say now.

Q. You made no comparison yourself of the vote for Congressman with the number of names recorded?—A. No; I did not.

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, you do not know?—A. No more than I can say this, in regard to our two clerks; everything was satisfactory clear through, and every name was put down and was left there, and there was no scratching or scraping

Q. How did you ascertain that if you did not know that the number of votes corresponded with the number of names?—A. When it came to be added up everything came out satisfactory. That is the only way I know.

Q. Is it not always the rule that that comparison is made from the State officers and not from the other candidates?—A. That is something I would not be able to say.

Q. Is it not true that the clerk would take the State officers, they being less liable to changes than the other candidates?—A. I suppose when they counted them up they counted each candidate.

Q. Each candidate got the votes recorded for him, but when they came to make the comparison with the total number of votes counted with the number of names on the list, would not they look at the State officers rather than the county officers?—A. In getting it correctly, I think they examined each one.

Q. Did they examine as to Congressman to find what the vote was, in regard to the number of names?—A. In regard to taking them out separately I cannot say. There was no dissatisfaction at any time.

Q. Do you know what majority Mr. English had at that precinct?—A. I have forgotten the majorities now; I would not be able to state.

Q. Did not he have 175 majority at that precinct?—A. I would not be positive.

Q. Was it not a little less than 200 majority?—A. I would not be able to state. I could not say.

Q. Did not he have a few more votes than any other candidate?—A. That I could not say.

Q. You do not remember about that?—A. No, sir.

Q. If he had 175 majority—— A. I know they all had a good fair majority down there.

Q. That is a strong Democratic precinct, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; it is a strong Democratic precinct.

M. CLUNE.

JOHN WILSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. What is your age?—A. I am 44 years old, passed.

2. Q. How long have you been in Indiana?—A. About 16 years next spring.

3. Q. Where do you live?—A. New Bethel, Franklin Township, Marion County, Indiana.

4. Q. Were you in that township at the Congressional election in Novnmber, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

5. Q. What precinct?—A. Precinct number one.

6. Q. What position did you hold there?—A. I was inspector.

7. Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

8. Q. You were township trustee?—A. Yes, sir.

9. Q. I will ask you how did the number of votes for the candidates compare with the number of tickets in the ballot-box; the number of votes, as you had them on the tally-sheets, compare with the number of tickets in the ballot-box in that precinct at that election at the time of closing?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. My recollection is that they were just the same.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

10. Q. What was the vote for Congressman in that precinct?—A. I disremember.

11. Q. Do you know whether that corresponded with the number of names recorded?—A. I think it was the same.

12. Q. Do you know or have you any impression upon the subject?—A. That is my impression; that everything came out just straight.

13. Q. You arrived at that, did you not, by the number of votes counted for the State officers on account of the scratches being less there than anywhere else?—A. No, sir; if my recollection serves me right, our tickets were full.

14. Q. The number of tickets and the number of names corresponded?—A. Yes, sir.

15. Q. What the vote was for Congressman you do not know?—A. I disremember.

16. Q. And how many tickets there were with no name on for Congress you do not remember?—A. I do not think there was any. There was no ticket with no name on for Congress.

17. Q. How did Mr. English run in that precinct?—A. Mr. English ran, if my memory serves me right, about with the ticket. I could not say exactly, because I did not charge my memory with it or expect to keep it.

18. Q. That is precinct No. 1 of Franklin Township?—A. Yes, sir.

19. Q. You don't remember what the vote was for Mr. English down there?—A. No, I do not. I did know. I had it all down at home somewhere, but I disremember just now.

JOHN WILSON.

CHARLES WEEBER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Charles Weeber; 27 years old; I work at the Woodburn-Sarven Wheel Company, and board at the Germania House, corner of South and Meridian streets.

2. Q. Where were you on the day of the election in November, 1882?—A. I was working at the polls.

3. Q. What precinct?—A. The precinct on South street, by Bryce's bakery.

4. Q. Do you know Mr. Wahle?—A. Yes, sir.

5. Q. Was he at that precinct that day?—A. Yes, sir.

6. Q. State his condition as to sobriety that day.—A. Well, he was sober. I think I took him to be a sober man. I did not notice anything about him. I did not notice but he was sober.

7. Q. Do you know Mr. Chris. Schoettle?—A. Yes, sir.

8. Q. Was he there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

9. Q. Who was the inspector at that precinct, if you know?—A. Mr. Hetherington was one.

10. Q. Do you know whether or not any affidavits were offered in support of Democratic voters to the inspector which were refused?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. Yes, sir.

11. Q. Did you see anything of that sort—did you see any such affidavits offered?—A. Yes, sir.

12. Q. What became of them?—A. They were refused. I do not know what they done with them; but they would not accept them.

13. Q. Were there any police at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

14. Q. Did they take any part in the election?

(Objected to.)

15. Q. Did they or did they not do any challenging?—A. Mr. Gerber was there, and he was taking considerable part in the election and helping to challenge and working at the polls generally.

16. Q. Anybody else?—A. I forget now. I believe Crane was there. There were policemen there off and on all day. Mr. Gerber was there, though, and he was working. He was standing with the deputy sheriff—Conway, I believe, is his name—at the side of the chute.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

17. Q. Did you ever attend an election down there before?—A. Yes, sir.

18. Q. How many times?—A. I have attended the elections there every time they have had an election for about five years.

19. Q. There are always police at the polls to preserve order at times of election?—A. Yes, sir; there was always some there.

20. Q. Who was that man whose vote was refused, after he had been sworn in and an affidavit had been made for him?—A. I do not recollect who the gentlemen were; I know there was some refused, and I do not know how many.

21. Q. How many were there refused?—A. I suppose there must have been five or six; I do not know.

22. Q. After affidavits were made out?—A. Yes, sir.

23. Q. Who were they made out by?—A. Mr. Schoettle made out some and Mr. Wahle made out others.

24. Q. And they were refused by the inspector on the ground that Mr. Wahle was drunk at the time?—A. Yes, sir; that is the reason they were refused by him.

25. Q. Were any of Mr. Schoettle's refused?—A. Yes, sir.

26. Q. How many?—A. Two or three.

26. Q. On what ground?—A. On the ground that he would not swear that he knew the man six months.

27. Q. Did he say he did or did not know him?—A. He knew him, but he did not know him that long.

28. Q. And Mr. Schoettle himself refused to swear him in. Did not he refuse to swear him in when he was informed that the man had to be a resident of the State for 6 months?—A. He went there to swear him in, but Mr. Hetherington told him he could not accept any affidavit unless he knew him six months, and he did not know any better.

29. Q. Did not he tell him that he had to know he was a voter to swear him in, and did not he tell him he did not know the man, and did not the inspector refuse to receive the affidavit of Mr. Schoettle afer Mr. Schoettle said he did not know the man?—A. He refused one that way, but he refused more because he did not know him six months.

30. Q. Was Mr. McDonald down there during the day?—A. Yes, sir.

31. Q. Did not Mr. McDonald say there, that Mr. Schoettle, to swear in a man, ought to have satisfactory evidence that he was a voter?—A. Yes, sir.

32. Q. And did not Mr. Schoettle after that refuse to swear that man in?—A. He refused to swear some man in.

33. Q. That particular man that was in controversy when Mr. McDonald was in the chute, and did not Mr. Schoettle after that controversy refuse to swear that man in?—A. Yes, sir.

34. Q. Did not he go away after that?—A. Yes, sir.

35. Q. Did not he go back afterwards?—A. No, sir; not that I remember of.

36. Q. Do not you remember of his coming back about 3 o'clock in the afternoon?—A. No, sir.

37. Q. And making some affidavits?—A. Not for the same man.

38. Q. But for other men?—A. Yes, sir.

39 Q. And he was there off and on all day?—A. Yes, sir.

40. Q. Swearing in voters?—A. Yes, sir.

41. Q. His affidavits were not all refused?—A. No, sir.

42. Q. Some of them were accepted?—A. Yes, sir.

42. Q. Those that were refused were refused upon the ground that he did know the men he was swearing in well enough to know that they were voters?—A. Some men he knew, and some he did not, and he offered to swear in one man on some other man's evidence that he was a voter, but he did not know and he would not swear it.

44. Q. He offered to swear in some man on the ground that bystanders said that they knew he was a voter?—A. Yes, sir.

15. Q. But Senator McDonald said he ought to have satisfactory evidence that he was a voter, and he did not swear him in?—A. That was one of them.

16. Q. Do you know anything about the condition of Mr. Wahle?—A. I saw him there; I thought he was sober.

17. Q. Do not you know he had been drinking?—A. He had a drink or two, but he had not had enough to be intoxicated.

18. Q. He did not show it?—A. No, sir.

19. Q. How do you know he had been drinking?—A. I say he may have had a drink.

20. Q. Do not you know from his appearance and conduct that he had had a drink?—A. No, sir; not by his conduct.

21. Q. And was not the vote he attempted to swear in refused on the ground that he was intoxicated?—A. Yes, sir; it was.

22. Q. Do you know whether those policemen you spoke of took any active part in politics, or were on duty as policemen?—A. There was Mr. Gerber.

23. Q. Do you know whether he was on duty?—A. I know he is a policeman.

24. Q. He was not on duty that day, was he?—A. I do not know whether he was on duty that day or not.

25. Q. Neither he nor Mr. Crane were on duty that day, were they?—A. I do not know whether they were or not.

26. Q. Do not you know that they did not have their badges on their coats at all?—A. I do not know.

27. Q. Did not they say they were not policemen that day?—A. I did not hear they said that.

28. Q. Did they make any effort that day, as policemen, to preserve order?—A. No, sir; I think not.

29. Q. There were other policemen who were on duty that day?—A. I did not notice any one saying a word in disturbance. I did not see any policemen preserve order that day.

30. Q. There was no disturbance there?—A. There was disturbance there.

31. Q. What time?—A. During the day; quarreling off and on; not fighting, but quarreling.

32. Q. There is always some quarreling there?—A. Yes, sir.

33. Q. Was there any more that day than there had been at other elections?—A. No, sir; not exactly.

34. Q. Was there any disturbance there at all unusual that day?—A. I believe not.

35. Q. Did you see the police threaten to arrest anybody there that day?—A. I do not remember as I did.

36. Q. Did you see them order anybody away from the polls?—A. No, sir.

37. Q. Did you see them order anybody out of the chute?—A. I do not know how that was; I believe he did, but I could not say who it was, or how it was.

38. Q. The challengers frequently asked people to get out of the chute and to get out of the way of voters as they were coming up?—A. Well, yes.

39. Q. Was there anything more than that there?—A. Sometimes men would come up the chute and they would not accept their votes, and they would be quarreling there, and they done that several times.

40. Q. And when there were other men coming up to vote there?—A. Yes, sir.

41. Q. You could not tell from the appearance of things whether men were put out of the chute for any other purpose, except to let other voters in?—A. When a man would come up to vote they would argue his case, and they would make them get out of the way.

42. Q. Is it not a fact that they were told to get out of the chute so that other people could get to vote?—A. There was a good many in the evening that would not get out of the chute at all.

43. Q. Were not men standing there to vote when they were told to get out?—A. Yes, sir.

44. Q. There were men standing there waiting to get up and vote?—A. Yes, sir; along in the evening, towards the last, and about time for the polls to close, they did not order them out of there. They let them stand in there a little before six o'clock, and they would argue over some man to fool away time.

45. Q. Were any of those men challenged?—A. They could not challenge them because they could not get up far enough to vote.

46. Q. Was the chute full?—A. The chute was full, and they were up there arguing late in the evening.

47. Q. Challenged on both sides?—A. Challenged on both sides all day.

48. Q. Was there any more challenged on one side than the other?—A. I believe there was a good deal more on the Republican side.

49. Q There was more on the Republican side than the Democratic side?—A. About 2 to 1, I suppose.

50. Q. That is a Democratic precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

51. Q. And went Democratic?—A. I forget just how it went. It went Democratic, but I cannot tell how much.

52. Q. Every man, then, who was sworn in was received, you think, except five or six; I mean every man who offered an affidavit that he was a voter, or some one made an affidavit for him, was permitted to vote except five or six, you think?—A. Yes, sir.

53. Q. Can you recollect more than two—one of Mr. Schoettle and one of Mr. Wahle—can you recollect more than a single vote sworn in at the time Mr. McDonald told was there, and who left after Mr. McDonald told him what knowledge or information he ought to have before he swore a vote in; do you remember Mr. Schoettle swearing in any other man, or attempting to, whose vote was refused?—A. I believe Mr. Schoettle wanted to swear in about four votes who were refused on different grounds.

54. Q. Do you know any one of them?—A. I do not know their names.

55. Q. Do you know the name of this man Mr. Schoettle offered to swear in?—A. I do not.

56. Q. Do you know where they work—any of them?—A. I do not.

57. Q. You do not know whether they voted in that precinct or not?—A. No, sir.

58. Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

59. Q. And you were working there for the Democratic party that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

60. Q. You say that late in the evening that the chute got jammed and the voters could not get up. Were those Democratic or Republican voters?—A. I do not recollect who was in front; but there was a few fellows in front who would not get out and let the others, back, vote. I believe there was one challenged and they were fooling with him, and they had an affidavit made out and I do not know whether it was accepted or rejected; but there were some back of me that wanted to vote.

61. Q. Were those Republicans outside?—A. I think they were most of them Democratic at the rear end. There was three or four Democrats, I know.

62. Q. Do you know what was the character of the voters in the chute?—A. At the head of the chute?

63. Q. Yes, sir.—A. I cannot tell you. I know that we lost a few votes at the end that we could not get through because the chute was full.

64. Q. Mr. Peelle said to you that Senator McDonald went on and said that a man must know so and so. Did not Mr. McDonald say that a party could swear in a voter though he did not know his name if he knew he lived in the precinct? Was not that his statement? And did not Mr. McDonald say, in explaining the law, that a property-holder could swear in a voter although he did not know his name if he knew he lived in the precinct as such and knew he was a voter?

(Objected to as leading, and for the reason that the witness has already said what Senator McDonald did say.

A. I could not say the words that Senator McDonald did say exactly, but he explained it to us there. I was standing by.

65. Q. Then you do not recollect the language that Senator McDonald did use?—A. Not exactly; but inasmuch as I understood by it he said that a man must know a man, and he could swear him in.

66. Q. Know him, or know his name?—A. Know him.

67. Q. There was an affidavit offered at that time, was there not?—A. Yes, sir.

68. Q. Was that affidavit refused?—A. It was refused.

69. Q. The affidavit was offered by whom?—A. Mr. Schoettle.

70. Q. Did not he leave after the refusal of that affidavit?—A. Yes, sir; he left.

71. Q. When was it that this trouble about refusing affidavits commenced; was it in the morning or afternoon?—A. It was in the forenoon. I could not say.

72. Q. Could you be certain?—A. I could not say.

73. Q. Are you certain about the statement you made with reference to the time this occurred—whether it was in the afternoon or forenoon?—A. I could not say what time of day it was. I was there all day.

74. Q. Do you know where Mr. Wahle lives?—A. I do not exactly know where he lives I know him when I see him, and he used to have a shop on Delaware street; that is where I got acquainted with him.

75. Q. Do you say there were only five or six affidavits refused, or that you saw only five or six affidavits refused?—A. I saw about that many.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

76. Q. Was you there at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

77. Q. Right there in the precinct?—A. That is, I was around there within about a square walking up and down there.

78. Q. Do you know William Buehrig?—A. Yes, sir.

79. Q. What is his business?—A. A saloon man.

CHARLES WEEBER.

By agreement of the parties, a further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Thursday, December 20, 1883.

THURSDAY, December 20, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

THOMAS KEARNEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Thomas Kearney; age, 36 years; residence, 206 West Washington street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

2. Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. In this city, about 16 years.

3. Q. What ward do you reside in?—A. In the thirteenth ward.

4. Q. Did you reside in that ward at the time of the November election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

5. Q. Did you hold any position in that ward?—A. Yes, sir; I was county committeeman.

6. Q. For that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I was county committeeman for the whole ward and appointed the committeeman for the other precinct.

7. Q. Did you attend the election there?—A. Yes, sir.

8. Q. What precinct?—A. The second precinct.

9. Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

10. Q. Do you know Mr. Samuel E. Perkins?—A. Yes, sir.

11. Q. Was he there that day?—A. Yes, sir; he was there all day.

12. Q. I will ask you if you know what political ticket Mr. Perkins was working for that day?

(Objected to as not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee, and for the further reason that the question as to how Mr. Perkins voted, when he was on the stand, was asked by the counsel for the contestant, and answered by Mr. Perkins, that he voted for Mr. English and the Democratic ticket, and the question was then withdrawn by the counsel for the contestant.)

A. A mixed ticket, sir; he was working against Mr. English, and against Mr. Lemon particularly, and furthermore he was willing to trade off the whole business for a vote for Mr. Peelle.

THOMAS KEARNEY.

CHARLES A. ALBERSTNIER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Charles A. Alberstnier; 492 South Meridian street, Indianapolis, Indiana; 26 years of age.
2. Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. All my lifetime.
3. Q. Were you in this city on the 7th day of November, 1882, at the time of the November election?—A. Yes, sir.
4. Q. Where were you?—A. 492 South Meridian street, in the twenty-fourth ward.
5. Q. Did you attend that election that day?—A. Yes, sir.
6. Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. Clerk.
7. Q. You are a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.
8. Q. You were Democratic clerk at what precinct?—A. The twenty-fourth ward, second precinct.
9. Q. I will ask how the number of names on the tally-sheet and poll-book at that precinct corresponded with the number of tickets you put in the book?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. To my knowledge they corresponded when they were summed up, but there was one or two tickets thrown out in order to make it correspond; but I do not know what tickets they were, or anything of that kind.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

10. Q. You do not know how the vote on Congressman stood?—A. No, sir; I do not remember, but I did at that time.
11. Q. You do not remember now whether there was more votes for Congress counted than there were tickets in the boxes?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect; I had it down on a piece of paper when I left the polls to tell the boys how it came out.
12. Q. Was there not five or six tickets thrown out there?—A. No, sir; there was not. There was either one or two.
13. Q. Were they not Republicans?—A. I do not know whether they were Republican or Democratic.
14. Q. Do not you know about that?—A. No, sir.
15. Q. Have you any recollection upon that subject?—A. No, sir.
16. Q. You remember nothing about how the votes stood?—A. I did then, but I do not know now.
17. Q. You are testifying not to what you know now, but what you knew then, or have been informed?—A. To what I know now.
18. Q. Then you do not know anything about it now?—A. About what?
19. Q. About how the number of votes stood with the number of ballots?—A. I said they corresponded as I summed it up.
20. Q. You said you could not tell whether there was more votes in the box for Congressman than there were ballots for Congressman?—A. That is not what I said; I said the tally sheets did not correspond with the number of tickets in the box, so we threw out one or two to make it correspond.
21. Q. On what vote?—A. I do not know.
22. Q. You do not know whether that was on the vote for Congressman or not?—A. No, sir.
23. Q. And I understood you to say you did not know anything about how the vote for Congressman stood?—A. That is correct.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

24. Q. When Mr. Peelle asked you about how the vote for Congressman stood, did you understand him to ask you about the number of votes?—A. Yes, sir; that is what I understood.
25. Q. Were not tickets thrown out on the entire list of candidates on the ticket?—A. I do not know.

Mr. PEELLE. You still insist that you do not know how the vote for Congress stood as compared with the number of ballots?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

CHAS. A. ALBERSTNIER.

FRED. GROSSART, being first duly sworn (by the left hand), testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

1. Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Fred. Grossart; age, 28; residence, 214 South Meridian street; place of business, 200 South Meridian street.
2. Q. Are you a Democrat?—A. Yes, sir.
3. Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Since 1877.
4. Q. Were you in this city at the November election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I was.
5. Q. What precinct?—A. Seventeenth ward, second precinct.

6. Q. Were you there that day?—A. Most of the day; yes, sir.
7. Q. Do you know a Mr. Wahle?—A. Yes, sir; I know him.
8. Q. What was his condition as to sobriety that day?
(Objected to as not rebuttal.)
A. Well, while I see him, he was sober.
9. Q. Do you know Mr. Schoettle?—A. Yes, sir.
10. Q. Do you know whether Mr. Schoettle owns real estate there?
(Objected to as not rebuttal of any evidence brought out by the contestee.)
A. Yes, sir; he does.
11. Q. Do you know whether Mr. Wahle owns any real estate there?—A. I think he does; I would not be positive, but it is claimed by the old citizens there that he does.
(Objected to for the reason that the record is the best evidence as to the title, and for the further reason that it is not rebuttal.)
12. Q. Did you watch the vote there part of the time during the day?—A. Yes, sir; I watched pretty closely.
13. Q. Do you know whether any affidavits were offered there in behalf of Democratic voters who had been challenged?—A. Yes, sir.
14. Q. Were they accepted or rejected?—A. Rejected.
15. Q. How many that you know of?—A. While I was there, there were five or six; five, I am positive, and I think it was six, rejected in my presence while I was there.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

16. Q. What time of day did you see Mr. Wahle?—A. I see Mr. Wahle there towards noon.
17. Q. Did you see him any during any other time?—A. No, sir; not that I know of, because I was once in awhile on one corner or on the other corner, and the greatest time I was there I saw him, in the forenoon, towards noon.
18. Q. You did not see him in the afternoon?—A. I did not see him in the afternoon.
19. Q. You do not know what his condition was in the afternoon?—A. No, sir.
20. Q. Was one of the affidavits made out rejected?—A. Yes, sir; as far as I know.
21. Q. Was it not rejected on account of his being drunk?—A. That was because the inspector claimed he was full.
22. Q. Did you see Senator McDonald down there?—A. I saw him towards evening.
23. Q. Was he there once in the chute when Mr. Schoettle had an affidavit prepared to swear a man in?—A. Yes, sir.
24. Q. And the inspector refused that affidavit?—A. Yes, sir.
25. Q. Did not he ask Mr. Schoettle whether he knew the man he was swearing in?—A. I am not positive whether he put that question to him or not.
26. Q. Did you hear Senator McDonald say that a man ought to have satisfactory evidence that a man was a voter to swear him in?—A. I cannot swear to that.
27. Q. Did you hear Senator McDonald say anything upon that subject?—A. I heard him make several remarks.
28. Q. What was the substance of the remarks?—A. The substance was there was no cause for rejection where a man was a legal voter, and could prove that he was a legal voter; and he did not see why the inspector refused Mr. Schoettle's affidavit.
29. Q. Did not he state, in the presence of the crowd, that a man to swear in another man's vote ought to know that the man was a legal voter?—A. I do not know whether he made that remark.
30. Q. Did Mr. Schoettle leave the chute before or after Mr. McDonald made that statement?—A. I would not swear to that, but I think he left after the remark.
21. Q. Mr. Schoettle left the chute after Mr. McDonald made the statement, whatever it was, he made?—A. Yes, sir.

T. C. GROSSART.

JOSEPH T. MAGNER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I wish you would look at the paper I now show you and see if that is the certificate made by you to that document.
(Objected to as not rebuttal.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You are the city clerk of Indianapolis?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON: I offer that as a part of the deposition of the witness.
(The document will be found attached to this deposition, as a part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. All that you certify to is to the number of men on the pay-roll for a certain time?—A. Yes, sir; this is simply a pay-roll.

Q. For a month?—A. No, sir; 15 or 16 days.

Q. Whether or not a particular man or another were released by their chief from duty on the day of the election; you know nothing about that?—No, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Do you pay policemen at the end of each month, or at the middle and the end?—A. The middle and the end.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Policemen are frequently excused, from various causes, that are not off the pay roll?—A. That is not in my department.

Q. Don't you know they are frequently excused from some cause, and their name still appear on the pay-roll?—A. Yes, sir; I know they are frequently excused.

Q. And they get their pay just the same, do they not?—A. No; I do not know that to be a fact.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are a Republican, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

City Clerk.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 1. Deposition of Jos. T. Magner. P. C. Hendricks.

JOHN CARLON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name.—A. John Carlon.
Q. Your age and residence?—A. Age, 44; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.
Q. You are the same Mr. Carlon that testified in chief?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. In that examination you testified that you had been in the printing business for a number of years?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 4, to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public, and I will ask you what is the material upon which that ticket is printed?—A. That is what we call a No. 2 book paper, of light weight.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket marked Exhibit No. 3, to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public, and headed "Republican ticket," and I will ask you what that material is?—A. I should say that that is a No. 1 book paper, sized and supercalendered. It might possibly be a flat paper. Yon cannot tell the difference between the two.

Q. What is flat paper?—A. Flat paper is the same as writing paper; we call it "folio," and "cap."

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Republican ticket," "State ticket." for governor, Albert G. Porter; for lieutenant-governor, Thomas Hanna, and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public; I will ask you what that is?—A. I should say that paper is a thin folio writing paper.

Q. Is it a writing paper?—A. It is soiled; it is pretty hard to tell; but I should say it was about a fourteen-pound folio, or a light cap.

(Objected to as not rebuttal. The ticket was offered in evidence as a part of the deposition of the witness, and will be found attached hereto, marked Exhibit No. 1. Its admission being objected to by the contestee as not proper rebuttal.)

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket"; for governor, Albert G. Porter; I will ask you if that is the same material as the one I have shown you.

(Objected to as not rebuttal)

A. That is about the same. This [indicating] is a little better finished—the one you have just handed me.

Q. Is not that due to the fact that it has not been handled?—A. Very likely, that has a great deal to do with it, but this paper is about the same as the other.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," with a flag on it, and reading: "For Governor Franklin Landers," marked Exhibit Z shown to J. A. Wildman; I will ask you what is the material upon which that is printed?—A. That is what we call No. 2 cheap book paper.

Q. I will show you a ticket headed "Democratic ticket;" for Governor Franklin Landers," with a flag on it; and I will ask you if that corresponds with it?—A. Yes, sir; that is the same paper.

(The ticket was offered in evidence and will be found attached to this deposition as a part thereof, marked Exhibit No. 2.)

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket;" for President, Winfield Scott Hancock, and marked Exhib t E to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you what is the material upon which that is printed?—A. That is No. 2, or a cheap book paper.

Q. I hand you the ticket marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, headed "Republican Ticket"; for President, James A. Garfield, and I will ask you what material that is printed on.—A. That is a pretty dirty sheet and it is pretty hard to tell; I should think this was a heavy book paper.

Q. I show you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket"; for President, James A. Garfield, and I will ask you, does that correspond with the exhibit just shown you?—A. No; the paper is different paper; it is a little different paper, or else this Exhibit F is dirty.

Q. Is it not true that the only difference is that one is dirty and the other is not?—A. I suppose it is the same kind of paper, only one is a little different color from the other.

Q. What sort of paper do you say it is?—A. That is flat paper; it is folio.

(The specimen was offered in evidence, and will be found attached hereto as a part of this deposition and marked Exhibit No. 3.)

Q. I call your attention to a ticket marked Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public; is that the ticket used by the Republicans in the last election?—A. I did not see anybody vote the ticket; I could not say it was the ticket that was used by them.

Q. Did you see that ticket at the polls?—A. I saw that ticket at the polls, or something similar to that.

Q. I show you Exhibit S, shown to I. S. Gordon, and marked Paul C. Hendricks, notary public; is that the Democratic ticket that was used November, 1882, at the last Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I ask you now to take these Democratic tickets that I have shown you—one marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, headed for secretary of state, John G. Shanklin; one headed for governor, Franklin Landers, with a flag on it, and marked Exhibit Z to J. A. Wildman's deposition, and one marked Democratic ticket: for President, Winfield Scott Hancock, and marked Exhibit E to William Wallace's deposition, and one headed Democratic ticket, for secretary of state, William R. Myers, and marked Exhibit S to Mr. Gordon's evidence—and I will ask you to compare them and state what dissimilarity, or what similarity, there is between the tickets as to the material upon which they are printed and their width.—A. They are paper No. 2, or a cheap quality of book paper. This (Exhibit S, referred to) is a little the best quality, but they are all the same.

Q. That is a little the best quality?—A. Yes, sir

Q. As to their relative thickness?—A. Three are about the same thickness. This [indicating] is a little lighter.

Q. The Democratic ticket marked Exhibit No. 4 is a little the lightest?—A. Yes, sir; these two [indicating] are the lightest.

Q. The Democratic ticket headed "Winfield Scott Hancock," and the Democratic ticket headed "John G. Shanklin" are a little the lightest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Per ream?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The others are similar?—A. Yes, sir; only a little bit heavier.

Q. Are they or are they not the same class of paper?—A. Yes, sir; it is the same class of paper. One is a little bit heavier than the other, and it is of a little different shade. I think that is brought on from old age.

Q. I would like for you to measure the width of those tickets.—A. They are all three inches, or intended for that, I suppose; that one [indicating] is not quite three inches.

Q. That is the Winfield Scott Hancock ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much does it lack?—A. About one-sixteenth, I judge.

Q. The Democratic ticket No. 4 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell is three inches?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Democratic ticket voted in 1882 for William R. Myers, marked Exhibit S to deposition of Mr. Gordon, is how much?—A. Three inches.

Q And the Democratic ticket with the flag at the head of it, marked Exhibit Z, is how much?—A. That is about three inches and a quarter, I should judge.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the Republican ticket, Exhibit No. 3, headed "Republican ticket, for secretary of State, Isaac S. Moore," and Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, headed "Republican ticket, for governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and the national Republican ticket for James A. Garfield, and marked Exhibit No. 6, to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, and I will ask you to compare those tickets as to material, and state whether there is any difference in the material upon which those tickets are printed?—A. I should say this was No. 1 sized and supercalendered book.

Q. That is Exhibit 3 to D. M. Ransdell's deposition?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. No. 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams is what?—A. I should judge that was a kind of a plate paper.

Q. Exhibit C to the the deposition of William Wallace, as compared with the others, is what?—A. It is about 14 pound folio. It looks to me that it is writing paper.

Q. Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, as compared with the other Republican tickets, is what?—A. It is dirty; and, as I remarked before, I could not hardly tell. That looks like it was a No. 2, or some kind of book paper.

Q. The ticket, you said a while ago, was flat paper?—A. That is the other one I showed you.

Q. That was made an exhibit to your evidence?—A. The other one was—the one I said was flat paper, but different color from this.

Q. You mean the other ticket corresponding with that?—A. The other ticket the size of this; not this one.

Q. The exhibit I showed you, headed "Republican ticket," James A. Garfield for President, that specimen was made an exhibit to your evidence you say is a little different from the Republican ticket for James A. Garfield for President, which is exhibit No. F to the deposition of William Wallace?—A. Yes, sir; it seems to be.

Q. Now, as to weight and thickness, how do these Republican tickets correspond with each other?—A. These four?

Q. Yes, sir?—A. There is a great difference between the thinnest and thickest of them.

Q. How do they compare between themselves as to uniformity with the Democratic tickets, as to uniformity between themselves?—A. There is no uniformity between any of these four Republican tickets; they are all of different thicknesses, and different grades of paper.

Q. Measure the width of these four Republican tickets, and state what it is?—A. This ticket [indicating] is about one thirty-second of an inch over three inches.

Q. That is Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of Mr. Ransdell?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Republican ticket marked Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of H. C. Adams, is what?—A. Three inches.

Q. And the Republican ticket voted for James A. Garfield, and marked Exhibit F, is how much?—A. That is about two inches and three-quarters.

Q. About a quarter of an inch less than three inches?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Republican ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, is what width?—A. That is two inches and three-quarters.

Q. Now, I ask you as to the appearance and finish of the Republican tickets, as compared between themselves, and the finish and appearance of the Democratic tickets; what is the difference, if any, and how do they compare?—A. The difference in the Democratic tickets is very slight; there may be a little difference in the color, but there is a great deal bigger difference between the Republican tickets. The Republican tickets are from 14-pound folio, up to—I should judge, plate paper.

Q. What is the effect of super-sizing paper; you said that the Republican paper was super-sized?—A. That puts an extra finish on it.

Q. What effect does it have upon the appearance?—A. It has the appearance of a glossy, hard finish.

Q. I will ask you if you have examined recently a treatise published in Indiana, called "Buskirk's Practice"; have you examined it to see what kind of paper it is on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I ask you to look at this ticket headed "Republican ticket," marked Exhibit 6 to the deposition of H. C. Adams, and state what difference there is, if you know, between the material upon which the Republican ticket is printed and the material upon which "Buskirk's Practice" is printed.—A. This book [the book in question was handed to the witness] is printed on a good quality of No. 2 book paper, and the ticket is printed on plate paper.

Q. I ask you as to the difference in the thickness of the two?—A. There is a great deal of difference in the thickness of the two.

Q. What is the difference in the weight?—A. This paper of "Buskirk's Practice" weighs, I should think, about 60 or 70 pounds to the ream.

Q. What does that Republican ticket weigh?—A. That is 28 by 42 in size.

Q. And that Republican ticket?—A. Depends upon the size.

Q. Taking it the same size?—A. I should judge it would weigh 115 or 120 pounds—almost one-half more.

Q. You said just now that one was thicker than the other; which did you mean was the thickest?—A. I mean the ticket.

Q. Did you ever examine any of Houghten, Mifflin & Co.'s red-line publications?—A. I examined one of them; yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you what is the difference in the thickness of the paper upon which those red-line editions of the books of that firm are printed and that Republican ticket just shown you?

(Objected to as not rebuttal, and for the further reason that the book testified to by Mr. Merril has not been identified by name.)

A. This Republican ticket is a great deal thicker than the paper in that book. Looking at the book, I would judge it was a very light, super-calendered paper. I saw it at Mr. Yohn's when I came up, and it was a very thin, light paper.

Q. Calling your attention to Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of W. O. Anderson, being the price-list of Chatfield & Woods, I ask you to look at the catalogue of sizes of their book papers; and I will ask you if book papers are sold, or if you find in the catalogue of prices there any grade of book paper of size 19 by 24?—A. No, sir; I know there is not, without looking over the catalogue. It is not in the trade, and it is not a regular size.

Q. Do catalogues agree on that subject?—A. Generally.

Q. Is book paper sold in the trade 19 by 24?—A. No, sir; not in that size.

Q. Do you know the reason of that?—A. I do not know; it is a size that is never used without——

Q. Never mind; I will not ask you any further; I know the reason, and I thought you did?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. I will ask you if there are not regular sizes of paper for printing books?—A. Regular sizes of paper; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know the sizes of books; what they are called in the molds?—A. No, sir; I do not. I know the sizes of the paper.

Q. What are the sizes of the paper?—A. 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 25 by 38, 28 by 42, are the book-paper sizes.

Q. Is it not true that the sizes of book paper are cut to fit, in folding, the size of the book; for example, from "octavo," "duodecimo," quarto, &c., that they cut the sheets for the sizes, in printing?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any size in the manufacture of books such that you can fold paper 19 by 24, and print on that size, that you know of?—A. No, sir; I never saw one that I know of; there may be some books.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I hand you a specimen of ticket which was just handed you by Mr. Wilson, headed "Democratic ticket. For Governor, Franklin Landers." Is that one of the tickets used by the Democrats in this city in 1880?—A. I do not remember about that.

Q. Do you see where it is punched there with a hole in it, as being taken from the file?—A. I could not swear to it.

Q. What kind of paper is that?—A. Cheap No. 2 book paper; cheap, light paper. (Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of the witness.)

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did you ever see that ticket before, which Mr. Peelle just handed you, voted for Franklin Landers?—A. I could not say.

Q. Do you know who printed that ticket?—A. I believe I printed that ticket.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit Z, already shown you, to Mr. Wildman's deposition, headed "Democratic ticket," with a flag on it, for Franklin Landers; do you recollect that "flag ticket," as it is called?—A. No, sir; I never saw that before to-day.

Q. Did you ever see this other ticket Mr. Peelle showed you, Exhibit No. 4 to your own deposition, headed "Democratic ticket" for Franklin Landers?—A. That kind of a ticket; yes, sir.

Q. What ticket is that?—A. That was in the year Shanklin and Landers run, two years ago.

Q. It was used in 1880, was it?—A. Yes, sir; I say Mr. Landers ran then.

Q. Did you print that ticket with a flag on it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recollect what time of day you got that smaller ticket out, which is marked as an exhibit to your deposition?—A. That I could not say; it has been so long ago that I could not remember that.

Q. Do you know which ticket was used on the day of the election, principally?—A. I suppose this [indicating] must be, because I never saw the flag ticket before to-day.

Q. When you say "this ticket," you mean Exhibit No. 4 to your own deposition?—A. Yes, sir.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 4 to deposition of John Carlon. P. C. Hendricks, N. P.

JOHN J. CURTIS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Your name, age, and residence.—A. John J. Curtis; age 27; residence 39 Ash street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. What is your politics?—A. I am a Republican.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am connected with Bowen, Stewart & Co., booksellers and paper dealers, and I have charge of the paper department there.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket marked Exhibit No. 1, to the deposition of John Carlon and headed "Republican ticket," for governor Albert T. Porter, and I will ask you to please state what that ticket is printed upon?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I would call that a cheap flat paper.

Q. What is flat paper?—A. Flat paper is writing paper; paper finished for writing on with ink.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of John Carlon headed "Democratic ticket," for governor Franklin Landers. Tell me, please, what material that ticket is printed on?—A. That is No. 2 book—a cheap grade of book paper.

Q. I call yonr attention to Exhibit No. 2 to John Carlon's deposition headed "Democratic Ticket," with a flag on it, and for Franklin Landers for governor, and I will ask you what material that is printed on?—A. I would call that a book paper.

Q. What number; do you know?—A. It is a better grade than the other; I do not think it comes for a better grade than No. 2 paper, though.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," John G. Shanklin, and marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of Mr. Ransdell, and I will ask you what material that is printed upon?—That is No. 2 book.

Q. What is Exhibit S to Mr. Gordon's deposition headed "Democratic Ticket?"—A. That is a book paper.

Q. What grade would you say that was?—A. With the ticket folded up that way it is pretty hard to tell whether it is a No. 1 or a No. 2. I would call that a good grade of No. 2. It should be perfectly smooth to tell.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket" for Winfield Scott Hancock, marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace; I will ask you what is that material, if you know, upon which that ticket is printed?—A. That is book paper.

Q. Do you know the number of that; could you tell what number of book paper that is?—A. I cannot tell, it is so soiled. It looks like a good No. 2.

Q. I hand you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and voted for James A. Garfield for President and Chester A. Arthur for Vice-President; what is the material on which that ticket is printed? And I also hand you Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of John Carlon headed "Republican ticket," national campaign, James A. Garfield, and you can compare the two; one of them is fresh and the other is soiled; and I hand you this ticket marked Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, for secretary of state Isaac S. Moore.—A. I believe I would call that a flat paper. This sample is so folded that I would have to compare them to see if they were the same ticket.

Q. And I now hand you the ticket marked Exhibit No. 3 to deposition of D. M. Ransdell, for secretary of state, Isaac S. Moore, and Exhibit 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, headed "Republican ticket," for secretary of state, Emanuel R. Hawn, and I will ask you to take the Republican tickets you just looked at, and state what difference there is, if any, in the bulk and quality of those four tickets; and in specifying, please name them as Exhibits so and so. I ask you as to the bulk and thickness of these tickets, how do they differ?—A. There is considerable difference in the paper used.

Q. How about it as compared with the Democratic tickets—the four which I have shown you; is there more difference between the Democratic tickets or more difference between the Republican tickets, respectively?—A. There is more difference in the weight of these Republican tickets; they vary in weight.

Q. How do the Republican tickets compare as to uniformity in width?—A. There are two of them about the same width, and there is a little over one-eighth of an inch difference between one of them and the others.

Q. Two of them correspond substantially in weight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the finish—the sizing—how do they compare?—A. Two of them are a flat paper finish.

Q. What is a flat paper finish?—A. An extra hard finish to use for writing paper, to write with ink.

Q. That gives it what is popularly termed a glazed finish?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What two are those?—A. Exhibit No. 3.

Q. That is, the national ticket for Garfield for President?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the State ticket for Governor Porter in 1880?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I ask you to take up these Democratic tickets, and compare the finish and the weight of the tickets to each other, and state what difference there is. I hand you four Democratic tickets already shown you, being the Democratic tickets headed "for Hancock," and the ticket for William R. Myers in 1882, and the ticket for Shanklin in 1878, and the Democratic ticket for Landers in 1880. I will ask you to compare those as to finish and weight, and say what disparity or uniformity there is.—A. These tickets are all book paper; they do not vary very much in weight.

Q. How about the finish?—A. The finish is about the same. There is a difference in color, because they have been run by different mills.

Q. Is that the result of time or is it the result of the original color?—A. That is the original color.

Q. Is it a shade or tint in the difference, or what is the difference?—A. They are all run for white paper, but there are different tints in what we call white paper.

Q. There is a difference in the tint of those papers?—A. Yes, sir; none of them would be called tinted paper; they are all white paper, but run by different mills.

Q. Do you know the size in which book paper is sold?—A. Yes, sir; I buy the book paper for the firm.

Q. What are the book paper sizes, according to the catalogue as you buy them?—A. 22 x 32, 24 x 36, 25 x 38, and 28 x 42; those are the common sizes.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Book paper may be cut in any size that is ordered, may it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are only speaking of the common sizes?—A. Yes, sir; the sizes we carry in stock.

Q. The size of book paper depends upon the size it is ordered, does it not?—A. A mill will make any size you want.

Q. How long have you been down there in Bowen, Stewart & Co's establishment in connection with the paper business?—A. I have been in the house 11 years, and I have had charge of the paper business about seven years.

Q. Are you in the employ of Mr. English in getting out the programmes for his theater?—A. Not in his employ; I have the privilege of putting the programme in his house for the space I give him in the programme.

Q. You have a contract for printing the programme for the English opera-house?—A. There is no contract.

Q. You get it out?—A. I publish it.

Q. You say you are a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You voted for Mr. English at the last election, did you not?

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant.)

Q. You voted for Mr. English at the last election, did you not?—A. I did not.

Q. Have you not so stated since the election?—A. Not that I remember of.

Q. Did you not so state to Mr. English himself?—A. I guess not.

Q. You say you did not vote for him?—A. I did not vote for him; no, sir.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You said a mill would make any size of book paper; but for books do they make paper 19 x 24, and do they keep that size for books, and do you find any such size in the catalogue of prices, 19 x 24? And in that connection I ask you to look over the price-list of Chatfield & Woods.—A. That is not a regular book size at all. We could not cut that out of regular size book paper at all. If it was 18 by 24 it would be half a sheet of book paper. It comes very near being half a sheet.

Q. Did you ever buy any book paper for books 19 x 24?—A. No, sir.

Q. Look at Chatfield & Woods' catalogue, which has been already referred to, and look at the book paper, beginning with page 9, and state whether there is any size 19 x 24.—A. No; there is no size 19 x 24.

Q. My attention has been called to the fact that I did not ask you the quality of this ticket headed "Republican ticket" "For secretary of state, Isaac S. Moore," and marked Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of D. M. Randsell; did you state what that ticket was made out of?—A. I call that a No. 1 book.

Q. Did I ask you to compare this ticket with the rest of them?—A. I do not think you did.

Q. What is that ticket headed: "Republican State ticket, For secretary of state, Emanuel R. Hawn," and marked Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I have seen a book paper as heavy as that. This is more of an imitation of the eastern plate paper.

Q. Mr. Peelln asked you just now something about a contract with Mr. English; does Mr. English pay you any salary for work you do for him?—A. He pays me nothing for it.

Q. Has Mr. English any control over that advertisement, or any interest in the profit of that advertisement?—A. No, sir.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have to get his permission to get out the program for his theater?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This Republican ticket voted in 1882 at the Congressional election—you say you have seen book paper as heavy as this?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you not a number of books on heavier paper in stock?—A. Yes, sir; but they are made on eastern plate mostly.

Q. You say this is a plate paper, and imitation of eastern plate?—A. It is not as good as eastern plate; I do not know where it is made. It would pass as a cheap plate paper and it could be sold as a book paper.

Q. Is it not more likely to be sold as a book paper?—A. I do not buy enough of it to answer that positively.

Q. Bowan & Stewart are not engaged in the publication of books?—A. No, sir; we only job the paper. We publish a few things.

Q. You have books down there with this kind of paper, in your establishment, heavier than that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a finer finish?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Are there many books printed on eastern plate paper or few? How is that?—A. There are not many books published on plate paper; they are all fine illustrated books, mostly for cut work.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Have you any books down there printed on paper heavier than this Republican ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. Yes, sir; we have.

Q. Without any illustration whatever, and simply the printed matter, on heavier paper than that?—A. We have some subscription books called "padded" books.

Q. Is not the recent work of Emerson, the Riverside edition, on heavier paper than that?—A. I could not answer that without comparing it.

Q. Have you ever examined that paper?—A. I have noticed it, but not closely. I do not think it is heavier, but it is heavy paper, though.

Q. Is it any thicker than that?—A. It is not a hard finish; it may be thicker; but I would have to have them together.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. What do you mean by "padded"?—A. It is a book without much printing in it, and in order to sell it well they make a thick volume of it by using thick paper.

Q. Are there many books of that kind?—A. Not many; generally subscription books to sell to farmers are made that way.

Q. Is it not true that most of those books are intended for illustrated books that they use that paper for?—A. On plate paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. It is used for fine books and illustrated books.

J. J. CURTIS.

By agreement of all the parties the further taking of these depositions was adjourned until Friday, December 21, 1883.

FRIDAY, December 21, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

WILLIAM F. FISH, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. William F. Fish; age, 39; residence, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Since 1859.

Q. What are your politics?—A. I am counted a Republican; a Republican scratcher sometimes.

Q. What is your business?—A. Printer.

Q. How long have you been in that business?—A. All my life, since I was 12 years old.

Q. You are connected with the Sentinel Company I believe; the Indianopolis Sentinel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your position in that company?—A. I am superintendent of the mechanical department.

Q. In that department do you have the handling and buying of paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to the ticket headed "Republican ticket," "For secretary of state, Isaac S. Moore," and marked Exhibit No. 3. to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, and I will ask you what is the material upon which that ticket is printed?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I would call that book paper. It may be flat. I would think it was a flat paper.

Q. About what would be the weight of that paper in sheets 25x38?—A. That paper would not come that size. In 17x22 it would be about 22 pounds.

Q. What would be the weight of it if it is cut 25x38, if in the size you have named it would weigh 22 pounds?—A. About 40 pounds; 40 to 45 pounds.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," "For secretary of state, John G. Shanklin," and marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of D. M. Randsell, and I will ask you what material that ticket is printed on?—A. If I was going to print on it I would call it Pittsburgh news.

Q. What would be the weight of that in sheets 25x38?—A. About 30 pounds.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Republican ticket" "For governor, Albert G. Porter" and marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and also a ticket marked Exhibit No 1 to the deposition of John Carlon, headed "Republican ticket," "For governor, Albert G. Porter," and I will ask you to look at those and state what material they are printed on?—A. I should think No. 1 was No. 1 book-paper.

Q. About what weight?—A. 25 x 38, 40 pounds, I should think. It is a hard finish.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. A slick surface and highly calendered.

Q. How about sizing. Is it sized or supersized?—A. I think that was sized.

Q. What is the difference between that and the Exhibit C to the deposition of Mr. William Wallace; are they or not the same tickets with the difference in the handling of them?—A. I should think they were the same ticket.

Q. I call your attention now to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," "For Governor, Franklin Landers," with a flag at the head, and marked Exhibit C, shown to J. A. Wildman, and I will ask you what material that is printed on?—A. I would think that was newspaper. It may be a No. 3 book.

Q. What would you say would be the weight of that, in sheets 25 x 38, per ream?—A. From 40 to 45 lbs.

Q. I hand you ticket headed "Democratic ticket," "For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace. It is somewhat used, but I will ask you what is the quality of the paper upon which that is printed?—A. Ordinary book paper.

Q. What is ordinary book paper?—A. A cheap book paper, a little better than news and No. 3.

Q. What would be the weight of that, in sheets 25 x 38?—A. 40 to 45 lbs.

Q. That ticket is aged and used?—A. Yes, sir; it is almost news; it is very soft.

Q. I will ask you to look at this ticket, headed "Republican ticket, national candidates, James A. Garfield for President," and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and I will ask you to state what material that is printed on, and I also call your attention to Exhibit 3 to the deposition of John Carlon, headed "Republican ticket," "James A. Garfield," and I ask you to compare them, and state if they are on the same material, and, if so, what material it is?—A. I should think they were different.

Q. You think they are different?—A. It seems to me so.

Q. Is not the difference due simply to the handlling and to the usage and rubbing, &c.?—A. I think not. I think the paper is different.

Q. What is the difference? What is the one that is marked as Exhibit F?—A. I should call that a heavy book paper.

Q. What grade?—A. No. 2.

Q. What would be the weight of it, 25 x 38?—A. I should think 75 pounds.

Q. What is the other, Exhibit No. 3 to John Calon's deposition?—A. It is a little harder finish book paper, perhaps 60 lbs. to the the ream, No. 1.

Q. Now, for the purpose of comparison, I call your attention to the ticket headed "Democratic ticket," Exhibit S, shown to I. S. Gordon, and I will ask you to state what that material is?—A. That is ordinary book paper.

Q. What grade?—A. No. 2.

Q. Do you recollect what election that was used at?—A. Two years ago, I suppose.

Q. In November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will show you a ticket headed "Republican ticket," State ticket, "For secretary of state, Emanuel R. Hawn," and marked Exhibit 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams, used in the election of 1882, and I will ask you to state what that ticket is printed on, and what is the material?—A. Have you any one that I can tear the corner of?

Q. Yes, sir; I think we have (handing witness a piece of paper).—A. I would think that is plate paper.

Q. I will ask you if you know what is the weight of that Democratic ticket that was used in November, 1882, sheets 25 x 38?—A. 40 to 45 pounds.

Q. What do you say is the weight of that Republican ticket used at the same election, sheets of the same size?

(The contestee objected to all the questions and answers in reference to the ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 as not rebuttal, being simply cumulative on the part of the contestant.)

Mr. WILSON. For the purpose of comparison. It is impossible to make a sensible comparison without ascertaining the weights and qualities.

Mr. PEELLE. I reply that the questions of the weights, having already been gone into in the making of his case-in-chief, he cannot now go into it.

A. I should think that is from 80 to 100 lbs. to the ream. I do not know the size in which that was cut, but it feels like 80 to the ream, from that to 100.

Q. I will ask you if you know the size in which book paper is cut and what size they are catalogued in the catalogue of prices of book paper?—A. I could give you a great many sizes from memory. The ordinary size is 25 by 38.

Q. Is there any size 19 by 24 of book paper?—A. No, sir; not unless it would be a very peculiar book.

Q. Have you a catalogue in your hands?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What catalogue is that?—A. The J. M. Butler Paper Company, of Chicago. If I may be allowed to state in regard to the testimony concerning book paper, I would say that in making a book we have paper cut the proper weight, and we have it made in sheets just to fit the book, and sometimes 24 by 36 and sometimes 23½ by 34.

Q. I will ask you to look at pages 16, 17, 18, and 19, which I believe cover the book papers in that catalogue which you have spoken of, and say if there is any book paper there size 19 by 24.

(Objected to for the reason that the book shows for itself.)

A. No, sir.

(The catalouge was put in evidence, and will be found attached to this deposition, as part thereof, and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. I will ask you to look at the plate papers, and see if there is any plate 19 by 24?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first one at the head of the list, is it not?—A. Size 19 by 24. There are 5 weights.

Q. Suppose you take a ream of paper, size 19 by 24, and it weighs 30 pounds, what would be the weight of the same paper in size 24 by 24? Could you approximate?—A. 24 by 24 and 19 by 24?

Q. Yes, sir. What is the ratio of the increase there?—A. Not over 5 pounds to the ream in that difference. That is only 5 inches of the narrower width, and 480 sheets would make it not over 5 pounds.

Q. If the paper 19 by 24 weighs 40 pounds per ream, what would be the weight of 25 by 38 per ream of the same paper? Do you know that? I ask for information.—A. You take that paper and suppose you flat it out 25 by 38.

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think it would make an ordinary book paper 45 pounds to the ream.

Q. I ask you to look at No. 1 sized and calendered plate, headed "19 by 24 inches," and say whether that is of the same quality; and it reaches 24 by 28, and the 19 by 24 is marked 40, and the other is 80; is that the ratio of the increase usually?—A. I should think that was about right.

Q. I will ask you to compare the Republican tickets between these and state what similarity there is of bulk and thickness; whether they are similar or dissimilar in appearance, quality, and width—the same tickets I have shown you a while ago.—A. They are dissimilar.

Q. To what extent?—A. To a great extent.

Q. Take the Democratic tickets which I have shown you and I will ask you the same question.—A. They are similar, except some are on news and some are on book, I should think. I might contradict myself; but three of them are on book paper and one on news.

Q. Is the news inferior or a good quality?—A. Ordinary news, I should call it—No. 1 news.

Q. Is the book a good or poor quality?—A. Ordinary.

Q. How does it compare in point of similarity with the Republican tickets as between themselves?—A. I could not say that they would compare.

Q. Are they more similar or less similar as compared between themselves than the Republican tickets as between themselves?—A. They are less similar.

Q. The Republican tickets are less similar?—A. The Democratic tickets are more alike than the Republican tickets.

Q. Are those Democratic tickets on plain white paper, as known in the trade, or what are they?—A. I would suppose they were once. There are two of them faded.

Q. Are the Republican tickets plain white paper; I showed you before them?—A. They would pass as plain white paper, except the one I designate as plate paper.

Q. I ask you if you were to take the Democratic tickets I show you now for Franklin Landers and the Republican ticket for Porter, and they were both used, as the contestee says, at the same election, and take those and hold them; and then show you the tickets, one headed "Republican ticket" and the other "Democratic ticket," that have been already shown to you, the one for Isaac Moore and the other for Shanklin, and they were also used at the same election, as the contestee says; and I show you the two tickets that you have already looked at, used in November, 1882, the Democratic and Republican tickets, which you have seen; and I also show you the two national tickets used in the national campaign, and I ask you are there any two tickets there as easily distinguished as the two tickets used in November, 1882, at the Congressional election, which I now show you, when folded as voters ordinarily fold them and hold them in their hands when they go to vote?—A. Are they as easily distinguishable—what, of those you gave me, as the two?

Q. Yes, sir; the ones used in November, 1882.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. Those two tickets are easily distinguishable and these [indicating] are not.

Q. You mean those two Republican tickets used in the Congressional election in November, 1882, are easily distinguished, and the two voted in 1878 are not?—A. I would think not, except in the fading of the color.

Q. That is a faded color?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Take the other two tickets, the Republican Presidential ticket and the Democratic Presidential ticket, and compare those as when folded?—A. They are distinguishable.

Q. Are they as easily distinguished as those tickets used at the November election, 1882?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Now, take the tickets you have there voted for Governor Porter and Frank Landers, and fold them, and I will ask the same question, by way of comparison with the two tickets used November, 1882. Fold them as the voter ordinarily folds them and holds them in his hands.—A. They are not so easily distinguishable.

Q. The two tickets voted for Porter and Landers are not so easily distinguished as the two used at the November election, 1882?—A. I should think not.

Q. I ask you to look at this Exhibit W to the cross-examination of Henry Salsbury, and I will ask you to state what is the material of that?—A. Ordinary book paper.

Q. What would be the weight per ream in sheets 25 by 38?—A. 45 pounds.

Q. Look at Exhibit X to the cross-examination of Henry Salsbury, and state what that is.—A. I should call that No. 1 news.

Q. What would be the weight of that in sheets 25 by 38?—A. 35 pounds.

Q. I call your attention to the specimen marked "shown to C. L. Devine, Philadelphia." What is that?—A. That is blotting-paper.

Q. Is it plain white blotting-paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are now employed by the Indianapolis Sentinel?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. John C. Shoemaker is the president of that concern, is he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are in his employ?—A. Yes, sir; I am in his employ.

Q. I hand you ticket marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of John Carlon, and I will ask you to take that ticket, and I also rehand you the ticket marked Exhibit C to the deposition of J. A. Wildman, being the Democratic ticket, with the flag on, "For governor, Franklin Landers," and voted at the same election as the first ticket I handed you, in 1880, and I will ask you to examine those two tickets, and state whether or not those two are distinguishable?—A. They are, sir.

Q. Are they not more so than these tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882 and more readily distinguishable, whether folded or unfolded?—A. They are as to the size.

Q. When folded and being voted, would they not be more readily distinguishable than the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. They would if the width was observed.

Q. Compare the Democratic ticket marked Exhibit 4 to the deposition of John Carlon with the ticket which I now hand you, marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, being the Republican tickets voted for Governor Porter in 1880, and state whether or not those two tickets cannot be more readily distinguished at the polls when folded and in the hands of the voter than the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. They would as to the width, but not as to the bulk.

Q. How much difference is there in the weight between the ticket "No. 4," voted for Frank Landers—the smallest ticket—and the ticket voted for Governor Porter in 1880?—A. I should not think there was any.

Q. In the tickets, I mean?—A. I should think they were twice as heavy.

Q. How much difference is there between the weight and bulk of the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882—the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. I should think the Republican ticket was twice as heavy.

Q. Then the difference in the weight between the ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 and those voted at the State election for governor in 1880 is about the same. Is that correct?—A. No; I said in these two there was a difference there.

Q. The Republican and Democratic tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882—the Republican ticket would be twice as heavy as the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Republican and Democratic tickets voted at the State election for governor in 1880, the Republican ticket is twice as heavy and large?—A. Yes, sir; it is twice as large.

Q. Is it not as long again, and considerable wider?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are not the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882 the same length and width substantially by sight?—A. By sight they look the same width.

Q. How do you distinguish those Republican and Democratic tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. By the material on which they are printed.

Q. And the bulk?—A. Yes, sir; if they are folded up.

Q. Would it not be more readily told on the tickets voted for governor in 1880 the same way by sight and by bulk?—A. No more so, only in a general way as to size and as to length when folded as I would vote that ticket.

Q. Could you not more readily distinguish that Democratic ticket voted for governor in 1880 from the Republican ticket than you could the Republican from the Democratic ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why?—A. Because these are bulkier.

Q. Is there not more difference in the bulk of these tickets voted for governor in 1880 than between the tickets voted in 1882, when folded as men ordinarily fold them when voting?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say the difference in the weight of them is about the same?—A. Yes, sir; about the same.

Q. Is that Republican voted in 1882 on paper?—A. Technically it is.

Q. Is it plain white paper?—A. It might be called plain white paper.

Q. If it were unruled is it not plain white paper, and comes in sheets as paper ordinarily comes?—A. No, sir; if a person would come into the office and attempt to sell me that paper as plain white paper and show me that sample in a sheet—it would be handed to me as one full sheet of paper—I would readily see that it was not and could not be ordinary plain book paper.

Q. Do you understand simply that plain white paper must be book paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. That is paper, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not plain white paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does not that make plain white paper?—A. That makes plain white paper.

Q. Is there any such thing known in trade as plain white paper?—A. There is always a distinguishing word. Before you would say plain white paper you would say plain white plate paper, plain white book paper, plain white plate paper, or plain white news paper.

Q. The same term that is applicable to news and flat paper is applicable to plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; except that plate-paper does not come in colors ordinarily.

Q. It is usually white?—A. Yes, sir; and used for plates.

Q. Then is it not more likely to be plain white than the other?—A. Yes, I should think it was for that reason.

Q. Do you know what western plate-paper is?—A. I could not say that I do.

Q. Is there any such thing in this catalogue as western plate-paper? I mean the catalogue you presented a moment ago from the Chicago house.—A. It is not indexed in this catalogue.

Q. Can you find anywhere such a thing as western plate-paper in that catalogue?—A. No, sir; they give the manufacturer's name.

Q. Simply as plate-paper?—A. "Plate-paper made by."

Q. Can you tell what kind of plate-paper they make?—A. No, sir; I never heard of them.

Q. Did you ever see any western plate-paper?—A. No, sir; not that I am aware of

Q. You do not know what western plate-paper is?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the difference between western plate-paper and book-paper?—A. I would know the difference between plate-paper and book-paper.

Q. The western plate-paper?—A. No, sir; I do not think I would.

Q. If there is any difference between western plate-paper and book-paper you do not know it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Take that Republican ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882 again. Have you not seen books printed on paper as heavy as that?—A. Yes, sir; I think I have.

Q. Have you not printed them at the Sentinel Company frequently?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you not bound books there in which the printed matter is heavier than that?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. On heavier paper than that?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is the heaviest paper, size 25 by 38?—A. That we have used?

Q. I am not asking you what you use in that question. What is the heaviest book-paper?—A. I presume you could have it made as heavy as you would like, but for ordinary use 100 pounds is an excess.

Q. Is there any number one sized and supercalendered 120 pounds to the ream, size 32 by 44?—A. Yes, sir; but that is a large size.

Q. Would that be heavier paper than that paper?—A. No, sir; it would not be as heavy.

Q. As heavy as that Republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is No. 1, sized and supercalendered, on page 16 of this catalogue, 25 by 38, 100 pounds; would that be heavier than that?—A. No, sir; it would not be so heavy.

Q. Do you say that paper, size 25 by 38, weighs over 100 pounds to the ream?—A. Yes, sir; this paper, size 25 by 38, I should think would weigh 150 pounds.

Q. Suppose it only weighs 80 pounds to the ream, that size?—A. It would be a smaller size.

Q. Suppose it weighed 50 pounds, size 19 by 24; what would it weigh 25 by 38?—A. Not more than 50 and 45.

Q. Ninety-five pounds?—A. Yes, sir; it would weigh 45 to 50 pounds to the ream, 25 by 38.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. If this 19 by 24 weighs 100 pounds or 120 pounds to the ream——

Q. No, sir; I say if that paper, size 19 by 24, weighs 50 pounds per ream, what would that same paper weigh, size 25 by 38?—A. It would weigh very heavy; 150 pounds at least. If you take that same paper and increase the width, and let the thickness remain, it would weigh 150 pounds.

Mr. WILSON. You mean the Republican ticket of 1882?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. You think it would go three times heavier 25 by 38 than 19 by 24?—A. I do not know the weight of it.

Q. I give you the weight of it. Suppose it weighs 50 pounds, 19 by 24; what would it weigh 25 by 38, and I ask you to figure that up and see if you are not mistaken about that and see if it would not weigh less than 100 pounds to the ream.—A. The difference in the sheets would be 6 inches one way and 14 in the other, and it would hardly go 150, but it would go 100; Ishould think 100.

Q. Then there is book paper, size 25 by 38, that weighs 100 pounds or more per ream?—A. Yes, sir; it could be made any weight desirable.

Q. In the catalogue you have presented there is book paper that weighs that?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Take it and see if there is not a book paper of that size, 25 by 38, that weighs 100 pounds per ream.—A. Yes, sir; they so catalogue it.

Q. They do not pretend to catalogue anything there except the sizes that are commonly used?—A. I think not.

Q. Those are the common sizes of book paper in that catalogue?—A. One hundred pounds to the ream is unusual.

Q. Those are the common sizes that are in there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the common weight of book paper—that is, it is not such paper as is cut to order or made to order, but simply such sizes as are kept in stock?—A. They keep this in stock.

Q. Did you examine these tickets before you went upon the stand as a witness?—A. Yes, sir; I have seen them, and examined them.

Q. When did you examine them?—A. To-day; I have made it a custom, being in the printing business, to preserve tickets as they came out from election to election, and have, perhaps, 5 or 6 years back. I keep them for samples—all the tickets I get hold of in the city. We printed this ticket ourselves.

Q. Which one; that Democratic ticket No. 4, to the deposition of John Carlon?—A. Yes, sir; it seems to me I printed it at the Sentinel Company.

Q. Do you know who printed the Democratic ticket with the flag on it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?—A. It was printed by William Mitchell, at Greenfield.

Q. At whose instance was that printed, if you know?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. It was used by the Democrats here in that election in 1880, was it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. William Mitchell is the editor of the Hancock Democrat, is he not, in Hancock County?—A. Yes, sir; I might add it is also my business to look after these jobs, and I found out he printed them, because I did not get the job; I wanted them for my own company. I printed those tickets used in that election by order of Mr. Brown—I refer to the small ticket. My understanding is, we printed them for the city and county, and they were printed for the State outside; but I do not know anything about that, as I was not on the inside.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What is the ordinary weight of book paper; I mean by that what is the weight of book paper that is ordinarily used by the manufacturers of books?—A. There is more 25 by 38 than any other size.

Q. What weight is that ordinarily?—A. 45 pounds.

Q. And is 100 pounds to the ream an exceptional weight?—A. I never printed but one book in my experience on 100-pound paper.

Q. Where was that printed?—A. Here.

Q. How many books have you printed or had to do with?—A. I could not tell you.

Q. Many of them?—A. Lots of them.

Q. So it is an exception when a book is printed on paper 25 by 38, weighing 100-pounds?—A. Yes, sir; I only remember of one being printed at the Sentinel office in my experience on 100-pound paper.

Q. What sort of a book was that?—A. It is called the History of Indiana. We have hundreds of them.

Q. Is it illustrated?—A. Yes, sir; it is published by Morrow & Co., in the Vance Block.

Q. That is the only one in all your experience, and you have been in business a long time, that you ever printed, or had anything to do with the printing of, that was on 100-pound paper?—A. Yes; it was ordered for 100-pound paper, I remember very well.

Q. How many pages were there to the book?—A. There was probably 800 pages; somewhere along there.

Q. You stated that that ticket used at the election in 1880 by Porter and Landers—the smaller one marked as an exhibit to Mr. Carlon's evidence—was printed by you at the order and instance of Austin H. Brown?—A. I think that is correct.

Q. Has the Sentinel Company a job office connected with it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it do job work?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you if you knew what western plate-paper was, and if you knew the difference between western plate and book, and you said you did not know the difference. Do you know that there is a difference?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You do not know anything about western plate?—A. No, sir; on the word "Western" I do not.

Q. But you know there is a difference between plate paper and book paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that the Republican ticket is technically white paper. Is it not true that white blotting paper is white paper technically?—A. Yes, sir; but you have to put in the word "blotting" to make it other than white paper.

Q. When you speak of plate-paper as white you have got to put in the word "plate" to distinguish it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And plate paper is catalogued as plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that sense I ask you if the exhibit shown to C. L. Devine, marked "Philadelphia," if you would not call that, in that technical sense, plain white paper; in the technical sense in which you say the plate paper is plain white paper?—A. My answer would be on that as I answered the other.

Q. By the other you mean as to the Republican ticket voted in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; I would not call it plain white paper.

Q. Would you call the Republican ticket plain white paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. State what is the difference between that Democratic ticket for Franklin Landers, marked Exhibit 4, to the deposition of John Carlon, and the Democratic ticket with the flag at the head of it and the Democratic ticket used at that election which I have already shown you; what would be the difference in the weights of those two tickets when they were of the same size, 25 by 38 to the ream?—A. About 5 pounds to the ream, I should judge.

Q. So the difference in the weight and bulk referred to was owing to the difference in the size of the tickets—the difference which you have testified to was a difference in the size of the two tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

WM. F. FISH.

Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of W. F. Fish.—P. C. Hendricks, N. P.

(Omitted. See original, page 2511.)

AUSTIN DAUGHERTY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Austin Daugherty; age, 39; residence, Acton, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. Were you in your township in this county in November, 1882, at the time the Congressional election took place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at your precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct was that?—A. We call it the Acton precinct and it is known as No. 2, Franklin Township.

Q. How many voting places were there at that election in that township?—A. Two only.

Q. What capacity did you act in on that day?—A. Judge of the election.

Q. As Democratic judge?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was inspector?—A. Jonas Hamlin.

Q. I ask you if you recollect—I do not ask you for the numbers—but if you recollect the relationship between the number of tickets that you put in the box and sealed up according to law, when you got through with your count, and the number of names on the tally sheet and pool-book; did they correspond or was there a difference?—A. They corresponded exactly; I know from the fact that we counted them. They were counted in my presence, and probably I counted them myself.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Was the comparison of the vote on the State candidates or county candidates?—A. Oh, no. We counted the tickets and in footing up the tally—we always did that—we counted the tickets on the string to see that they corresponded with the votes cast with the candidates on the tally sheets.

Q. I asked you whether your comparison was on the State candidates, or whether it was on the county candidates; you do not pretend to say you compared the number of tickets voted with the names on the tally sheet with the names of the candidates?—A. No, sir; I do not remember that, but I remember we took the names—for instance on sheriff, or any particular one, and of course in the tally sheet we give the exact number of votes cast for any one candidate, and there were three candidates, I think, and we went through and we counted the tickets to see that there was as many tickets as there were votes cast.

Q. On what candidates?—A. I do not remember that we designated any particular one.

Q. Did you make any comparison on Congressman?—A. Yes, sir; I think we did.

Q. How many votes were there for Congressman?—A. As near as I can remember there was about 300 in our precinct, all told.

Q. What was the total vote in that precinct, all told?—A. About 300; I do not recollect exactly.

Q. You do not recollect what the vote was on Congressman?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. You say now you compared the number of votes counted for Congressman with the number of tickets registered on the poll-list?—A. We counted the tickets and compared them with the names registered on the poll-list.

Q. Did you do that as to Congressman?—A. I did not say we did.

Q. You could not tell whether the number of votes counted for Congressman corresponded with the number of names registered?—A. Yes, sir; I can tell. I know in looking over the tally-sheet that was one of the items. I do not know as we had any specific point in it, but they were entirely alike.

Q. Did you make any comparison at all on the vote for Congressman?—A. No, only in a general way; just this way: We compared the number of ballots with the names on the pool-list.

Q. Didn't you go to the State candidates because there was less scratching there than anywhere else?—A. No, sir; I do not think we did. In fact, whenever a man cast his vote they registered his name, and when we got through with the tally we counted up the number of names on the tally-sheet and then we counted the ballots, and they corresponded exactly.

Q. You mean the number of tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Corresponded with the names registered on the pool-list?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But as to whether or not the number of votes for Congressman corresponded with the number of names registered, you do not remember?—A. I would not like to state whether they did or not.

Q. All you did was to compare the number of ballots with the number of names registered?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they corresponded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not know anything about the difference between the number of votes counted for Congressman and the number of names registered?—A. I know this, that there was no discrepancy. I know that, because it was of considerable interest to us; but it seems to me that there was one ballot where Mr. English's was off and nothing to show for it. I know we talked on the subject, and, it seems to me, in that way; but I would not like to be right positive.

Q. Was that all the ballot?—A. That was in that shape?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think that one of the sheriff's was about in the same fix.

Q. Do you say that there was but one ticket there with the name of English scratched off?—A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. I mean with Mr. English's name scratched off and no one voted for ?—A. Yes, sir; I think there was; I am not positive.

Q. Was there any ticket there with Mr. Peelle's name scratched off and nobody voted for?—A. I do not remember that there was; I think not.

Q. You cannot remember but the one ticket?—A. I just remember the circumstance of talking about it among ourselves; that there was but one ticket, and it run in my mind that it was Mr. English's name that was scratched off; I may be mistaken, but I think not. I never charged my mind with it, and I did not think I would be called upon.

Q. Were there many tickets there with the name of Peelle scratched off and the name of Mr. English pasted over?—A. No, sir; I think the Republican ticket was generally pretty straight.

Q. Was there many tickets there with the name of Mr. English scratched off and the name of Mr. Peelle pasted over?—A. I believe there was a few, but very few.

Q. Were there more Democratic tickets with Mr. English's name scratched off, and Mr. Peelle's pasted over, than there were Republican tickets with the name of Mr. Peelle scratched off and Mr. English's pasted over?—A. That I could not say, but I do not believe that any of the Republican tickets were scratched; I think they all voted for Mr. Peelle; that is my judgment.

Q. How many scratched tickets were there in there with Mr. English's name on?—A. That I could not say.

Q. I mean Democratic tickets with Mr. English's name scratched off?—A. I say that to the best of my recollection there was a ticket with his name scratched of with pencil.

Q. And nobody voted for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many were there with his name scratched off and Mr. Peelle voted for, on the Democratic ticket?—A. I could not say how many; there was some.

Q. How many?—A. I would not undertake to say because I have never thought anything about it. In fact, I never thought anything about that election until this morning.

Q. How many Greenback tickets was there for Congressman?—A. I think about three; I think there were three Greenback votes cast, but as to my designating special officers, I could not do it. I paid no attention to it, and I do not remember.

Q. Do you mean to say there was only three Greenback votes at that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I would not be right positive of that; I know there was one election where we only had one.

Q. What was the vote cast there for secretary of State; for Mr. Myers, for instance?—A. It is near 300 as I can get it, as anything else.

Q. For the Democratic candidate?—A. I do not recollect; I did not charge my mind with it.

Q. Was there any difference between the votes cast for the Democratic candidates there?—A. Oh, yes; there was considerable difference. It was enough to notice it at any rate. For instance, some of our voters would vote a little differently. Some few Democrats voted for the Republican sheriff.

Q. The Greenback votes were voted for the Greenback candidate for Congress?—A. No, sir; I do not say so.

Q. Do you know who they were voted for?—A. No, sir.

Q. And there were only three?—A. I did not say that. I think there were only three. I know it was a little ridiculed there for it was such a trivial vote.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. English's vote there was more or less than the Democratic candidate for secretary of State?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect. My opinion is Mr. English was slightly behind the Democratic ticket there.

Q. That is, the other Democratic candidates had more votes than he had?—A. Not exactly that way, but he fell a little behind what we call the Democratic vote.

Q. How did Mr. English's vote correspond with the other candidates?—A. I think he run a little behind. I do not mean of all the others, for I didn't notice that particularly, but slightly behind some; what we call our Democratic vote.

Q. I am not speaking about former elections.—A. I am not talking about former elections.

Q. I ask you about the difference between Mr. English's vote and the vote for the other candidates.—A. I cannot give it to you. I think he run slightly behind the ticket, but it was few, to the best of my recollection.

Q. If Mr. Meyers, the Democratic candidate for secretary of State, received 172 votes, and Mr. English's name was scratched off of one Democratic ticket, and there was no one voted tor, and a few Democratic tickets in there with his name scratched off and Mr. Peelle's name pasted over, how many votes would you say Mr. English had in that precinct for Congress, compared with the secretary of State, who had 172 votes?

(Objected to.)

A. I could not give any number. I took off a little memorandum, simply to refer to in speaking to my neighbors.

Q. Did Mr. Peelle's vote run up with the other candidates on the Republican ticket?—A. I think he did.

Q. Did he run ahead?—A. If Mr. English ran a little behind, he would run a little ahead. That is my impression.

Q. That he ran a little ahead?—A. The way I want this evidence in is not that he had a majority over him, but I think Mr. English ran a little behind the ticket, and Mr. Peelle had a gain.

Q. Mr. Peele ran a little ahead of the Republican ticket, and Mr. English ran a little behind the Democratic ticket?—A. That is the way I have it in my mind.

Q. If the Democratic candidate for secretary of State in that precinct received 172 votes, and the Democratic candidate for treasurer of State 172, and the auditor of State 172, and Mr. English received 183 votes, would not you say there was something wrong there?

(Objected to as not competent.)

A. I can only say, as I stated awhile ago, that it was my impression that Mr. English was slightly behind on what we call the Democratic vote. I have told you that. I do not recollect just how it was, but I know it was an impression that it was that way; and I am only giving my impression now. As I told you, I do not recollect.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You say that it is your impression that Mr. English ran a little behind the ticket. Is that anything more than an impression?—A. No, sir; it is not.

Q. Do you testify as a matter of knowledge, or simply an impression?—A. It is simply an impression, that I may be erroneous in, because it has been just in my mind, for really I have forgotten it.

Q. Would that impression be as strong proof in your mind as the certificate you filed?—A. No, sir; the certificate I signed is the best evidence, unless it has been tampered with.

Q. You say at that precinct there was about three Greenback voters?—A. Yes, sir; that is my impression. I think I can name the persons.

Q. If at that precinct Judge Niblack got 194 votes and Judge Howk got 194, both of them Democratic candidates, and Napoleon B. Taylor got 192 and Judge Norton got 193, and Daniel A. Lemon got 183 votes, all Democrats, and Joseph Loftin got 193 votes, and Mr. English got 183 votes—every one of these I have named ran over 183—is that what you mean?—A. That is exactly what I mean. I think he had a few less votes than some of the other candidates. I know it was a matter talked of or remarked about that there was something of that kind at that time.

Q. Your statement had reference to the fact not that he did not have as many votes as Mr. Myers, the Democratic candidate for secretary of state, which was 172, but that he had some less than some of the other candidates?—A. That is it, exactly. That is what I am trying to express, and what I what to express; that he ran behind some of the rest on what we call the Democratic vote. That is what I want to express.

Q. You call it the Democratic ticket; you mean some of the rest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do I understand you to say furthermore that you did notice the vote on Congress at that precinct?—A. Not specially more than the balance, to see that the returns were right.

Q. And you say the vote for Congress and the number of tickets put into the box corresponded with the number of votes at that precinct on the vote for Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are certain about that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are emphatic?—A. Yes, sir; I am emphatic that there was as many votes as there was names, but even what I have spoken about it is but an impression now, and how I came by it I do not know unless it was true.

Q. You stated to Mr. Peelle that you thought it was an impression that you testified that Mr. Peelle's name was on a very few Democratic tickets?—A. My impression is it was, sir.

Q. That is an impression?—A. Yes, sir. Well, I could go a little further than that. I am pretty certain that I saw his name on Democratic tickets, but they were very few.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you remember that there were 18 votes cast there for Mr. Medkirk on the Greenback ticket?—A. No, sir; I do not remember the number of votes for Mr. Medkirk.

Q. As a matter of fact, there were 18 votes returned by you from that precinct for Mr. Medkirk for Congress, and assuming that now to be true, as shown by the exhibit in the certificate which I have put in evidence to the deposition of Mr. McLain, as clerk of the circuit court of this county, and assuming that to state the vote for the Democratic supreme court judges and Mr. Lemon and the other gentlemen that Mr.

Exhibit No. 1 to cross-examination of Austin H. Brown, also being Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of Austin Doherty.—P. C. Hendricks, N. P.—Result of the election in Marion County.—The official returns of the votes cast by wards and precincts in Marion County, on Tuesday, November 7, 1882.

Wilson mentioned as having received 194 votes, were they not indorsed by the Greenback party in this county and voted for at that precinct?—A. I do not believe I unstand that question.

Q. Don't you know that the Democratic party was indorsed by the Greenback party in this county, and Mr. Lemon among the rest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the supreme court judges?—A. I know there was some of the Democrats indorsed.

Q. Was not that the case with the entire Greenback ticket for sheriff?—A. I do not know.

Q. Is it not a fact that Lemon and Hess were the only two candidates voted for at that precinct for sheriff?—A. I think they were.

Q. Is it not true that Mr. Lemon was indorsed by the Greenback party in this county?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Is it not true that the Democratic judges were indorsed?—A. Yes, sir; to the best of my recollection, they were.

Q. State if Judge Norton, the candidate for the criminal circuit court, was not indorsed by the Greenback party in this county, and the Greenbackers had no candidate against him?—A. I believe his name was on the ticket, and I believe there were different parties on it.

Q. Was there any candidate for the supreme court judgeship voted for there by the Greenbackers except the Democratic candidates?—A. I do not remember about that at all. What were the names of the candidates?

Q. Zollars was one of the Democratic candidates that was indorsed.

(Objected to.)

Q. Judge Howk was indorsed as one of them; is not that true?—A. I don't recollect the names.

Q. Was there any candidates voted for for the supreme court judgeship except on the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. I don't remember whether there was or not; I took the ticket and looked it over and compared it with the Democratic and Republican ticket at the time, and I noticed they indorsed different ones, but I have forgotten who they were; I know they were judges, and I am satisfied Norton's name was on the Democratic ticket, and I think Mr. Lemon's name.

Q. Do you remember what the total number of Greenback tickets were voted in that precinct?—A. No, sir; I have only in my mind that there were three Greenback tickets.

Q. Was there not over 20 there?—A. There has been as high as 30, but a great many of them have gone over to the Democratic party and some to the Republican party. At one time they had that many, and they had a volunteer fellow on the board, but he did not receive any pay for his services.

Q. Do you remember of any Greenback ticket being in the box with the name of Mr. English on it?—A. I do not remember anything about that.

AUSTIN DAUGHERTY.

EDWARD MILL, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name.—A. Edward Mill.

Q. You are the same Mr. Mill that testified in chief in this cause in behalf of the contestant heretofore?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated then that you were connected with the Cleveland Paper Co., and had been for years?—A. Yes, sir.

Q, I call your attention now to these tickets; one headed "Republican ticket," for secretary of state, Isaac S. Moore, already in evidence; also a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," for secretary of state, John G. Shanklin; also ticket headed "Democratic ticket," for governor, Franklin Landers, with a flag at the head of it; also ticket headed "Republican ticket, for governor, Albert G. Porter"; also a ticket headed "Democratic ticket, for President, Winfield Scott Hancock;" and the ticket headed "Repnblican ticket," James A. Garfield, for President; also the ticket headed "Republican ticket," for secretary of state, Emanuel R. Hawn, and ticket headed "Democratic ticket," for secretary of state, William R. Myers, all in evidence as exhibits offered during the examination and cross-examination of the contestee's witnesses, and I will ask you to compare them and state what similarity there is between the Democratic tickets, and what similarity between the Republican tickets, and whether any of those Republican tickets, prior to the one for Emanuel R. Hawn, secretary of state, could be as readily distinguished from the Democratic tickets as could said Hawn ticket from the Democratic ticket for Myers, when folded as tickets are ordinarily folded in the hands of the voter?—A. The paper in these Democratic tickets is what we should term printing paper.

Q. Is there, or is there not, a substantial difference in the paper?—A. Yes, sir;

there is a difference in them, but as paper, we call them printing paper. Exhibit S is a little heavier than the others. In these four Republican tickets there seems to be a wide difference in the heft or thickness of the paper.

Q. Describe the different kind of material.—A. The exhibit 6 is a very heavy sheet of common, also that of Exhibit F. Exhibit No. 3 is a very superior grade of paper.

Q. What sort of paper?—A. I would consider that what we should call a hard paper, writing paper of a cheap grade. Exhibit C I should term a calendered book paper. This ticket is much soiled, and rather hard to tell.

Q. What did you say Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams was?—A. I should call that a heavy grade of common paper.

Q. Is the ticket you have in your hand the same ticket as Exhibit No. 6 to the deposition of Henry C. Adams?—A. Yes, sir; I should say it was.

Q. What sort of common paper?—A. It is newspaper, common newspaper; it is a class of paper we make for heavy posters.

Q. Did you not testify in chief that that was plate paper?—A. No; I think not.

Q. I hand you three tickets headed "Republican ticket, for secretary of state, Emanuel R. Hawn, with Stanton J. Peelle for Congress printed on them, and I will ask you, are they similar to the exhibit to the deposition, No. 6, of Henry C. Adams?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are any of those western plate paper?

(Objected to as not in rebuttal, and leading.)

A. Yes, sir; that is what it is.

Q. With your shaded glasses off, I will ask you to look at that Exhibit No. 6 again, and state what it is.—A. That is what we should term plate paper.

Q. I give you the ten tickets used November, 1882, and ask you to compare them together and state whether the tickets which I now hand you in pairs, being tickets used before 1882, can or cannot be distinguished when folded and in the hands of the voter as easily as the tickets of 1882?—A. Exhibit L and Exhibit C, when folded, I should not think there would be much difference; Exhibit E and Exhibit F there is some noticeable difference; there is some difference between the two national tickets.

Q. Is there as much difference when folded as between the November tickets of 1882?—A. No, sir; there is not as much difference.

Q. As to Exhibits No. 4 and 3 to Mr. Ransdell's deposition, is there as much difference between those as there is between the November tickets of 1882?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is there a book-paper size 19 x 24?—A. No, sir; not what we would call stock sizes. We carry none.

Q. Is there such a size, 19 by 24, in plate paper?—A. Yes, sir.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

Q. You stated a moment ago that Exhibit C to Henry C. Adams's evidence was a sort of heavy common paper, and you had your blue or colored glasses on; was that a correct statement, or was it owing to the fact that you had those glasses on?

(Objection as not rebuttal. and as leading the witness, and assuming that the glasses he had on were blue or colored.)

A. It was owing to my having glasses on; they are blue, and gave the paper a dark shade.

Q. You also said it is newspaper—common newspaper; "it is a class of paper we make for heavy posters"; what is your answer to that?—A. This is owing to the blue glasses making the paper look dark.

Q. And, with your glasses off, you stated that the exhibit was western plate paper?

(Objection; that the answer will show for itself.)

A. Yes, sir.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Why do you wear glasses?—A. Because my eyes are weak.

Q. Do you use glasses for sight?—A. Only for reading by gas-light, and such light as we have now during the day.

Q. Can you tell plate paper by sight?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell plate paper by feeling?—A. No, sir; I cannot; I cannot tell it by feeling and not seeing.

Q. Then it is by sight principally that you can tell plate paper from any other kind of paper?—A. I have to see it to know the quality of the stock.

Q. When that Republican ticket, marked Exhibit No. 6, was handed you, you examined it and pronounced it a heavy common paper, did you not?—A. I did, with my blue glasses on.

Q. And was not the three tickets which Mr. Wilson handed you, and which I now hand you, examined by you, and your attention called to the fact that you had previously testified concerning this paper before you answered that it was a western plate paper?—A. No, sir; I don't believe I gave any such testimony as that.

Q. After you had testified to-day that the ticket marked Exhibit No. 6 was a heavy grade of common paper, and that it was newspaper, such as you make for heavy posters, was your attention not afterwards called to the fact that you had previously testified in chief in this case that that was plate paper, and you answered: "No; I think not." Is not that true?

(Objected to. The question was: "Did you not testify that it was plate paper?" His attention was not called any further than that.)

A. Yes.

Q. And was you not afterwards handed three tickets headed "Republican ticket," and your attention also called to the fact at the same time that the name of Stanton J. Peelle appeared on said three tickets for Congress; and was it not after an examination of those three tickets with the ticket marked Exhibit No. 6 that you pronounced it plate paper?—A. Yes, sir. As regards comparing the tickets by name, it was something I do not remember—that I did compare the tickets. Between the time I examined the first ticket, Exhibit 6, and that of examining the others, I discovered that I had my blue glasses on, by reason of which caused a dark reflection on Exhibit 6, which accounts for me calling it a cheap grade of paper, and something that we make for posters; afterwards, comparing the three tickets with that of Exhibit 6, I found them to be alike, the last comparison being made without the glasses.

Q. I will ask you if the tickets which you examined prior to the time Exhibit No. 6 was handed to you you did not examine them and state the kind of paper each ticket was printed on with the same glasses which you had on when you answered that ticket No. 6 was a heavy grade of common paper?—A. Part of the time.

Q. Did you or not have your glasses on when you gave your opinion as to the kind of paper this same Republican ticket was printed on when you were examined in chief in this case?—A. No, sir; ordinarily I do not examine paper with glasses; my attention was called to some figures and writing attached to it, and the light being dull caused me to put them on.

Q. What kind of paper is this piece of paper, the specimen I now hand you headed "Marion County ticket?"

(Objected to as not cross-examination; as new matter.)

A. I would say that was about the same thing as this ticket here—Exhibit No. 6 to deposition of H. C. Adams.

Q. Before you answered what this specimen was, you compared it, did you not, with the Republican ticket which you had previously examined?—A. Yes, sir; I examined that before I compared it.

Q. Did you not also see Mr. English, the contestant, compare the ticket with the specimen which I handed you?—A. Yes, sir; but it was after I had examined it.

Q. But was it not before your answer?—A. I think so.

Q. And was it not his comparison that suggested the comparison to you?—A. No, sir; not by any means.

Q. Can you read without glasses?—A. Yes, sir; ordinarily I do not use them unless it is very fine print and it is night-time. I very seldom use them in my business.

Q. What difference is there between what is known as western plate paper and book paper of like weight?—A. Plate paper is made for lithographic purposes and has a higher finish than the ordinary run of book papers. If they are both made of the same weight there cannot be any difference on that point. Plate papers are of different sizes and weights to that of the regular lines of book.

Q. Is western plate paper ever used for printing books on?—A. Occasionally it is.

Q. Is it not frequently used for fine book work?—A It is wherein cut-work or plates are used, but for the ordinary run of book printing it is not.

Q. Is it not often used for printing subscription books, and for fine book work?—A. It is used occasionally.

(Specimen shown witness, headed "Marion County ticket," offered as a part of his deposition and Exhibit No. 1.)

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. In answering to Exhibit No. 1 did you compare the names on that ticket with the names on the larger ticket, and did you notice the names?—A. No, sir; I did not notice the names.

(Offered in evidence as Exhibits No. 2, 3, and 4 to his deposition.)

Q. When I asked you the question-in-chief as to the character of Exhibit 6 to Mr. Adams's evidence, you can state about what time in the afternoon it was, and whether the gas was lit?—A. No, sir; the gas was not lit; it was about half-past four o'clock.

Q. I will ask you whether or not just before answering that question you had not come into the room from out of doors where the snow was on the ground?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Did your coming in this room from the snow or the lateness of the hour in the afternoon or the fact of your having your glasses on have anything to do with your answer first made to Exhibit 6, or was it, as you have stated, simply that you had your glasses on?—A. It was owing to me having my glasses on, and being a dark room.

Q. Did it, being in a dark room, have anything to do with the last answer you made as to what material that ticket was printed on after your glasses were taken off?—A. No; from the fact of not having any glasses on I had a natural sight.

Q. Was the light perfect in the room at the time or was it sufficient for you to give an intelligent answer?—A. The light was sufficient, but could have been much better.

Q. Does the Indiana Paper Company of this city, in which you are interested, as stated in your testimony-in-chief some weeks ago, sell paper to the Indianapolis Sentinel Company and to William Y. Burford of this city?—A. I believe they do.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. You sell to the Indianapolis Journal, the Indianapolis News, and the Times?—A. We sell the News and Journal; I do not know whether we sell the Times now or not; we did at one time.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 4 to deposition of Edward Mill.—Paul C. Hendricks, N. P.

SATURDAY, December 22, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

WILLIAM E. NIBLACK, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name.—A. William E. Niblack.

Q. State what official position you have held in this State.—A. I am at the present one of the judges of the supreme court of the State, and was for many years a Representative in Congress from the first district in this State.

Q. Are you acquainted with Austin H. Brown, of this county?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. I have been acquainted with him over 30 years.

Q. Has that acquaintance been simply a passing acquaintance, or has it been such an acquaintance as gave you an opportunity to know him?—A. It has been, a part of the time, rather an intimate acquaintance; I was a member of the legislature of this State when I first became acquainted with him here at Indianapolis, and I became acquainted with his parents about the same time and became very soon recognized as rather a friend of the family, and was in consequence at Mr. Austin H. Brown's wedding, now more than thirty years ago, as I remember.

Q. If you know, you can please state what is his general reputation for truth and veracity in this community, in this city?—A. Entirely good, so far as I am aware; I never heard anything to the contrary against him; I might add, that all the time I have known him he has been always one of the leading and most prominent citizens of Indianapolis, and a man of good reputation and character in all respects so far as I am aware of or have ever heard.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Where is your residence?—A. Vincennes, Ind.

Q. You are in this city only as your duties bring you here as a member of the supreme court, are you not?—A. For the last seven years that has been so; I was in the legislature here in 1862–'63, and had some official position that kept me here during 1863 and 1864 a great deal of the time, and I have been practicing in the supreme court and in the Federal court here and have been at Indianapolis a great deal of the time.

Q. (Question repeated).—A. For the last seven years that has been so.

Q. Do you know where Austin H. Brown resides?—A. I know where he did reside a few months ago.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. South Meridian street, as I remember.

Q. Were you ever at his house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long ago?—A. About a year ago.

Q. Do you know his neighbors?—A. No; I do not.

Q. Do you know the people in the community in which he lives, or any of them?—A. No, sir; not to any extent.

Q. Is not your opinion of Mr. Brown's reputation based upon what you know of him in former years, rather than what you know now?—A. Well, to some extent it is so; I formerly knew him more intimately than I have latterly; my acquaintance with his reputation is of a very general character, and I have never had any occasion to inquire into it in any way.

Q. Do you know what his reputation is for truth and veracity in the community in which he lives?—A. I cannot say that I have any special information upon the subject; I only spoke of him from his standing and recognized position in the community in various relations; I never heard of his character for truth and veracity discussed in my life, and I have always gone upon the theory that where a man's truth was not challenged it was good—the same as a woman's virtue, where it goes unchallenged I always go upon the assumption it is good; I never inquired into it for a moment, and this is the first time the question was ever presented to me; his position has been prominent here, and I have never heard his reputation challenged.

Q. Is not that from the fact that you have not mingled with the people in the community in which he lives?—A. That may be.

Questions by Mr. WILSON:

Q. When you use the word "community" there in the question which I asked, was the community you referred to in the State?—A. I referred to the city generally.

Q. Mr. Peelle's question related, I believe, to the neighbors down on South Meridian street, as you understand it?—A. Yes, sir; I have reference to them.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I stated the community in which he lived; did you make the narrow bounds of the neighborhood?—A. I say, I have no special information as to the position in which he stands in the immediate neighborhood in which he lives; when I answered the question I had reference to the city at large.

Q. What portion of the time have you been here for the last two years?—A. An average of about half the time, and then when I am here it is due to frankness to say that I mingle very little with the general community.

Q. You are constantly busy with your duties as judge of the supreme court?—A. Yes, sir; almost always so.

Q. How often have you seen Mr. Brown in the last two years?—A. I cannot answer that question; I think I have seen him every few weeks.

Q. Just seen him on the street?—A. Sometimes I would meet him on the street, or have conversations with him at offices and in other places, casually; I have not had a protracted conversation with him for a year or two, I believe.

Q. Have you ever heard any one in this city make any reference to Mr. Brown in any way?—A. Not in connection with his reputation and his character for truth and veracity.

Q. Did you in any way hear Mr. Brown discussed in connection with any matter by anybody?—A. I expect as a politician and a public man I have heard him discussed in that relation very often, and as a prospective candidate.

Q. He has the reputation of being a shrewd politician?—A. I think so.

Q. And rather an adroit one?—A. I don't know. He has the reputation of being a shrewd politician and one acquainted with the ins and outs of political matters, so far as I know. I have heard him spoken of in that respect.

WILLIAM E. NIBLACK.

JUNIUS L. WILSON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. Junius L. Wilson; age, 26; residence, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Q. Do you know Mr. William O. Anderson, a witness who has testified for the contestee?—A. I did not hear him testify; I have seen him since.

Q. Do you know him?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know his politics?—A. I understand he is a Republican.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You are a brother of the attorney in this case—Mr. John Wilson?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that you understand that he is a Republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did Mr. Anderson ever make any statement to you on that subject?—A. He did.

Q. What was it?—A. That he was a Republican.

Recross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Why did you not state that in the first place, rather than say you understood that he was a Republican?—A. I answered the question.

(Objected to as incompetent and irrelevant as to why.)

The WITNESS. I say I answered the question as it was put to me the first time. I do not know that I am compelled to answer in any particular way, so I give a direct answer.

JUNIUS L. WILSON.

W. O. DEVAY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What is your name?—A. W. O. DeVay.

Q. You are the same Mr. DeVay who has testified heretofore in this case, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You stated that you were in the paper business, and had been for some time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I call your attention to a specimen marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you to state what kind of paper that is?—A. I would call that ledger paper.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 1 to the cross-examination of Frank H. Smith, and I will ask you to state what that is?—A. I would call that plate paper.

Q. What kind of plate paper?—A. I would take it for a western plate.

Q. I call your attention to Exhibit No. 5 to the deposition of Mr. Anderson, and I will ask you to state what that is?—A. I would call that a book paper.

Q What grade of book is that?—A. I would call that a No. 2 book paper.

Q. What is its weight, 25 by 38?—A. About 60 pounds to the ream, 25 by 38, as near as I can judge from feeling it.

Q. I call your attention to a specimen shown C. L. Devine, and marked on its face "Philadelphia"; state what that is?—A. Blotting paper.

Q. What sort of blotting?—A. White blotting.

Q. I call your attention to this exhibit marked X to the deposition of Henry Salsbury, and I will ask you what that is?—A. It is a chemical print paper.

Q. What is the weight of that, sheets 25 by 38?—A. That would be from 27 to 30 pounds per ream.

Q. What is chemical print paper?—A. Print paper made under a chemical process. It is the same as ordinary print, but the process by which it is known is chemical process.

Q. Has it wood in it?—A. It is made of wood and nothing but wood.

Q. I hand you a specimen marked Exhibit W to the cross-examination of Henry Salsbury, and I will ask you what that is?—A. That is a print paper.

Q. What sort of print paper?—A. What we call a stock print paper, made of stock and wood, and a good grade of print.

Q. What is the weight of that, 25 by 38?—A. I judge that to be about 32 pounds.

Q. Are books printed on that?—A. Books can be printed on it.

Q. Is it a newspaper paper or a book paper, is what I am driving at—for what purpose is that usually used?—A. That grade paper we usually make for the better class of newspaper printing, and a low class of book printing. That is what we would call an extra print paper.

Q. I call your attention to this Exhibit V to the cross-examination of Henry Salsbury; what is that?—A. That is cloth blotting paper.

Q. What is the color of it?—A. White.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket, for secretary of State, John G. Shanklin," and marked Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, and said to have been used in the election of 1878, and a ticket headed "Republican ticket, for secretary of State, Isaac S. Moore," and marked Exhibit No. 3 to the deposition of D. M. Ransdell, and also said to have been used in the election of 1878, and state what that Democratic ticket is printed on?—A. It is printed on print paper.

Q. What is the weight of it. sheets 25 by 38?—A. About 30 pounds.

Q. What is the finish of that Democratic ticket?—A. That is chemical print paper. All chemical print paper is sized and that gives it a smooth finish.

Q. Now, I ask you about that Republican ticket, marked Exhibit No. 3, and I will ask you to state the material upon which that ticket is printed?—A. I would call that writing paper.

Q. What would be the weight of that, sheets 25 x 38?—A. That I could not tell you. It would be only guessing at it, and that would not be of any use to you.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Republican ticket. National candidates. James A. Garfield, for President", and marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, and to a similar one marked Exhibit No. 3 to John Carlon's deposition, and I will ask you to look at those tickets and state what material those tickets are printed on—those are the tickets of the national campaign, and I gave you two because the exhibit to Mr. Wallace's evidence is soiled.—A. I would call that a low grade of writing paper.

Q. You mean Exhibit No. 3, to the deposition of Mr. Carlon is a low grade of writing paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now what is the other ticket, marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, headed "Republican ticket," for the same candidates?—A. As near as I can tell from the ticket, it is book paper. It has been well finished, but the finish is all off of it.

Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket. For President, Winfield Scott Hancock," and marked Exhibit E, to the deposition of William Wallace, and purporting to be the Democratic national ticked used in 1880; what is that?—A. Print paper.

Q. What would be the weight of that, sheet 25 by 38, a ream?—A. Thirty pounds.

Q. I neglected to ask you what would be the weight of this ticket marked Exhibit F, to the deposition of William Wallace, sheets 25 by 38; that is the national ticket.—A. It would be about 50 pounds to the ream.

Q. And Exhibit 3, to John Carlon's evidence, being the national ticket, what would be the weight of that?—A. On this kind of paper?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I cannot tell you. It is a hard finished paper, and I cannot tell you anything about it.

Q. I call your attention now to a ticket headed "Republican ticket. State ticket. For governor, Albert G. Porter," and marked Exhibit C, to the deposition of William Wallace; and also a ticket with some names on it headed "Republican ticket" and marked Exhibit No. 1, to the deposition of John Carlon, and I will ask you to state what is the material upon which those two ticket are printed? One of them is soiled and the other is not.—A. They are both the same, are they not? You want either or both of them?

Q. Either or both of them?—A. That is supercalendered book paper.
Q. And the other is what?—A. As near as I can tell from the ticket, it is the same thing.
Q. What would be the weight of those two tickets, either of them or both of them sheets 25 by 38?—A. It would be 40 pounds.
Q. Exhibit 1, and the other would be what?—A. About the same. You can't tell what that ticket is, for the finish is all off of it.
Q. What is the character of the finish on Exhibit 1, to the deposition of Mr. Carlon?—A. A hard finish, supercalendered.
Q. I call your attentiou to a ticket headed "Democratic ticket. For governor, Franklin Landers," with a flag at the head of it, and marked Exhibit F to the deposition of David Swain, and I will ask you to state the material upon which that ticket is printed.—A. Print paper.
Q. What would be the weight, sheets 25 x 38?—A. About 30 pounds to the ream.
Q. I call your attention to a ticket headed "Republican ticket," and marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Samuel Merrill; and a Democratic ticket, marked Exhibit No. 2, to the deposition of James C. Yohn, being the tickets of 1882, and I will ask you to state what that Democratic ticket is on.
(Objected to as not rebuttal, for the reason that the witness has heretofore testified as to the quality of paper the two tickets are on.)
Q. For the purpose of comparison.—A. That is an extra grade of print or a low grade of book paper.
Q. What is the Republican ticket of the same election, November, 1882?—A. That is western plate.
Q. Now, I ask you to take the Republican tickets that I have shown you, being Exhibit 3, to Ransdell's testimony and Exhibit F to Mr. Wallace's evidence, and Exhibit No. 1 to Col. Merrill's evidence, and compare them and state whether there is an essential similarity between the tickets, or whether there is an esential difference or disparity.—A. In what way do you mean?
Q. In appearance, in finish, and in material.—A. There is some difference.
Q. What is the amount of the difference; is it small or is it great?—A. The only way you could tell would be by a close examination of the tickets.
Q. I call your attention now to the Democratic tickets you have examined, and I will ask you whether there is less or more similarity between the Democratic tickets than between those Republican tickets, as compared between themselves, as to quality, material, &c., and weight?—A. There is some difference between them.
Q. Is there as much or is there less difference between them than there is between the Republican tickets, compared between themselves?—A. Upon close examination there would be as great a difference in comparison as there is there.
Q. I ask you to take the tickets I hand you, and I hand them to you in pairs, as they were voted at the elections. I hand you two tickets headed Democratic and Republican tickets, Exhibit 4 to Mr. Ransdell's evidence, and Exhibit 3 to Mr. Ransdell's evidence, being the tickets of 1878, and I will ask you whether or not those tickets could be distinguished, one from the other, as easily as could the two tickets used by the respective parties, which I now show you, at the Congressional election in 1882?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. Was that the color of that ticket when it was printed?
Q. That ticket was used in 1878, and I think it is discolored some.—A. You mean if I had those in my hands or looked at a distance?
Q. I mean whether you could distinguish them as the voters held them in their hands at the polls, one from the other, folded; which could you distinguish the easiest?—A. If that ticket was that color when it was voted I could distinguish one as quick as I could the other by the color; if you could see the edges of this Republican ticket you could distinguish that by the weight.
Q. You mean the plate paper?—A. Yes, sir; if that ticket was that color—the Democratic ticket of 1878.
Q. I will ask you as to that Democratic ticket of 1878; as to the paper; would it discolor or fade in time?—A. From the appearance of it, it has.
Q. And it is by means of that color that you answer that question. I ask you to look at the back of that Democratic ticket used in 1878 and state if it is not faded?
(Objected to as leading.)
A. My judgment on that ticket would be that it is a faded ticket from time.
Q. If it was not faded could you tell them as easily as you could the tickets used in November, 1882?—A. No; I do not think I could.
Q. I call your attention to two tickets marked Exhibit C to the deposition of William Wallace, and Exhibit G to the deposition of David Swain, and I will ask you to compare them and say whether, when folded in the hands of the voters, those tickets could be told or distinguished as readily as the tickets used in November, 1882, when folded and in the hands of the voter?—A. No, sir; I do not think they could.

Q. I ask you to take the "Democratic ticket, for President, Winfield Scott Hancock," marked Exhibit E to the deposition of William Wallace, and the Republican ticket for Garfield, marked Exhibit F to the deposition of William Wallace, and compare them and say whether they could be distinguished as easily as the tickets used at the November election in 1882, when folded and in the hands of the voter?—A. If that ticket was that color it could be.

Q. What is the color of that ticket now?—A. A yellowish cast; those tickets are faded.

Q. When the tickets were white and not faded?—A. They could probably be told, but not as readily as that heavy ticket.

Q. I will ask you to look at Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Hasselman, and Exhibit No. 2 to the deposition of Mr. Hasselman, and state what the material is of those two specimens.—A. Card-board.

Q. What ply?—A. I would call that 120-pound Bristol.

Q. Can you tell what ply it is?—A. I will tell you about the ply business; some dealers run it under and over weights; it is what would be our three-ply.

Q. Do you make a two-ply?—A. There is a two-ply made.

Q. Is there a one-ply made?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is there a one-ply Bristol?—A. I never saw any. When you make less than 100-pound board it is called a special board, and it can be made 75, 80, or 90 pounds to 500 sheets; it can be, but it is not generally done.

Q. I do not mean how it was generally used, but whether it is not so made?—A. It can be made, but it is so exceedingly light for card-board that it is not in general demand.

Q. Look at Exhibit 1 to the cross-examination of Frank H. Smith and state what that is.—A. The question between this and plate-paper is so close that I cannot state.

Q. What would be the character and weight of it as plate?—A. It would be a very heavy weight or a very light card-board; I would want to tear it to see it.

Q. I hand you Exhibit U to the cross-examination of Mr. Salsbury and ask you to state what that is.—A. Plate-paper.

Q. Is that a heavy or a light weight of plate?—A. That is a medium weight.

Q. Western or Eastern plate?—A. It might be either; I would say from the finish of it it is Eastern plate.

Q. What would be the weight of that in sheets of 25 by 38?—A. It would be in the neighborhood of 120 pounds.

Q. Did you testify as to what Exhibit No. 2 to Mr. Hasselman's deposition was?—A. I said it was card-board.

Q. What ply is it?—A. That would be our scale of 3-ply; it might be some one else's 2-ply. The board would weigh 120 pounds, 500 sheets.

Q. I will ask you to look at this exhibit called "Chatfield's and Wood's Catalogue Wholesale Paper Warehouse," and look at the catalogue of book sizes and state whether there is any book-paper there 19 by 24.—A. No, sir; there is not any of that size.

Q. Look at the plate-paper and see if there is any size of that kind there, 19 by 24.—A. Yes, sir; that size is there.

Q. Is 19 by 24 a catalogued book size of paper?—A. No, sir.

Q. What material is this Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of Mr. Moses G. McClain; what material is that certificate on?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. That is ledger paper.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. If a man would order a book paper No. 1 or No. 2 size, 19 by 24, would that make it plate paper?—A. If it was plate weights it would.

Q. Suppose you took a book paper that weighed 100 pounds, 25 by 38, and you should order paper of that kind cut into size 19 by 24, would that make it plate paper?—A. It would not make it plate paper, but it would make it plate-paper size.

Q. If plate paper weighing 50 pounds, size 19 by 24, was cut into the size 25 by 38, would that make it book paper?—A. It would if a man wanted to use that heavy weight for books, but it would be an exceeding weight.

Q. Isn't 100 pounds, 25 by 38, a weight in the catalogued sizes of book paper?—A. I have not seen it.

Q. See if there is not book paper there, size 25 by 38, weighing 100 pounds catalogued?—A. There is one size here, extra fine No. 1, sized and super-calendered, 25 by 38, 100 pounds.

Q. That is the catalogued size?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If plate paper were that size and that weight what would be the difference between that and book paper?—A. If a man wants to use book paper of that weight practically there would be no difference.

Q. Is it not a fact that there would be no difference between a plate paper of that size and that weight?—A. On western paper there would not be.

Q. Paper may be cut in any size it is ordered?—A. Certainly; a man can get anything made he wants to.

Q. Is not book paper frequently cut into sizes 19 by 24 and 18½ by 24?—A. Not very often by the manufacturer. Speaking for ourselves, we have never made it.

Q. Is it not ordered that way, and don't they make one-half of a book leaf?—A. It makes one-half of a book leaf, but I don't remember that I ever furnished it on that size, from the fact that it would make one half of a form, and it would not be advisable to make it.

Q. Have you got a rule in your pocket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you that ticket, being the Republican ticket, which is upon the western plate paper, as you say, and voted in 1882, and I ask you to state the width of that ticket?—A. Three (3) inches.

Q. What is the length of it?—A. 9⅝, by my measure.

Q. Are you sure it is 9⅝ or 9½?—A. 9⅝.

Q. What size would the paper have to be cut to run those tickets off to the most advantage, the tickets being 3 inches in width and 9½ inches, or 9⅝ inches in length?—A. At 25 by 38 it would cut to an advantage, or 19 by 24 would cut to an advantage; that is, it would cut so there would no waste.

Q. Would not there be waste in 25 by 38?—A. Very slight.

Q. Would not there be a waste of an inch, the tickets being 3 inches in width?—A. There would be an inch one way.

Q. 19 by 24, would not that cut the tickets eight tickets to the sheet, without any loss whatever?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it not the only size that the paper could be cut to print that ticket without waste or loss?—A. Yes, sir; the exact size.

Q. And that exactly fits the tickets, eight being run off at a time?—A. Yes, sir. There would be 16 tickets to a sheet in 19 by 24.

Q. And 19 inches is the length of two tickets, and the 24 inches would be the width of 8 tickets?—A. Yes, sir; but when they recut them in this shape they would cut one long and one short. I make that explanation in order to show that this could be cut out from 19 by 24 and still be 9⅝ inches long. This ticket, if it was cut out from 19 by 24, it would show if they made the sheet just cover so much space.

Q. I hand you the Democratic ticket voted at the Congressional election in 1882, and I will ask you to measure the width of that ticket and the length.—A. It is a fraction over 9½ inches one way and 3 inches the other.

Q. Is it not about the same width and length as the Republican ticket voted at the same election?—A. It is about the same, but it is a fraction shorter.

Q. Could not that paper as it appears be better cut out of a 19 by 24 sheet than out of any other paper without waste?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I hand you that ticket, headed "Democratic ticket," with the words "For Governor, Franklin Landers," being Exhibit No. 4 to the deposition of John Carlon. Take that ticket and examine it, and state what kind of paper that ticket is printed on.—A. That is print paper.

Q. What grade?—A. A low grade of print.

Q. How much would that weigh to the ream, 25 by 38?—A. That would be very light.

Q. Compare it with this Democratic ticket voted at the same election, with a flag on it. What difference is there between the weight of that paper?—A. There would be 3 pounds to the ream.

Q. Would not there be over 10 pounds difference?—A. No, sir.

Q. Would not the paper with the flag on it weigh at least 10 pounds more to the ream than the other?—A. I don't think it would.

Q. I now hand you this ticket, which Mr. Wilson handed you a moment ago, marked Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of John Carlon, being the ticket voted for Governor Porter in 1880, and at the same time that small ticket was voted for Landers in 1880; could those two tickets more readily be distinguished when folded in the hands of the voter than the tickets voted at the Congressional election in this city in 1882?—A. It would be pretty hard to tell. I believe they could.

Q. Those tickets voted for Governor Porter and Landers in 1880, which I have just shown you, could be more readily distinguished than the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882, and is not that ticket voted for Landers much narrower and only about half as long as the other ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when folded would not it make a bulk less than half of the Republican ticket? I will ask you to fold the two, and state whether the bulk of the Republican ticket would not be more than twice, or as much as twice, as heavy in bulk as the Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the difference between the bulk of those tickets voted for governor in 1880 is about the same as the difference between the bulk of the tickets voted at the Congressional election in 1882?—A. I do not think the difference would be as great, and I believe the difference between those two [indicating] and these two [indicating], from the fact of these being so exceedingly small, the difference is small.

Q. The fact that the Landers ticket being much smaller, and much narrower and shorter, it could be more readily distinguished from the Republican ticket than the Republican ticket in 1882 could be from the Democratic ticket of 1882; is not that true?—A. I think it could.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Suppose the Republican ticket of November, 1882, had been 2 inches longer; would it have come out exactly in sheets 19 by 24 without any loss at all?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. No, sir.

Q. So it is simply because that ticket happens to be that length that the size 19 by 24 adapts itself to it?—A. That ticket, as it measures, comes exactly out of a sheet 19 by 24.

Q. And if it had been longer it would not have done it, and if it had been shorter it could not have done it?—A. If you cut sixteen to a sheet it might; but if you reduce it enough and cut 14 or 12, or increase it 18 or 20, if the sheet was much larger or smaller—this measures 19 by 24 precisely.

Q. I understood you to say that book paper of the same weight and the same thickness as western plate paper is the same in finish?—A. Western plate, yes, sir; and the same thing. There is not enough difference to say, and I would not go on the stand and undertake to say the difference, because there is not much difference in the same weight as they make plate paper.

Q. Is it not true that there is a very different finish in book papers of plate paper weight?—A. You mean a different finish. On western there is not, but on eastern there is.

Q. Is there any uniformity in the finish of book papers?—A. The standard by which it is known is sized and calendered, and sized and supercalendered, and book paper made to correspond with western plate would be what is called extra-sized and supercalendered, and it would have then to be made plate weights to be made that.

Q. You have got to get it exactly the same quality, and the same size, and the same weight as plate paper in order that they may be the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is my understanding of your answer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have to get book paper of the same size, and the same weight, and the same finish as western plate paper, and when you do that there is no difference between them?—A. No, sir; it would have to be what I think would be an exceeding weight in book paper, and it would be a very heavy weight of book paper.

Q. It is not an ordinary book paper?—A. This is the only time I have ever seen it catalogued. It may be catalogued by all dealers, and by our concern, but I do not know that to be a fact and I would not care to go on record, but it is catalogued by Chatfield and Woods.

Q. And Chatfield and Woods is an exception in your estimation?—A. I would not say that, because I do not know; I have never given the case attention enough to know. It might be catalogued, and I do not say but what it is, but it is an exceedingly heavy weight in my opinion.

Q. And would not it have the very same spring-back qualities that plate paper would have, of a like character?

(Objected to as immaterial and not rebuttal.)

A. It would be the same thing.

Q. It would have the same elasticity and spring-back features, when you reach that point?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Peelle called your attention to what he called "the little Landers ticket," and you said it was much shorter and much narrower than the other Democratic ticket used at the same election, as he says, "with a flag at the head of it," and much narrower than the Republican ticket used at the same election. Is it not a fact that it is so much narrower that it enables you to come to the conclusion that you could distinguish it, as you said you did?—A. That is the distinguishing mark of it.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. I hand you what purports to be "The Annual Catalogue of the J. W. Butler Paper Company," of Chicago, and marked as Exhibit No. 1 to the deposition of Mr. Fish. Take that book and turn to page 16 and state whether or not there are book sizes there, catalogued 25 by 38, weighing 100 pounds?—A. Yes, sir; there is.

Q. Look at the bottom of that book and read the foot-note, and what it says about special sizes.—A. (Reading.) "Special sizes and weights made to order on short notice."

Q. I will now ask you to turn to page 20, under the head of "Plate Papers," and I will ask you to read the foot-note there.—A. (Reading.) "Odd sizes made to order if required."

Q. Then you have found in two catalogues—one of Chatfield & Woods and one of the J. W. Butler Paper Company, of Illinois—that there is book paper, size 25 by 38, 100 pounds to the ream?—A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Would there be any difference between that paper and what you term as western plate paper?—A. If you notice, the grade of this is "Extra No. 1, sized and supercalendered." I made that explanation when I stated there would be no difference, in answer to Mr. Wilson. There would be practically no difference.

Q. That is what I am asking you—between plate paper 25 by 38, weighing 100 pounds—whether there would be any difference between western plate paper, upon which this Republican ticket is printed, and that?—A. The same grade of paper, there would not be; no, sir.

WM. O. DEVAY.

JOHN H. PEGGS, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John H. Peggs; age, 42; my residence is Acton, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. How long have you lived in Marion County?—A. About 8 years last November.

Q. What position, if any, do you hold officially now?—A. Justice of the peace in Franklin Township, in Marion County.

Q. Were you at the Congressional election, November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. Acton.

Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. I was clerk of the board at that election.

Q. Democratic clerk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state how the number of tickets that you sealed up and put in the bag, as required by law, and forwarded to the county officers, corresponded at that election with the number of names on the tally-sheet and poll-book at your precinct?

(Objected to as not rebuttal, and simply in answer to testimony brought out by the contestant on cross-examination of the contestee's witnesses, which was not proper cross-examination.)

A. They exactly corresponded at our precinct.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who was the Republican clerk at that precinct?—A. His name was Meacham.

Re-examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Did they, or not, correspond on the vote for Congress?

(Objected to as leading.)

A. That I do not recollect exactly, the number. In what way?

Q. Did not the number of tickets you sealed up and put into the bag and forwarded correspond with the number of tallies you had on the vote for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Questions by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. How many votes were there for Congress?—A. What do mean by that? In the precinct?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. For both parties?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I am not positive about the number, but I think about 300.

Q. How many votes did Mr. English have?—A. I think about 180, as near as I can remember.

Q. How many did the Democratic candidate have, for secretary of state?—A. I am not going to be positive about it, but I think the secretary of state received about one hundred and seventy, somewheres near there, and the other was somewheres near one hundred and eighty for Congress.

Q. How many votes were there cast for the Greenback candidate for Congress?—A. I believe 22 exactly, if I remember right, but I am not positive; I think it was 22.

Q. How many ballots were there in the box?—A. That I cannot remember.

Q. Was Mr. English's name scratched off of any Democratic tickets?—A. None that I know of.

Q. None whatever?—A. None whatever; not that I know of.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. As to the Republican ticket; do you remember whether Mr. Peelle's name was blank or scratched off of any ticket there?—A. Yes, sir; it was, I think; I am not positive, but I think about 5 or 6.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. On how many tickets was Mr. English's name scratched off of the Democratic ticket and Mr. Peelle's name pasted over?—A. None that I know of.

Q. None whatever?—A. I think not.

Q. Mr. English's name was not scratched off of any ticket?—A. None that I noticed.

Q. Was Mr. English's name pasted on any Republican ticket?—A. I do not know exactly the number; I think there was a few; the exact number I cannot tell.

Q. Were you clerk of the board?—A. Yes sir.

Q. You did not handle the tickets at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not see them?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know anything about it, do you, as a matter of fact, not having handled the tickets?

(Objected to.)

A. I kept the tally from the report as they were reported to me. I know some of the tickets I saw.

Q. You did not handle any of the tickets at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Doherty have the handling of the tickets?—A. No, sir; the tickets were handled in this way, by the inspector, and the inspector passed the tickets to the judge, and the other judge strung them. That is the way they were handled.

Q. Mr. Doherty handled some of the tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was the Democratic judge there?—A. Yes, sir; and he passed the tickets to Mr. Craft, and Mr. Craft strung the tickets.

Q. You did not handle any of the tickets at all?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Mr. Peelle asked you what Mr. Medkirk's vote was; do you know what Mr. Leonard's vote was on the Greenback ticket for secretary of state?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Was there a single vote cast for him at that precinct that you recollect?—A. I do not recollect.

Q. Do not you recollect that there was none?—A. I do not recollect.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Was there not 22 votes there at that precinct?—A. If I recollect correctly, there was about 22 votes, or about that number, cast for the Greenback ticket, for the number that had the full vote; but I do not recollect exactly.

Q. Did not Mr. Medkirk have about 18, to refresh your recollection?—A. I do not recollect how many he had, but very nearly the full vote. I remember that he had several votes, but exactly as to that I cannot say.

JOHN H. PEGGS.

JOHN W. CARLTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. State your name, age, and residence.—A. John W. Carlton; 61 years old; residence, Indianapolis, Ind., No. 401 Lexington avenue.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. Ten years.

Q. Were you in this city at the time of the Congressional election in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What precinct and ward?—A. The first precinct of the Twenty-first ward.

Q. What capacity did you act in?—A. During the evening I was the lookout for the Democratic side of the house.

Q. Do you recollect who was the Republican watcher there?—A. Wilber F. Browder was one of them; and I forget who the other was. We had two and they had two.

Q. Whilst counting the votes there that evening in your presence as watcher, did you and Mr. Browder make any effort to tell the tickets one from the other—the Republican and Democratic tickets?—A. While they were in the box?

Q. No, sir.—A. As they were brought out?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. I think there was only one instance that I noticed it. I was not watching the box; I was watching the tally. I sat about 6 or 7 feet from the box. We had a new clerk there, and I was watching to see that Joyce did not get ahead of him.

Q. Mr. Browder said, in his evidence for the contestee, that he was one of the watchers, and that in taking out the ballots he several times guessed out loud what the character of the ticket was; that he remembered of guessing three times at it, saying, "Here comes a good Republican ticket"; or, "Here comes a good Democratic ticket": and that Mr. Carlton was next to him, and he was guessing at the Democratic ticket, and he (Browder) was guessing at the Republican ticket, but he missed it two out of three times, and Mr. Carlton missed it once or twice. You say you made an effort once?—A. I think it was once that the ticket came up over the top of the box. I was sitting to the east side of the table, fronting to the front side of the house, and Browder sat right there, and Bruce was right over next to Browder, and I sat farther off than Mr. Peelle is sitting from me now, and our clerk—Green—sat between Mr. Bruce and me, and I sat next to Green and was the last one in the room, watching that the tally was right; and I think at one time there was a ticket came over the top of the box; we had been joking about the ticket, and I said, "There comes a good Democratic ticket."

Q. Only once?—A. I do not think to exceed once.

Q. Do you recollect how often Mr. Browder tried that?—A. No; I do not recollect anything particular about that. I think when Brundage would take out a ticket that Browder made the remark several times, "Here comes a good Republican ticket."

Q. Do you recollect what was the result of your guessing?—A. I think I guessed a Democratic ticket.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Do you recollect anything about it now distinctly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You said you think you guessed it?—A. I am satisfied I did, for I could tell that ticket ten feet.

Q. You are satisfied now that you guessed it?—A. Yes, sir; it was a Democratic ticket, for I could tell the paper ten feet away.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Tell it from what?—A. From the thickness of the Republican ticket and the thinness of the Democratic ticket.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You could tell it was the Democratic ticket ten feet away?—A. I could tell either of them.

Q. How could you tell them?—A. I could stand at the edge of the chute, when the voter came up, and tell what ticket he had in his hand.

Q. You could tell one from the other equally well?—A. Yes sir.

Q. Could not you tell a Democratic ticket from a Republican ticket as well as you could a Republican from a Democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN W. CARLTON.

MOSES G. MCLAIN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You are county clerk of Marion County, Indiana?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Here is a certificate with reference to the vote for Emanuel R. Hawn, Hiram Z. Leonard, and William R. Myers, candidates for secretary of state, and William E. English and Stanton J. Peelle and Robert W. Medkirk for Congress, as cast in precinct No. 2, in Franklin Township, in this county. I will ask you if that is your seal and signature?—A. That is my own signature.

Q. And that is the record in your office?—A. Yes, sir; I dictated the heading of that certificate.

(Each and every question asked this witness is objected to by the contestee as not rebuttal evidence and for the further reason that the certificate referred to is not complete.)

(The certificate was introduced in evidence as a part of this deposition and will be found attached hereto, marked as Exhibit No. 1, its admission being objected to as not proper rebuttal.)

Q. Do you know upon what ticket William R. Myers was running as a candidate for secretary of state?—A. The Democratic ticket.

Q. And Emanuel R. Hawn?—A. The Republican ticket.

Q. And Hiram Z. Leonard?—A. The National or Greenback ticket.

Q. And Robert W. Medkirk was the National candidate for Congress?—A. Yes, sir; and Mr. Peelle was the Republican candidate, and Mr. English the Democratic candidate.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You do not know anthing about how the vote actually stood out there except from the returns?—A. No, sir; I only examined the canvass sheet as returned by the board of canvassers.

Q. Do you know anything about how the vote stood on the recount for sheriff?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you present at the time of the recount?—A. No, sir.
Q. You had charge of the ballots as clerk of this county?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. And still have possession of them?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are they still the same as when the board returned them?
(Objected to as not cross-examination and immaterial and irrelevant.)
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The ballots are in your possession now as clerk of this county?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Just as they were at the time of the last recount?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Just as they left them there?—A. Yes, sir.
Mr. WILSON. This examination is based upon what I regard as an illegal cross-examination by Mr. Peelle, but reserving the right to strike out that evidence, I desire to ask the witness a few questions.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. How are those tickets preserved?—A. The tickets are placed in the ballot-boxes in the bags returned by the several precinct inspectors, and were, by the commission appointed to recount them, resealed and placed back in the ballot-boxes and the ballot-boxes locked.
Q. What sort of bags are those?—A. Paper bags.
Q. What sort of a seal do you call it?—A. It is sealing-wax.
Q. Have they been in any vault?—No, sir; they have been in a room up-stairs in the court-house.
Q. Who occupies that room in the day time?—A. Nobody.
Q. Does anybody in the evening?—A. No, sir.
Q. In a room up-stairs in the court-house, separate and apart, and unoccupied during the day and night?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You have control of the key of that room?—A. Yes, sir.
Q. Does anybody else have any key to it?—A. No, sir.
Q. The ballots in the boxes are now just as they were returned by the precinct inspectors?—A. Yes, sir; so far as I know.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Have you looked into those boxes since?—A. No, sir.
Q. So you do not know, any further than simply the conclusion, whether they are there now as they were put there when you put them in there?—A. I know only that they are just as received from the board of canvassers appointed to recount.
Q. You put the tickets back in that room?—A. The ballot-boxes.
Q. And you have not been in there to look at those tickets since?—A. No, sir.
Q. And you do not know whether anybody has been in there or not, of your own knowledge?—A. I do not know.
Q. And you do not know that nobody either has or has not been in there?—A. No, sir; I do not.
Q. When was it they were put in there?—A. Sometime in December.
Q. December, 1882?—A. Yes, sir; and the keys were returned by the commissioners making the recount, and I placed them, on the day they were received by me, in an envelope and sealed the envelope, and that envelope has not been broken open.
Q. Where is that envelope?—A. In my office under lock and key.
Q. You have had charge of the ballot-boxes and the keys to the ballot-boxes both, from that time on?--A. Yes, sir.
Q. What are those ballot-boxes made out of—walnut?—A. Some of them are ash and some walnut. I got them from the township trustees.
Q. They are small ballot-boxes?—A. Just the ordinary ballot-boxes used at the general elections. I have not been in the room, that I remember of, for a year. I may have been in there, but I am not certain about it. I do not think I have.

MOSES G. MCLAIN.

Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of Moses G. McLain.—P. C. Hendricks N. P.

Be it remembered, that among the records and papers filed in the office of the clerk of the Marion circuit court, in and for the County of Marion and State of Indiana, there appears on file in said office the official canvass-sheet of the number of votes cast in the several voting precincts of said county, at the general election held on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1882, as returned and certified to said office by the board of canvassers of said county; that from said sheet it appears that the several candidates for secretary of state and for Representative in Congress received the following number of votes in precinct number two (2) in Franklin Township, in said county, to wit:

William R. Myers, candidate for secretary of state, received one hundred and seventy-two votes 172
Emanuel R. Hawn received one hundred and twenty-six votes 126
Hiram Z. Leonard received twenty-two votes 22

Total number of votes cast for secretary of state three hundred and twenty votes 320

For Representative in Congress:

That William E. English received one hundred and eighty-three votes 183
That Stanton J. Peelle received one hundred and twenty votes 120
That Robert W. Medkirk received eighteen votes 18

Total number of votes cast for Representative in Congress, three hundred and twenty-one 321

STATE OF INDIANA,
Marion County, ss:

I, Moses G. McLain, clerk of the Marion circuit court of the County of Marion, in the State of Indiana, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and complete copy and statement of the number of votes cast for the several candidates for secretary of state and for the several candidates for Representative in the Congress of the United States for the seventh (7th) Congressional district in the State of Indiana, as returned by the board of canvassers in said county to the clerk's office, in and for the second precinct in Franklin Township, in said Marion County, Indiana, as appears from the official canvass-sheet as returned and certified by the board of canvassers for the general election held on the seventh day of November, A. D. 1882; and I further certify that I am the legal custodian of said canvass-sheet containing the votes of the several precincts in said county for said candidates aforesaid.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto affix the seal of said court and subscribe my name, at Indianapolis, Indiana, this 22d day of December, A. D. 1883.

[SEAL.] MOSES G. McLAIN,
Clerk Marion Circuit Court.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 1 to deposition of Moses Q. McLain—P. C. Hendricks, N. P.

By agreement of all the parties, the further taking of these depositions was postponed until Monday, December 24, 1883.

MONDAY, December 24, 1883.

The parties met pursuant to adjournment.

JOSEPH E. McDONALD, recalled, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. You have testified recently in this case?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you what party was in power in this city and county at the time of the State election of 1878 and the State election of 1880, and the presidential election of 1880?—A. The Republican party in this city. The Democratic party has had control of this city but once since I have been in it, that I remember of, and that was in 1874.

Q. I believe you testified that you were chairman of the Democratic state central committee in this state in 1882 at the time of State election?—A. Yes; the State and Congressional election of that year.

Q. I will ask you if you know whether the Democrats counterfeited, or attempted to counterfeit the Republican ticket which was used at the November State election in this city or county.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. There was no counterfeit of the Republican ticket either printed or circulated in this county to my knowledge, nor do I know of any attempt to either print or circulate a counterfeit ticket of that kind. So far as the subject of printing tickets was discussed at all in our councils, it was understood that no ticket should be printed as the fac simile of the Republican ticket, with Democratic names on.

Q. Did the Democrats use, or attempt to use any counterfeit ticket?—A. I said there was none used to my knowledge.

Q. Did the Republicans use, or attempt to use, any counterfeit Democratic ticket, or any ticket in imitation of the Democratic ticket, at the November State election in 1882, in this county, and, if so, describe the ticket?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. Early in the morning, as I was going to the committee rooms, some one gave me a ticket headed "Democratic ticket," that was, on examination, a fac simile, as near as could be made, of the Democratic ticket printed and used that day, except that it had Mr. Peelle's name instead of Mr. English's for Congress. I saw several of them during the day; how numerously they were issued, I do not remember, but I made a special examination of that one, as it was the first one presented.

Q. Was there any effort made by the Democrats to stop the circulation and use of these imitation tickets on the day of election?—A. Yes; there was. I made efforts myself, and I understand they were generally made, to have the attention of the voters called to the fact, that such tickets were in circulation.

Q. Did you, or the Democratic State central committee, or any Democrat, or any person that you know of, offer any reward of any sum of money for a copy of the Republican ticket which the Republicans had determined to use or might use in the county at the State election in November, 1882?—A. No; I did not, or did not think of making any such offer. I had supposed, after the chairmen of the respective State committees had agreed upon the kind of heading that there should be to the tickets, with the understanding that the purpose was to have the tickets conform to the law, that there would really be no difference in the tickets except what the word "Democratic" or "Republican" might make. I supposed the tickets would be alike. There was no effort made on our part to make our tickets in any way, shape, or form, distinguishable from ordinary tickets printed on ordinary paper; and I did not know, until I saw these tickets on the morning of the election, that such effort would be made on the other side.

Q. Was there any reason known to you prior to the election why the Democrats should want a copy of the Republican ticket in advance of the election?—A. I have answered that.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Who first handed you a copy of the counterfeit ticket that you spoke of?—A. I am unable to say.

Q. Was it a Republican or a Democrat?—A. I think he was a Democrat. I can tell you where it was handed to me better than I can the name of the party. I was going down to the committee rooms in the First National Bank building, and within a few feet of the stairway leading up, some one handed me this ticket.

Q. You say it was a Democrat?—A. My impression would be that it was a Democrat, because he seemed to be bringing it to me for inspection.

Q. Did you see any other ticket of that kind during the day?—A. I am not able to recall any.

Q. I understood you to say in your examination-in-chief that you saw other tickets of that kind during the day?—A. It might be that I did.

Q. Did you see any of those tickets in the hands of Republicans anywhere?—A. I do not recollect the ticket in the hands of any Republican canvasser.

Q. Do you not know that on the day of the election that that ticket was denounced by Mr. Peelle?—A. I heard so some time during the day, but at what time I heard it I could not tell you.

Q. That Mr. Peelle had denounced the first one he saw, about one o'clock, in the hands of Mr. Leiber, in the twenty-third ward?—A. I did not hear where it was. I heard it some time during the day that you had denounced the ticket, but where I could not say.

Q. Do you not know that I inquired of Mr. Leiber in the 23d ward, if there were any more tickets of that kind there and he was unable to find any?—A. I know nothing about that because I was not in the 23d ward during the day, to my remembrance.

Q. You was not down there?—A. I think not; I think I did not get further than the 17th.

Q. You said that the chairman of the Republican State central committee and yourself had agreed upon the heading of the ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was with reference simply to the head of the ticket?—A. I think it was.

Q. I hand you a copy of a circular signed by yourself, as chairman of the State central committee, and John Overmyer, on that subject; state if that is a copy of that agreement?—A. When you handed me this the other day, it was the first time I had seen the paper purporting to be that agreement from the time it was published in the papers just before the election. My impression then was, that the agreement was signed by the chairman of the National, or Greenback party, as well as by Mr. Overmyer and myself. When the paper was first brought to me—it was not prepared at our committee-rooms, but was sent there by Mr Overmyer—it was prepared for the chairman of the Democratic and Republican State central committees, and I suggested that we had better embrace the three.

Q. That is the agreement, is it?—A. Substantially, I think.

Q. Do you know of any difference in the agreement between that copy and the one you spoke of?—A. No; not as to the substance of the paper.

Q. That goes simply to the head of the ticket?—A. Yes; so far as the printed agreement here is concerned, it is limited to the head of the ticket. My understanding is that the object of this was to secure uniformity as near as possible, and conformity to the law at the same time, in the printing of the tickets. I think that the signature of the chairman of the National committee was to the paper that was finally signed; I feel very confident of that. I have thought over it a good deal and I feel very confident it was done so as to embrace the three parties.

Q. If the name of the chairman of the Greenback committee was signed to it, the agreement is the same?—A. I think, substantially, that while I did not originate the proposition, in acceding to it my idea and my purpose was to secure fairness and uniformity in the printing and the circulation of the ticket.

Q. And no exception to the head of the ticket?—A. And no exception to the head of the ticket.

Q. You are not certain about that?—A. No, sir; I am not certain. If you had not shown me that I should have been very certain that the other was added to it. I do not see it there, and therefore I cannot say.

Q. Who was chairman of the Greenback committee?—A. I think Mr. Spear was.

Q. He was a resident of this city?—A. Yes, sir; I think the chairman was a resident of this city. I am not certain that he was the chairman, but I think he was the chairman.

(The certificate was offered in evidence as a part of the cross-examination of this witness, and will be found attached hereto and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

The WITNESS. I remember of making that objection when it was brought to me—that it ought to embrace the three.

Q. But whether you are right or not, you think that is the one you signed?—A. Yes, sir; substantially that.

Q. Is there any change in any ward?—A. I could not say that there was; the main purpose of that agreement was to recognize, as we understood it, the decision of the supreme court with reference to the head of the ticket; that if there was nothing but "Democratic" or "Republican" at the head, inside, it was not to be regarded as an infringement of the statute. The supreme court under the form of the statute, which is not very different from the present one, has held that that was not a violation of the statute, and that it did not constitute such a distinguishing mark as vitiated the ballot, and our purpose in this was to have that decision recognized.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. Under the new statute?—A. Yes, sir; recognized under that.

Q. This agreement reads:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., October 24, 1882.

In view of section 4701 of Indiana Revised Statutes of 1881 and of the decisions of our supreme court applicable thereto, we, the undersigned, deem it proper to say that we have no doubt but that to print tickets headed "Democratic ticket" or "Republican ticket" is a substantial compliance with the law.

It is entirely proper, in our judgment, that the tickets to be voted at the coming election be so headed.

In view of our statute and the decisions of our supreme court thereon, no one should raise any question, anywhere, about the legality of tickets so headed.

J. E. MCDONALD,
Chairman Democratic State Central Com.
JOHN OVERMEYER,
Chairman Republican State Central Com.

This agreement relates to the head of the ticket.—A. We meant the head of the ticket.

Q. That grew out, did it not, of the fact that the new section of the statute was somewhat similar to the old, and you wished to remove any doubt or uncertainty as to the heading?—A. There was a difference in the phraseology of the two statutes, but we regarded the decision made under the old statute as covering that question.

Q. And you wished by agreement to fix it?—A. Yes, sir; so there would be no trouble raised as to the question of those tickets.

Q. Did you intend that it should have anything to do with anything else?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any other agreement made between you as to any other features of the ticket?—A. No: I did not prepare that paper, but it was brought to our rooms by some one representing the Republican committee—their secretary perhaps—and I was asked to join in it, and after examining the paper I think all the suggestion I made was that it should embrace the representatives of the three parties, as the National party at that time had an organization and a State representation.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Then, as a matter of fact, the name of the chairman of the Greenback committee was not on the paper when you signed to it?—A. I am inclined to think it was; I think that paper was changed—that is, the addition was made and his name was signed to it.

Q. You have just said you suggested that Why did you do that if his name was there?—A. There was no place on the paper when it was first brought to me for the name of the chairman of that committee.

Q. You say the agreement is the same whether his name was signed to it or not?—A. Oh, yes.

J. E. McDONALD.

Exhibit No. 1 to J. E. McDonald's deposition.—Paul C. Hendricks, N. P.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., October 24, 1882.

In view of section 4701 of Indiana Revised Statutes of 1881, and of the decisions of our supreme court applicable thereto, we, the undersigned, deem it proper to say that we have no doubt but that to print tickets headed "Democratic Ticket," or "Republican Ticket," is a substantial compliance with the law.

It is entirely proper, in our judgment, that the tickets to be voted at the coming election be so headed.

In view of our statute, and the decisions of our supreme court thereon, no one should raise any question, anywhere, about the legality of tickets so headed.

J. E. McDONALD,
Chairman Democratic State Central Committee.
JOHN OVERMYER,
Chairman Republican State Central Committee.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 1, J. E. McDonald's testimony.—P. C. Hendricks, N. P.

AUSTIN H. BROWN recalled:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. I will ask you what party was in power in this city and county at the time of the State election in 1878, and the State election in 1880, and the Presidential election in 1880?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. The Republican party.

Q. I hand you three tickets headed "Republican Ticket," the heading being in imitation of writing, and will ask you whether that kind of ticket was used by the Republicans at the State election in October, 1880; the tickets being headed for Albert G. Porter for governor?—A. Yes, sir; I would say that those were the tickets that were used. I remember the heading distinctly.

Q. What official position did you hold in the Democratic party in 1880?—A. I was chairman of the Democratic county central committee of Marion County.

Q. What kind of a heading is on these three Republican tickets I have shown you?—A. The words "Republican Ticket" are in imitation of writing, evidently engraved, and I would think an electrotype was used in printing these tickets.

Q. What kind of paper are those tickets printed on?—A. Print paper.

(The tickets were offered in evidence as a part of this deposition and will be found attached hereto and marked Exhibits Nos. 1, 2, and 3, respectively.)

Q. I also hand you a ticket headed "Republican Ticket," "State Ticket," for Albert G. Porter, and I will ask you whether that heading is printed or an engraving?—A. The heading is engraved, I should think, on wood; that is the ticket used in 1880. It may have been electrotyped.

Q. Are the names on that ticket I have just handed to you the same as those on the three Republican tickets previously shown you?—A. They are the same identically.

I would say the same form with the exception of the head; I would say that as a printer.

Q. Was there not another ticket used by the Republicans in this county at the election in October, 1880?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. There were some used and circulated of another kind.

Q. Describe the other kind.

(Objected to.)

A. There was a ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," with a flag across the face of the words "Democratic Ticket," with the name of Franklin Landers printed at the top with a scroll around it, and the name of Daniel Lemon for sheriff, with a scroll around it, and the balance contained the names of the Republican candidates, with those two exceptions. It was in imitation of a ticket that had been printed by the Democrats at Greenfield by William Mitchell, and brought to this city and delivered to us on the Monday before the election.

The last ticket referred to by the witness, was offered in evidence as a part of this deposition, and will be found attached hereto, and marked Exhibit No. 4.)

Q. I call your attention to this ticket headed "Democratic Ticket," with a flag at the head of it, and I ask you if that ticket was used in this county by the Democrats at the election in October, 1880?—A. These were used for a while in the morning until it was discovered that there had been an imitation of it, and then they were withdrawn in the city. They were used in the country, because we had no opportunity to withdraw them. There was a smaller ticket printed by Carlon & Hallenbeck, and the former were taken up and the latter substituted for them.

Q. The one last shown you?—A. Yes, sir.

(The last two tickets referred to by the witness were offered in evidence as a part of his deposition, and will be found attached hereto, marked as Exhibits Nos. 5 and 6, respectively.)

Q. You stated that these two tickets were used by the Democrats at that election; and you stated that you was the chairman of the Democratic county central committee. If you know, you can state why two tickets were used by the Democrats at that election.

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I substantially made the answer in the other question. I said it was discovered that there was a counterfeit ticket of the one with the flag on it, and as soon as that was discovered the order was sent and we had the other tickets printed and substituted. I suppose it was 10 or 11 o'clock in the day before we got around with the ticket at the polls. The others were withdrawn from circulation, and attention called to the counterfeit ticket that was used, and they were all instructed at the polls not to peddle any more of that class of tickets as our own.

Q. What day was it, do you say, that the Democrats got that flag ticket—what day of the week?—A. On the Monday before the election. The election was on Tuesday.

Q. Where did you get it from?—A. They came by express in boxes from Greenfield, and they were delivered at the American Express Company's office in this city. and it was through the connivance of some of the express officers, and the county Republican committee, carried to the Journal printing office, and taken to the Republican committee rooms, and there opened and some of the contents robbed, and there is where they got the ticket to make the imitation. We got trace of it and was there within half an hour after the thing occurred, and I know I had a controversy with Mr. Sloan about it, and he explained to me that he was satisfied his men were deceived about it.

Q. Was there any other ticket but these two Democratic tickets I have shown you, circulated or used by the Democrats at that election?—A. No, sir; not to my recollection. Not to my knowlege.

Q. Did the Democrats counterfeit or attempt to counterfeit the Republican ticket which was used at the November election in 1882, in this city and county?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Q. Did the Democrats use, or attempt to use, any counterfeit ticket or tickets in imitation of the Republican ticket, at the State election in this county, in November, 1882?—A. No, sir; Our candidates for local offices depended on pasters to secure the opposition votes. There was no such thing as a bogus ticket put in use.

Q. Did the Republicans use or attempt to use a counterfeit ticket or any ticket in imitation of the Democratic State ticket at the November election in 1882, in this county?—A. There was a Demoeratic ticket with the name of Stanton J. Peelle for Congress, instead of English; and there was one with Wasson on for treasurer, and they were both printed at the same establishment; but when you ask the question generally, I would say that I don't think the Republicans as a party did, but they were circulated by some Republicans in the city.

Q. Was there any effort made by the Democrats to stop the circulation and use of that imitation ticket on the day of election?—A. Yes, sir; as soon as it become known there was a handbill printed and posted at all the precints, calling attention to that fact.

Q. I believe you offered a specimen of that ticket-in-chief to your evidence?—A. It was exhibited, I think.

Q. Did you, as the chairman of the Democratic State central committee, or any Democrat, or any person you know of, offer any reward of any sum of money for a copy of the Republican ticket, which the Republicans had determined to use, or might use, or did use in this county, at the State election, November, 1882?—A. Not that I heard of.

Q. Was there any reason known to you prior to the election why the Democrats should want a copy of the Republican ticket in advance of the election?—A. No, sir; not that I know of; the Democrats had but one ticket that time.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Don't you know that the Democrats had a ticket headed "Republican ticket" with two of the Democratic candidates on, and did not you discover those tickets in the recount of the election in 1882?—A. No, sir; I do not remember any such.

Q. Don't you know that there was nearly 100 tickets in the ballots you counted headed "Republican ticket" on the identical kind of paper that you denominate as spring-back paper that had the names of the Democratic candidates written on them?—A. I thought you said "printed;" I think there was some voters who wanted to keep the knowledge from other people.

Q. I did not ask you that; I ask you if there was not such tickets as those?—A. Probably there was some, but not a great many; I would not say there were many.

Q. One hundred?—A. No, sir; not near that.

Q. There was some of that kind of tickets?—A. Yes, sir; there was a few tickets with the Democratic ticket pasted on, but I was referring to the fact of the tickets being printed and circulated.

Q. What Mr. Sloan was that you referred to a moment ago?—A. E. W. Sloan, the general agent of the American Express Company.

Q. Had the express company that he was agent of brought these tickets from Hancock County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did they come to be delivered at the Journal Company?—A. Mr. Granville Cox, employed at the Journal Company, called at the American Express Co.'s office and notified them that any express matter addressed to William Mitchell should be delivered to them; even Mr. Mitchell had his own name addressed on the package, and he notified me and gave me the receipt, and said: "Why don't you go and get your box?" and I sent Mr. Schley, our secretary, after it and it was gone.

Q. Had you any talk with Mr. Cox?—A. I did not.

Q. Do you know anything about it yourself?—A. I know that to be a fact.

Q. How do you know it?—A. Because Mr. Hasselman has talked about it since and, bragged about it since, and thought it was a smart trick.

Q. Do you?—A. I heard of it, and I said I did not regard it as a very smart trick.

Q. Don't you know that what you say with reference to that is from hearsay, and you have no personal knowledge upon the subject at all?—A. No, sir; I don't. I have personal knowledge of my own secretary coming and reporting the fact to me, and he said the box was not there; that it was taken away from there, and he wanted to know what to do about it, and I told him to go and get it immediately.

Q. Don't you know that the box was delivered by mistake to the Journal Company?—A. I know he found it upstairs opened.

Q. What Mr. Schley is that?—A. John Schley.

Q. Where does he live?—A. In this city. He was secretary of the county committee.

Q. You got those tickets, did you?—A. The boxes; yes, sir; and the tickets we distributed throughout the county and city, as we had the right to do; they belonged to us.

Q. How many Republican tickets in the election of 1878 were counterfeited by the Democrats in this city?—A. I do not know anything about the campaign of 1878.

Q. You testified here that there was no tickets counterfeited by the Democrats in 1878.—A. You asked me how many I saw counterfeited; I say I do not know anything about that campaign. I was not connected with the committee, and my recollection is I never saw any.

Q. Do you know whether the Democrats counterfeited any tickets in 1878?—A. I say that I do not know. I never had anything to do with it to know that they did or did not do i .

Q. And they did not counterfeit any ticket in 1880?—A. I know they did not in 1880. I have personal knowledge of that, as chairman af the committee.

Q. You mean, as chairman you did not see anything of that kind.—A. It could not be done without my knowledge.

Q. The candidates could not get out a ticket without your knowledge?—A. I would not have allowed it to be circulated if they had.

Q. How would you have known it if they had been gotten out and circulated?—A. That was easily discovered by the men at the polls. We had our workers at the polls as every other party had. There was no ticket in 1880 counterfeited by the Democrats.

Q. Who was the Democratic candidate for sheriff in 1880?—A. Mr. Lemon.

Q. Don't you know that Lemon got out a counterfeit ticket in 1880?—A. I know he was charged with it. I do not know that to be the fact.

Q. Does he live in this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is here now?—A. I suppose so; I do not know anything about that.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. What Mr. Hasselman was that you referred to awhile ago?—A. Ott H. Hassel man, and the local express agent here. I had a conversation with him upon the same subject.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. What express agent was that?—A. I don't who it was.

Q. What express company was it?—A. The American Express Company.

Q. Was Mr. Folsom the agent then, and is he now?—A. It was the man behind the counter. I don't know who it was now; I know he made that explanation to me when I went there.

Q. Mr. Folsom has been the agent of the company here for ten years.—A. I know the gentleman's face, but I do not know his name.

Q. Don't you know that the same gentleman is there now who was there then?—A. I do not know. I think, perhaps, you are right about that.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. In the recount on the vote for sheriff on the Republican ticket, was there any difference; and, if so, state what difference there was in the material, weight, and quality of the tickets used and voted by the Republicans, as you found them in the boxes?—A. These so-called spring-back tickets?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. There was no perceptible difference in handling them. There may have been a difference in the width, but none in the length, and certainly none in the quality of the paper.

Q. You think there was a slight difference, and there may have been some in the width.—A. I would not say that.

By Mr. PEELLE:

Q. On that recount you stated that the comparison you made was with the precinct returns and also the returns as published in the Indianopolis Journal.—A. I said sometimes we did that; not every time.

Q. I hand you the table published in the Indianapolis Journal of Saturday, November 11th, purporting to be the official returns of the votes; is that the table you made your comparison with?—A. It is a copy of the same thing.

Mr. PEELLE. I reoffer this in evidence as a part of the testimony of Mr. Brown, and ask that it be marked also as a part of his deposition.

(The same exhibit will be found attached to the deposition of Austin Doherty, and marked as an exhibit to that deposition, and also to the deposition of Austin H. Brown.)

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. How many Republican tickets did you say there were in there with the Democratic names pasted or written over Republican names? You say you cannot give the number?—A. You mean for Congress?

Q. Any way. You referred to Republican tickets?—A. You mean with the entire ticket?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Not a great many; not a great many with the whole ticket on. There were a good many with the Democratic candidates for legislature on. There were more, I think, with the Republican State ticket and the balance Democratic, except that they voted for Congressman for Mr. Peelle, and there was a few had the entire ticket pasted on, and some had the names of Republican candidates scratched out and the Democratic candidates inserted in writing.

Q. You say there was more of the legislative ticket than any other?—A. I think so; that is my impression now.

Q. And you do not know how many?—A. No, sir; there was a great many scratched tickets in the whole count. We found those in every precinct.

Q. I believe you certified that you did not find a great many Democratic tickets with Mr. Peelle's name printed on?—A. I certified in chief that I did not recollect the number of these imitation tickets, only I did not think it exceeded 12. I think that is what I testified, and that is still my recollection. There may have been more. My impression is there were more, but I cannot state positively.

(Indorsed:) Exhibit No. 6 to deposition of A. H. Brown—P. C. Hendricks, N. P.

WILLIAM A. SULLIVAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What is your business?—A. Freight agent of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Saint Louis and Chicago Railway.

Q. How long have you lived in Indianapolis?—A. All my life; 25 years.

Q. Were you in this city in November, 1882, at the time of the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you attended that election that day?—A. I voted.

Q. Where were you most of the day?—A. At my place of business.

Q. Where is that?—A. On South Delaware street, on the corner of Louisiana street.

Q. Did you see any ticket headed "Democratic ticket" and all the names Democratic except Mr. Peelle's name was on as the candidate for Congress?—A. I did.

Q. Where, and under what circumstances, and who had them?

(Objected to as not rebuttal.)

A. I was out in the freight-house on the morning of the election, and Mr. George Hawkins (who was deputy collector of customs), had some of those tickets, and handed me one and said, "Here is your ticket; vote this."

Q. Did you read it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you read it?—A. I read it at the time he handed it to me, and was informed by the man who has charge of the freight-house down there, that the tickets were not good; that the name of Mr. Peelle was inserted for Congress.

Q. That was the first time you knew of it; when your attention was called to it.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many tickets did he have?—A. I could not say as to that.

Q. Did he have a bundle of them, or only one ticket?—A. He had several in his hands at the time.

Q. Do you know Mr. Hawkins' politics?—A. No. I do not know him politically, but I presume he is a Republican, of course.

Q. Do you know whether he left any of those tickets with anybody else there?—A. Yes, sir; he did. He distributed them amongst the freight-house men.

Q. Do you know the politics of those freight-house men?—A. There is about ten out of twelve Democrats.

WILLIAM A. SULLIVAN.

JOHN SCHLEY, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. What was your position, if any, in connection with the Democratic organization at the time of the election in 1880, the State election?—A. In 1880 I was secretary of the Democratic county committee.

Q. Do you know where the Democratic ticket with the flag at the head of it was printed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. Greenfield, Ind.

Q. Sent here, was it?—A. Sent here by express.

Q. Directed to who?—A. My impression is it was directed to Bill Mitchell.

Q. Did you get those tickets?—A. I went to the express office two or three times, and the first time I went there they told me they were not there, and the next time they told me they had sent them by wagon to be delivered, and they failed to come to the committee rooms, and I began to get uneasy and went back, and I really did not know what to do, and finally, towards four o'clock in the evening, perhaps, George Bruce and myself started out to hunt them up, and we found a trace of them, and we found the driver who delivered them, and he said the box was addressed to Mitchell, and had been delivered at the Journal office.

Q. Did you go there?—A. We went immediatly over there to the Journal office—the Express office was in the Iron Block on Washington street, and we went to the Journal office in company with the driver and inquired for them, and I know Ed. Hastings was there and perhaps Mr. Cox, and I think we went in the storerooms and hunted the lower floors for them and could not find them and I started to go out, and I said probably they are in some other part of the establishment, and Ed. whistled or telephoned up in the bindery and he told me there was a couple of boxes delivered there for Mitchell and they sent for them and I identified them in a minute.

Q. Had they been opened?—A. One of them had.

Q. And you got them and carried them away?—A. Yes, sir; the express driver was with us and we sent the express-wagon over there and got them down.

Q. He stated that he had delivered them there?—A. He stated that he delivered them there, and we opened them at the committee rooms that night and distributed them to the several wards. Some of the nails had been drawn out of the nail holes, and in replacing them they did not get them in the same nail hole, and there were several bundles rendered worthless by reason of the nails having gone through and driven down in another place.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. You do not know how that was done?—A. No, sir; It was my supposition that they had been opened.

Q. You missed some of the tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. None were taken out that you know of?—A. I do not know.

Q. You do not know whether the box was reopened here or whether it was an old box at the time Mr. Mitchell nailed it down?—A. No, sir; I would not like to swear positively.

Q. You do not know?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any talk with Mr. Sloan, the agent, about that?—A. No, sir; I do not know Mr. Sloan. I would not know him if I saw him. I saw some gentlemen in the office and inquired about them two or three times.

Q. Did you have any talk with the agent at the express office on the subject?—A. with one gentleman; I do not know who it was.

Q. Did Mr. Cox say anything to you about it?—A. I would not say positively. It is my impression that he did not.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Granville Cox?—A. I am not positive. I am positive Mr. Hastings was there, and there were some other gentlemen there, and I think one of them was Mr. Cox.

Q. Did you say anything to Mr. Austin H. Brown upon the subject?—A. Yes, sir; I talked with him.

Q. Simply that they had been taken by mistake over there?—A. Yes, sir; that they had been delivered at the Journal office, and we found them in the fourth floor up in the bindery.

Q. Did Mr. Sloan say anything to you about their having been delivered there, or Granville Cox?—A. I do not know that I had a word with Mr. Sloan.

Q. Do you recollect any such thing; you do not know Mr. Sloan?—A. No, sir.

JOHN SCHLEY.

LEVI P. HARLAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON;

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. Levi P. Harlan; age, 31; residence, Marion County, Indiana.

Q. Were you in this county at the time of the Congressional election, in November, 1882?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position did you hold?—A. I was chairman of the Democratic county committee.

Q. Did you hold any office at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. Superintendent of the county schools.

Q. Did the Democrats counterfeit or attempt to counterfeit the Republican ticket which was used at the November State election, in 1882, in this city or county?—A. No, sir. In referring to a matter of that kind you must know that I answer from my own knowledge. Speaking for the committee, I know they did not.

Q. Did the Democrats use, or attempt to use, any counterfeit ticket or any ticket in imitation of the Republican ticket at that election in this county?—A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you if you saw the tickets used by the Republicans that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any difference in the tickets that you saw as to quality of the material or as to thickness?—A. Oh, yes; I think there was.

Q. Was there any difference in the Republican tickets, not between the Democratic and Republican, but was there any difference in the character of the Republican tickets as between themselves as to material or quality?—A. Not as I know of. Not that I could ascertain by an examination.

Q. Did you or the Democratic county central committee, or any Democrat, or any person that you know of, offer any reward or sum of money for a copy of the Republican ticket which the Republicans had determined to use, or might have used, or did use in this county at that election?—A. Not that I know of.

Cross-examination by Mr. PEELLE:

Q. Those things hardly ever emanate from committees, do they?—A. Indeed, I could not say.

Q. Committees never allow themselves to be made parties to duplicating tickets at all, do they?—A. I know of one committee that did not; I only speak for my own committee; I know our committee did not undertake anything of that kind.

Q. Do you know whether your candidates did anything in that line?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know that they did not duplicate the tickets?

(Objected to.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you know that some of the candidates on the Democratic ticket did counterfeit some of the Republican tickets?—A. No; I do not know that.

Q. You mean you do not know it from your own personal knowledge.—A. I never heard of it before; I never heard the question suggested.

Q. Did not Mr. Lemon?—A. Not that I know of; I have never seen or heard of a fraudulent ticket of that kind; if there was one published, I knew nothing of it.

Q. If there was any money offered, you do not know anything about it?—A. No, sir.

LEVI P. HARLAN,

W. W. SPENCER, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct examination by Mr. WILSON:

Q. Your name, age, and residence?—A. Wm. W. Spencer; age, 32; residence, 225 North Pine street, Indianapolis, Ind.

Q. How long have you lived here?—A. Six years last June.

Q. Were you in this city at the November election of 1882, the Congressional election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hold any official position in the organization of the Democratic party in that campaign?—A. I was secretary of the Democratic county central committee.

Q. Did the Democrats counterfeit or attempt to counterfeit the Republican ticket which was used at the November election in 1882, in this city and county, if you know?—A. They did not.

Q. I ask that question of you as connected with that committee, and I also will ask you if you have any information of that sort from any one outside of that committee?—A. The committee never did it. They never consulted about it at any of their meetings, and they never authorized any one to do it, and I never heard of any one outside of the committee doing it.

Q. Did the Democrats use, or attempt to use any such ticket that you know of?—A. They did not.

Q. Did you or the Democratic County Central Committee, or any Democrat, or any person that you know of, offer any reward or sum of money for a copy of the Republican ticket which was used in that election?—A. No, sir.

WILLIAM W. SPENCER.

It is agreed by and between the contestant and the contestee, that the testimony of Charles Johnson and C. B. Wing (both of said persons being absent from the city), shall be read in evidence without being subscribed by said parties.

STATE OF INDIANA,
Marion County, sct:

I, Paul C. Hendricks, notary public, within and for said county and State, do certify that the witnesses, whose depositions are hereunto attached, were by me first duly sworn according to law, to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relating to matters in controversy in the cause hereinafter mentioned; and that said witnesses were examined according to law, and the foregoing depositions, to which this certificate is attached, were taken and reduced to writing by me, and under my direction by disinterested parties, and subscribed to by said witnesses, as aforesaid stated. I further certify that the taking of said depositions commenced on the 15th day of December, 1883, at 9 o'clock a. m., of said day, at the office of Duncan, Smith & Wilson, No. 76 East Washington street, in the city of Indianapolis, Marion County, and State of Indiana, and continued from day to day, as hereinbefore set forth; that the contestor, William E. English, was present in person and by counsel, Mr. John R. Wilson, of the firm of Duncan, Smith & Wilson, and that said contestee was present in person. I further certify that the foregoing depositions were taken in pursuance of the notice and agreements of parties hereto attached, and at the time and place therein specified, to be used in behalf of the contestor, William E. English, as evidence in rebuttal, in the matter of the contested election for a seat in the Forty-eighth Congress of the United States, from the seventh Congressional district of the State of Indiana, in which William E. English is contestor, and Stanton J. Peelle is contestee.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal this 29th day of December, A. D. 1833.

WOOD vs. PETERS.

PAPERS AND TESTIMONY

IN THE CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE OF

S. N. WOOD vs. S. R. PETERS,

FROM THE STATE OF KANSAS AT LARGE.

JANUARY 10, 1884.—Referred to the Committee on Elections and ordered to be printed.

NOTICE OF CONTEST.

No. 1.

To the Hon. SAMUEL R. PETERS:

You are hereby notified that the undersigned, Samuel N. Wood, a resident of the city of Topeka, in the county of Shawnee, in the State of Kansas, of the age of 57 years, and who has been continuously, since the admission of Kansas into the Union as a State, and for over twenty-one years a citizen, elector, and inhabitant of the State of Kansas and of the United States, and having all the qualifications under the laws and Constitution of the State of Kansas and of the United States necessary for a member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, intends to contest your seat as a member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States from the State of Kansas at large, and your right to the same, to which you claim to have been elected at the general election held in the State of Kansas on November 7th, 1882, for the term in and of the Forty-eighth Congress of the United States, commencing on March 4th, 1883, and ending on March 4th, 1885.

You are further notified that the undersigned specifies particularly the grounds upon which he relies in said contest, to be as follows:

I. That you were on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November, 1879, elected to the office of judge of the district court within and for the 9th judicial district of the State of Kansas for the term of four years, commencing on the second Monday of January, 1880, and ending on the second Monday in January, 1884; that you received the proper certificate of election to the said office of judge; duly qualified by taking the oath of office, and entered upon the duties of said office of judge on the second Monday of January, 1880, and that continuously since then, up to and including the time you were served with this notice of contest, you have been and now are in the exercise and discharge of the duties of the said office of judge; that upon qualifying for the said office of judge you took and subscribed to the following oath of office:

"I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Kansas, and faithfully discharge the duties of the office of judge: So help me God."

That at the time of the admission of the State of Kansas into the Union as a State there was the following provision in the Constitution of the State of Kansas, and which ever since then has been, and now is, part and parcel thereof, and of all which you and the electors of the State of Kansas were advised and at all times well knew—that is to say:

"ARTICLE 3.—JUDICIAL.

"Section 13. The justices of the supreme court and judges of the district court shall at stated times receive for their services such compensation as may be provided by law, which shall not be increased during their respective term of office: Provided, Such compensation shall not be less than fifteen hundred dollars to each justice or judge each year; and such justices or judges shall receive no fees or perquisites, nor hold any other office of profit or trust under the authority of the State or the United States during the term of office for which said justices and judges shall be elected, nor practice law in any of the courts in the State during their continuance in office."

That at the general election held in the State of Kansas on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November, 1882, being the 7th day of November, 1882, you received 99,866 votes for Congressman at large from the State of Kansas unapportioned to any Congressional district, and for the term as such member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and of the Forty-eighth Congress thereof, commencing on March 4th, 1883, and ending on March 4th, 1885.

That the undersigned at the said election held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November, 1882, aforesaid, received 83,364 votes for Congressman at large from the State of Kansas unapportioned to any Congressional district, and for the term as such member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, commencing March 4th, 1883, and ending March 4th, 1885, the same being the Forty-eighth Congress.

That by reason of the facts aforesaid you were, are, and will be personally ineligible and disqualified to accept or hold said seat as a member in said House of Representatives for the term aforesaid, and were, are, and will be, for the same period, personally ineligible and disqualified to accept or hold or be a member of the house of representatives of the legislature of the State of Kansas; that as a citizen of the State of Kansas you are forbidden and prevented by its constitution from accepting or holding said seat in the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States; that as a judge of the district court of the State of Kansas you are especially forbidden and prevented by its constitution from accepting or holding the same; that all votes cast for or received by you for the same were so cast and received by you in violation of law, and are illegal, void, and as if cast for no person; that by reason of your ineligibilty and disqualification aforesaid, by reason of the illegality of the votes cast for you, as aforesaid, and by reason of the votes cast for the undersigned, and by reason of his having all the legal qualifications under the Constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of Kansas to accept and hold the same, he hereby claims said seat and gives you notice of his intention to contest the same, and of all which you will please take notice.

Dated at Topeka, Kansas, Dec. 5, 1882.

S. N. WOOD,
Contestant.

I acknowledge service of the within, by copy delivered to me by S. N. Wood, Dec. 13th, 1882, expressly reserving all rights as to competency and qualification of contestor, and also all rights as to sufficiency of notice and service of notice.

S. R. PETERS.

(Indorsement:) 48th Congress; S. N. Wood, contestant, vs. S. R. Peters, contestee. Original notice of contest and service of same. State of Kansas at large.

ANSWER TO NOTICE OF CONTEST.

No. 2.

In the matter of the purported contest of S. N. Wood versus S. R. Peters.

Now comes the undersigned, and for answer to the notice of contest served upon him by S. N. Wood, esq., on the 13th day of December, A. D. 1882, says:

First. He denies each and every allegation in said notice contained, except as hereinafter expressly admitted. The allegations admitted are as follows, to wit: He admits that he was duly elected judge of the 9th judical district of the State of Kansas, at the time and for the term as alleged; that he received his certificate of election, took the oath of office, and entered upon the discharge of the duties of said office, as alleged in said notice; that at the regular election held in the State of Kansas, on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1882, he received 99,866 votes for the office of Representative in the 48th Congress of the United States, from the State of Kansas at large; and that said S. N. Wood, esq., received 83,364 for the same office.

Second. That the resignation of the undersigned as judge of the 9th judicial district of the State of Kansas was, by the governor of the State of Kansas, accepted, and the same took effect on the 31st day of December, 1882, since which time he, the undersigned, has ceased to act as judge of said district, and since which time he has ceased to receive any of the honors or emoluments of the same.

Third. That on the 7th day of November, A. D. 1882, the State of Kansas was by law authorized to elect four Representatives from the State at large to the 48th Congress of the United States, whose terms of office should begin on March 4th, A. D. 1883; that on said day an election was held, as provided by law; that at said election one E. N. Morrill received 98,349 legal votes for the office of Representative in Congress from the State of Kansas at large; that said Morrill has been lawfully declared duly elected to said office as one of said four persons to be elected by the State at said election, and has received his certificate of election; that one B. W. Perkins at said election received 98,338 legal votes for said office; that said Perkins has been lawfully declared duly elected to said office as one of the persons to be elected by the State at said election and has received his certificate of election; that one Lewis Hanback at said election received 97,354 legal votes, and has been lawfully declared duly elected as one of the persons to be elected by the State at said election, and has received his certificate of election; that the undersigned received 99,866 legal votes at said election and has been lawfully declared duly elected to said office as one of said four persons to be elected by the State at said election, and has received his certificate of election; that at said election the whole number of votes cast was 183,000; that each of the four persons hereinbefore last referred to received a majority of all the votes cast at said election; that but four persons could by law be elected to said office; that the votes received by the undersigned at said election were legal votes, cast by duly-qualified electors of the State of Kansas; that at least 90,000 of the electors of the State of Kansas, who voted at said election for Messrs. E. N. Morrill, B. W. Perkins, and Lewis Hanback, voted also for the undersigned; that the undersigned received 1,517 votes more than said Morrill; 1,528 votes more than said Perkins; 2,513 votes more than said Hanback, and 16,502 votes more than S. N. Wood, esq.; that at least 5,000 of the electors who voted for S. N. Wood, esq., also voted for the undersigned; that said S. N. Wood, esq., not having received a majority of the votes cast for said office, has no right in law to contest the election of the undersigned; that he has no sufficient interest in said office to authorize him to institute contest proceedings; wherefore the undersigned denies the right of the said S. N. Wood, esq., to appear before the House of Representatives of the 48th Congress, or before any of the committees of said House, as contestor against him, the undersigned.

Fourth. The undersigned respectfully submits to the House of Representatives of the 48th Congress of the United States the following facts, which, if satisfactorily proven, entitle him to membership, to wit: That he is forty years old; that he is now and always has been a citizen of the United States; that he is now and has been for the last ten years continuously an inhabitant of the State of Kansas; that he has received a certificate of election from the secretary of state for the State of Kansas in due form of law, evidencing his right to a seat in the House of Representatives of the United States, which certificate is now on file in the office of the Clerk of said House.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

S. R. PETERS.

TOPEKA, KANSAS, January 10th, 1883.

Service of the foregoing answer of S. R. Peters, esq., by copy, is hereby acknowledged on the date last above written.

J. G. WATERS,
Att'y for S. N. Wood.

I am a citizen of Topeka, Kansas; am a journalist by profession. I am editor and publisher of the Kansas State Journal, daily and weekly, and was during the campaign of 1882, when S. R. Peters was a candidate for Congress. One issue of the Journal reached over 75,000 copies; it circulated in all parts of the State. The provision of the constitution of Kansas which makes judges ineligible for other offices was published two or three times during the canvass, and public notice given that S. R. Peters was judge of the 9th judicial district and was not eligible to a seat in Congress, and could not hold the office if elected, and that all the votes cast for him were thrown away. This question was generally discussed in the newspapers of Kansas, and was well understood by the people of the State and by those who voted for S. R. Peters that under the constitution of Kansas Judge Peters could not hold the seat if elected, yet many Repub licans voted for him, believing that the House would be Republican and no attention would be paid to the constitution of the State. There cannot, however, be any question but what the voters generally understood that, according to our State constitution, Mr. Peters could not hold the office, and votes cast for him were thrown away.

STATE OF KANSAS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
TOPEKA, Nov. 31, 1883.

To the House of Representatives, U. S., Washington, D. C.:

We, State officers, and members of the Democratic party of the State of Kansas, most respectfully protest against the admission of Judge S. R. Peters, of this State, to a seat in your honorable body, and protest against him being allowed to take the oath as a member of the House.

Judge S. R Peters was elected judge of the ninth Judicial District of the State of Kansas, in November, 1879. His term of office commenced in January, 1880, for four years, ending January, 1884.

Section 13, Article 2, of the constitution of the State of Kansas, reads as follows:

"The justices of the supreme court and judges of the district court shall, at stated times, receive for their services such compensation as may be provided by law, which shall not be increased during their respective terms of office: Provided, such compensation shall not be less than $1,500 to each justice or judge each year, and such justices or judges shall receive no fees or perquisites, NOR HOLD ANY OTHER OFFICE OF PROFIT OR TRUST UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF THE STATE OR UNITED STATES DURING THE TERM OF OFFICE FOR WHICH SAID JUSTICES AND JUDGES SHALL BE ELECTED, nor practice law in any of the courts in the State during their continuance in office."

This was the constitution under which Kansas was admitted into the Union, assented to by Congress in the act of admission, and is a part of the compact between the United States and the State of Kansas.

Under this provision of our constitution, assented to by Congress, Judge S. R. Peters cannot hold a seat in your honorable body, nor can he take the oath as a member without a clear violation of our constitution. This was well known to the electors of Kansas when Judge Peters was voted for in November, 1882.

The legislature of the State of Kansas, in the face of this election, in order to give a legislative construction to the constitution, passed, without opposition, the following law, approved March 8th, 1883:

AN ACT to preserve the purity of the judiciary.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Kansas:

SECTION 1. That all ballots or votes cast at any election for any person holding the office of judge of the district court, or of justice of the supreme court, except for a judicial office, shall be deemed and held void, and shall not be counted by the judges or clerks of any election, nor by any canvassing board, nor shall any record of the same be made by any canvassing board, nor any certificate of election be issued thereon.

SEC. 2. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed and held to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than three nor more than six months.

SEC. 3. This act shall take effect on its publication in the statute book.

Approved March 8th, 1883.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original bill now on file in my office.

JAMES SMITH.
Secretary of State.

Had this law been passed previous to the election in 1882, the vote for S. R. Peters would not have been counted, and the next highest on the list of candidates for Representatives for Congress (Hon. S. N. Wood) would have been declared elected, and have held the certificate.

This law does not, in any particular, change the constitution, but does, in fact, put a legislative construction on it, under which Judge Peters is not entitled to his seat.

No. 15.

"Resolved, That the memorial of the governor of the State of Kansas, and of other officers and citizens in said State, and all papers presented to the Clerk in reference to the election and qualification of Hon. S. R. Peters, of said State, be referred to the Committee on Elections when appointed, with instructions to report to the House, at the earliest time practicable, whether Mr. Peters is eligible to a seat in this House; and if not, whether Hon. S. N. Wood, the contestant, is entitled to the seat."

Mr. SPRINGER. On the adoption of that resolution I demand the previous question.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, is this proceeding by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It is a matter of privilege, relating as it does to the right of a member to his seat.

Mr. CANNON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON. Is the same privilege extended to the reference of the papers on the other side of the case?

The SPEAKER. Not as a matter of course, as there must be action of the House in each and every case.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have demanded the previous question.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the resolution was adopted.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.
